VAST FLEET OF CARGO SHIPS TO CARRY AID TO U.K.

TO PLACE 50 U.S. TANKERS AT SERVICE OF BRITAIN

Roosevelt Orders Round-Up of Ships To Carry Supplies

At Least Two Million Tons Of Shipping To Be Used—May Requisition Refugee Vessels

Washington, May 1 (AP). — In quick response to President Roosevelt's request for ships for this country's "all-out aid to the democracies", the United States Maritime Commission made plans today to place fifty American tankers in the service of Britain within the next few days.

All operators of American tankers of over 5,000 gross tons are being called on for aid in the program.

The tentative plan does not call for a transfer of registry of tankers to Britain, but for their use outside the war zone for the direct benefit of Britain.

Under the proposal the tankers would be operated from oil-producing countries along the north coast of South America to United States North Atlantic ports.

At the North Atlantic ports the oil would be transferred to British tankers for the remainder of the trip.

Shipping experts said the transfer of a cargo from one tanker to another is not a difficult operation, such as would be involved in the transfer of general cargo from one vessel to another.

The commission was asked by the President last night to begin rounding up 2,000,000 tons of shipping to carry abroad "vital war materials".

President Roosevelt, himself, was reported ready to order the prompt requisitioning of refugee vessels in United State ports as one of the first steps toward the objective.

Requisitioning of 69 Axis and Danish vessels aggregating 300,000 tons would provide—as a starter—approximately 15 per cent of the 2,000,000 tons the President called for "at the earliest possible moment" to transport the raw materials required by American defence industries and the war supplies needed by nations resisting aggression.

Vital Supplies Pile Up

"Vital war materials are piling up at the ports or delayed at the factories," Mr. Roosevelt declared. "We must supply those ships and at once."

Nationalization Of British Railways Forecast by Herald

London, May 1 (CP)—The Daily Herald said today that nationalization of all British railways may be announced by the government shortly.

The Herald said that such a move would be made to end relays and dislocation of rail traffic resulting from the war effort.

Such a step has been urged by some transport experts for years.

BUILDING BEING ERECTED

Brockville, Ont., May 1 (CP) — Several hundred workmen are engaged in erection of 22 double buildings designed to extend the officer's training centre here.

The new buildings will house junior officers from all over Eastern Canada who will come here for training.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 1 —(CP)— General synopsis: The weather has been fair and warm in southern Ontario and the Western Provinces and comparatively cool in Northern Ontario.

WALLACE WARNS OF DANGERS

U.S. Vice-President Says Time is Running Short and 'Issue of Slavery or War May be Forced on Us' as on Others

New York, May 1 (CP)—Henry A. Wallace, Vice-President of the United States said last night in an address before the New York Young Democratic Club that "time is running short—much as we hate the choice the issue of slavery or war may be forced upon us as it has been forced on others."

Therefore he added, young men "will defend the independence of the United States, if need be on the field of battle."

Citing records of rapidly-increased defence production, Mr. Wallace said that the U.S. had "just begun to produce."

CHURCHILL PAYS TRIBUTE TO PRESS

Attends Luncheon Celebrating 50th Anniversary of Sir Emsley Carr as Editor

London, May 1 (CP Cable) — Prime Minister Churchill paid tribute to the journalistic profession today during a luncheon celebrating the 50th anniversary of the appointment of Sir Emsley Carr as editor of the Sunday newspaper "News of The World."

"I think," the Prime Minister said, "it is most satisfactory to members of the profession to realize that when things were perhaps not at their very best in this country, when there looked to be a certain amount of danger, and when a certain amount of uneasiness was rife in the country, people and parliament did not look to the leaders of parties, nor demagogues, not great manufacturers, nor business men—it was to journalism they turned for one whom they supposed might give them some chance of emerging from their embarrassment."

A message from the King congratulating Sir Emsley Carr was read at the luncheon, which was attended by several cabinet members and leading figures in the newspaper world.

Navy Casualties

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)— Three members of the Royal Canadian Navy were reported killed on war service and another killed in an air raid on London today in official casualty list.

Two men were listed as missing on active service, raising to 337 the total number of dead and missing reported by naval headquarters since war began.

Flying Boat On Way To Britain Helps To Save Survivors Of Merchantmen

London, May 1 (CP).—A flying boat en route to Britain from the United States was instrumental in effecting the rescue of survivors of a torpedoed merchantman in the Atlantic, the government announced today.

The flying boat's commander, Flt.-Lt. R. W. Gautrey, made the discovery when, 1,000 miles from Britain, he descended to 6,000 feet to avoid strong headwinds.

The big flying boat crew had seen a huge patch of oil. One watcher later saw a small flashlight stabbing the fading night with Morse signals.

Flt.-Lt. Gautrey quickly turned his plane and pushed her down in a whistling glide. He discovered nine lifeboats, one of which was towing a raft. All were signalling to the flying boat.

Turning his plane down in a steep bank, Gautrey circled the cluster of lifeboats while one of his crew signalled back from a porthole. Slowly, letter by letter, came the name of the vessel.

Meanwhile the wireless operator of the flying boat was advising the Admiralty the exact position of the survivors. Then the plane crew waved as the ship climbed away into the rising sun.

YUGOSLAV SUB, 2 OTHER CRAFT AT BRITISH PORT

Italians Previously Announced These Vessels As Having Been Sunk

LONG-RANGE SUBMARINE

London, May 1 (CP)—A Yugoslav submarine and two Yugoslav motor torpedo boats have arrived at a British port, the Admiralty announced today.

The Admiralty statement said:

"The Italians have announced that the Yugoslav submarine Nebolsca and two Yugoslav motor torpedoboats have been sunk. There is no truth in these reports, the vessels concerned having already arrived safely at a British port."

(Jane's Fighting Ships list the Nebolsca as a 975-ton craft built in 1927. The vessel, one of four submarines in the Yugoslav navy, has a cruising radius of 5,000 miles and normally carries a complement of 45 men.)

Clubmen Launch Fund For British Child War Victims

St. Catharines, Ont., May 1 (CP)—The Lions Clubs of Canada today launched a fund to be known as the Lions British Child War Victims Fund, to aid children in Britain suffering from the devastation of war. The fund has been authorized by the Federal Department of War Services and will accept subscriptions from the public.

The purpose of the fund is to provide money for direct aid to British children suffering as a result of German bombing raids and all monies contributed will be sent overseas at regular intervals, the St. Catharines Lions Club having assumed all administrative charges for the first year in addition to an initial subscription of $3,000. The fund is to continue for the duration.

Yukon Leads In War Savings On Per Capita Basis

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—The people of the Yukon led the Dominion on a per capita basis, in subscriptions to war savings between May 27, 1940 and Feb. 28, 1941.

A return tabled Wednesday in the Commons for G. K. Fraser, Conservative Peterborough West, said the Yukon contributed $35,192—or $8.6 a head based on population estimated for 1939—to the $39,642,000 total collected during that period.

Next to the Yukon was British Columbia with $5.12 per capita, totalling $3,962,640.

Ontario contributed $17,660,716 or $4.71 per capita; Manitoba, $2,966,484 or $4.08 per capita; Nova Scotia $1,936,952 or $3.50 per capita; Alberta $2,477,160 or $3.14 per capita; New Brunswick $1,210,469 or $2.68 per capita; Saskatchewan, $2,435,924 or $2.57 per capita; Quebec $6,780,288 or $2.11 per capita, and Prince Edward Island $176,176 or $1.85 per capita.

Claims Nazis Put To Death 85,000 Blind, Aged, Incurables In Germany In Three Months

New York, May 1 —(CP)— "The New Republic" carries an article today by Michael Straight, its Washington editor, asserting that in September, October and November of 1940 the Nazis put to death 85,000 blind, aged or incurably ill persons in Germany because they were unable to contribute to the German war effort.

"They were put to death as casually as the S.P.C.A. (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) chloroforms old and helpless dogs," the article says "They were killed because they could no longer manufacture guns in return for the food which they consumed; because the German hospitals were needed for wounded soldiers; because their death was the ultimate logic of the National Socialist doctrine of racial superiority and survival of the physically fit."

Straight, 24-year-old son of the late Willard Straight, founder of "The New Republic," say that his information comes from a prelate of the Roman Catholic Church. The church, in turn, he says, received its information from Catholic priests and bishops in Germany.

The sole clue to the executions, said to have been carried out by poison, gas chambers and injection of air bubbles into the veins, is contained in the December issue of "Acta Apostolicae Sedis," the official monthly publication of the Vatican, Straight says.

According to Straight, on a rear page of that issue, printed in Latin, is an acknowledgment of a question sent to Pope Pius XII by an unnamed German bishop. The acknowledgment says: "It was asked of the supreme sacred congregation: 'Whether, by order of public authority, it is elicit directly to kill those who, although they have committed no crime deserving death, yet, because of mental or physical defects, are no longer able to benefit the nation, and are considered rather to burden the nation and to obstruct its energy and strength."

Straight says that the reply, approved by the Pope, said that the question must be answered: "'In the negative,' since it is contrary to natural and divine positive law."

SOLID MASS OF ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLES TO WIN

Premier Menzies Says Virtue and Courage Universal Character of British People

WHAT 'TOTAL WAR' IS

London, May 1 (CP)—Total war "must mean a war for everybody who speaks the English tongue all over the world," Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia said in Wales yesterday in a speech quoted by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

"When the enemy has discovered he is not dealing with a series of units whom he may divide and conquer, but with one solid, resolute mass of the people of our own race wherever they may live, the enemy will begin to get thoughts which will grow into fears and fears which will grow into defeat," the Prime Minister said.

Germany had invented the phrase "total war," but for her it meant "war on women and children, old men and undefended citizens."

Speaking during the course of a tour of the bombed areas of Wales, he praised the women of Britain for their courage in the face of air attacks.

"I have learned that virtue and courage are not the prerogative of the few but the universal character of the people," he said.

'AP' Hears Reports Alfred Duff Cooper May Soon Resign

London, May 1 (CP)—The Associated Press said last night there were reports that Alfred Duff Cooper might soon resign his post as Minister of Information as a result of widespread newspaper criticism of the Ministry.

Both the radio and newspapers have charged the Ministry with "inefficiency" and have contended editorially that it needs overhauling.

Two members of the House of Commons indicated that Prime Minister Churchill will be asked why the Ministry's efforts "have failed in competition with the German propaganda organization."

They said they would seek immediate reorganization of the Ministry.

Americans Buy Defence Savings Bonds and Stamps

Washington, May 1—(AP)—Urged by President Roosevelt to participate in the United States' "all-out effort to perpetuate democracy," Americans young and old stepped up to Post Office and bank windows today to begin investing in Defence Savings Bonds and Stamps.

4 NAZI AVIATORS ARE REMOVED FROM U.S. LINER

Boarding Party From British Auxiliary Cruiser Acts With Greatest Courtesy

Honolulu, May 1 (CP)—A British auxiliary cruiser stopped the liner President Garfield in the Pacific Tuesday and removed four German aviators, American President Line agents report.

They said the four Germans, who formerly operated in a commercial air service in South America, had been detained by the United States Immigration Service since last August but had been released on April 23 at San Francisco.

They boarded the President Garfield there. Their names were given as Ewald Flesch, Werner Naumar, Hans Sandkamm and Guenther Katzke.

When they arrived in the United States from Colombia they were taken into custody because the Japanese steamship line Nippon Yusen Kaisha refused to carry them across the Pacific. They were detained under the authority of the American State Department.

Japanese steamship lines have refused to carry German nationals of military age because a British warship stopped the liner Asama Maru 15 months ago to take off a group of young Germans.

2 German Bombers And Probably Fighter Destroyed At Valetta

Valetta, Malta, May 1 (CP) — Two German bombers were destroyed and a fighter plane probably destroyed Tuesday night during one of the heaviest raids of the war on this British base in the Mediterranean.

Eight civilians were killed. 19 were injured and business and residential properties were severely damaged. There were four alerts today but small bomber forces caused only slight damage.

Indicates Roosevelt Has Made Decision

Washington, May 1 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau indicated today that President Roosevelt has made a decision about turning over the seagoing part of the coast guard to the United States navy.

At a press conference, Morgenthau was asked whether anything had been decided and replied "yes, but I can't talk about it."

Ordinarily, the coast guard joins the navy only in time of war, but recently the navy revealed it was negotiating for immediate transfer of the seagoing vessels. The disclosure followed the transfer of 10 coast guard cutters to Britain.

MORE BRITISH REPORTED ARRIVED AT BASRA, IRAQ

Authoritative Source Says British Land Second Contingent

FIRST ARRIVED APRIL 17

London, May 1 (CP)—An authoritative source said today the British army had landed a second contingent of troops at Basra despite the assertion of Iraq authorities that Britain was not entitled to do so until troops previously landed has passed through the country.

This source said Britain considered there was no foundation for the Iraq assertion inasmuch as the terms of the British-Iraq alliance provided Iraq should furnish "all facilities and assistance" in its power for the transit of British troops.

"As we are unable to allow clear treayt rights to be altered," the source added, "troop movements proceeded as planned and troops duly arrived at Basra without any incident."

The first British troop landings there took place April 17-18.

2 ELECTROCUTED, 2 BADLY BURNED

Current From Cable Over Which Aerial Was Being Stretched Shocks Youth, Who Drops Aerial, Which Sisters Pick Up

Quebec, May 1 (CP)—Two persons were electrocuted and two others critically burned today when they touched a broken aerial wire dangling across a high tension cable into a yard behind the home of Joseph Coulombe in St. Sacrament Ward.

The dead were Charles Roy, 62, electrician at the Laval Mines School, and Coulombe's 13-year-old daughter Lucille. Critically injured were Paul Aime, 19, and Mariette, 15, other children of Coulombe.

The accident occurred while Paul Aime was stretching an aerial wire from the roof of his home to a small shed nearby. The wire crossed a high tension line and, badly shocked, the youth dropped it into the yard of his father's home where his sisters were playing.

The girls ran to pick it up and received the full charge of the current. Lucille died on the way to hospital where her sister's condition was reported as dangerous.

Action Of Guns On Newest Battleship "H— Let Loose"

London, May 1 (CP)—The combined action of the guns on Britain's newest battleship, H.M.S. Prince of Wales, is "H — let loose," the British Broadcasting Corporation said last night.

The BBC said the new ship has just engaged in her first night exercises with the home fleet. "The crew has been in hard training for weeks and the Prince of Wales should be one of the navy's crack gunnery ships," the BBC added.

The 35,000-ton vessel was commissioned only recently.

All Not Hungarian Citizens In 1918 To Save Survivors Of Merchantman

Budapest, Hungary, May 1 (AP)—The military commander of the Hungarian-occupied part of Yugoslavia has ordered "all Serbs, Bosnians, Montenegrins, Gypsies and Jews and their descendants who were not Hungarian citizens before Oct. 31, 1918, to move out within three days beginning at 8 a.m. May 28."

The announcement today did not say where the deportees are expected to go.

The decree made exceptions of husbands and wives of German and Hungarian nationals, women within two weeks of childbirth and persons more than 75 years old.

Those forced to leave, it said, may take only the property they can carry with them and enough money to cover their expenses.

Targets In Berlin Area, Hamburg Are Also Bombed

Raids Are Made On German Shipping Off Netherlands Coast

London, May 1 (CP)—Strong Royal Air Force bomber squadrons centred their attack on the German naval base at Kiel last night, an Air Ministry communique said and also hit at targets in the Berlin area, the industrial centre of Hamburg and the port of Emden.

Other harassing raids were made yesterday on shipping off the Netherlands coast, and a wireless station on an island off the Norwegian coast was bombed, the Ministry said.

One British plane was lost in the attacks.

No New Gas Stations Can Be Established Without Permission

Ottawa, May 1 —(CP)— No new gasoline stations can be established in Canada, and stations presently closed cannot be reopened without permission, said an order issued by the office of the oil controller, George Cottrelle of Toronto, and published in the Canada Gazette today.

The order, dated April 30, provides that any gasoline station in future closed for 30 days cannot be reopened without authorization from the oil controller.

Provisions will not apply to any dealer's station which in the usual course is closed during the winter months.

J. RAYMOND CARR IS APPOINTED TRAINMASTER

Will Have Jurisdiction Over Burford Sub-Division and Portion of Dundas Sub-Division

Brantford, Ont., May 1—(CP)—G. A. Stokes, Superintendent of the London division of the Canadian National Railways, announced this morning the appointment of a new trainmaster. J. R. Carr, who is to arrive here today from Belleville to take over his new duties, has for some years been conductor in the London division, which includes Brantford. As Trainmaster, Mr. Carr will have jurisdiction over the Burford sub-division and the portion of the Dundas sub-division from Paris Junction to Hamilton West.

Formerly of Belleville

Conductor J. Raymond Carr is well known in Belleville having been elected to the city council here in 1939, but was forced to resign when he was transferred to the London division shortly after his taking office.

Raymond Carr was, for many years connected with the baseball activities of the old Belleville Nationals and served in an executive capacity prior to being named president of the local club in 1935.

He served as a conductor in the Belleville Division of the C.N.R. for many years and is a World War veteran.

SAYS RED ARMY MUST BE READY, KEEP POWDER DRY

PRAISES STALIN

Moscow, May 1—(AP)—A warning by Defence Commissar S. K. Timoshenko that Russia is ready "to offer an annihilating rebuff to any encroachment by imperialists, ushered in a great display of the Red Army's might today as the Communist party celebrated May day in traditional fashion.

Timoshenko's warning was issued in a special order of the day. He declared that it is the Soviet government's intention to adhere to a peaceful policy, but asserted soberly that "the present international situation is pregnant with all kinds of surprises."

"In these conditions," Timoshenko said, "the Red Army must keep its powder dry and be in constant mobilization and preparedness so that no 'accident' and no tricks of our foreign enemies can catch us unawares."

Timoshenko, who was named defence commissar a year ago and charged with the task of overhauling the army, called upon Soviet workers to labor ceaselessly to help "consolidate the defensive capacity of the country."

Australia Can Build 60 Freighters Quickly

Sydney, May 1 (CP Cable) — Australia can build 60 freighters within a "reasonable time," the Australian Shipbuilding Board told the government last night.

The Board reported that it sees "no insuperable obstacles" to production of "at least" that many vessels. It recommended that the British standard ship be modified to suit Australia's requirements and that this be adopted as the type of ship to be constructed in the commonwealth.

It would have a deadweight tonnage of 9,000 tons. Immediate construction of three ships was recommended.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CITY ENGINEER FRACTURES ANKLE

City Engineer Charles Mott, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital early on Wednesday evening suffering from a broken ankle sustained in the late afternoon while inspecting the excavation at the site of the proposed St. Michael's Convent. During the course of his inspection Mr. Mott in some manner slipped breaking his ankle and will be absent from his duties at the city hall for a week or so.

FOTO NITE OFFERS GO UNCLAIMED

Neither person selected for the two offers at Wednesday night's Foto Nite program at the Capitol Theatre was present to tender her photograph and accept the offers. The name of Mrs. William J. Blackburn, 92 South George St. was selected for the first offer of $750, while the name of Miss Lorraine Amo, 22 Bettes St., was announced for the second offer of $125. It was later learned Miss Amo could not have been present as she is employed locally in war work, much of which is overtime and she was working at her employment when the selection was made.

FIREMEN SPONSOR 3RD SUNDAY CONCERT

The third of a series of concerts to be staged in this city by the Belleville Fire Department for the benefit of the British Fire Fighters' Relief Fund will be held in the McCarthy Theatre on Sunday evening. The sponsors promise a varied and entertaining program, this taking form as an amateur night during which many of the city's and district's vocal and musical artists will render of their talents. The Moira Orchestra, under the direction of Walter Aselstine, has kindly offered their services for the evening and it is expected the event will be well attended by local music lovers.

MOTORISTS FINED FOR SPEEDING

Several motorists were apprehended exceeding the speed limits over the streets of Belleville on Wednesday and summonses were issued against them today. Chief Kidd announced that speeding and failure to observe city stop street signs would be severely dealt with in the future following reports that motorists were driving at excessive rates of speed in the city.

The Provincial Police also inaugurated a night motorized patrol to assist in the minimizing of accidents and other violations of the highway traffic on the open roads.

Motorcycle Patrolman H. McKellar, formerly of Port Hope, reported to district headquarters of the O.P.P. today to assume his new duties patrolling adjacent highways.

LESS MAY DAY MOVING THIS YEAR

Once again it is May Day, the day which has long been termed as "moving day" by a great number of residents who annually seek new accommodations on this day, but May 1st, 1941, has not been marked by any indication that it will see a wholesale exodus in Belleville according to local trucking and moving firms.

One Belleville trucking firm who does both local and long distance hauling, stated this morning that this time of year always sees a decided pickup in the moving business and that this year could be compared with other seasons, although the majority of business this year was for long distance hauling.

Real estate brokers are of the opinion that, owing to the scarcity of houses, families who rent seem satisfied with their present accommodations, or as one put it "I don't know where they would move to."

Obituary

HAROLD ELLIOTT
(Frankford)

Harold Elliott, age 10 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Elliott, R.R. 4, Frankford, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Thursday morning. He was a patient in the hospital only a few days.

GEORGE ASHLEY

George Ashley, a former resident of Marysville, Tyendinaga Township, died in St. Michael's Hospital Toronto, on Monday, April 28th., after an illness of about six weeks' duration.

The late Mr. Ashley was born fifty four years ago near Madoc, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herston Ashley. After living at Marysville for some years he went to Toronto and had resided there for a considerable time. He was unmarried. Friends in this district will regret to learn of his death. In religion he was a member of the Roman Catholic Church and was a member of the Knights of Columbus. He is survived by one brother, Mr. Charles Ashley, Toronto.

Interment was made in St. James' cemetery, Belleville, on Wednesday afternoon, April 30th.; the service at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. Father C. E. Baker of St. Michael's Church.

WILLIAM J. HOLMES (Eldorado)
(Contributed)

Eldorado lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens in the passing of William James Holmes, on April 26th, after a lingering illness. Mr. Holmes was born in Madoc Township on September 24, 1863, the only remaining son of a family of eleven of the late Abraham Holmes and Ellen Watt. With the exception of a few years lived in Tudor he resided in Madoc Township all his life, living for some years on the farm now occupied by Mr. Charles D McCann. In 1925 he moved to his present home where he since resided

. Of a gentle, retiring nature, Mr. Holmes was a true Christian gentleman, honored and respected by all who knew him. In 1884 he married Eliza Hailstone, who died 13 years ago, and to them were born five children—John, of Stirling; Martha (Mrs. John Fitzgerald), Eldorado; Charles, of Toronto; Annie, at home, and James; also one adopted son, George McCoy, Belleville. Besides these are twelve grandchildren and five great grandchildren. To these sorrowing ones is extended the sympathy of a host of friends.

He held many positions of trust in Eldorado United Church, being a member of the trustee and parsonage board, an elder and steward and was for many years superintendent of the Sunday School and was untiring in his efforts. Until his health failed his place was seldom vacant in the church.

The funeral was held on Monday, April 28th, in Eldorado United Church. The pastor, Rev. Geo. Crabbe, brought comforting messages from Heb. 9:27. Favorite hymns of the deceased were sung, the choir singing a special favorite, "I Shall Know Him." The large gathering of friends and relatives testified to the esteem in which Mr. Holmes was held.

Interment was made in the cemetery adjoining the church, which was for many years his special care.

The honorary pall-bearers were fellow elders of Eldorado Circuit, namely, Messrs. Hercules Rollins, Oscar Taylor, Geo. Robinson, Coll. Carman, and Elgin Poste.

Among the many beautiful floral tributes was a pillow from Eldorado Church and Sunday School.

DANIEL DORAN
(Rochester, N.Y.)

The death occurred in Rochester, yesterday evening, April 30th., of Daniel A. Doran, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doran of this city, who passed away after an illness of three weeks. Born in Belleville, the late Mr. Doran was in his 56th year. He received his early education in the city, attending St. Michael's Academy. A frequent visitor in the city, he had many friends here to whom news of his passing will come as a great shock.

For the past thirty-two years he had resided in Rochester and was on the staff of the Eastman Kodak Company. He was a member of Sacred Heart Church, Rochester, and of the Knights of Columbus and Holy Name Society.

Surviving are his wife, formerly Miss Sadie Foley, two sons, Charles and Donald of Rochester, one sister, Miss Mary Doran, Belleville and one brother, Mr. Frank Doran, Toronto. The funeral takes place on Saturday from his late residence, 16 Electric Avenue, Rochester, to Sacred Heart Church. Interment will be made in Rochester.

Miss C. Hitchon, B. C. I. Teacher, Dies Suddenly

Miss Claire Hitchon died early this Thursday morning after a brief illness at her home 44 Alexander Street, and to many citizens as well as to the members of the staff at the Collegiate and Vocational School and to the pupils at the collegiate, her death has brought sincere regret.

The late Miss Agnes Claire Hope Hitchon was born in Brockville, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hitchon. At an early age she came with her parents to reside in Belleville and her home was in this city since that time. She attended the public and high school and being a good student she stood high in her classes. Later she graduated from McMaster University with the degree of B.A., and later the same university awarded to her the degree of M.A.

For twenty-seven years Miss Hitchon was a teacher in the old high school and eventually in the present Collegiate and Vocational School, being for many years and at the time of her death the head of the history department. She was endowed with special gifts as a teacher and was highly successful in imparting knowledge to those under her tuition. Taking a sincere interest in her pupils she won a high place in their regard, and in this city as well as in many places throughout Canada former students will remember with grateful appreciation the great assistance she was to them in their studies. To all her students Miss Hitchon was more than teacher she was a friend and advisor and kindly memory of her will long be held by those who sat in her classes.

Apart from her profession Miss Hitchon took an interest in numerous activities and gave her support to many worthy causes. She was a valued member of the University Women's Club of this city. By her friendly disposition and gracious manner Miss Hitchon attracted and held many close friendships. In religion she was a faithful member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church and took an active part in the work of the congregation.

Surviving to mourn her loss and to whom the sympathy of many friends will be extended are two sisters Mrs. C. H. Evans and Miss Frances Hitchon both of Belleville.

The funeral notice is made elsewhere in this paper.

Car Upsets in Ditch, Girl is Drowned

Wallaceburg, Ont., May 1 (CP).—Nineteen-year-old Christine Verschoore was drowned near here today when the automobile she was driving toppled into a water-filled drainage ditch on a side road in Chatham Gore Township.

Coroner H. A. Taylor said no inquest would be held.

IRAQ OIL FIELDS HITLER'S OBJECTIVE OBSERVERS STATE

U.S. Experts Believe That if He Can Gain Control of Oil Supply it Would Partly Solve His Supply Problem

RUSSIA NOT INVOLVED

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 1 (CP).—Hitler's long-range objective in the Balkans and the Middle East is Iraq oil, not Russian wheat, in the opinion of many military and diplomatic observers here.

They suggest that Hitler has decided that if he can gain control of the eastern basin of the Mediterranean, including Egypt and the Suez Canal, and bring Middle East oil into his European "new order", he will solve his greatest supply problem and go a long way toward wartime self-sufficiency.

Russia, they suggest, plays no part in a grandiose scheme of those dimensions despite rumors for many weeks, reiterated by Prime Minister Churchill and other British leaders, that the Soviet bread basket, the fertile plains of the Ukraine, are next, or at least high up on the list of German objectives.

Taking a realistic and objective view of the aftermaths of the Balkan campaign military observers here see Britain's position in Egypt seriously threatened. They believe that Turkey, once regarded as almost an ally of Britain's, will be in no position to resist pressure for a German corridor across Asia Minor. They also suggest that Russia, to gain time for defensive plans and also to escape entanglement with Germany over the Ukraine, may agree to exert pressure on the Turks to co-operate with Hitler.

Sir Archibald Wavell's forces in Egypt may be caught in a pincer movement, it has been suggested here, with force applied by a German-Italian army operating across Asia Minor in the general direction of the Iraq and Iran oil fields.

Significant Move.

Whether the western gateway to the Mediterranean, the fortress of Gibraltar, plays any part in this scheme is, of course, unknown but it was regarded as significant that the United States government a few days ago decided to send a military observer to Tangiers on the North African coast, across from the Rock.

One of the prime reasons for the earlier successes of the Army of the Nile and the present control of the Mediterranean by the British fleet has been easy and constant access to the Middle East oil fields. If they fell into German hands, it would prejudice, if not cripple, Britain's whole Middle East operations.

It is not being suggested that Hitler will start immediately on the long, tortuous road across Asia Minor. He still has mopping-up operations in Greece, the Greek islands and in Yugoslavia to complete. He still has to try to repair the transport system of eastern Europe, probably seriously damaged by the short but violent Balkan campaign. He may take time also to repair and regiment the agricultural resources of the Balkans upon which Germany relied to a considerable extent before the conquest.

One of the complicating factors in the picture is the internal conditions in Iraq where a British force recently landed as a result of a change in government. The reliance that Britain places in Iraq oil was demonstrated by the haste with which this force entered Iraq when a new government, reported to be pro-German in its sympathies, took power by a coup d'etat.

Bacon Situation Under Review

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)— Thought has been given to the possible necessity of having to check the flow of hogs across the border to United States markets, Hon. T. G. Taggart, Saskatchewan Agriculture Minister and Chairman of the Bacon Board, said yesterday.

Mr. Taggart said the situation was not pressing as the movement of hogs to the United States had yet to reach large proportions. There was the possibility that attractive hog prices south of the border might cause large-scale Canadian shipments at a time when the Bacon Board has demands above original contracts for supplying bacon to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Taggart said that Board meetings in Ottawa were reviewing the general situation in respect to bacon.

Staff Of Income Tax Office Welcomes Conclusion Of Their Busiest Session

When the clock struck ten in the Belleville District Income Tax Office Wednesday night, a weary staff leaped back in their chairs and ruminated over the largest amount of taxes paid in the history of Belleville.

The deadline for the filing of returns, April 30th, saw the inevitable last-minute rush, and from the minute the office opened in the morning until the last stamp was affixed, the place was a bustle of activity.

Bags of mail from the outposts of the area, which comprises the district within the jurisdiction of the Belleville office, the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Peterborough and Northumberland, poured into the office during the day. Today another huge pile of letters was delivered, as mail bearing the post date of April 30th no matter whether it was mailed in Shanghai, comes within the deadline.

Due to the fact that actual tabulations will not be completed until ten days or ten weeks, it was impossible to obtain any figures pertaining to the amount of taxes paid in the district.

"You can rest assured," Major S. J. Gilmore, Income Tax Inspector here stated, "that the figures will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Expresses Appreciation

Major Gilmore expressed himself as being greatly appreciative of the response on the part of the tax-paying public. "The willingness to pay,' he said, "is clear evidence of the fact that the people realize the urgent need of the government."

There will not be much relaxation for the thirteen members of the tax office staff. The next few weeks will be occupied in tabulation and checking of returns and after that as Major Gilmore puts it, 'they will back up in order to get a fresh start on this year's taxes.'

During the past ten days as the momentum of eleventh-hour filing of returns gained speed, members of the staff worked until a late hour at night. Officials assisted those who were not entirely acquainted with the return procedure, while other staff members assisted in this capacity whenever possible.

Seven Traffic Cases Feature Police Court

Seven traffic cases were disposed of in Thursday's session of County Police Court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., at the Court House, Crown Attorney B.C. Donnan, K.C., conducting the prosecutions in all matters.

When Morris Ansham, Toronto, failed to answer to his name when charged with speeding within a restricted area, Motorcycle Patrolman J. H. Hatch told the court he had observed the accused man speeding with recklessness on Highway No. 2 immediately east of the O.S.D., where a restricted zone is clearly indicated. A fine of five dollars and costs was imposed.

Summonses had not been served against Samuel Pingold, Mount Forest, charged with illegal passing and Lloyd R. Hayhes, Welland, charged with speeding. Enlargments were granted in these cases.

Frederick Kellar, Belleville, paid the minimum fine after being convicted of driving without the necessary permit, while Alan Mitchell, also of Belleville, was sentenced to serve seven days in the common jail after being convicted of drunken driving. Mitchell's licence was suspended for three months after Constable Hatch informed the court no accident had resulted. William Harvey, Belleville, was assessed $10.00 and costs as the result of a speeding charge. Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson preferring the charge after apprehending the accused speeding at a 70-miles-per-hour rate on Highway No. 14.

Two soldiers, who were apprehended by Chief J. C. Hayes on charges of being absent from their units without leave when they appeared in last week's court, have since been returned to their unit under escort, Crown Attorney Donnan informed the court as he asked for a withdrawal of vagrancy charges, which had been preferred in order to hold the men at the time of apprehension.

Sapulpa, Okla., May 1 (AP).—If here."
"Aunt Lizzie" Deevers wasn't in bed with influenza, she'd be celebrating her 110th birthday today by walking down a church aisle—a bride for the tenth time.

The bright-eyed, witty little Sapulpan, feeling "fresh as a flapper" and itching to be up and about, admitted she was in love again, this time with John Knight, a 77-year-old neighbor.

"I'm just a fast-steppin', giddy girl," she said. "We're goin' to get married soon as I'm able to get up and cook."

Aunt Lizzie's father was a full-blooded Cherokee Indian. Her mother's parents came from Ireland and the Netherlands.

"That's the meanest mixture they is," she commented. "That's why I'm tough. Man, I've been snake bit six times, but bit by a mad dog once, had nine husbands and I'm still

She walked with the Cherokees over the "Trail of Tears" to Oklahoma and still is mad at the palefaces because "they wouldn't let us stop and bury my pore old grandmother", who died on the trail.

She smokes a pipe and uses snuff but when offered a cigarette she shook her head.

"No, sir, I don't smoke them things, and I don't like to see any woman do that at all. Me. I like snuff and I don't just dip it. I eat it."

"They're comin' over here, shore as shootin'," she said. "When they get to Sapulpa, I'm agoin' to get in it. Why, I could shoot the hat off your head and never touch you."

Lizzie doesn't believe in divorces. She outlived all her husbands and expects to live longer than her father who died at 115.

11 Junior Officers Of Argyll Reg't To Take Training at Brockville

Eleven junior officers of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) R.F., leave tomorrow (Friday) for Brockville, Ont., where they will be attached to Officers' Training Centre (E.C.) for an extensive course of instruction before being assigned to units of a Canadian armored division. Included are Lieutenant R. P. Weese, and Second-Lieutenants S. McBride, G. Dodds, M. R. Mitchell, J. Yanover, George McIntosh, H. W. Thomas, R. J. Graham, H. Theobald, W. Burgoyne and Owen Atkins.

The officers, practically all of whom are local men, or residents here, received their elementary instruction in the Argyll Regiment here under Lieut.-Colonel A. B. Gribble and his staff. Earlier in the week they attended military headquarters in Kingston where they underwent documentation and inoculation.

According to despatches from Ottawa, upwards of four hundred cadet officers will converge on the Brockville training centre tomorrow to undergo training. They come from all parts of the eastern district.

Prison Break Ends On Prison Farm

Sudbury, May 1 (CP)— Burwash Industrial Farm's first prison break of the year ended late Wednesday just where it started—on farm property.

Comfortably ensconced in an outbuilding near the Burwash station apparently merely awaiting the arrival of a convenient train, George Haug, 21, Owen Sound, was discovered by searching guards at dusk. He is now back in the cells

Would Have Sent Medal From Hitler Back Long Ago Says Mrs. F. D. R.

Eugene, Ore., May 1 (AP)— Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told reporters last night that "if I had received a medal from Hitler, as Col. Charles A. Lindbergh did, I would have returned it long ago. Of course, what Lindbergh does with his medal is his affair."

Labor Of All Classes Remains Scarce Here

Shortage of skilled labor, farm help and other phases of labor and industry, has now extended to the casual helper's class, according to Employment Office officials here.

The advent of spring cleaning has absorbed practically all women day workers and many housewives in the city are being forced to enlist the aid of the head of the house and other members of the family in order to get this important spring job done in time.

The "regulars," or those people who earn a living from casual labor the year round, are engaged for weeks ahead, Superintendent William Ross said today. "We can't get a woman day-worker for love nor money." In the male field, the demand is about equal to the supply but there are days when men are not available.

PRAISE FOR EXPEDITIONARY FORCE

Prime Minister Churchill gave the highest praise to the British Expeditionary Force which went to the Balkans and fought in the series of battles for the defence of Yugoslavia and Greece. The 60,000 men in the British and Empire force engaged the enemy numbering at times five times as many as the British and Anzacs. For two days, said Mr. Churchill, the British held to a standstill this preponderating enemy force. The losses of the British were about three thousand casualties, these occurring principally at Mount Olympus, Grevena and Thermopylae.

One of the marvels of the campaign was the success of the rearguard actions which took a heavy toll of the Germans. Rearguard fighting took place over a stretch of many miles to the sea.

Hitler's bombers, though they tried day after day, never succeeded in breaking the discipline and order of marching columns of the British who were at the same time "pursued by no less than three armored divisions and the whole strength of the German mechanized forces which could be brought to bear." But the British were steady.

Of these troops Mr. Churchill said that "we have much to be proud of." These few words say a great deal.

The British Commons cheered as Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said he would convey to the Greek Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos "British gratitude for the magnificent courage and endurance which the Greek army has shown and for their loyalty as Allies."

Forty-five thousand British and Australian and New Zealand troops were yesterday said to have been evacuated and are believed to have reached their bases safely. Mr. Churchill holds out hope that still more troops will be removed from Greece. Later news says that 3,000 more or 48,000 had been moved out, with more likely saved.

The full story of the Battle at Mount Olympus, the key position which the British held, of the Battle at Thermopylae and of the retirement and rearguard action will be a new page in British military history on what so small a force was able to accomplish in opposition to the numbers of the enemy.

MERRIE MONTH OF MAY

The lovely month of May, freed from winter's shackles, has come with its promise of flowers and its genial balmy weather. This is the month which places foliage on the trees and in which nature enters her fullness of spring in all its freshness and glory.

This is the day formerly celebrated in the British Isles and to a lesser degree on the Continent with festivities which linger now only in a few rural districts. These festivals are said to be the lineal descendants of the ancient Roman festival Floralia, the celebration of the feast of flowers, and of the Druid feasts. In the spacious days of the Tudor sovereigns the people of England used to go into the woods at midnight, gather branches of trees and flowers and return with them at sunrise to adorn their houses. The crowning of the May Queen who held sway for one day over her court consisting of morris dancers, Robin Hood, Maid Marian, Friar Tuck, Little John and other members of the same band as well as of the villagers and townpeople was an event of those days. There was dancing around the maypole decorated with flowers and ribbons. Permanent maypoles stood in the London streets, in the countryside poles were set up on the last day of April.

These gaieties and festivities are all but gone and linger on in words and song but they tell of the days when life was not so serious as it has become, days when these village sports and festivals aptly gave the name "merrie" to these gatherings, to this age and to their country which was known as "Merrie England."

May first has had in our time a less poetic and picturesque importance as a day for organized propaganda groups. Even this significance of the May Day is disappearing. May the first marks the beginning of a most delightful month when nature is growing into the fullness of the spring season.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

Geo. H. Larner

"JOHN PEEL"

(Wartime Version)

Did ye ken John Peel with his coat so gay?
He lived at Caldbeck once a day,
But now he's gone, and he's far, far away;
We shall ne'er hear his horn in a morning.

But the lilt of his song rings clear and strong
As our soldier lads swing smartly along
To the fray, to the "Day" of right o'er wrong
And the dawn of new hope in a morning.

'Tis no sad hymn of hate, but Britain's pride,
To guard her Empire far and wide,
And her island home from aggression's tide,
That we march to "John Peel" in a morning.

Yes, and I ken this Hitler—name to dread,
Slyest old fox this world ever bred,
But the cry of hounds will waken the dead
When they fight for his brush in a morning.

Then here's to John Peel with his heart so gay,
Here's to John Bull and Britannia's sway,
As we chase the foe from the break of day
To the death of the HUN in a morning!

—Arthur Greatholder.

There is one thing Finance Minister Ilsley's budget could not affect, and that is the morale of the people. The budget could not even budge it.

Speaking of morale, the splendid spirit of the Empire troops in Greece after the withdrawal, an emulation of the undaunted spirit of the British Tommies at Dunkirk, brings back to mind the famous verse of the last war:—

"We beat 'em on the Marne
And we trimmed 'em on the Aisne
We gave 'em hell at Neuve Chapelle
And 'ere we are again."

Visitors from out of town who hail from cities and towns that are marked with almost feverish military activity, have been heard to remark, "Belleville doesn't know there is a war on."

Perhaps that may be this city's outward appearance. Lack of flags and bunting in prominent places would almost lead a stranger to believe that statement. Lack of martial music and the tramp of marching feet along its thoroughfares would perhaps substantiate the remark. But many a clean heart beats beneath a soiled shirt. Let the strangers, before they pass judgment, look at this city's record in backing up the boys, the country and the Empire with the coin of the realm. Never in its history has this city fallen down when asked to respond to a patriotic or humanitarian cause. Never has it failed to give its quota of men and material when the call was issued. Never has it turned a deaf ear to a cry for help.

Lack of establishment of military training centres here is not the fault of the city or its officials. In the early days of the war efforts were made to make it the central training point of a militia regiment. The powers-that-be could not see eye-to-eye with city or military officials. However be that as it may. The fact does not detract from the splendid war effort being put forth by the city, the county, its residents, members of the fighting services, and the many peace-time organizations that are now actively engaged in war work.

Despite the fact that Belleville does not derive financial benefits gained by a city or town where troops are regularly quartered, it holds high a proud head when records of contributions to financial appeals are read. The War Services Organizations Campaign recently concluded saw the city and county exceed the objective by over $5,000—with more to come in. Its women's organizations are raising money and sending supplies and comforts to the troops regularly. The Red Cross holds a warm spot in its heart for this city, as does other organizations. Today a consensus of a cross section of its population backed the 1941 budget solidly. Belleville will pay its share and pay it gladly and willingly.

We "may not know there is a war on" as our outside friends put it, but we do know that the city and county is well up to the front in backing up the "boys," the country and the Empire with resources and money.

News of Norway

—This anecdote comes from the Trondheim district:

A Nazi "missionary" arrived at a local public hall to deliver his routine address on the joys of living under Hitler and Quisling. As he entered the hall, two old fellows — Norwegian farmers — were standing just outside the doorway, debating whether to go in or not. In a moment the Nazi speaker reappeared, red-faced and furious. The hall was practically empty.

"Donnerwetter! . . . It must be that damned Norwegian broadcast from London that everyone is listening to!"

At this one old boy pulled out an ancient silver watch, verified the time and exclaimed: "By Gad! He's right. Come on, Nils, we have just time to get home and hear the news!"

"Convoy At Work ---1675, A. D."

You think the convoy system came into being during World War 1 to combat the German menace to our vital shipping lines? Wrong. Wrong by several hundred years.

Back in the seventeenth century the British Navy was regularly doing this job. One of the earliest known accounts of lives in a convoy ship was written in 1675. In those days Barbary pirates were preying on English trade from their ports in Tripoli. Their rakish galleys were the equivalent of the Nazi raiders now infesting the seas.

From the pen of the Reverend Henry Teonge we have some quaint and vivid pictures of those early convoys. Teonge became a naval chaplain at the age of 55 because he was penniless. He sailed in His Majesty's 56-gun frigate "Assistance" on convoy from England to the Mediterranean with two merchant vessels, the "Scipio" and the "Mary".

When Teonge arrived in London in May, 1675, to join his ship he was in a sorry state, riding an old mare with all his worldy goods in sack which also served as a saddle. His possessions: "...an old coat and breeches, an old pair of hose and a leathern doublet 9 years old and upward."

The Captain of the ship received him and offered entertainment in the form of "bottells of claret, etc." After that the reverend gentleman went ashore, pawned his belongings and bought himself a small "sea-bed" — probably a hammock — and other equipment.

Back on board he met more of the ship's officers. The meeting must have been a happy one as Teonge drank part of three bowls of punch, "a liquor," he says, "very strange to me." With difficulty he made his way to his cabin, where the strange effects of the liquor continued. "I thought to find my pillow on the top of my bed but I found it slipt between the boards and under the bed."

A little later the frigate dropped down the river to what was called the Buoy of Nore. Here preparations were made to set ashore wives and sweethearts of the crew. However, some of the fair passengers, particularly the officers' wives, remained until they reached Dover. These ladies were put off the ship "with three cheers, seven guns and our trumpets sounding the melody 'Maids, where are your hearts?' ". The captain's small son was particularly loath to depart. This lad "though so young, yet with his mayde to lead him by his dading sleeves, would go from gun to gun and put his finger to the britch of the gun and crie Booe; whilst the mother, like a woman of greate discretion, seemed no whit troubled, that her husband might be the less so. But our lieutenants wive was weeping like Rachiell, or like the Mornefull Niobe; as also was the boatswain's wife; indeede all of them like the turtle doves...."

Not Orderly

It would seem that the Navy then was not a model of orderliness. All kinds of articles must have been left on deck as the night before the "Assistance" left Dover our diarist took a profitable stroll and added to his equipment. "I mett with a rugged towell on the quarter-deck which I soon secured. And soone after, Providence brought me a piece of old sayle and an earthen pott; all very helpful to him that had nothing."

While at Dover, the ship being ill-manned, they had succeeded in pressing six men from a merchantman. Other merchantmen, seeing the arrival of a man-of-war, had sailed away to prevent their men being pressed.

His Majesty's ships at that time had the strictest orders to engage immediately any vessel of any nationality which refused to lower her topsail in the Narrow Seas in an enforced gesture of respect. (Today there is the ceremony of dipping the flag when ships pass at sea, but this is purely a matter of courtesy.) Even when in the midst of intricate negotiations with the King of France, and desperate for the money which only Louis could give him, Charles II refused to rescind this order.

Teonge notes that on leaving the Downs a merchantman failed to salute the "Assistance" and they gave him a shot to make him lower his top-gallant, or as he puts it, "id est, to putt off his hatt to us". Then "our gunner presently goes on board of him, makes him pay 6s. 6d. for his contempt; abateing him 2d because it was the first shot."

The voyage apparently was uneventful but incredibly slow. By Midsummer Day the "Assistance" was still within sight of the Isle of Wight. Mr. Teonge describes how "this day two seamen that had stolen a piece or two of biefe were thus shamed; they had their hands tyd behind them, and themselves tyd to the maine mast, each of them a piece of raw beife tyd about their necks in a coard, and the beife bobbing before them like the knott of a crevatt.

"The rest of the seamen came one by one and rubd them over the mouth with the raw beife; and in this posture they stood 2 howers."

Drastic Punishment

Other punishments of a more drastic nature used at the time were stocks, irons, ducking at the main yard arm one or more times and "if the offense be verye fowle, he is also drawn under the verye keele of the shippe, the which is termed keel-haling; and whilst he is thus under water a great gunn is given fire righte over his head; the which is done as well toe astonish him the more with the thunder thereof, which much troubleth him, as to give warning unto all others to looke out, and to beware."

Gun drill was carried out and the ship cleared for action fairly often on the voyage. These exercises became more frequent as they neared Tripoli.

The convoy reached Malta in safety, August 1st and the "Assistance" remained with the Mediterranean Squadron until she sailed for England, September 8, 1676, reaching Deptford, November 17th, where she was paid off.

Throughout the voyage the chaplain carefully observed the customs of the Navy. He noted, for instance, that Saturday night was always celebrated by drinking a toast to sweethearts and wives. This custom is still observed. In Teonge's day the healths were drunk mostly in punch.

The captain of the "Assistance" liked to entertain fellow-officers. In Lisbon, he gave a dinner "with four dishes of meat, viz., four excellent hens and a piece of pork boiled in a dish; and a gigget of excellent mutton and turnips; a piece of beef or eight ribs, well seasoned and roasted; and a couple of very fat geese; last of all a great Cheshire cheese, a rare feast. His liquors were answerable, viz., Canary, sherry, Rhenish, claret, white wine, cider, ale, beer, all of the best sort; and punch plentifull as ditchwater."

Ships of the Restoration Navy were obviously uncomfortable. Teonge was never seasick, though he confesses to giddiness. He says of his first sermon preached on shipboard: "I could not stand without holding to boath the pillars in the stearcage; and the Captaines chayre and others were ready to tilt downe, sometimes backwards, sometimes forward. Olde seamen were sick this day; I was only giddy."

There is an account of a bad storm which struck the convoy. The storm lasted three days and the ships were driven apart. At one time, Teonge records: "We ship more seas; our men are all tired with pumping and bailing. We expect every sea to break our ship in pieces ... Our forecastle is all broke down. Now the men are all disheartened and expect nothing but the loss of the ship and life; men are swimming about in the waist of the ship." Later "It is a miracle that we ever escaped."

Perhaps it was in a spirit of thanksgiving for this miracle that the officers set down to the "verye excellent dinner" at Malta, on account of which ends our seventeenth-century correspondent's story of life on a British convoy.—Naval Information Office.

CALL FOR SHIPS MAY MEAN END OF 'NON-ESSENTIALS'

U. S. Citizens Will Have to Find Substitutes for Many Materials Now Imported

MAY SHIFT SHIPS

Washington, May 1 (AP)—President Roosevelt's call for ships for the movement of vital war materials means the end of shipments of "non-essentials" Maritime experts said last night and every American citizen eventually may feel the pinch

As a result, women who perfer hair nets made in China, may have to do without.

India prints, which have many admirers, won't be coming in, perhaps.

These are typical examples of undreds of items which may have to make way for the movement of strategic materials.

The United States has approximately 7,000,000 tons of ocean-going ships, with an additional 2,500,000 tons operating on the Great Lakes.

Shipping experts said that while many of the Great Lakes vessels are not suitable for trans-ocean routes some might be shifted to coastwise services to replace ships shifted to the carriage of strategic materials.

Removal of any considerable amount of tonnage from the coastwise and intercoastal services would necessitate making use of the railroads to transport tonnage formerly carried by vessels.

Ships to be pressed into service carrying supplies for nations battling the Axis may include foreign vessels now lying idle in American ports. Legislation is pending in Congress empowering the government to take possession of such craft.

Italians Claim Italian 'Chutists Occupy Greek Islands

Rome, May 1 —(AP)— The Italian High Command claimed today that Italian parachutists have occupied the Greek islands of Cephalonia and Zante and that the nearby island of San Maura has been taken over by Fascist land forces.

All three islands are off the Greek west coast.

The High Command also claimed that Italian torpedo boats had attacked a convoy in the Aegean, torpedoing a cruiser and a large destroyer.

GARDEN COURAGE

The little English gardens lie
All day beneath a troubled sky,
And all the night long spend in dread
Lest havoc strike from overhead.

The very air breathes hurt and hate,
But still beside the garden gate,
As if to mock these angry times,
The morning glory bravely climbs.

Though death at every mile is set,
Still blossom phlox and mignonette;
And bravely still the marigold
Brightens the garden, as of old.

Some things there are in order's course
Must crumble 'neath the blows of force,
And spire and dome of steel and stone
Can into rubble gray be blown.

But living things like stock and rose
Outlast the mightiest of blows.
Theirs is the spirit and the will
That despots have no power to kill.

You'd Be Surprised!

THE BLACK WATCH

Conspicuous among the military units now guarding the British Isles is the crack Scottish regiment known as The Black Watch.

Under one form of organization or another this famous British regiment dates back to 1688.

In that year the Earl of Athole was commissioned by the British government to organize a guard to keep the peace in the Highlands and on the Islands of Scotland.

Several independent companies of Highlanders were organized and their first task was to enforce in Scotland "the disarming act," which required constant "watching" of the rival Scottish clans to keep them from plundering one another and committing reprisals.

These companies of Highland military police wore kilts made of tartan of a dark or sombre color and came to be known popularly in Scotland as "Am Freicuden Du," or The Black Watch, as distinguished from the British regulars who wore scarlet coats and breeches and who were popularly known among the Scotch as "Sieraran Dearag," or Red Soldiers.

About 1729 six companies of The Black Watch were absorbed into the regular British army as the 42nd Regiment of the Line.

Later they were given the official name "The Royal Highlanders," but they have continued to be known as The Black Watch to this day.

In 1743 part of the Black Watch mutinied and fled to Scotland, but they surrendered after being surrounded and the ringleaders were put to death.

The Black Watch had its first battle experience at Fontenoy in Belgium in 1745 during the War of the Austrian Succession.

Since then the Black Watch has won laurels on a hundred major battlefields and it is not surpassed by any British regiment in the number and character of its battle honors.

In 1801 The Black Watch took an important part in the Battle of Alexandria, Egypt, which was fought in the ruins of Nicopolis.

Kilts of dark tartan are still part of the dress uniform of The Black Watch, and tartan of this shade is known as "The Black Watch Tartan."

The honorary badge of the famous regiment is worn by only two women, the Queen and Anna Neagle, the British actress.

How an Army Is Trained In England

From the London Daily Herald

"Digging in", says the sergeant major of X Company, "is a thing of the past. In the last war there was a system of trenches that grew and grew until the troops were moving in a sort of city of ruts and dugouts.

"You dug in a stone's throw away from the German lines, and hopped from trench to trench on little offensives. That's Sweet Fanny Adams now.

"The last war was old-fashioned. Now it's all mobile stuff.

"Consequently, one of the most important things you have got to learn is, how to get across country quickly and quietly—disguise yourself as a blade of grass or a daisy, or somthing.

"You've got to be ghosts. You've got to learn how to stay perfectly still.

"Now over there, within 50 yards of you, there are a dozen men, every one of them with his rifle dead on you.

"They are invisible because they re keeping perfectly still. At a given signal they could open fire and mow you down.

"You can't see 'em, eh? And yet those men hidden out there are no better trained than you are. They are just keeping still.

"Stillness is the first rule of invisibility. Bear that in mind. A rise in the ground of only a few inches is enough to cover a man at a 100 yards; if he keeps still.

"Your face looks white at a distance; so keep it down. Breathe slowly and steadily. Get into a comfortable position so that your muscles won't cramp.

"Control yourself so that you're motionless, and, if you pick your cover with only reasonable common sense, it'd take more than an ordinary man to pick you out.

"So. There are 12 men hidden within a stone's throw of you here. See how many you can pick out."

We narrow our eyes, and scrutinize the land.

There are a few sparse shrubs; a few bare little trees, a bump or two in the grassland; no sign of life apart from vegetable life.

Siberia, our "foreigner", suddenly says: "There must be a man in that gorse bush."

"No guess-work", says the C.S.M. of X Company.

"A sparrow flew down towards the bush," says Siberia. "Then something frightened it—it swerved and flew away. I'd say there was a man hidden there."

"A point worth remembering. As a matter of fact, there is a man there. Any more?"

The Good Boy from Godalming says: "There in the grass I caught the glint of the sun on a bit of brass."

"An argument against spit-and-polish," says the Long Man of Durham.

"Maybe, maybe not," says the C.S.M. "Anyway, you're right. There is a man there. Look out for little things like that.

"It's to avoid reflections of light that your bayonets, on active service, are dull instead of polished, and the metal parts of your rifle are blued. Anybody see any more?"

Nobody sees any more. A huge Cornishman thinks he sees something; it turns out to be a stone.

"Right," says the C.S.M. of X Company. "Now when I blow this whistle, the men hidden out there will move a little. Just a little. Then watch the result."

The whistle twitters. A little miracle happens. The bare grassland seems to come to life. It twitches.

All at once we have a feeling of optical illusion. The gorse bush sprouts an arm. A dip, too slight to be visible from 30 yards away pushes up a grey steel mushroom.

Like the armed men in the ancient legend, men in battle dress emerge from the desolate earth. Every one is plainly visible.

"That," says our instructor, "is what a slight movement can do. So remember: Keep still when under cover.

MONTH OF APRIL DRIEST ON RECORD

With a total rainfall of only 0.41 inches being recorded, the month of April just completed has been one of the driest on record, according to figures kept at the Belleville Purification Plant. Not in recent years has such a low figure been noted, with the nearest in comparison being the month of April, 1938, when 1.58 inches of rain were recorded. Temperatures recorded were also considerably higher than during the corresponding month last year.

The maximum temperature recorded during the month just completed was 80 degrees as compared to a high mark of 71.2 degrees one year ago. Minimum temperatures were also considerably less this year with the thermometer never falling below the 25 degree mark as compared to a low temperature of 17 degrees during April last year. By a strange coincidence both maximum temperatures reached during the month of April, both in 1940 and 1941, occurred on the last day of the month.

Total precipitation during April 1940 was 2.99 inches, made up of 2.46 inches rain and 5 3-10 inches of snow. There was no snow during April this year with only 0.41 inches of rain falling. The average rainfall during April since 1934 has been approximately 2.05 inches.

British Sub Awaited Nine Hours In Enemy Waters For Missing Envoy

London, May 1 (CP)—A British submarine bobbed definately for nine hours on the surface of an Italian-held bay, flying her largest white ensign, while one of her officers hunted ashore in vain for the British Minister to Yugoslavia, the Admiralty said last night.

The official account of "this tense but farcical situation" said the submarine Regent sailed boldly into the Harbor of Kotor, Yugoslavia, at dawn last Saturday, took an Italian officer aboard as hostage and then waited out the search for Minister Ronald Ian Campbell.

(Mr. Campbell and his staff are stranded in Durazzo, Albania, after the plan to escape aboard the submarine failed. They were seen there Monday by United States newspapermen en route from Italy to the former Italian-Greek war front.)

The adventure story which the Admiralty told was not unlike the exploits often attributed to submarines in the movies.

Under Lieut.-Cmdr. P. J. H. Bartlett the submarine boldly entered Kotor, after passing through two minefields. She came in at dawn on April 26, and found the whole area occupied by the Italian Army.

An officer from the submarine was landed to call on the senior Italian naval officer in charge.

An Italian Army staff officer was embarked on H.M.S. Regent as a hostage.

Then the British officer went in search of the Minister and his party.

"This tense but farcical situation continued for nine hours while the submarine waited in the hope that the landed British officer would find Campbell and bring him down to port" the Admiralty said.

Then the situation changed from farce to grim warfare. Two Italian dive-bombers appeared at the end of the nine hours and dropped several bombs, which missed their target. Then they swept the submarine with machine-gun fire, slightly wounding Lieutenant Bartlett, the first lieutenant and one petty officer.

Back she went past the minefields, and out into the Adriatic, returning to her base with the Italian hostage still aboard.

"Although the Regent's mission was unsuccessful in rescuing the British Minister," the Admiralty adds, "the fact that a British submarine could lie for nine hours in a harbor occupied by the enemy and subsequently be successfully extricated is a tribute to the coolness and determination of the comanding officer and crew of the Regent."

Hand operated vacuum controls have been invented to enable legless men to drive automobiles.

LIPSON'S

PERSONALS

Mrs. I. L. Moore has received word from Australia that her son, Capt. S. L. Seymour has been promoted to rank of major in Medical Corps on Active Service Abroad.

Miss Iria Richards returned from Queen's University yesterday and will spend the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Richards, John Street.

A delightful surprise party was held at the home of Mr. Fred Rodgers, 91 Lingham Street, in honor of his birthday. About forty friends and relatives attended the party.

Owing to the death of Miss Claire Hitchon, a valued member of the University Women's Club, the tea and exhibition of Manly MacDonald's paintings planned for Saturday has been postponed.

Mrs. John McIntosh and Mrs. William McIntosh were hostesses at a tea held yesterday at the former's home, Hillcrest Avenue, in honor of Mrs. E. H. Walters, Toronto. The tea table was charming with Sring flowers and matching tapers. Mrs. R. M. Anderson invited the guests to the tea room. Mrs. G. A. Freeman poured tea and those who assisted were Mrs. Harley Wray, Mrs. Jack Marsh, Mrs. E. G. Kennedy and Mrs. Jack McIntosh.

About fifty members of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, were entertained at a dance held last evening in St. Michael's Academy by the Children of Mary. Mr. Ken McAdam and Mr. McLean and Mr. LaFontaine of Mountain View accompanied the airmen and assisted in the entertainment. Four prize dances added to the enjoyment of the evening. The members of the Sodality were assisted by representatives of the Catholic Women's League who acted as hostesses for the interesting function. Refreshments were served before the close of the evening

Weddings

ATKINSON—BROWN

In a setting of pink and white decorations enhanced with clusters of sweet peas and fern, the marriage took place in Front Road United Church yesterday afternoon at two-thirty of Helen Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noble Brown and P. C. Harry Atkinson, only son of Mr. Sydney Atkinson and the late Mrs. Atkinson of Hull, England. Rev. W. D. Harrison officiated. Wedding music was played by Mr. William Connor, and Mr. S. M. Anglin was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length gown of white georgette with long veil caught to her hair with lilies of the valley. She carried pink and white carnations. Mrs. Merrill Everett, Brockville, was matron of honor and wore pink chiffon with matching flower hat. Her bouquet was of pink carnations. Mr. Harold Kennedy of Paris, Ontario, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Roy Clazie and Mr. Leonard Thompson, Deseronto.

Sun-Suit Or Jumper Frock

By ANNE ADAMS

What fun it is to stitch up gay, summery clothes for your tiny daughter—with a style like this to make your needle fly! It's Pattern 4738, and an Anne Adams design. The sun-frock, which leads a double life as a jumper, buttons all down the back to let you handle it in a convenient, flat-spread piece for sewing and ironing. Notice the blithe flare of the front-panelled skirt. Either lace or ric-rac makes a fresh, pretty trim that may be repeated on the rippling brim of the eye-shading sunbonnet. Last — but certainly not least—there's a crisp blouse with short puffy sleeves and a round neckline.

Pattern 4738 is available in children's sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6. Size 6, sun-frock and bonnet, takes 2 1-4 yards 35-inch fabric and 2 3-8 yards lace edging; jumper, 1 3-8 yards 35-inch fabric, bonnet, 7-8 yard 35-inch fabric, blouse, 3-4 yard contrast.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Send your order to The Ontario Intelligencer Pattern Department, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont.

"They take away BABY'S TEETHING FEVER"

SO writes Mrs. B———, of North Sydney. Then a Toronto mother says: "I used Baby's Own Tablets and the babies were always so good. No cramps, pain or trouble when teething. In fact, I hardly knew they were cutting their teeth as they never were any trouble at night."

Baby's Own Tablets are quick, safe and effective, sweet-tasting and easy to take. Contain no opiates or stupefying drugs. Try Baby's Own Tablets not only for teething troubles but also for colds, constipation, upset stomach and other simple ailments of babyhood. 25 cents. Your money refunded if you are not satisfied.

Believed in Violin As More Effective Than His Speeches

London, May 1—(CP)—Frederick Roberts, 64, Labor M.P., for West Bromwich, who believed more in his violin than in his electioneering speeches, has resigned his seat due to ill-health.

When election campaigning he always took his violin to meetings and charmed audiences with his music. He was the only M.P. able to play a tune on a saw.

Short, with flowing grey hair, he has often been mistaken for David Lloyd George. Roberts was Minister of Pensions in two labor governments. He was also chairman of the labor party in 1927 and a member of the Typographical Association for 45 years.

A new brief case is equipped with a combination lock to save its owner the necessity for carrying a key.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

SECRET MARRIAGE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I would like to give a shower for a friend of mine and at the shower announce the marriage. The marriage was a secret one, and only my husband and I know about it. They are afraid to tell their parents and I thought I could help them out by making the announcement at the shower. If I have the party at a restaurant would it be proper for the orchestra leader to announce it—as a complete surprise?

2. Would it be proper for me to give my wedding gift at the shower?

3. What kind of shower card should I send?

Althea.

1. Although I realize that you would like to be helpful to these friends who let you and your husband in on their secret, I wish I could persuade you not to carry out your plan to announce this marriage to the parents of the couple at this shower. This would be a really cruel way for them to be told this news.

Since you and your husband are apparently the bride's and groom's closest friends, give that friendship its supreme value by persuading these young people to do what they should do—tell their parents of the marriage. This news should be told to them in private. Since they took the plans for their marriage in their own hands, they should have gumption enough to take the announcement in their own hands. Imagine how you would feel if you went to a party and suddenly heard someone announce your daughter's or son's marriage. It would be a devastating and heartless experience. And to hear an orchestra leader make this significant announcement would be the low in terrible taste!

The parents of the bride are the ones who have the privilege (even though, in this case, belated) of announcing their daughter's marriage. No friend, no matter how close a friend and under what circumstances, has the right to assume this privilege.

First these young people should tell their parents of their marriage. Then the marriage should be announced as the girl's parents wish to make that announcement. Then, after these two steps have been take, you could properly carry out your plan to give the shower in their honor.

2. Since your shower will be given after the marriage, you and your guests might properly plan to give wedding presents as shower presents. But you should make this plan clear to your guests so that they won't be bringing more or less trivial shower presents while you will be giving a consequential something as your wedding present.

SILVER WEDDING

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband I have been invited to a Silver Wedding Anniversary party, but we will not be able to attend. Should I send a note of regret? Also, should I send a gift? If you tell me that I should send a gift, what kind of gift would be appropriate?

Esther.

Yes, you should answer the invitation as soon as possible. If the invitation was in the form of a note, your answer should be a note.

If these friends are very close friends of yours it would be gracious and generous of you to send a gift as a bow to this important occasion. It might be something in silver, the symbol of this anniversary, or it may just as well be some other kind of present, something you know will be especially welcome to them and to their home.

If they aren't very intimate friends of yours and if you don't wish to send an especially consequential gift, you might send, in your name and your husband's, a box of flowers to arrive the morning of the anniversary

Now is Most Dangerous Time of The Year For Colds

Parents seem to become careless about children's colds this time of the year, whereas it is a particularly important time to get to work on every sniffle or cough. Mothers shouldn't be lulled into a feeling of security by the first nice, spring-like days. For as a matter of fact, this is just about the most dangerous time of the year with respect to colds, influenza and pneumonia.

The old-fashioned parent's custom of dosing the children with a "Spring tonic" was basically sound, even if most of her tonics looked and tasted awful and had some questionable medicinal values. For she knew that in early Spring bodily resistance was worn down by winter living habits, lack of vitalizing sunlight and exposure to cold weather.

The Spring cold is a threat to all of us, but to a young child it is a far greater menace. In the next few weeks many children on this continent will either succumb directly from the effects of the colds, or they will be left so weakened as to be an easy prey to some other disease.

If your child develops a cold, it is because he has been exposed to someone who has the ailment. That is the only way he can get it. We used to make excuses for ourselves when a baby got a cold. He had slept in a draught, we said, or he had gotten wet, or something like that. Well, if science hasn't devised a cure for cold, it has at least exploded that theory. Where there is a cold, there has been contact with infection. Some person with a cold has been careless or negligent and has endangered a child.

If you query a group of grown-ups about what they minded most about the common colds they have gone through, you would hear complaints about the stuffed noses, the heavy heads, the running eyes. Some would regret the time lost from work, the sleep lost because of the racking cough. But if by some power, you could endow a group of babies and children with adult intelligence and questioned them about their sufferings from colds, you would hear far more serious and tragic details of ear infections, of mastoids, of pneumonia, of loss of life. In the adult, the common cold is a nuisance, but rarely a threat to life. In the young child, the common cold is always full of danger. So many diseases that afflict children start with colds.

The parent will have much less reason to worry about colds if the child has been having cod liver oil every day during the winter. Unfortunately, in Spring a great many persons stop taking cod liver oil or giving it to their children. The sun is getting strong, and so they drop their main source of vitamin D. Well, that may be alright if you happen to be living in Florida or California, or somewhere where the climate is similar. But in most of the United States and Canada, you can't afford to stop taking your vitamin D so soon. The sun's rays aren't strong enough yet, and bodies are much too covered with clothes to get the required supply in this way.

For those living as far north as my home town, Callander—and a good share of the United States west of it qualifies in this particular, it is no mistake to take cod liver oil all year. We see to it that the Dionne Quintuplets have their cod liver oil the year around. Of course, we do cut down the amount they get of this oil, and there might even be a month or so when it isn't absolutely necessary. But we feel that it is well to be safe.

Remember, if your child gets a cold, or if any member of your family gets a cold now to which the child is exposed, and it seems to hang on or is at all severe, call your doctor. It isn't the time to take a chance. Pneumonia nearly always starts as a cold or an attack of influenza.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wants to Provide Home Before He Proposes

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My love affairs have never prospered greatly, perhaps because I have higher ideals regarding love and marriage than most men.

The first girl I loved was engaged to another, and I had to live through the unhappiness of seeing her married to another man. Now I am in love with a very fine young woman, who has had one disastrous marriage. The fact that she is a divorcee makes no difference to me, as I have learned to love her truly. However, I have a feeling that before a man asks a woman to marry him, he should be able to provide for her.

This practise of a girl keeping her job after she's married doesn't make a hit with me. What do you think—should I have the money to buy a home before I ask this lady to be my wife?

Uncertain

It would be a happier world if more young men had your ideals concerning marriage. But as so many girls now take it for granted that they must keep on with their jobs after they are married, I'm afraid that some smart young man who doesn't feel as you do about having a home provided in advance, might walk off with your girl.

Don't you think it would be well to talk the matter out with her? Tell her it's your ambition to provide a home before you're married and get her reaction, before you start depriving yourself only to find she has other ideas.

Her Fiance is Pursued by Former Sweetheart

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have been going with a young man for about four months. Before going with me, he was engaged to a girl with whom he had kept company for six years. A few months before the date set for their marriage, she broke the engagement and went out with other men.

Now that he is trying to forget her, she keeps calling him up, saying she would be willing to wear his ring again, but he told her he was through. The girl even comes to his home, waiting for him when he returns from his office.

Should I continue going with him? I like him and we seem to have a great deal in common, but although I told him he'd have to make up her mind whether he wants her or not, he insists it's hard to be mean to a girl whom you've loved so long. What suggestion can you offer me, please?

Wondering Lynn

Sounds to me as if this young man is what is known as a "glutton for punishment."

The girl treated him abominably and now she's trying to sneak back into his affections at the expense of your friendship with him. He must have felt rather cheap at being jilted after a six-year courtship. What proof has he that she wouldn't do the same thing again if someone apparently more desirable appeared on the horizon?

Relying on the old adage, you'd better be sure he's off with the old love before he's on with the new.

NAVAL ROOKIES IN LAND SHIPS

Some Breezy Notes From Training Bases on Canada's East Coast

Halifax (CP)—Notes about the Navy gathered by a reporter in a visit to the two Stadaconas, land bases where they train the men who go down to the sea in warships.

Youngest applicant for a commission was a 12yearold American who sent aong sketches of a few of his inventions in a fruitless effort at persuasion. Every man who goes to sea is given a full day's mask drill ashore. They still chortle at Stadacona One about the luckless chap who went into the chamber with a hangover. It wasn't deadly but this victim wished it was.

The silence and speed of hundreds of the blue boys at the Stadacona Two dinner table is a constant surprise to Chief Cook William Nuttal of Saskatoon and Victoria. Some rush through their heaping meals in eight minutes. Substantial food with little fried stuff is on the menus.

Chief Yeoman Edward W. Stubbington, Winnipeg, of the signalling school has turned his office into a hangar for plane models he clips out of funny papers. In the same office is CPO. C.E. Hawes of Toronto who won the D.S.M. at Zeebrugge in the last war.

Regulating Petty Officer at Stadacona Two, Samuel Kennard thought he had settled down for life on a farm near Edmonton until the war brought him back into the blue. He left the R.N. in 1923. Edward Kennedy, chief yeoman of signals, was an R.N. man with French light naval forces until France capitulated.

The future sailors learn to recognize enemy and friendly warplanes before going to sea. The bell which tolls each passing hour bears the wards "H.M.S. Niobe—1898." The Niobe was the first Canadian warship, a transfer from the R.N.

Four or five mongrel dogs keep Stadacona Two to themselves, keeping a strict eye on the gate lest any intruders should appear. The sound that ends the meals is their signal for a gallop to the kitchen. At Stadacona One, Mike, a mongre with a dominant touch of bulldog, is top pet and is a familiar figure at the daily Divisions.

R. A. F. NEWSMEN ARE GRADUATES OF "FLEET ST."

Well Organized Service Reports Daring Deeds of Airmen for Inspiration of Empire's People

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—The Air Ministry News Service, a Government agency that operates like the big press associations of the world, is the voice of the Royal Air Force.

The news service follows the fliers wherever they go, at home of abroad. If there is a good story to tell (and there's hardly a day without at least one tale of amazing daring) of the feats of the brave British arimen, the news service reporters are there to turn up the facts and whip them into shape for distribution to a news-hungry world.

Since the start of the war more than 3,000 stories have been released for publication, most of them since the R.A.F.'s gallant part in the Battle of Britain last fall. Security reasons have held in abeyance until after the war probably as many articles.

The news service was organized 2 1-2 years ago because it was felt that if the R.A.F. ever went into action a carefully planned news service would be needed to unfold to the world the activities of the airmen. The authorities felt, too, that the continued presence of civilian reporters, however unquestionable their integrity, would be undesirable. So hand-picked men were chosen and taken into the air force.

Trained News Men

The actual news gatherers are trained newspaper men—graduates of Fleet street—who, on their appointment, are commissioned in the R.A.F. Volunteer Reserve. They join as pilot officers and go through a short period of training with a disciplinary course. Eventually they are sent to various command headquarters and if they are satisfactory are promoted to the rank of flight lieutenant.

These officers are at work whereever there are important commands or groups. Some are at Singapore, in the Mediterranean and the Middle East but the majority are attached to home bases of fighter, bomber and coastal commands. Whenever possible they interview pilots who hove been bombing Germany or shooting down Messerschmitts so the world in general can read of the exploits. It is not an easy job even to men trained in handling news stories. British airmen—and the same goes for the Canadians serving in the R.A.F. are modest about their achievements. The interviews and stories encourage the people at home, and in the Empire and neutral countries their propaganda value is incalculable.

How Distributed

The Ministry of Information in London acts as distributor for the news service. Subscribers to the M.O.I. teletype service have the material delivered over the wire to their editorial desks. It is in this way that The Canadian Press receives the stories, which it rewrites for cabling to Canada.

There is a service press officer at each of the commands and he bases his bulletins principally on intelligence and operational reports. The press officer at the group concerned follows up with stories and amplifies them later, generally with interviews. Group press officers have a wide vairiety of duties which only trained newspaper men could be trusted with. They arrange and conduct visits of newsmen, write radio scripts and feature articles. The man with the group is working under conditions similar to those of Fleet street itself. If he hears of a good "yarn" he rushes off and sometimes uses an airplane to get there faster if the story is a "hot" one. He has practically a free hand in his news gathering, but it is usual for all stories to be approved by a high officer of the command before they are sent to the Air Ministry for inal scrutiny.

FLIES BOMBER SCHEDULE TIME

Czech Pilot in R.A.F. Pays Little Attention to Nazi Defences

London (CP) — A Czechoslovak pilot who has made many flights over Berlin as captain of a Royal Air Force bomber was a civil pilot before the war and he causes some amusement to his colleagues by his refusal to recognize any change in his flying duties now that he is delivering bombs instead of peacetime loads.

When his destination is Berlin he sets a course for that city, and flies without paying the slightest attention to searchlights, "flak" or other opposition. He was known as a good timekeeper when a civil pilot. His one thought now appears to be to keep to schedule, deliver the goods and return.

The other members of the crew are regarded almost in the light of passengers by this pilot. His job is to carry them to the target area and back again—with some assistance from the navigator, bomb aimer and air gunner. The second pilot often finds too little to do. If he offers to take over the controls the captain usually waves him away with the word "pump."

The other night a squadron leader decided to take part in a flight acting as second pilot. But when he endeavored to take the controls he met with no better success than the regular second pilot. "Pump," commanded the captain, "Pump."

Dodgers Win 9th Straight, But Drop Back In Race As Cardinals Take Leading Role

Brooklyn in Second Place Owing to Percentages, but Have Won Thirteen

YANKS WIN

Indians Extend Winning Streak to Six as Tigers Are Roused

By JUDSON BAILEY

The National League race is in its typical spring squeeze.

The Brooklyn Dodgers climbed into first place Monday by winning their seventh straight game. Tuesday they won their eighth and slipped into a tie. Wednesday they won their ninth in succession and dropped into second place.

This would seem to be going full speed forward in reverse and that may be just as clear as trying to explain the actual jam now involving the Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals.

Brooklyn has won 13 games and lost four for a .765 percentage while St. Louis has a record of 10 and three for .769.

Johnny Vander Meer put the brakes on Brooklyn for seven innings yesterday, scattering three singles and striking out eight while his teammates routed Kirby Higbe for a 3-0 lead. But in the eighth inning Dixie Walker and Joe Medwick hit home runs, sandwiched around a walk, to tie the score and in the ninth Mickey Owen and Peewee Reese smacked a pair of doubles for a run to win 4-3.

The Cardinals hopped on Hal Schumacher for a dozen hits, including homers by Country Slaughter and Johnny Mize to whip New York Giants again 6-4.

Chicago Cubs clustered four runs in the first and four more in the eighth to blast Boston Braves 9-4 with the help of four Boston errors.

Cy Blanton a castoff of Pittsburgh Pirates, kept 10 hits scattered and struck out six as the Phillies pummeled the Pirates 8-4.

Cleveland Indians extended their winning string to six by overtaking Philadelphia Athletics 6-5 on Ken Keltner's three-run homer with two out in the ninth inning.

Detroit Tigers finally roused from their hitting slump to roar out with 18 hits and subdue Boston Red Sox 12-8. Rudy York hit a home with two on and also contributed two doubles to the attack.

Chicago White Sox held on to second place in the junior circuit by beating Washington Senators 5-1, and Joe Gordon and Marius Russo led New York Yankees to vengeance against St. Louis Browns, 7-1.

International League Has Second Opener

The International League fires the second barrel of opening day ceremonies this afternoon in the four so-called "Northern" cities of the circuit.

Providing the weather man cooperates, fans of Rochester, Buffalo, Toronto and Montreal will turn out for the usual inaugural day celebrations and welcome home their heroes from a two-week road trip.

The same clubs which started the season in the "south" April 17 will again face each other across the diamond, with Rochester meeting Jersey City, Buffalo entertaining Syracuse, Montreal playing host to Newark and Toronto welcoming Baltimore.

CANADIAN BOXERS TRIUMPH OVER IRISH GUARDS

1st Division Boxing Team Wins Seven Out of Twelve Bouts

By ROSS MUNRO

Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, May 1 (CP)—The 1st Division boxing team, champions of Canadian Corps won another triumph when it defeated a hard-slugging team of the Irish Guards, renowned for fighting ability in the ring and on the battlefield.

The Canadians, managed by Capt. Charlie Letourneau of Montreal, won seven of the 12 fights. A clean sweep was made of the three middleweight fights and two out of three heavyweight bouts went to the 1st Division men.

Piper Dicky Boyle of Kirkland Lake, Ont., was the winner in the one lightweight contest and in the welterweight Pte. A. P. Garnier of Halifax defeated his opponent while Pte. G. Sexton of Toronto lost out.

Middleweight winners were Pte. W. B. Stemler of Windsor, Ont., Cpl. F. A. Embree of Maccan, N.S., and Pte. Ken (Irish) Knowlan of Perth, N.B.

Tough luck dogged the light-heavyweights and Pte. P. Dockling of Minnedosa, Man., Pte. L. Styan of Montreal and Gnr. R. S. Cornell of Quebec City all were defeated.

L. Cpl. Tommy Falls of Liverpool, N.S., undefeated in any army bout this year and never knocked off his feet, clouted out a victory in the heavyweight bracket along with Pte. W. G. Fowler of Yarmouth, N.S. Cpl. Ken Sprouie of Toronto was a heavyweight loser.

WINNIPEG WINS JUNIOR HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP

GOALIE STARS

Winnipeg Club Wins Memorial Cup and All the Glory

By ROBERT CLARKE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, May 1 (CP)—The glory that goes to a champion belonged today to Winnipeg Rangers.

One word—powerhouse—is all that is necessary to describe the Rangers, who won the Memorial Cup and the Canadian junior hockey title here last night before 7,000 fans with a smashing 7-4 victory over Montreal Royals in the fifth game of their best-of-five series.

Big and fast, and able to strike crushing blows, the Rangers succeeded to a title that had been held for the two previous seasons by Oshawa Generals. Their victory in the cup final gave the west a 12-11 edge in the 23 years that the trophy has been up for play.

Hero for the Rangers was Winnipeg's six-foot goaltender, Hal Thompson who held off Royals with a spectacular display through the first two periods until Rangers gathered their forces for the knockout blow in the third.

The offensive stars for Rangers were Bill Robinson and Les Hickey, who each scored twice. The other Winnipeg goals went to Bill Mortimer, Hugh Millar and Bob Ballance. The Royals goals were scored by Grant Morrison, Rollie Bleau, Jimmy Planche and Bobby Carragher.

Royals were disappointed in defeat but one and all they conceded that the Rangers were a great team. "Whether we think we should have won or not fails to detract from the fact that they're real champions," said Carragher. "We've got a pretty good fighting club ourself and yet they outfought us in the last period when it counted most."

Eastern Regiment Wins 1st Division Cross-Country Overseas Race Event

Central Ontario Regiment Runners Were Second Over Gruelling Four-Mile Course

ARMY SPORTS

By ROSS MUNRO

Somewhere in England, May 1—(CP)—Over a gruelling four-mile course, the 15-man team of an Eastern Canada Regiment, 1st Division champions, won the First Canadian Corps cross country title.

Runners of a Central Ontario Regiment, best in the 2nd Division, were second in the team standing and the Canadian base holding units last.

L. Cpl. Bill Vergette, fleet infantryman from Port Colborne, Ont., member of the 2nd Division team, finished first, followed closely by Sgt. Roger MacDonald of Bridgewater, N.S., member of the winning team. Pte. Edgar Sharpe of Brantford, Ont., with 2nd Division runners, placed third.

30-Game Schedule Adopted By City Softball League

A thirty game schedule was adopted for the Belleville Senior Softball League at an executive meeting held last night with the league to open on May 14th when the local Juniors will meet the Reliance Aircraft nine, the latter branching out into softball circles following a successful hockey season in Belleville last winter when a new sports club was introduced to the sporting fraternity of this city. The second game of the season sees the Point Anne "Cementmen" custodians of the league trophy, clash with the Corby A.C.

Several important motions were adopted by the league executive last night, President Clem Bowler revealed last night following the conclave. All postponed games, caused by rain or otherwise, must be played within 24 hours of the time of postponement.

Two Sets Play-Offs

The City League championship play-offs will precede the O.A.S.A. playdowns this year when the first and fourth place clubs shall meet in series "A" with the second and third clubs in the final standing meeting in series "B" in a best-in-three series. The ultimate winners of these two series will meet in a three-game series for the Bank of Commerce trophy and the City League championship, which will be immediately followed by the District Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Jerry Hurley, veteran Belleville ball player, was added to the staff of umpires, while Don Roe and Ken Colling were named to the executive with one more member yet to be appointed.

May 14—Reliance at Juniors.
May 16—Pt. Anne at Corby A.C.
May 19—SACO at Reliance.
May 21—Juniors at Pt. Anne.
May 21—Corby A.C. at SACO.
May 26—Pt. Anne at Reliance.
May 28—Corby A.C. at Juniors.
May 28—SACO at Pt. Anne.
May 30—Reliance at Corby A.C.
June 2—Juniors at SACO.
June 4—Juniors at Reliance.
June 4—Corby A.C. at Pt. Anne.
June 6—Reliance at SACO.
June 9—Pt. Anne at Juniors.
June 11—SACO at Corby A.C.
June 13—Reliance at Pt. Anne.
June 16—Juniors at Corby A.C.
June 18—Pt. Anne at SACO.
June 20—Corby A.C. at Reliance.
June 23—SACO at Juniors.
June 25—Reliance at Juniors.
June 27—Pt. Anne at Corby A.C.
June 30—SACO at Reliance.
July 2—Juniors at Pt. Anne.
July 2—Corby A.C. at SACO.
July 4—Pt. Anne at Reliance.
July 7—Corby A.C. at Juniors.
July 7—SACO at Pt. Anne.

July 11—Juniors at SACO.

PROPOSE 5-TEAM INTERPROVINCIAL HOCKEY LEAGUE

Montreal Royal Juniors Willing to Link-Up With Four Ontario Clubs

Toronto, May 1—(CP)—A move is underway to operate an interprovincial junior hockey league next season made up of five Ontario clubs and a team representing the Royal Hockey Club of Montreal, it was revealed here today.

Sponsor of the plan is Gus Ogilvie, manager of the Montreal Royals' team which bowed in a five-game final to Winnipeg Rangers for the Memorial Cup and the Canadian junior title. Ogilvie emphasized however, that the plan is merely in the embryo stage at present.

The Royals manager said that Toronto Marlboros, Toronto Young the intention would be to have Rangers, Oshawa Generals, Toronto St. Michael's, and one other Ontario team in the league besides Royals. Ogilvie mentioned Guelph Biltmores as a possible "sixth club."

"I mentioned the idea to Mr. W. A. Hewitt, Secretary of the Ontario Hockey Association and he seemed to like it very much," said Ogilvie. "I'll be back in Toronto in a couple of weeks to talk it over further with him."

Ogilvie said that the idea behind his plan is to increase public interest in junior hockey in Montreal by having a Montreal team in a league which is considered the strongest in eastern Canada.

Baseball addicts of the province and more particularly Belleville, were doubtless glad to hear of the good fortune bestowed upon Wilfred "Wicky" Ross, when it was announced yesterday he had been named Acting Trainmaster with jurisdiction over the Oshawa subdivision, extending from Scarboro to Cobourg. This appointment was given with merit, as "Wicky" Ross has advanced with regularity since joining the Canadian National Railways in 1914 and has been Assistant Yardmaster at the Belleville terminal since 1932. "Wicky" was a member of Belleville's first senior O.B.A. championship team in 1919 and continued to prove one of the best centrefielders in the amateur ranks until he hung up his ball shoes a few years ago. Like his contemporary, "Peeney" Mills, whenever "Wicky" Ross' name is mentioned in baseball circles reminiscing immediately follows with some really interesting tales of the good old days when baseball and Belleville went hand-in-hand.

Veteran baseball addicts will always remember the day in Peterboro' when "Wicky" raced from first to score on Mills' single and defeat the mighty Hillcrests in 1923. However, there is one phase in "Wicky's" baseball life that isn't public news, so here goes for the story.

It was in 1925, the last season the Nationals played in the old Fair Grounds park. "Wicky" and Del Cherry, respective centrefielders for Belleville and Kingston in the old C. O. B. L., had gone through the entire season without committing a single error and these two star outer-gardeners were ribbing each other and passing out bouquets during the final league scheduled game prior to the play-offs. During the sixth inning a Kingston batter lifted an easy fly towards centrefield and Ross moved over a few steps to apparently take the hoist with ease, when, believe it or not, "Wicky" muffed the lifter. As they exchanged places Cherry naturally gave "Wicky" the rib and they shook hands as "Wicky" doffed his cap in acknowledgment to Cherry's unblemished record. But wait—there goes an easy fly towards Cherry's field—it should be an easy out. Yes, you guessed it—Del Cherry muffed practically as easy a pop fly as Ross had bobbled only a few moments before—believe it or not. The two boys tied for fielding honors with one error each that season.

Not a big man in stature, Wicky Ross made up for his diminutiveness by his speed and daring base-running. His recent elevation to such a responsible position with the Canadian National Railways has brought him congratulations and as a superior official remarked to us yesterday—"Wicky is a fine fellow and well deserves his promotion. He enjoys the confidence of his associates and that is the secret of success, be it on a railway, on the baseball diamond—or in any phase of life." We would like to add our congrats on this occasion as well.

A thirty-game schedule, opening on May 14th with the strengthened Juniors meeting the Reliance Aircraft, was adopted by the executive of the City Softball League last night. This year the City League championship will definitely be determined before the O. A. S. A. playdowns commence, which appears to be a step in the right direction, as two separate play-off series will be enjoyed in lieu of the heretofore long uninteresting league schedule. Each team will be assured of 12 games prior to the play-offs, into which four of the five clubs in the league will advance, one being left out in the so-called cold. While on the subject of softball, a rather amusing incident occurred at Coleman Flats last night when the Corby A. C. squad arrived to practice, but no equipment was in evidence. It seems the Corby's paraphernalia was placed in an automobile at the Collegiate following Monday's practice, but has since disappeared. Practice will be resumed at the Flats with new equipment on Friday night.

Eighteen months ago sport in Kingston was at its lowest level in many years, but within the past ten months sports in the Limestone City have been revolutionized to such an extent Kingston Sport Scribe Bill Walshe doesn't know just what to expect next. Since last November Kingston has won an Intermediate rugby football title, as well as a senior hockey title and now with the possibilities of Kingston playing baseball in some eastern set-up, Scribe Walshe is still floating on the fleecy clouds of anticipation. "Better watch your step, palsie, remember the Van Horne financial statement, that wasn't published?"

Do you remember when Don Budge was awarded the New York World's Fair "Golden Laurel" wreath two years ago today as the outstanding athlete in the United States of the preceding year. Sports writers and officials named Budge winner for his victories in four major tennis tournaments—the United States, Wimbledon French and Australian championships.

The province of Quebec has yet to win its first Memorial Cup and the junior hockey supremacy of Canada. Last night the Winnipeg Rangers soundly beat the Montreal Royal Juniors 7 to 4 to take the final series after five hectic games. By winning the Rangers take the Memorial Cup back to the west after a lapse of three years, the St. Boniface Seals having won the trophy back in 1938. Winnipeg took a 3-1 lead in the first period and kept adding to their numbers to prove they were the better club and worthy champions.

SPORT SPICE — Now they're talking Sunday ball, for war charity purposes, up around St. Thomas and the Southern Ontario area. . . . Just the thin edge of the edge, maybe. . . . The field for the sixty-seventh running of the Kentucky Derby has narrowed to eleven at the time of writing . . . Although they won yesterday, the Brooklyn Dodgers were replaced by the Cardinals on the top slot of the National League owing to percentage points. . . . Strangely enough the Brooklyn nine is a full game ahead of the Mound City team, however. . . . With the exception of the Royal-Marlboro senior play-off series, practically every playdown series in the Allan and Memorial Cup series has gone the full limit this year, in one of the strangest puck seasons in years. . . . Lester McCrabb, former Toronto International League pitcher, lost a 6-5 decision to Cleveland yesterday as Ken Keltner's circuit blow broke up a fine effort on Connie Mack's rookie moundsman. . . . Some sorrowful looking anglers were seen wending their way home this morning, as the trout proved too smart. . . . Pass the pretzels.

Mr. And Mrs. Don Reid Honored By Friends In Rawdon Community

Rawdon—On Friday evening the spacious home of Mrs. Herbert Hoover was filled with neighbors and friends of the community to honor her daughter, Lulu, and her husband on the occasion of their recent marriage.

Rev. J. E. Beckel was master of ceremonies and the newlyweds were given seats of honor. In a few brief remarks the pastor paid tribute to Lulu and her readiness to help in all church activities. Mrs. Harold Elliott presided at the piano for community singing. Miss Mae Johnson read an appropriate selection and Master Robert Elliott delighted with a vocal number "Farmer in the Dell." Mrs. Percy MacMullen contributed a poem entitled "The Better Thing" by H. W. Kruzan. Mr. George Watson sang a comic number "Where did you get that hat?" with Miss Ana English as accompanist. Mrs. Harold Elliott and Mrs. Will Heath rendered a piano duet. Throughout the program brief addresses were given by Messrs. B. C. Tucker, Charles Dunham, C. U. Heath and George Watson.

Mrs. Don Heath read an address of appreciation of the work Lulu had done in church, choir, Sunday School and Women's Institute and this was signed by Mrs. Reg. McGee, Mrs. Percy Jackman, Mrs. Ray Shortt and Mrs. Harold Elliott. The vast array of parcels was then opened showing a lovely assortment of gifts in linen, glass and silver. Both Don and Lulu graciously replied thanking their friends and inviting all to visit them in their home at West Huntingdon. An appetizing lunch was served topped off with the wedding cake and all sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Patrick, Frankford, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Higgs, Oshawa, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott.

Miss Anna Sharp entertained a number of friends on Saturday evening, April 26th, on the occasion of her birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, Mrs. George Weaver and Mrs. Edgar McKeown attended the play "The Ready-made Family" at Bethel on Thursday. The cast presented their play in aid of Bethel Y.P.U. it being their closing night for this season. The proceeds for Mount Pleasant was around $8.00.

On Friday evening the Mount Pleasant cast presented their play in aid of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and realized around $12.00.

Mrs. Percy McMullen, Eileen and Ormel attended a miscellaneous shower Friday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Don Reid at the home of Mrs. H. V. Hoover.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Holmes and Joan of Belleville, Lieut. and Mrs. Clifford Holmes and Frances Marilyn of Kingston were supper guests on April 22nd at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes.

Miss Doris Sine spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Patrick, Frankford.

While Mrs. Percy MacMullen was attending the Branch Biennial meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch of the W.M.S. she was billeted in a private room at the Hotel Manitonna, the guest of Senator and Mrs. George Graham. The guest speakers at Branch were Miss Ida MacKenzie, travelling secretary of Dominion Board, Miss Bessie Cairns, home on furlough after eighteen years of service in West China, Dr. J. W. Woodside, ex-Moderator of the United Church and pastor of Chalmers Church, Ottawa. Mrs. MacMullen resigned her office after five years of service as she began her duties at Trenton in April, 1936. The new branch press secretary is Mrs. A. Nill, Roseneath.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rainie and Miss Emma Rainie recently entertained Mrs. Gerald Bristol and daughters of Belleville and Mr. James Totton of Toronto.

Mrs. Joe Hagerman and Ruth, Belleville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. S. Holden.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunham and family were guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey, Carmel.

Bethel Young People visited Springbrook Union on Monday evening and were welcomed by Mr. Ross Bailey. Miss Elda McMullen presided over the program and Mrs. Don Heath gave a vocal solo. Miss Gertie McMullen read a selection and Mrs. G. Lovett outlined the topic. Misses Shirley and Bernice Preston sang a duet, Miss Elda McMullen gave a solo and Miss Irene Preston contributed a reading. Rev. J. E. Beckel conducted a quiz contest and Mrs. Harry Preston gave a reading.

Mrs. Lorne Johnson and Miss Elda McMullen each staged a game. The Springbrook group served a very appetizing lunch and votes of thanks for lunch and program were reciprocated.

Rev. E. A. Gibson of Annapolis, Nova Scotia, visited Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Elliott last week.

Dr. and Mrs. Roy Hendry and Janet of Toronto were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morton and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dracup.

Mrs. Elliott Sharp, Wellmans, enjoyed a holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mount Pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes spent last week at Eldorado.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Hoard, James and Robert, spent Sunday afternoon at Eldorado.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jeffs, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McKeown, Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey, Mrs. Percy McMullen, Mrs. Frank Shortt, Mrs. George Weaver and Miss Eileen McMullen of Mount Pleasant, attended the funeral of the late William Holmes at Eldorado on Monday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. George Watson and Mrs. Carl Clancy of Wellmans also attended.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER V

Fingers of hot desert sunshine had already begun to poke into Devona's cool bedroom when she awakened next morning. In her first sleepy confusion she coudn't remember where she was. Then, with a rush, it all came back—this lovely room, this whole beautiful house, her mother—Dale!

Then she opened her eyes wide, sat up. Or was it behind her? Gradually yesterday's sense of insecurity wound sinuously through her thoughts. She mustn't stay here, they said. Yet—

She shrugged fear aside, slipped out of bed. It was too glorious a morning to be afraid of anything.

Shrugging out of her webby nightgown, Devona found the blue bathing suit—new last time that she and Dad had spent a lovely lazy holiday at Naples. Flinging a wide beach cape over one arm, she slipped out into the silent, deserted hallway.

Wong Arose Early

At the foot of the stairs a stealthy sound stopped her. Footsteps. Some one else awake early this gorgeous morning! She waited, listening to silence for a moment. Then, slowly, silently a side door opened. A man stepped softly into the hall, closed the door noiselessly behind him.

His gray hat was pulled close over his eyes, but he turned now. She could see his face. Slanting eyes in a yellow face. Wong! She felt her heart beat again. Only Wong! Smiling at her own fright, she watched him slip across the main hall, down the corridor to the servants' quarters.

But why—the question pursued her—at 6 in the morning, when all the house was taking a well-earned rest, was Wong abroad?

Then, with a shrug, she dismissed the problem. After all, what her mother's servants did was certainly none of her affair.

An Admiring Visitor

The first plunge into clear green-blue water took her breath away. Then gave it back as she struck out smoothly, steadily. She loved swimming. It had been one of the few sports Dad approved. Dipping under water, she swam the length of the pool, then hoisted herself gracefully on to the tiled edge.

"Hello. What gets you out so early?" Dale's voice just behind her.

Startled, she smiled up at him. "Oh—lovely morning, lovely pool."

"And a lovely girl, if I may say so." His blue eyes teased.

"Thank you, sir." She pulled off her cap, ran her fingers through the angle of dark curls until she could control the thrill that chased through her. When she did look up she saw he was dressed in business gray, that he carried a bulging briefcase. "Are you — leaving?"

"Yes. No rest for the wicked. I've a case in court tomorrow. I've got to do some ground work on it."

"Oh, I'm sorry," and some of the glory went out of the morning.

"So am I. I'd like nothing better than to race you—two pool's lengths."

"I'd beat you," she challenged.

"Not if I had to drown you first! suppose we postpone it until next week-end, same time, same place? You on?"

"I'm on."

"Good. You're practically beaten now," and he gave her his hand as she stepped from the tiled pool's edge to the green lawn.

"What's your case about?" she asked just to give herself time to put a checkrein on her own wild hopes. She was not making a very auspicious beginning on this plan of hers to prove she was adult when Dale's first flippant compliment turned her face into a sunset sky!

The blue eyes went grave. "Dope running, as usual. This one in itself isn't so important. But it's paving the way for a big catch."

"You mean——"

"I mean we've got a tricky problem on our hands. It's going to take some time and some good luck to solve it." He propped the heavy brief case against a lawn chair while he lit a cigarette. "We thought we had this thing scotched a year ago. Now there's a new leak somewhere."

"How do you know?"

"Through high school youngsters. These runners plant a persuasive chap where the kids hang out and before you know it you've got a bunch of marijuana-smoking boys making trouble and raising hell."

Fighting Crime

"But—isn't it dangerous," Devona persisted earnestly. "There must be plently of money to fight a drive like yours. The men who are getting rich off this racket will surely resent what you're doing."

Dale laughed abruptly. "Resent is hardly the word for it. They winged the boss the last time we raided."

"Shot him!"

"Sure. Just like in the movies. Only difference was we didn't catch the guy that did it." He hoisted the heavy case into the coupe and opened the door.

"Oh, Dale, you must be careful." Her imagination leaped ahead torturously. "What if——"

Dale looked down at her a long moment. "What if—what?"

"I mean — maybe next time, they'll get—you."

"Maybe." He grinned. "Would you care?"

Devona's glance went down before the teasing challenge in his. "Certainly. It seems ridiculous to take chances."

Macias His Friend

"Don't worry. I don't. I'm supposed to solve this problem. Not make another by letting them use me for a target!" He climbed into the car, slammed the door. "That's why I have friends like Jose Macias. He keeps me posted on—well, lots of things."

"I see." Devona smiled, remembered, not without apprehension, the dark violence in Macias' handsome black eyes.

"Be careful, won't you." She tried to hide real concern behind a jaunty little smile. "I need you — for moral support, you know."

"Look here." His eyes went grave again. "Don't let any one get you down, will you?"

"Why do you say that?"

"They could hurt you without half trying. You see, you're—well, different. They'll probably hate you for it at first."

"Hate me! But why?"

"Because you're beautiful and young and—untarnished."

"But—I don't understand——"

He laughed then. A short, sharp little sound. "Of course, you don't. And probably I'm being an old Just don't worry. I'll see you next Just don"t worry. I'll see you next week-end."

Devona nodded. 'Good-by now."

"Bye."

She watched the blue car turn out of the cool shadowy cavern the palms built around the drive, out into the white highway beyond. At the corner he waved once, then disappeared.

Slowly she turned back toward the house. As she did, she saw a white coat disappear behind a clump of blazing poinsettia blossoms. A moment later Wong slipped through a side door into the house.

Wong again! Devona shuddered. Always tip-toeing around, turning up at the oddest moments. Had he, she wondered as she went on into the house, been eavesdropping behind that bush all the time? Asiatics were a curious race. But surely Wong must have seen casual flirtations before now!

She dressed quickly — a simple, yellow linen with a trail of brown buttons from throat to hem. She'd begin learning today. She'd make Vara Vadne proud to be her mother. She had to! A little sob snagged in her throat. She had to!

A Telephone Call

"Thank you, Wong."

Puzzled, Devona followed him down the corridor to the little phone booth tucked behind an ornamental wrought - iron gate. Who could be calling her?

"Hello?"

"Devona?"—an already familiar voice.

"Oh!" Her own voice fainted to a whisper.

"Hello! Are you there?"

"Yes. Dale. I'm here."

"I just wanted to ask you not to mention the name of the person I was talking to you about just before I left." The words came crisp and clear across the wire.

"You mean—Mr.—" She caught back the name just in time. "Oh, I won't."

"It's rather important things like that don't get around. I should have warned you. Not that I think there's any danger out there. Still, it's better to be on the safe side."

"Of course. And do be careful."

"Right. See you later. 'Bye."

"Bye."

Mechanically she replaced the receiver, opened the door to the little booth. It must be strange, nerve-wracking business—this work of Dale's. To be so careful, so constantly on guard.

Thoughtfully, she went back to her room. As she closed the door behind her, a short, black-haired figure in a white servant's jacket, slipped out of a hall closet, disappeared noiselessly down the servant's stairway.

Listen, the Robins!

By REV. B. S. MURRAY

When I see the first robin in the springtime I experience an indescribable, universal, old yet ever new feeling of delight. Men silently cheer when they hear this harbinger of spring, after a few months' absence, again burst forth into singing. Very often the same robin returns annually to the same tree and garden. He, therefore, has two homes; one north and the other south of the border. How he is guided, when and where to travel is one of the debatable mysteries of the bird world.

There is no place quite like Canada for robins. They love our hills valleys and trees particularly the cherry. That they are homesick down south is refected not only in the dullness of their customary bright red-breast but also in their lack of singing. There, they are wild, suspicious and discontented. When February comes, however, they begin preparations for their northern flight. At pussywillow time they arrive gaily, declaring that they are "monarchs of all they survey their right none must dispute." A few days later the females arrive though less spectacularly even in color. To all of them, Canadians, particularly children, who regard them as much an essential part of our outdoor life as flowers and trees, extend a hearty welcome. They are closer to us and our history than any other group of birds. Nor are we unmindful of their destructive proclivities, although as insect destroyers they more than compensate for this pillage.

Last November during a copious snowstorm I saw a robin on the branch of a tree, with its beak pointed towards the wind and while the snowflakes beat upon its tiny face, sing. That's the spirit we need, I mused. The British have it. They laugh at clouds, dark, dismal and threatening. In their hearts the sun of faith, hope and love shines; these three banish gloom and fears. Somehow they epitomise in their attitude that "a merry heart doeth good like medicine." They have the faculty of turning their backs on care and anxiety and creating a lighthearted, glad, unconquerable disposition that is bringing victory to our common cause As I watch the robins singing in the rain they suggest to me a defiant attitude. I can imagine their saying to an enemy: "I defy you, I'll defeat you—yet! In God we trust and cannot forget that, though the wrong seems oft so strong God is the ruler yet! This is still His world. And we like those who follow Him because they are taught to be kind to us. We like their way of life and so we will continue to defy all those who aim at defeating chivalry, respect for human rights, reverence for the human soul, democracy, freedom, law, truth, civilization and honor. Our song is not unlike the defiant 'There'll always be an England.' But we are citizens of another country, the United States, where we spend several months annually. Now we are better neighbors and keener internationalists than ever as we fly across the unfortified invisible border singing, unmolested:

"Two empires by the sea,
Two nations great and free
One anthem raise,
One race of ancient fame,
One tongue, one faith we claim,
One God whose glorious name,
We love and praise."

Not only do robins sing in the rain but they sing for rain. Instinctively they like rain, for it woos out the worms on the lawns to be caught by them for food. Have you ever noticed the robins listening for a worm as they look, cocking their heads to focus one eye? Whilst sailors curse rain, the robins, with the farmers, welcome these necessary drops which bear into their bosom of the earth a quality of beautiful fertility. Rain in nature has its uses. And in our lives, too, for sweet are the uses of adversity. Perhaps in these dark and anxious days we Canadians shall find our souls, and learn to sing in the rain! If all the skies were sunshine our faces would be incapable of feeling once more upon them the cooling splash of rain. If the world were all music there would be a need for occasional spaces for silence to break the endless song. God has planned that life shall have endless varieties and many changes. Farewell, then, must be said to days of soft, smooth and easy, as we, by faith, march towards days demanding toil, sacrifice, even death, which we believe in the end of the day will bring lasting peace and usher in a new era of goodwill. After winter springtime trips across the meadows and in the heart of spring there is the hope of summer! So, after the winter of war must come the springtime of peace and brotherhood. With longing eyes and expectant hearts we anticipate that day when all men and nations shall be brothers, when the hurt of the weakest shall be the concern of all and the advantage of any be the good of all. Towards the attainment of that ideal the Church of God, ever in the vanguard, seeks to inspire, direct and suggest to leaders an imperial program for Christ to possess new areas of life in homes, centres of learning and health as well as in economics and government, so that our way of life may not only be saved from extinction but strengthened and our world made strong and free, a world of glad tomorrows.

Our brother robins are our feathered friends. There is something definitely individualistic, virile, adventurous, youthful, alert about their bearing that is fine, fine, fine as they hop on our lawns. Their nest is their castle and they are prepared to defend it fiercely and pugnaciously. For the parasitical cowbirds they have no use and forthwith expel them, from their nest. If robins do not assist much in the actual building of the nest they pay marked attention to the upbringing of their young, implanting in them implicit obedience so that at a warning chirp they must remain silent even though hungry. For two weeks after the young leave the nest. Father Robin watches his "four" children. By July when the two broods are launched the parents abandon their nest and consequently their affection for each other wanes. Strange, is it not, that the robins seldom captured the imagination of poets? Keats popularized the nightingale, Shelley the skylark, Tennyson the blackbird and Wordsworth the cuckoo. Joyce Kilmer wrote in his poem "Trees"—inspired by an old elm—"In summer wear a nest of robins in her hair." Legend, however, in the Passion of Our Lord gives an honored place to this bright bird. When the Master toiled up Mount Calvary the robin hushed singing. And from the mock-crown of Christ took one thorn to sooth the dear Redeemer's throbbing head. "That bird," Hoskyns-Abragail wrote, "did what she could. And for this the sober brownness of her breast became crimsoned with the Saviour's blood. Since that proud hour God pours, like sacramental wine, red signs of favor over her race, for no wanton boy disturbs her nest; nor weasel, nor wild cat her young molest; all sacred deem the bird of ruddy breast."

Listen to the robins as they nest again in 1941 and let them suggest to us hope, courage and cheerfulness; a rugged disciplined individualism blending in internationalism; a love of home tradition with a sense of family honor. They are winged sermons preaching trust in God. Will you listen to the robins?

THAT BODY OF YOURS

James W. Barton, M.D.

Symptoms Due to Neurasthenia — Tiredness—Are Real

A young physician was discussing a patient with an older physician. "I don't know what to do about Mrs. Blank. She is an intelligent woman. She consults me at the office and seems to have different symptoms each time. For instance, one day she complains of a tightness about her head, clammy hands, and inability to sleep. On her next visit she complains of a disturbance in her abdomen and a persistent diarrhoea. The next time the symptoms are rapid heart beat, the heart pounds and other times seems to have an extra beat. Now, I've made a complete examination and can find no organic trouble, nothing to account for her symptoms".

The older physician asked about the home life of the patient and found that there were three young children all of whom had most of the various children's diseases, including diphtheria and scarlet fever. Also, the patient did her own work in a fairly large home.

"Why not put all the symptoms together, beginning with the tight band around the head, perspiring hands, the indigestion, the diarrhoea, the sleeplessness. What ailment do all these symptoms fit?"

The young physician laughed and said that he guessed they fitted the ailment neurasthenia—mental and physicial tiredness.

"These patients seem always to be complaining, every part of the body being involved. They lack energy, they tire easily, they cannot persist in one endeavor very long and they are irritable. They cannot read long because their eyes tire, they cannot concentrate, have no appetite, and feel depressed."

There was a time when the patient was told that these symptoms were imaginary. Today the physician realizes that they are not imaginary but actually exist. However, the important point is that the symptoms are not due to any organic trouble but to tiredness of mind and body, which tiredness can so disturb the various organs that they do not do their work properly and so the symptoms arise.

The treatment of neurasthenia is to have the patient try to acquire calmness of spirit and get more physical rest.

JAILED FOR FIBBING

London, April 30 (CP)— Danely Ralph Milner, 47, father of six children, was in jail today because his zeal to join the army led him to fib about his age. He was sentenced to six weeks at hard labor for obtaining a birth certificate attesting that he was only 41.

Larry Allen of A.P. Describes British Fleet in Action — Says Tripoli One of Most Daring Attacks in History

BRITISH DARING

Correspondent Larry Allen has had a grandstand seat for the last year at the battle for supremany in the Mediterranean. He has stayed with the British fleet through every major engagement it has fought sometimes getting only a few hour's rest between trips. This is the second of two articles he wrote on his experiences.

By LARRY ALLEN

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Alexandria, May 1 (AP)—For almost a year I have had a grandstand seat on the bridges, conning towers and signal decks of Britain's mightiest battleships, speediest cruisers, destroyers and aircraft carriers watching the struggle for supremacy of what Mussolini once proudly proclaimed mare nostrum—"Our sea."

I am convinced Britons have whatever is needed in courage, resourcefulness, iron determination and skill to bombard the enemy bases, and perhaps to wipe the Italian navy from the Mediterranean and the Nazi and Italian bombers out of the sky.

Quest For Italian Fleet

They sent warships dashing over the sea at topspeed, hoping and praying to contact the Italian fleet—unaware of the enemy's naval strength and not caring.

The battle of Matapan may have permanently extinguished the glimmering hopes of Il Duce for making the remnants of his once proud war fleet a decisive factor in the Mediterranean.

Earlier, I saw Goering's handpicked dive-bombing pilots try to scare the British fleet out of the Mediterranean by making one of the most punishing attacks of war history on the aircraft carrier Illustrious

That gave me the greatest fright of my life.

But her officers and men brought her into port under her own power after that hell had ended. Their one burning ambition was to "make them pay" for that bombing.

They did.

Dive Bombers Blasted Off Base

Nests of German dive-bombers were blasted off their Sicilian bases. I think the Britons are definitely taking the measure of the Nazi bombers.

This was strikingly illustrated by the last trip the fleet made to Tripoli, Italy's strongly fortified base in Northern Africa.

Formations of enemy planes frequently attempted to get close enough to bomb the warships. Not a single bomb was dropped but British fighters shot down seven planes.

Tripoli Most Daring Attack

Every war technician knows that a fleet usually is no match for expertly manned coastal defences.

The fact that Tripoli had a long string of six-to-12-inch batteries, that the harbor waters were heavily mined, and that there was great danger from mass Nazi and Italian air attacks on the warships, didn't deter Admiral Cunningham from his resolve to hand the Barbary Coast enemy den a dose of steel it wouldn't soon forget.

From the conning tower of the heaviest armed battleship, I watched 1,000 tons of high explosives and armor-piercing shells flung at Tripoli harbor in a thunderous 45-minute barrage so terrific I thought the minimum personal effect would be a bad case of shell-shock. My half-blinded eyes were seared by great flashes from the fire of guns.

This was at the firing end. The tremendous, crushing force of shells exploding in Tripoli can only be imagined.

British gunners shoved shells into the long, grey barrels of the 15-inch guns with machine-like speed and precision.

They love action and thought it great fun even when two enemy shore batteries pumped six-inchers swishing over the turrets.

Fireworks Display

Tripoli was the biggest fireworks display I have seen in my travels with the battlefleet.

I shall never forget the thousands of white splinters of flame leaping skyward from anti-aircraft batteries, the long, snaky links of multicolored bursting tracer bullets, the "flaming onions" of anti-aircraft fire, and the yellow masses of flame gushing from battleships' guns.

Nor this—12 hours after the last 15-inch shells were fired, I touched the gun barrels. They were still hot.

So was Tripoli.

Gymnastic Display By "Y" Athletes Performed With Skill And Precision

Displaying a program of gymnastics, members and leaders of the Y.M.C.A. classes presented a demonstration of their athletic prowess in the "Y" gymnasium Wednesday evening. A capacity-filled gallery of interested parents and citizens were present to applaud the splendid display of physical culture.

Members of the Prep and Junior classes and Intermediate leaders featured the demonstration, under the direction of J. Ed. Shortt, association physical director. Mat work of elementary tumbling and travel exercises, led by Colin and Hugh Cameron introduced the program, while the horse and springboard exercises were led by four junior leaders, George Garrow, George Wonnacott, Douglas Legate and Cameron Snell.

A parallel bar movement was presented, which included many feats of moderate difficulty on the high bars and which was led by the intermediate leaders, Glen Robertson and Gordon McClelland.

The thoroughness and precision in which the youthful gymnasts performed their athletic demonstration spoke exceedingly well of their training, as some portions of the program included difficult feats of exacting precision. Ground pyramid exercises of exactness concluded the program.

In addition an exhibition of badminton was presented by Messrs. N. Cushman formerly of Windsor and W. Anderson, formerly of Toronto, both of whom are at present employed at a local war industry.

Fun and frivolity were added for the benefit of the younger folk present by two clowns, Stan Wiggins and Charlie Cook, whose endeavours in attempting to imitate the youthful athletes proved amusing. The music of the evening was provided by Mrs. Grace Calvert at the piano, all gymnastics being performed in rhymic precision.

Dancing Time Wins At Newmarket

Newmarket, England, May 1—(CP Cable)—Lord Glanely's Dancing Time, starting at 100 to 8, today won the one thousand guineas stakes for three-year-old fillies, defeating by a length Mrs. A. James' Eeausite, 7 to 1.

Peter Beatty's Keystone, 11 to 2, was third in the field of ten. Dancing Time covered the mile in 1.40 4-5—1 4-5 seconds faster than the Cold Lambert Simnel took in winning the two thousand guineas over the same course yesterday.

The Stars Say

For Friday May 2.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

ACCORDING to the general trend of the lunar transits this period is one of major expansion and advancement, with strokes of the unexpected and unpredictable characterizing all mundane affairs. Unforeseen change as well as outstanding developments of a radical or reformatory nature may be impending and the individual life prepared to assume large responsibility and leadership in the new order may be greatly benefited. In a routine way this day will bring due recognition and reward for service well-rendered with private satisfactions.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the threshold of a year of major importance in the march of human destiny. There may be crises and high adventures and romance to which the prepared life will respond with much expansion, advancement and personal gratification. There may be unpredictable and spectacular visitations plunging the life into new walks and fresh ventures, of a creative and dramatic scope beyond the power to analyse. Minor anxieties should melt away.

A child born on this day should have fine sterling qualities for a successful and happy life, its real worth finding proper rewards and personal gratifications.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 1—(CP) — Industrial and mining groups weakened moderately in dull trading during the early hours on Toronto Exchange today and Western Oils were unchanged. Volume was down to 60,000 shares for the first three hours.

Bell Telephone weakened 1-2 to a new low for the year at 144 1-2, Senior Oils were slightly lower with trading fairly active in imperial and other groups were steady. Walkers common and Imperial Tobacco were up.

Standard Radio appeared on the board for the first time in the place of Rogers-Majestic and it sold at 2 1-2 to 2 5-8.

Mild weakness was displayed in the gold group by Kerr-Addison, Teck Hughes, Preston, Upper Canada and McKenzie Red Lake. In the base metals, Waite-Amulet and Hudson Bay were lower. Hudson Bay was offered in considerable volume. Anglo-Canadian was a cent higher at 50.

WALL STREET

New York, May 1—(AP) — Selling dwindled to a mere trickle in today's stock market and, here and there, mild signs of revival appeared.

It was a two-way street, however, and indefinite trends were the rule near the fourth hour.

Commodities were mostly a bit higher and bonds narrow.

Bidding occasionally cropped up for Santa Fe, Chesapeake and Ohio, Loft, Standard Oil of N.J., Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Anaconda, Montgomery Ward, General Electric and Du Pont.

In arrears now and then were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, Woolworth, Sperry and Air Reduction.

Among Canadian issues Lake Shore was down 1-8, Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram were steady and Dome was up 1-8. In the bond market Canada 4s eased 1 3-8 points.

New York, May 1 —(AP)—Search for a definite trend in today's stock market was unsuccessful.

The list got off to a ragged start on negligible volume. Prices moved up and down in fractions during the greater part of the proceedings. Modest plus signs were well distributed near the final hour but small losses were plentiful. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 300,000 shares.

Easier Tone Shows In Top-Grade Eggs

Toronto — An easier tone developed in eggs yesterday afternoon on the Toronto open produce market with prices to shipper on top grades declining from 1-2c to 1c per dozen. Butter held steady.

Eggs were fairly steady and receipts of grade "A" medium and grade "B" met a good demand on the morning market. Later in the afternoon the market turned easier and grades "A" large and "A" medium took a fractional decline to sell at from 21c to 21 1-2c and 20c per dozen respectively. Receipts in fair volume, were sufficient to meet all requirements.

The butter market held about steady and offerings were not heavy. Trading was generally slow and spotty with most of the purchases in small lots.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, May 1 (CP)—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First-grade creamery prints, jobbing price 31c to 31½c; first-grade solids, jobbing price, 30½c to 31c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling at A-large, 23c; A-medium, 21 1-2c; B grade 21c to 21½c; C grade. 18c to 18 1-2c. Receipts, 9,177 cases.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 1—(CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting today.

Liveweight: Chatham $8.

Dressedweight: Barrie $11, Brantford $10.65 plus transportation, Chatham $10.95, Hull $11, London $10.85 delivered, Kitchener and Stratford $10.50 plus transportation, Peterboro $10.65 plus transportation.

Livestock

Toronto, May 1—(CP)—The few cattle offered today sold at steady prices up to mid-session on the Livestock Market here. Butcher steers and heifers sold at $7.50 to $8.50, a few medium quality weighty steers at $8.75 and feeders at $7.50 to $8.

Veal calves offered were mostly common to medium and sold at $5 to $7 with a few good quality up to $10.50.

Lambs $10.50 for good feed lot locals.

No sheep were offered.

Hogs steady, $11.15 to $11.25, dressedweight and $8.40 liveweight.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 20, calves 40; hogs 320; sheep and lambs 70.

ROOSEVELT

The President emphasized the urgent need for increased shipping facilities last night in instructions to Admiral Emory E. Land, Chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Land was directed to "secure the service of at least 2,000,000 tons of merchant shipping" and to plan operations so as to "make their cargo space immediately effective in accomplishing our objective of all-out aid to the democracies."

Task Outlined

Admiral Land's task, as outlined by the President:

1. To arrange for foreign ships or ships which are to be transferred to foreign registry (presumably British) to be placed in service along routes to combat zones, including Great Britain.

2. Reallocation of American-flag ships, including those soon to be completed, on routes outside combat zones, in order that every cargo they carry would be directly or indirectly useful in national defence efforts and the "winning by the democracies of the battle now being waged in the Atlantic."

Vessels of all types must be taken from existing or proposed trade routes, the President declared, to haul vitally needed defence and war supplies across the high seas and the United States merchant marine must be expanded with increased speed "so that ships and more ships will be available to carry the food and munitions of war to our democracies of the world."

Wants Every Thing Expedited

H. Harris Robson, formerly Vice-President of the United Fruit Company, was immediately placed in charge of the tonnage-finding task and indications were that the Maritime Commission expected to round up the necessary shipping in three ways:

1. By diverting some of the 7,000,000 tons of ocean-going vessels now comprising the merchant marine; by transferring some of the 2,500,000 tons of Great Lakes shipping to inter-coastal trade, thus releasing inter-coastal vessels for the "bridge to Britain," and by commissioning army and navy auxiliaries, laid-up last-war ships, lake and coastal route vessels.

One Ship A Week Being Built

2. By placing the one-ship-a-week now being built into immediate commission. Under its building program the Maritime Commission expects to finish 71 ships aggregating 700,000 tons this year; 2,500,000 tons next year; and between 3,500,300 and 4,000,000 tons in 1943.

3. By acquiring some of the approximately 100 foreign-flag ships now in United States ports by speeding legislation empowering the President to take them over for the "common good," by purchase, requisition or charter.

Since there are two Danish agents in this country, each claiming power-of-attorney to control the 39 Danish ships now held in "protective custody", informed sources said the President would probably requisition the vessels, sidestepping any possible legal complications which might follow their purchase or charter.

May Requisition Ships

The President may requisition the ships, it was said, by exercising the right of "eminent domain" leaving the question of "just compensation" to be settled at some future time when the legality of the agents' conflicting claims may be decided.

The President has indicated that the 28 Italian and two German vessels held might be declared forfeited to the United States because sabotage by their crews had placed them in a different category from the Danish ships.

Axis Ships

No official announcement has been made of the manner in which the Axis vessels may be taken over, however, and as a matter of policy they might be purchased or requisitioned under the terms of the bill now before Congress.

The 28 Italian ships, most of which were severely damaged by their crews and must be repaired before they can be placed in service, aggregate 178,030 tons, approximately five per cent of prewar Italian tonnage.

In sending instructions to Admiral Land the President said he realized that diversion of cargo and refrigerated ships and tankers from existing to new routes would cause inconvenience, loss of trade and sacrifices by the public, which would have to forego "non-essential" imports of various kinds.

The President asked that all existing shipyards be kept in continuous operation, that new means be explored to increase the number of shipbuilding workers, and that the construction of additional shipways already authorized be speeded up.

A HELPFUL RAT CATCHER

Richmond, Va., May 1 (AP)—Rev. Churchill Gibson agreed to lend a hand in Richmond's campaign to eradicate rats. So when whistles and bells noisily heralded the start of the drive, Dr. Gibson climbed to the keyboard of the chimes at stately St. James' Church. And over the city floated the mellow tones of "Three Blind Mice."

4 NAZI AVIATORS

Honolulu, May 1 (AP)—Capt. F. W. Richardson of the United States Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation said here today a British boarding party which removed four German aviators from the American liner President Garfield conducted itself with the utmost courtesy.

Some distance from Honolulu, the President Garfield was halted by a British auxiliary cruiser Wednesday. The Germans were formerly employed in the Commercial Air Service in South America. "The cruiser came dashing over the horizon at about 22 knots," said Richardson. "Everything was done in the smoothest manner and with no confusion.

Signalled to Stop

"The cruiser signalled us with its blinker to stop. When it came closer a voice was heard by loudspeaker telling us to put down a ladder.

"A cutter was lowered from the cruiser and rowed toward the Garfield. A three-striper (commander) came aboard alone. Just after that came another cutter with two officers and men, all with sidearms. The passengers were quite excited.

"One of the Germans took quite a little time to find because he was on the upper deck. I don't think he was hiding.

Germans Taken on Cutter

"The Germans went to their cabins and packed with armed guards watching, while other baggage was taken out of the baggage rooms. Then the Germans were taken to a cutter and rowed to the cruiser."

Other pasengers said Captain Murphy of the Garfield was ordered not to take photographs of the cruiser or the removal of the Germans, but that the order was not obeyed by crew members and passengers.

Captain Murphy said the auxiliary cruiser appeared on the President Garfield's starboard bow at 2:22 p.m. flying signal flags notifying the President Garfield to heave to for boarding and that he immediately rang the stop signal to the engine room. He said a British officer asked for the passenger list and that he referred the officer to the purser. He said the President Garfield resumed its course at 3:42 p.m. one hour and 10 minutes after the first notice to halt.

NAZIS PENETRATE TOBRUK DEFENCES

Attack Launched During Night by Infantry Supported by Tanks

Cairo, Egypt, May 1 —(AP)—Axis troops penetrated the outer defences of British-held Tobruk this morning but "fighting is continuing" at the Libyan port, British headquarters announced.

Its communique said the attack was launched last night by infantry striking at the hold-out British garrison inside the Axis lines "in some strength, supported by numerous tanks."

Under Siege for Three Weeks

The British forces have held out under siege at Tobruk for about three weeks despite the Axis reconquest of Libya. German and Italian units swept beyond, bypassing the stronghold, and crossed from Libyan to Egyptian soil in the region of Salum, 80 miles eastward.

In that time, the British garrison has been under almost constant air attack and has repelled several mechanized thrusts. Nevertheless, it has taken the initiative several times, officers reporting sorties into the Axis lines and the capture of prisoners.

On the East African front, the headquarters war bulletin said 5,500 Italians and 2,400 colonial troops as well as 93 guns had been counted so far as seized around British-captured Dessie, Ethiopia.

The Royal Air Force said heavy casualties were inflicted on Axis troops and motor transport in Libya, with at least 100 vehicles, 30 of them carrying troops, damaged by machine-gun fire in the Gambut area.

Some damage to the R.A.F. was declared to have been suffered in an attack at Malta. Two of the attacking planes were brought down, the communicue said

London.—British naval units have carried out "a successful bombardment" of axis troops and supplies in the Ain El Gazala area of Libya, the Admiralty announced today.

SAYS RED ARMY

In Red Square

Moscow's great Red Square as usual was the centre of the nation-wide May day demonstration. Government and party leaders assembled there at the base of Lenin's tomb in front of the red-walled kremlin to review a gigantic parade of troops and workers.

Stalin watched the spectacle from a special stand atop the red marble mausoleum.

Following the military show more than 1,000,000 civilians swarmed across the vast square chanting patriotic songs, waving banners and raising aloft huge photographs of Soviet leaders.

Stalin's Policy

In his order of the day Timoshenko credited the "wise Stalinist foreign policy" with enabling Russia to remain at peace in a world at war—"an impregnable rock in the midst of the stormy sea of international events."

He called the Neutrality Pact with Japan, signed April 13, an achievement of "great political significance," furthering Russia's policy of peaceful relations with her neighbors.

He also said that for the first time "the working people of Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Bessarabia and northern Bucovina are celebrating May 1 freely and joyously in the united family of peoples of the great Soviet Union."

(Bessarabia and northern Bucovina are the provinces annexed from Rumania last summer. The three Baltic countries were absorbed last July.)

"During the past year," Timoshenko said, "those young Soviet republics have achieved notable successes; without landlords and capitalists they are building a new life."

CLAIMS NAZIS

Fact of Large Numbers Dying is Noted

The story behind the few lines in the Vatican publication, according to Straight, is this:

"There is a big hospital near Urach, in Wuerttemburg. In September the priests of Urach noted that the elderly people in the hospital were dying in increased numbers, and dying on certain days. These priests discovered that systematic euthanasia was being practised in this hospital. The old and incurably ill were being killed off by the injection of small quantities of poison into their veins.

"Later, according to the accounts of these police, the Gestapo found that poisoning was unnecessarily expensive. Gas chambers were used, the priests reported, until the Nazis found an even simpler method which involved no cost at all. Air bubbles were injected into the veins of those chosen to die, and death was instantaneous when the bubbles reached the heart. Relatives of the victims were never told, of course. They merely received a small box containing the victim's ashes."

London (CP)—Polish airmen who fought so well in the Battle of Britan now are helping to repel German night attacks. One of the latest Polish squadrons to become operational is equipped with night fighters, and the crews have already done some useful work on patrols.

THE WAR TODAY

By GUY RHOADES

Canadian Press Staff Writer

The British public rejoiced today over news that at least 80 per cent of its expeditionary force to Greece had been saved, but military experts indicated belief that a full-fledged Nazi-Fascist assault on the Middle East might be expected at any moment—might even have begun.

Those who predicted an almost immediate major conflict for the Middle East recalled Hitler's words that the Eastern Mediterranean would be in his hands by August. They anticipated a furious assault on Egypt within the next ten days as part of an Axis drive toward Suez.

These experts pictured the new assault as a pincer movement— a frontal assault on Egypt and an attack through Palestine and French-mandated Syria, via the islands of Greece.

It was also suggested that the Axis might seek to seize the Iraq oil fields and propagandists apparently were busy trying to stir anti-British feeling among the natives of that district.

There were renewed indications of Axis efforts to alienate Arab feelings of friendship for Britain, but their efficacy was doubted in view of the strong ties between Egypt and Britain, for King Farouk of Egypt has been likened in Moslem circles to the Caliph whose office as temporal head of Islam disappeared with the disintegration of the old Turkish Sultanate and the rise of the Turkish republic under the late Kemal Ataturk.

Many who reviewed the battle of Greece were struck not only by the astonishing fighting ability of the Allied troops, both Greek and British, but also by the cool-headed gallantry of the Greek high command in warning the British general staff that the time had come for an evacuation.

The Greeks held on with one of history's greatest exhibitions of pertinacity, but when they realized the end was near they warned their British Comrades that they could not help much longer and suggested the time had come to go. Meanwhile they remained with the British rearguard to protect the withdrawal of those selected to leave first.

The Greek populace also showed its spirits when its women and children lined the roadways as the British left for the embarkation beaches, throwing flowers and shouting: "Good bye. We'll see you again soon."

Greece has fallen beneath the Axis yoke, but, as its government said, "these things also will pass."

Miss M. Sherman Wins Gold Watch Donated By G. M. James

Donated by Mr. G. M. James for the purpose of raising money for the British War Victims' Fund a handsome seventeen-jewel gold watch was won by Miss M Sherman, 219 Front Street, Wednesday night, when Chairman Morley Duff of the Public Utilities Commission drew the lucky ticket on the stage of the Belle theatre following the first performance. It was stated that upwards of fifty dollars had been added to the Fund coffers through the medium of tickets sold on the watch.

Mr. James presented the watch to officials of the Belleville Hydro Commission here for the purpose of augmenting the fund which has been inaugurated in the Hydro Commission offices in an effort to swell the general fund sponsored by the Toronto Telegram.

The Public Utilities Commission has generously placed its office and facilities at the disposal of the general public in an effort to raise money for the Fund. Containers are placed in strategic places, while private and organization contributions are being taken by members of the staff.

Monies are forwarded immediately to Fund headquarters in Toronto where they are despatched overseas almost immediately to meet the demand that is increasing day by day.

To date contributions amounting to $223.62 have been collected and forwarded by the local Hydro Office, and donations large and small are coming in daily. Utilities officials urge that anyone desirous of making donations to the fund may do so at any time in their offices. They will be gratefully received.

MORE CANADIANS ARRIVE IN ENGLAND

Safe arrival of another large contingent of Canadian soldiers and airmen in England has been officially announced. The above scenes show the fighting men as they left an East Coast seaport on their perilous voyage across the Atlantic. In the upper photo Canucks wave a farewell to Canada as they mount the gang plank. A group of Sergeant Pilots, graduates of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, are shown below as they eat their first meal aboard ship. Inset, Private R. G. Golden, of Victoria Island and Private H. T. Douglas of Vancouver do a little last-minute advertising for their home province by displaying a British Columbia apple through the ship's port-hole. —(—Photos — Director of Public Information.)

Ambassador's Attitude

The British ambassador in Baghdad, Sir Kinahan Cornwallis, was said to have told Iraq authorities that Britain considered her action fully covered by terms of their treaty.

London, it was added, instructed Sir Kinahan to take any steps necessary to ensure safety of British women at the time of the overturn of the Iraq government a month ago.

(Baghdad advices reaching Vichy yesterday via Beirut, Lebanon, said Britain had taken measures to remove British women and children from the country.)

The original landings in Iraq were to protect Iraq's rich oil fields, in which Britain has large capital, and to preserve communications.

Iraq may be one of the objectives of Germany in any further military moves into the southeast.

Presumably the British movement "through the country" referred to in London as well as in the Baghdad-Vichy dispatches means deployment of troops in Iraq.

(The British radio, heard by Columbia Broadcasting System, said "it is learned that the differences of opinion between His Majesty's government and the Iraq administration concerning the interpretation of the Anglo-Iraq treaty remain unresolved.

W. H. MAUND DIES AT NORTH BAY

Secretary and Assistant General Manager of T. N. O. Railway Was Native of Kingston

North Bay, May 1—(CP)—William H. Maund, Secretary and Assistant Manager of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, died at his home here this morning following a lengthy illness. He was in his 58th year.

One of the oldest members of the T. and N. O. executive from the point of seniority, Mr. Maund had been confined to his home for several weeks. He was secretary of the T. and N. O. Railway Commission.

Besides his wife, Mr. Maund is survived by three sons, Lt. Walton Maund, Royal Canadian Engineers, Petawawa; William, Beamsville and Fred, Montreal; and one daughter, Miss Patricia Maund, at home.

At 2:30 o'clock, Saturday afternoon, May 3, funeral service will be held in St. John's Anglican Church.

Interment will be in St. John's Cemetery.

Born in Kingston, Mr. Maund married the former Ethel Mary Walton at Belleville on Nov. 20, 1911. They resided in North Bay about 30 years.

After an early experience on the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, Mr. Maund entered the service of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, Oct. 17, 1906, as freight clerk at Haileybury. He was employed as agent at various points and became a travelling auditor in 1911.

On March 1, 1915, he was appointed Secretary-Treasurer of the Commission. His official position recently was Assistant General Manager and Secretary of the Commission.

Free Insurance Policy Given British On Personal Property

London, May 1 (CP)—The government's war damage risk insurance became effective today and every man, woman and child in Great Britain received free of charge a limited insurance policy covering damage to personal property as a result of the war.

The free insurance limit is £200 ($890) for a single householder and £300 ($1,335) for a married householder, with £25 (about $110) extra for each child under 16.

Individuals not classed as householders are limited to £50 (about $222.)

The government's real property insurance plan, whereby real estate owners will be required to take out policies, does not become effective until July.

TENDERS WANTED.

Tenders will be received by the undersigned till Friday, May 2nd., 1941, for the rebuilding of Sidney Town Hall Cheese Factory. Plans and further information may be had at the Cheese Factory plant. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Worthless Mexican Five-Pesos Note Passed In City

Worthless Mexican currency appeared in Belleville yesterday when a five-pesos Mexican note was tendered and passed in a local billiard establishment, Belleville police were informed.

The markings on the Mexican five-pesos note are somewhat similar to those of a Canadian five dollar bill and it is only after careful scrutiny that the difference can be ascertained. Late yesterday Gus Poulos billiard parlour operator at 227 Front Street, was tendered one of the worthless Mexican five-pesos notes allegedly by two members of the Air Force, who asked for change in order to make a long distance telephone call in the store telephone booth. It was not until some hours later that the note was discovered. P.C. Thomson was notified and immediately warned other merchants of the deception.

Later last night Constables Taylor and Evans questioned two members of the Air Force, who answered the description given by Mr. Poulos, but they pleaded innocence and were allowed their liberty. About 2 years ago the presence of worthless Mexican five-pesos notes were prevalent in Ontario and several were passed in Belleville before the deception was discovered.

Mention Lindbergh In British House

Member and Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs Refer to Flier

London, May 1 (CP)—R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, answered "Yes" in the House of Commons today to a member who asked him whether Charles Lindbergh had not "consistently, always used his influence to prevent effective action against Germany."

His questioner was Vyvyan Adams, Conservative.

The brief discussion involving Lindbergh brought a statement from Mr. Butler that the American flier's views on the strength of the Soviet Union about the time of the Munich Pact in September, 1938, were considered of "no undue significance" by the British Government.

He refused to answer a question by Ellis Smith, Labor, whether Lindbergh had used his influence "along with a well-known lady member of this House."

Says Records Available

Also responding to a question, Mr. Butler said records showed that Lindbergh's views were available for the government's consideration. Asked, howveer, whether Lindbergh ever had been interviewed by the Foreign Office, the Under-Secretary answerd, "not as far as I am aware."

Hospital Boat Undergoes Tests Near Trenton

Trenton, May 1—A hospital boat manufactured for the Royal Air Force at the Aero-Marine Corporation was tried out on the Bay of Quinte yesterday and measured up to all requirements.

Without ceremony the boat was placed in the Trent River early this week and has been undergoing the necessary changes in the water. Yesterday morning hundreds of people lined the shores and the Trent River bridge at Dundas St. to watch the trim vessel move out into the Bay of Quinte.

The first of boats to be constructed at the Aero-Marine was shipped to port by rail and put through its first tests there. Under the supervision of R.A.F. officials and Gar Wood's brother, the boat skimmed through the water at high speed.

Each boat is equipped with a hospital room in which the doctors on the boat will render first aid to airmen who are picked up at sea. Along the walls of the hospital are a number of stretchers where the patients can be placed one above the other while awaiting treatment.

Already sister boats are being prepared to be placed in the water for their trials. As soon as they are ready, they will be tried out on the Bay of Quinte.

N. Sprague Elected to Executive

At the annual convention of the Grand Chapter of the Royal Arch Masons in Ontario, held in London, last week, R. Ex. Comp Nostrand M. Sprague of Trenton was elected to the executive. This will be Mr. Sprague's second year as a member of the executive, the first year by appointment.

In last week's election for the offices there were seventeen candidates for the executive with five to be elected. Mr. Sprague was fourth.

Squadron Leader to Leave

Squadron Leader E. E. Moore and Mrs. Moore, 47 Henry St., will soon leave Trenton to make their future home in Vancouver, due principally to health.

An officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force until his health gave way at Winnipeg, Man., Squadron Leader Moore has been filling in his time as a gunsmith. He was with the Royal Air Force in the last Great War.

SQUIRREL ON RAMPAGE

Kansas City, May 1 (AP)—He was only a squirrel but; he bit a 76-year-old woman, chased her and her daughter into the house; jumped on another woman's shoulder, nipped her arm three times; left a fourth woman with a lacerated leg; bit a nine-year-old boy on the hands. So 10 policemen came to the rescue using a riot gun. The first charge went wild. The second brought down the squirrel—and the treetop.

Escape Of British Force In Greece Heartens Britons

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 1 (AP). — The disclosure of astonishingly light British casualties in Greece, and the escape of at least three-fourths of the 60,000 Imperial troops who had seemed to be in a Nazi trap, should prove a tonic to the British people.

Whatever may be the fate of 12,000 men unaccounted for and presumably still fighting as valiant a rearguard action as history records, a British military disaster that could have shaken Empire cabinets and even the Churchill War Ministry in London has been averted. Britons around the world were braced for far worse news from Greece.

It goes without saying that an immediate result will be formal renewal by parliament of Prime Minister Churchill's war leadership commission next week.

British nerves were in need of such a tonic. Whether as a prelude to an all-out Nazi attack on the citadel of the British Empire itself, or to mask new thrusts elsewhere at British lifelines, the German nightly air attack on Britain is mounting in a new crescendo.

Coupled with the most sustained big-gun bombardment of the Dover area, the Nazi aerial attack is taking on a definite new pattern. It might mean either invasion, or a German plan to shift additional air forces from east to west to batter such essential entry ports as Plymouth and forestall arrival of United States help.

Yet the British escape from Greece, on Greek suggestion, has very definite significance as affecting other battle fronts. Whether the evacuated Empire troops rally with Greek comrades for a new stand on the strategic island of Crete or rejoin the British army of the Nile in Egypt, they represent an important and tested fighting unit supplementing General Wavell's Middle Eastern Command.

The fact that only 60,000 men composed the British force in Greece is another asset item. It confirms previous estimates that Britain had been able to send less than 100,000 men to aid the Greeks; but it also means that the British forces in East and North Africa available to block the axis road through Egypt to Alexandria and the Suez Canal are greater than they appeared to be during the British retreat in Libya.

Much of the Nile army must have been transferred to East Africa, since only about four divisions, some of them drawn from other sources than Africa, were landed in Greece. With virtual completion of the East African campaign, it cannot be doubted that General Wavell's army in North Africa is rapidly expanding again to cope with the axis threat from Libya.

Mr. Churchill's announcement that British battle casualties in Greece totalled only 3,000 men is surprising. During their successive withdrawals down the Greek peninsula, the British forces were exposed to Nazi bombers. German claims that heavily laden British transports had been blasted in Greek waters added to fears of a horrifying loss ratio.

A story of British staff skill in effecting the retreat and evacuation must lie behind the cold figures. Another military miracle, almost equivalent to the escape from Dunkirk, has been wrought to prove that the technical skill of British army leaders is rising steadily to meet the supreme peril in which Britain and the Empire stand.

Remains of Nazi Bomber That Stayed in England

A twisted propeller, a cogwheel and a tire from the landing gear are all that remain of one German bombing plane that took part in the blitz raid on London ,on the night of April 16. Although wrecks of German planes are old stuff now in Britain, a sentry is on duty to keep souvenir hunters away.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were starting to eat supper, being liver and onions on account of this being Nora's day off and ma making it in pop's honor, and ma said, O deer, it seems almost sinful to be sitting here openly enjoying a beautiful well cooked meal when millions of distant people in attacked countries haven't even butter to put on their bread if they're lucky enough to have any bread, and it all seems so dreadfully avoidable.

What would you say if I told you that this liver is of decidedly inferior quality and instead of being done to a turn as usual it's bernt to a crisp pop said, and ma said, 'Why Willyum Potts, that liver was beautiful and still is, and far from being overdone I was almost afraid I'd got it a little too rare for you. I mean I never heard of such a thing, the idea, after my spending a solid hour in the kitchin bending every energy to having everything perfect, she said.

And so it is from the standpoint of strict truth, but under the circumstances I thought it only my duty to at least pretend that we're not dining in the bountiful lap of peaceful luxury, pop said, and ma said, Oh, I see, but it was hardly necessary to give me such an unpleasant start for land sakes.

Well, as you suggested, nothing about the whole miserable business seems necessary, pop said. But quality and taste aside there's hardly enough meat here to feed a baby he said, and ma said, Now how can you say a thing like that when I took special panes to order an extra half pound?

I realize there will be some left over to stuff an already plethoric refrigerater, but we're not going to sit here and gloat over it, are we? pop said, and ma said, Oh for goodness sakes now that's enough, the least we can do is be decently thankful that somewhere in the world people can sit down in their own dining room in comfort and plenty.

The hesult being pop enjoyed the rest of the meal out loud, claiming ma would probably never make such wonderful liver and onions again but it was an ideal to strive for.

RETURNED TO JAIL

Rev. Charles Arthur Higby, former Atlanta minister, is pictured ABOVE, reading his Bible in the Atlanta city jail, while awaiting Iowa police officers who are coming to return him to prison. In 1913, the Rev. Higby escaped from an Iowa prison where he was serving a sentence for murdering his first wife.

HEMISPHERE DIPLOMATS PLAN JOINT POLICY ON SEIZURE OF FOREIGN SHIPPING

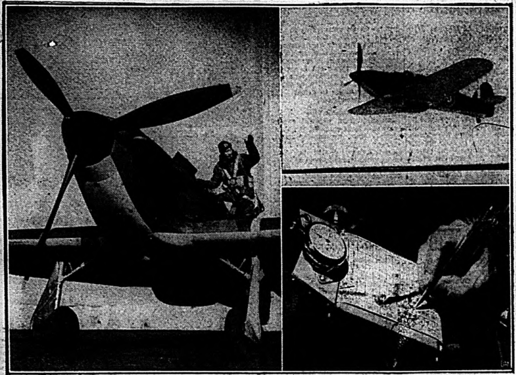
BIRTH OF A HURRICANE



In a great plant at Fort William, Canada is turning out Hurricane fighters for the defence of Britain at the rate of fifteen a week. Each machine, as it comes off the production line, is test flown by veteran pilot V. G. ("Shorty") Hatton. At left Hatton is shown as he climbs into the cockpit of the newly-born fighter. In upper right the speedy machine roars off on its maiden voyage into the sky. The special note pad, upon which every reaction of the new craft is recorded, may be seen at lower right. The pad, fitted with a stop watch, is strapped to Pilot Hattons knee so it will be handy as he races the machine through its tests.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Adam Had Four Sons"

There is a new star on the Hollywood horizon, two current favorites gain in the stellar brightness and a new supply of featured player talent comes to light on the screen.

Such appears to summarize audience reaction to the first sneak preview of "Adam Had Four Sons," the Robert C. Sherwood production for Columbia release which stars Ingrid Bergman and Warner Baxter now playing at the McCarthy Theatre. That and a feeling that the picture, dealing with family life during the exciting period from 1907 to 1923, is one of the year's most highly charged emotional dramas.

Preview cards handed in by the audience after the preview stressed the vibrant performance of young Susan Hayward, who plays Hester, a modern Scarlett O'Hara, in this filming of the Charles Bonner novel, "Legacy." The story's theme has to do with Baxter's struggle to rear four motherless sons and from the moment Miss Hayward enters the family her titian tresses fly like a danger signal over the heads of all five good-looking males.

The two current stars who enrich their laurels in 'Adam Had Four Sons" are Baxter and Miss Bergman, the latter making her second American appearance. Fay Wray, Helen Denning, Robert Shaw and Charles Lind were among supporting players singled out for plaudits and Gregory Ratoff's direction was highly praised.

Frankie Darro and Marjorie Reynolds in a surprise package of entertainment under the banner title of "Up in the Air" is also now showing at the McCarthy and as well an excellent color cartoon and the first chapter of Edgar Wallace's mighty serial story, "The Green Archer."

AT THE CAPITOL

Now Playing
"Remedy for Riches"

Comedy, whether homespun humor, sparkling wit or down-to-brass-tacks slapstick, has always held a position of importance in the entertainment field. It is the one phase of divertissement that has constantly interested the public, cycles to the contrary. With this in mind, Stephens-Lang, producers of "Remedy for Riches," starring Jean Hersholt in the role of "Dr. Christian," have surrounded the star with a galaxy of funmakers. Even the hero character is not immune. Hersholt is gay throughout the film and plays one scene in slapstick.

Edgar Kennedy, of "slow-burn" fame, is cast as a duped grocer and is given ample opportunity to pat his pate in despair. The able comic, Walter Catlett, recruited from Ziegfeld's extravaganzas to appear in films, draws a broad satire of the village constable. Jed Prouty, who extracts laughs from audiences with a sly gesture, plays a shady promoter.

"In Old Cheyenne"

Republic's production, "In Old Cheyenne," a Roy Rogers vehicle, with a supporting cast of Joan Woodbury, George Rosener, George "Gabby" Hayes, Sally Payne and the famous horse, Trigger will be the added feature.

Story deals chiefly with Roy Rogers as a reporter trying to learn the identity of the ringleader whose group of bandits and cattle thieves is terrorizing the community.

J. Farrell MacDonald, as the father of the leading lady, piquant Joan Woodbury, and the editor of the Cheyenne newspaper, is cast in a role which befits him very w/l. He, aided by Rogers, discovers that the big guy behind the outlawry is a business confrere and supposed friend. MacDonald plays his part convincingly, makes a very understanding father and gives able support to a picture filled with action and suspense.

"King of the Royal Mounted"

The Intrepid Sergeant King of the Mounties perpetrates an ingenious ruse on his enemies in Chapter Three of "King of the Royal Mounties," which will be also shown on the same program with "Remedy For Ritches" and "In Old Cheyenne."

The popular Universal News Reel completes a swell entertainment for all the family to see.

AT THE BELLE

"Come Live With Me"

With James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr sharing romantic honors in one of the most interesting films to be shown this year, "Come Live With Me," is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Seldom has Hollywood produced a story so well fitted for its choice of stars. The plot deals with the plight of a beautiful Austrian refugee who marries a penniless young author in order to obtain a quota number and thus prevent deportation to her native Austria. The complications which develop from the marriage make for extremely amusing entertainment.

As the young author who finally decides to cease dreaming up plots and write from actual experience, Stewart is superb. His scene in the office of publisher Ian Hunter is one of the high spots of his screen career. Miss Lamarr as the girl caught in the web of indecision plus romance reveals a new side to her glamorous personality. She is real, human and sympathetic and does a grand bit of work throughout the entire film.

In support of the stars is a noteworthy cast headed by Ian Hunter who turns in his usual dependable characterization as the publisher who is certain he has an option on Miss Lamarr's heart until he receives the manuscript of a novel written by Stewart. Verree Teasdale, as Hunter's wife, gives an excellent interpretation to a small role.

Others in the cast include Donald Meek, as a park-bench bum, Ann Codee and King Baggot. An interesting debut in the film is that made by eighty-year-old Adeline de Walt Reynolds, who portrays her initial screen role as Stewart's grandmother and gets off on a blazing start to a most interesting Hollywood career.

The film was beautifully and sincerely directed by Clarence Brown.

CHURCH'S NEEDS ARE STRESSED

If Church is Let Down, Who Will Keep Up Morale of People Asks Bishop Lyons

Ottawa, May 1 (CP)—Rt. Rev. John Lyons of Kingston, Ont., Bishop of the Ontario Anglican Diocese, appealed to Canadians last night not to forget the needs of the church in the midst of war appeals.

"Our primary duty is to bend all our energies toward winning the war but we also have the church, and what is going to keep up the morale of the people if the church is let down?" he asked the Anglican Fellowship Club.

"It is a mistake to believe we can build up the church tomorrow if we let it down today."

New A. A. Guns Like Machine Guns Accepted By U.S.

Baltimore, May 1 (AP)— Nine new anti-aircraft guns—firing two-pound shells in machine-gun fashion and described as "one answer to dive-bombers"—were accepted yesterday by the United States Army Ordnance Department.

The rubber-tired, highly mobile gun carriages—the gun barrels are manufactured elsewhere by the army—rolled off the assembly lines of the Bartlet Hayward division of the Koppers Company, which holds a $13,500,000 contract for the gun mounts.

The new gun fires about 150 two-pound (37-millimetre) shells a minute, and has an approximate range of about 3,000 yards in vertical firing position. It can be put into action "in less than one minute," said Major D. N. Hauseman, executive officer of the army's Philadelphia District, Ordnance Department.

Major Hauseman said it was designed "to cope with the latest type, high speed dive bombers or hedge hoppers."

"A battery of these guns can put 1,000 aimed shots into the air per minute, or 250 projectiles at any one time," Major Hauseman told workmen who produced the new gun carriage.

With a new electric generator it is possible to shoot power through the air like a beam of light.

WESTERN M. P.'S URGE HELP FOR PRAIRIE FARMERS

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 1 (CP) — Alarmed that Prairie farm income may be reduced under the government's 1941-42 wheat policy, two western members have urged in the House of Commons that action be taken to protect farmers from losing their land through mortgage foreclosures.

Speaking in the long debate on agriculture in the House of Commons yesterday Mrs. Dorise Nielsen (Unity North Battleford) and G. H. Castleden (C.C.F. Yorkton) denounced the government's wheat acreage reduction program as unfair to the western farmers and dangerous to farmers in other parts of the country.

Cleaver Makes Charge

While most of the discussion turned on wheat Hughes Cleaver (Lib. Halton) charged Conservatives with seeking to make a political issue out of farm conditions.

He said that by bringing the subject up on an amendment to the motion to resolve the House into committee of supply they prevented a fair and impartial discussion. They put Liberal members in the position of voting to throw out a government which was carrying on a war and bring on an election, or voting against agriculture to defeat the opposition amendment.

Dr. Bruce's View

Speaking from personal experience as a farm operator, Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale), eminent surgeon and former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, said wheat could be fed to hogs with results as good as those attained from feeding coarse grains.

Thus, he said, he was unable to see why the government should subsidize western farmers to grow coarse grains instead of wheat.

Dr. Bruce said the wheat acreage reduction program was "illogical, conceived in bewilderment and will be still-born as far as assisting the farmers is concerned."

Would Give Wheat as Gift to Britain

Instead of growing less wheat Canad should join with other nations of the empire and the United States in offering good supplies to the nations of Europe the moment the aggressors are overthrown, he suggested. Such an offer, he said, would have an important effect on the length of the war.

Favors Gift of Wheat to Britain

He also condemned the government for not offering wheat to Great Britain as a gift. He said if this had been done earlier rationing of food might not have been necessary in Great Britain.

"The question of payment is of secondary importance to the stakes at issue," he said.

This was not the time to restrict wheat production.

Dr. Bruce said the Canadian government made a mistake in holding back wheat in 1929 and 1930.

The Agriculture Minister Hon. J G. Gardiner interrupted to say the government held no wheat at that time.

"I thought those dates were correct," said Dr. Bruce. "If they are not I will correct them tomorrow."

Castleden Fears Regimentation

Mr. Castleden saw western farmers being "regimented into a dictatorship" by the system of checkers and investigators which would be set up to administer the acreage reduction program. He was alarmed at the prospect of this work coming under the control of the "political machine" in Saskatchewan.

Mrs. Nielsen contended the only farmers to benefit from the government's aid to agriculture were the large-scale operators. The government apparently planned to do nothing for the small-scale farmer. Under the present system it seemed likely small farmers would revert to a "peasant economy."

"CRITICAL SITUATION" DEVELOPS IN IRAQ

BRITISH SLIP FROM GREECE DESPITE DIVE BOMBING

British Request Troop Withdrawal From An Airdrome

Iraq Gov't Protest Landing Of Second Contingent Of British Forces

CHANGE OF ATTITUDE

New York, May 2 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation, heard by NBC, said Iraq artillery began shelling the British air base at Habbaniyah today.

London, May 2 (CP)—The Iraq government's refusal to withdraw its troops from near a British airdrome at Habbaniyah, 60 miles west of Baghdad, has precipitated a "somewhat critical situation" between Britain and Iraq, authoritative quarters said today.

Britain yesterday asked the government of Iraq, now headed by Premier Seyid Rashid Ali Al Gailani who engineered a pro-axis coup d'etat a month ago, to withdraw the considerable forces concentrated around the airport which is 60 miles west of Baghdad.

Iraq, into which Britain has moved troops to safeguard her interests in the Mosul oilfields, to open communications with Turkey and protect her flank at Suez, has not complied with the request.

The British authorities contend they have clear rights under their treaty with Iraq to bring troops into the country and it is reported the British government "has every intention of maintaining" those rights.

Rahid Ali Al Gailani's government which Britain has not recognized, acquiesced when the first contingent of British and Imperial troops arrived at Basra at the head of the Persian Gulf April 17 and 18.

But the Iraq government suddenly changed its front when a second contingent landed. This landing was reported yesterday.

Nazi Bombing Raid Does Little Damage

London, May 2 (CP)—A German bombing raid on the Merseyside dock area of Liverpool that started out at blitz tempo last night faded out before serious damage was done when Nazi bases across the channel apparently were blanketed by foul weather.

Some damage was done on the Merseyside by the first waves of bombers but the government said reports did not indicate casualties would be large.

Scattered attacks on other areas were reported and Royal Air Force night fighters were credited with downing one bomber.

Nazis Claim Part 'Serb National Treasure' Found in Monastery

Berlin, May 2 — (AP) — Nazi spokesmen claimed today that part of the "Serb national treasure," estimated at 15,000,000 dinar (about $3,000,000 at pre-war exchange), fell into German hands in a raid on a monastery at Ostrog, near the Albanian frontier. It was claimed secret police and soldiers found bank notes and gold hidden in books and among church robes.

CADET SCHOOL NOW OPENED

Brockville, Ont., May 2 (CP) — Hundreds of men from all parts of Eastern Canada arrived here today to start training in the new category of the Canadian (active) army—the cadets. They will study at the officers' training centre, established here less than a month ago.

From 800 to 1,200 men will be trained in successive courses of 12 weeks duration, according to a statement made in the House of Commons at Ottawa March 11 by Defence Minister J. L. Ralston.

Col. R. G. Whitelaw is camp commandant. The men came from the ranks and were selected and recommended for advanced training by their superior officers.

The Brockville officers' training centre serves all Canada east of Winnipeg and consists of 53 frame structures with an instructional and administration staff of 75 officers and 115 warrant officers and sergeants.

The training course consists of lectures and practical work in all branches of army life, excepting medical. The student-officers will train in artillery, engineering, signalling, armored corps, machine-gun army service corps, ordnance, dental, postal and provost corps.

After completing the course at Brockville the men will be posted at advance training centres in various parts of Canada, dependent upon the branch of their service.

PRICE OF BEER UNDER DISCUSSION

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—Price of beer has increased in other provinces due to a 20 per cent tax increase by the Federal government on malt, but negotiations are still proceeding here between brewing and hotel interests on whether the price will go up. One report is that there will be no increase in beer by the glass at 10 cents but there may be a price increase of package beer.

The Liquor Board is said to be definitely against increasing the 10 cent glass of beer, but may agree to an increase in package beer.

RELIEF IN SPAIN

Madrid, May 2 (AP)—The American Red Cross mission supervising distribution of relief in Spain said today that the arrival of the Spanish freighter Wavemar at Huelva, April 29, with 3,982 tons of flour, 1,232 tons of evaporated milk and 171 tons of medical supplies brought the total value of American aid to Spain to $1,950,000. Approximately 300,000 Spaniards have been aided through American shipments.

TOBRUK GARRISON STILL HOLDING OUT AGAINST THE AXIS

Some Axis Tanks Penetrated Outer Perimetre Of Forts But Soon Driven Out

PROGRESS IN ETHIOPIA

Cairo, May 2 (AP)—A British counter-attack in one sector of Tobruk's outer defences cost Axis attackers 11 tanks and many casualties and fighting still is in progress in other sectors around that Libyan port, the Middle East command announced today.

"Throughout yesterday the enemy continued to attack the outer defences of Tobruk," the communique said, indicating the tank charge took place a day ago.

Patrol action also continued in the area of Salum, over the frontier in Egypt, about 90 miles from Tobruk, it said.

London, May 2 (CP)—The British garrison at Tobruk, Libya, 80 miles west of the Egyptian frontier, is still holding out against Axis siege, authoritative quarters said today.

The battle continues, they added.

It was known only that the original attack was made at night some Axis tanks penetrating the outer perimetre of forts.

While heavier than those attacks which preceded it, it was expected in London, however, that the thrust would be turned back, particularly since the British Navy is taking a hand.

At Salum, just inside the Egyptian border, no further Axis advance has been reported, but British patrols, continuing to circulate, were said to have captured one German gun yesterday.

Although authorities here said some small British units cut off from the main forces in Greece might still get away safely, removal was regarded as virtually finished.

In Ethiopia, Imperial troops are eight miles north of Amba Alagi, 135 miles north of Dessie, and other forces are moving on from Dessie in two directions toward Assab on the Red Sea and Gondar north of Lake Tana.

Military circles said they were confident the Tobruk garrison could hold out until Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's forces gather strength to resist the Axis'. Egyptian thrust.

Some quarters suggested the real German push would not be along the coast at all, but would take the form of a swift thrust at the Nile Valley farther south.

Italian Chief Of Staff In N. Africa Killed At Tripoli

RoyalNavy Accomplishes 'Impossible' In Rescuing Imperials From Greece

Editor's note:

Robert St. John, Associated Press correspondent in Belgrade when the Germans invaded Yugoslavia April 6, reached Egypt after a gruelling 25-day flight through the Balkan war zone to a bomb-shattered Greek port and thence aboard a ship laden with troops to Cairo.

He was slightly wounded in the leg by machine-gun fire.

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Egypt, May 2 (AP)— The British navy accomplished the "impossible" in rescuing something under 50,000 Imperial troops from Greece.

Military and naval experts said it couldn't be done. Veteran officers who had lived through the Dunkerque retreat said the flight from Greece was infinitely more difficult—that the Royal Navy could be proud of getting a single shipload of men safely away through the rain of sudden death the Nazis were pouring on the ships.

But the impossible was done.

I know, for I walked the deck with soldiers who got away and saw columns of sturdy craft, packed to the rails with Imperial troops, steaming safely away to new battlegrounds.

I had reached a teeming port town in the Peloponnesus after fleeing from the ruins of Yugoslavia's capital and down through bomb-wrecked Greece.

Witnessed Final Chapter

Here in Cairo, I am witnessing the final chapter in what may go down in the records as one of the greatest feats of the British Navy.

Ships were lost. Men were lost but the total dead are infinitesimal in comparison with the predictions of experts who sized-up the tremendous obstacles at first hand.

The Germans had numerous air bases close by—on the Greek mainland, in defeated Yugoslavia, in the heel of Italy, on the Italian island of Rhodes, in the Dodecan-

OLD GLORY FLIES IN SCOTLAND

The stars and stripes of the United States are raised with the flags of Poland and England's Royal Air Force at an airfield where Polish fliers are stationed "Somewhere in Scotland." The occasion was a visit to the field by President Rackiewicz of Poland and Anthony Drexel Biddle, U.S. Amassador to Poland.

EQUIPMENT LOSSES IN GREECE OFFSET BY U. S. MATERIAL

General Wavell Losing No Time in Reorganizing Armies in Africa

TROOPS CONFIDENT

By EDWARD KENNEDY

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force just arrived from Greece Cairo, May 2 (AP)—New war material pouring into Africa in recent weeks—much of it American-made—offsets the loss of equipment in Greece, British sources said today.

The Commander in Chief, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, is losing no time in reorganization of his armies for any German move in this end of the Mediterranean.

It was pointed out that much of the army which conquered Italian East Africa now is free for new action, alongside the divisions returned from Greece

(The newly-arriving American supplies may have reached Egypt by way of the Red Sea, which President Roosevelt has opened to American shipping by declaring it out of the war zone.)

Thousands of the British, Australian and New Zealand troops withdrawn from Greece already are in the line for defence of the middle east against the swelling German contingents in Africa.

Must Keep Sharp Eye

With the Nazis now more extensively lodged along the Mediterranean shores and in islands off the Turkish coast, Gen. Wavell must keep a sharp eye to the north as well as on direct action along the Salum and Tobruk fronts, near the Egyptian-Libyan fronts.

He is facing perhaps his greatest test with the confidence of his staff and troops unbounded.

When the Balkan expedition was decided upon he understood it and did, in the soldiers' view, everything to make the German victory costly.

Developments such as the collapse of the Yugoslav army and the destruction of Piraeus harbor in Greece changed the whole Balkan situation.

Soldiers who first went into battle at Bardia during Britain's winter offensive singing "we're off to see the wizard—the wonderful wizard of Oz" no longer feel in that mood.

GREEK, BRITISH FORCES TO DEFEND ISLAND OF CRETE

British General Tells Newsmen Crete Could and Would be Held

ONLY ONE HARBOR

By EDWARD KENNEDY

Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, May 2 (AP)—British and Greek forces escaping from Greece who landed on the island of Crete, where King George II. has established his government, will defend it against threatened Axis invasion, officers of the Allied commands declared today.

A British general told me Crete could and would be held, and the Greeks agreed, pointing out that the rugged island, ribbed by four mountain ranges with scarcely any level ground, lends itself to defence.

The only harbour suitable for large vessels—Suda Bay—was developed as a British naval base some months ago. The island, 160 miles long and ranging from seven to 35 miles wide, lies 60 miles off the southernmost tip of Greece and 110 miles from the nearest cape of Turkey.

Since King George, his premier and the royal household arrived at Crete in a British plane April 23, the island has been the goal of hundreds of Greek soldiers who scorned surrender and crowded aboard ships during the British evacuation of Greece.

The crew of the Greek ship in which I escaped from Greece with many Greek civilians chose to remain in Crete rather than continue to Egypt.

STRIKING PORTRAYALS OF BATTLES SHOWN AT ROYAL ACADEMY

London, May 2 (CP)—The Royal Academy's 173rd annual exhibition largely made up of war paintings, opened today. Many of the exhibitors, both men and women, now are doing war duty and striking portrayals of the air battles and bombings they witnessed are among the outstanding pieces in the exhibition.

WOMAN FICTION WRITER DIES

London, May 2—(CP) — Ethel olburn Mayne, writer, died Wednesday at a nursing home in Torquay, it was reported today. She wrote numerous fiction stories and translated a number of foreign works besides publishing many books of her own.

BEAVERBROOK IS STATE MINISTER UNDER CHURCHILL

Made Virtual Dictator Of Britain's Wartime Industries

CABINET SHAKE-UP

London, May 2 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill answered critics of his administration today by shaking up his cabinet and naming dynamic Lord Beaverbrook to the newly-created post of Minister of State with the apparent intention of making him virtual dictator of Britain's wartime industries.

In line with this sweeping move, Mr. Churchill merged the Ministries of Shipping and Transport and entrusted the important new portfolio of wartime communications to a virtual unknown—57-year-old Frederick Thomas Leathers, who simultaneously was made a Baron.

J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, former Minister of Transport, was named to succeed Lord Beaverbrook as Minister of Aircraft Production. Ronald Cross, relieved of the post of Minister of Shipping, was appointed High Commissioner to Australia.

These changes, generally commended by the press—part of which had been insisting that new blood was necessary for more efficient conduct of the war—came as Mr. Churchill prepared for next week's parliamentary debate on British reverses in Greece and North Africa.

They apparently were designed to answer two outstanding objects of criticism—delay in production of vital war materials and lack of co-operation between land and sea communications.

Members Of Reserve Army Must Attend All Regular Parades

Hamilton, May 2 (CP)—Members of the reserve army who fail or neglect to attend parades without first obtaining the permission of their commanding officers can and shall be prosecuted under the Militia Act, Major B. C. Tebbs declared in court today. Each parade missed can bring a $5 fine.

The testimony was given in the hearing of a charge against Leo Joseph Price, 24, of Hamilton. Price pleaded guilty to a charge under section 115 of the Militia Act and was fined $10 and $1 costs.

"This man had $11.20 pay coming to him for his attendance at camp last year," Major Tebbs said in advising the court that he was appearing both "for and against" accused. Major Tebbs paid the fine and costs, amounting to $11 and this amount is to be deducted from the pay due accused.

Time Not Ripe for Imperial War Cabinet, Menzies Declares

London, May 2 (CP Cable) — Prime Minister R. G. Menzies of Australia at a press conference today said an Imperial war cabinet has been the subject of some discussion, but added that the time is not yet ripe for it.

(Some sections of the British press have supported the idea but Prime Minister Churchill last Tuesday rejected a proposal to that effect in the House of Commons.)

Australians Set Up Rapid-Fire Guns To Repel Attacks

MACHINES NEEDED

Melbourne, Australia, May 2 — (CP)—Removal of the British imperial forces from Greece has been completed with a total of 43,000 men rescued, Lt. Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey said in a message today to Army Minister Percy Spender.

(This figure compares with Prime Minister Churchill's original statement two days ago that at least 45,000 out of a total force of 60,000 men were rescued and a subsequent British middle east command estimate indicating a total of 48,000 men saved.)

Casualties at sea, he said, were not likely to exceed 500.

Gen. Blamey, Deputy Commander in Chief in the Middle East said he was unable to estimate the number of sick and wounded left in Greek hospitals or the total casualties before the withdrawal of the expeditionary forces.

He added there was no doubt of the superiority of the Imperial forces or of the heavy losses inflicted on the Germans.

Wife Allegedly Loaned Hubby For $10,000

Los Angeles, May 2 (AP)—How a woman allegedly loaned her husgand to another woman for $10,000 and promised him half came to light today as he asked for his share in a suit for divorce.

Samuel Brummel, insurance salesman, sued Mrs. Lillian Brummel on grounds of desertion. She has filed a cross-complaint alleging cruelty and desertion on his part.

Identified in the divorce case as the woman who assertedly paid $10,000 for the loan of Brummel was Mrs. Norma Brummel, who married him in 1938 after Mrs. Lillian Brummel obtained a Mexican divorce. Last year, however, Mrs. Norma Brummel obtained an annulment on the ground the first Mrs. Brummel's divorce was not legal and that Brummel had been married all along to his first wife.

Brummel asks $5,000 from his first wife as his part of the community property.

Brummel detailed how his wife promised to give him half the money, after he divorced the second Mrs. Brummel, and continued: "My wife told me at least one hundred times that I was only loaned for a year. She would say: 'Remember, I expect you back after one year. I am just loaning you out.'"

Brummel said he married Mrs. Norma Brummel a month after the divorce, but that he lived "under Norma's roof" only four weeks.

Asked if he continued to see his first wife while he was married to the second, Brummel said: "Oh yes, we saw each other right along."

London, May 2 (CP)—Sir James Parr, former High Commissioner for New Zealand, died today in Berkhampstead, Herdford. He was 71.

R. A. F. Bombers Raid Den Helder, Storage Tanks At Claardinoen Hit

London, May 2 —(CP)— British bombers made a heavy daylight attack yesterday on the German submarine base at Den Helder, Holland, the Air Ministry said today.

A communique said direct hits were scored on the power station, barracks and other buildings at Den Helder.

The docks at Brest were bombed last night.

The Brest raid was the 13th since the Royal Air Force discovered the 26,000-ton German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau holed up there.

In other attacks yesterday, the Air Ministry said Blenheim bombers hit oil storage tanks at Claardinoen, The Netherlands, the Netherlands island of Texel and apparently damaged a 5,000-ton oil tanker off the Netherlands coast.

After bombing targets at Den Helder and on Texel island the Blenheims wheeled about and strafed German troops at both places.

IRAQ SITUATION WATCHED BY U. S.

Minister-Resident at Baghdad Keeps State Department Informed on Development

Washington, May 2 (AP)— American officials kept a watchful eye today on threatening developments in the Kingdom of Iraq where a British-Iraq clash might set the Moslem near-east aflame and imperil an area vital to the life of the British Empire, including the rich Kirkuk oil fields.

Paul Knabenshue, the United States Minister-resident at Baghdad, is keeping the State Department informed on developments, and taking measures for the safety of the small American colony there, and American oil interests in Iraq.

While loss of the Iraq fields would cost Britain many thousands of barrels of oil a day, petroleum experts here doubt that Germany's seizure of them, or control through a pro-Nazi government in Iraq, would benefit the German army because of the tremendously difficult transportation problem.

E. Degoyler, noted oil engineer, reported to the National Petroleum Association that "it is difficult to see how oil from this region can be made available to the axis powers, even in event of conquest, if the pipe lines from Iraq to the Mediterranean are destroyed and unless the axis powers can secure some control of the sea."

GLEN MILLER MAN INJURED AT WORK

Raymond Orr, of Glen Miller, aged 19, suffered considerable shock and slight injury to the abdomen on Wednesday when in working on a heel shaper at the Bata Shoe Company, Frankford, he was struck with a flying piece of wood. The injured youth was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where an examination showed him to be suffering only from shock and is expected to be fully recovered within a few days. Dr. Stoble and Dr. Brebner were in attendance.

BONARLAW INQUEST FURTHER ADJOURNED

The inquest looking into the death of the late Mrs. Louisa Wilson, Bonarlaw, scheduled to have been heard at Springbrook last evening, was further adjourned until May 22nd, Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson announced today. The inquest was made necessary following a fatal accident on April 15th last when Mrs. Wilson sustained fatal injuries when struck by a motor car on Highway No. 14 in front of her home.

FIRST ALARMS IN OVER WEEK

Answering their first alarm in over a week, the fire department was called out twice on Thursday, both calls being for grass fires. The blazes, occurring on St. Paul and on Charles Streets, were extinguished before damage of any nature resulted, it was reported.

BLAZE IN MOTOR CAR SOON EXTINGUISHED

The fact that Walter Packman, Toronto salesman, closed the windows of his car and locked it before going into a restaurant to get a midnight snack, probably saved the vehicle from complete destruction by fire.

When Packman went to the automobile about thirty minutes later he discovered it filled with smoke. A large hole burned in the upholstery of the back seat was smouldering but no flames were apparent. Restaurant employees came to the rescue with water and the smudge was extinguished before any further damage was done. It is believed a burning cigarette was responsible for the damage.

VANDALS REMOVE PARTS OF ENGINE FROM MOTOR BOAT

Evidence of vandalism along the waterfront during the winter months has been brought to light with the opening of the boating season, with at least one powerboat owner finding vital parts of his engine missing when he brought his boat from winter storage. According to the story, the owner had stored his boat in an unlocked boathouse for the winter and this week when preparations were being made to place it in the water, it was discovered that parts of the engine were missing making it necessary to refit the motor ere he could once again cut through the water of the bay.

HOSPITAL BOAT ON THE BAY

Enroute to "The Reach" near Deseronto one of the hospital boats manufactured in Trenton at the Aero-Marine Corporation for the Royal Air Force, passed through the swing bridge leading across the bay from Belleville at about ten-thirty this morning. After passing through the bridge the hospital boat proceeded directly down the bay.

After being put through her paces on the Bay of Quinte the boat will be inspected by Gar Wood, of Detroit, under whose supervision the boats are constructed.

R. C. AMBULANCES HALT IN CITY

Passersby who chanced around the market square on Thursday evening were no little surprised to see an imposing array of Red Cross ambulances drawn up in line where they stayed overnight while the drivers rested at a local hotel. The ambulances were all of identical manufacture and fully equipped for service. All units were painted in drab color.

Each of the ten vehicles was presented to the Canadian Red Cross Society, with a name plate stating the donor attached to each of the units. Early this morning the ambulances were on their way to their destination.

Fifty McColl-Frontenac Dealers Of District Guests Of Company

Fifty McColl-Frontenac dealers of the district were the guests of the company at a get-together last night at the Hotel Quinte, where S. A. Guest, Sales Promotion Manager, preceded an interesting motion picture "A New Slant" with an address in which he pointed out various methods of increasing business and giving the motoring public the service that is necessary to the continuance of that business.

Mr. Guest, described the "Fifth Columnist" in service station operation and business as indifference to new business, indifference to clean rest rooms; indifference to station appearance and indifference to service. He pointed out in a concise manner the harm that can be done by these methods and of the necessity of remedial measures in order that service station operators can "bring" 'em in, sell 'em more and bring 'em back."

The film told the story of a dissatisfied station operator who took a vacation with his wife and brother-in-law in order to study the methods of successful stations in other parts of the country. The adventures of the operator were amusing at times, and brought out in pictorial force the wrongs and rights of service station operation. He got in the toils of an unscrupulous boyhood friend who was a fake promoter, and in his desire to get-rich-quick nearly lost his money. A level-headed wife pulled the financial coals out of the fire, and with his observations of methods of other station operators went back home and convinced his partner that their methods were wrong.

A humorous short film that depicted what might happen in 1951, evoked roars of laughter from the assembled operators, and the evening closed with refreshments served in the lower dining room.

PASTOR KULBECK WILL TAKE PART

Will be Special Guest Speaker at Dedication of New Building at Woodstock

Pastor E. N. O. Kulbeck will spend this week-end in Woodstock, the scene of his pastorate previous to coming to Belleville. Mr. Kulbeck's former congregation has outgrown its previous building, and have recently purchased a church building of cut stone, which seats upwards of five hundred persons.

The official Dedicatory services will be held on Sunday, when Mr. Kulbeck will be the special guest speaker at the morning gathering.

Mr. Kulbeck feels signally honored to be invited to address such an auspicious meeting, and said he was looking forward with the greatest of pleasure, to renew his fellowship with his former parishioners, in their new building which will be known as Calvary Church.

Pastor W. Ross Makin of Bethel Temple, Trenton, will preach at both the Sunday meetings in Evangel Temple, in the absence of Mr. Kulbeck.

Menzies Appeals To U. S. For War Help 'On Grand Scale'

London, May 2 (CP)—Prime Minter Robert G. Menzies of Auslia appealed to the United ates today for war help "on a eat scale" and said "we cannot proach this war in an amateur anner."

Menzies told a press conference at "American help, if it is to orten the war effectively, must be a great scale."

"We are looking hopefully and nfidently to the material help we ed from the United States," he ided, "not help to be given a ak people but help to be given to strong people who need extra rength if the war is not to last o long."

"Everyone must become profesonal and treat the war as a holetime business," Mr. Menzies clared.

He had no comment on the battle Greece.

Mr. Menzies indicated he would to Canada and the United States d make some speeches, stressing at "in the mechanical sense we ust all work like beavers in all rts of the English-speaking orld."

He said his confidence in the itish people was great when he rived two months ago, but that it "immeasurably greater now."

MARRIAGE IS DECLARED INVALID

Interesting Action is Tried at Cobourg Before Mr. Justice Urquhart

An interesting action was tried at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario, at Cobourg, on Wednesday last, before Mr. Justice Urquhart. The plaintiff in the action was Miss Mary E. Ewenson, of Brighton, and the defendant was Mr. Arnold Franklin Westfall, of Trenton, Ontario. In the action Miss Ewenson sought to have it declared that the marriage performed between Mr. Westfall and herself in Montreal on the 5th of November, 1940, was invalid, by reason of the fact that Mr. Westfall was already married to Miss Cleo Marie Chambers, of Montreal, Quebec, notwithstanding that Westfall's first marriage had been declared invalid by the courts in the Province of Quebec.

In giving judgment His Lordship held that the court in Quebec had no jurisdiction to annul the first marriage celebrated between Miss Chambers and Mr. Westfall as both parties to this marriage at all material times were domiciled in the Province of Ontario, and the courts of this Province was the only competent court in that behalf.

Miss Ewenson's marriage to Mr. Westfall was declared void by reason of the previous marriage of Mr. Westfall to Miss Chambers.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. B. C. Donnan, K.C., and Mr. Howell, appeared for the defendant.

Shriners And Band Pay Visit Here

Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Rameses Temple, Toronto, with Potentate S. A. Marshall, will be in Belleville this evening for a reception and get-to-gether at Hotel Quinte of the nobles of the Belleville district and the near-by districts.

They will be accompanied by the Rameses Temple Band, a well known musical organization.

POLICE BLOTTER

Canadian National police officials removed two soldiers from a freight train in the Belleville railway yards last night. The men were found to be absent from their units without military leave and were later turned over to the Trenton R.C.A.F. service police for return to their respective unit.

John Fouts was fined $5.00 and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of careless driving after being arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., this morning. "The accused not only failed to stop at a 'stop street' sign, but was driving at an excessive rate of speed," informed Chief Kidd.

Parties Bound Over

Parties concerned in an assault case were bound over to keep the peace after James Gill, Belleville, pleaded guilty to assaulting Leonard Graham.

"Mr. Gill has repeatedly warned the Graham family to keep their children off his property. The other day one of the Graham boys struck his son and inflicted injuries. Mr. Gill mildly shook the Graham lad as a warning," argued R. D. Arnott K.C., local barrister who appeared on the accused man's behalf.

"These children have had trouble before and I would suggest by binding over the parents to assure the tranquility of the peace, the ends of justice would be met by placing the onus on the parents," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

A domestic case, arising out of a non-support charge, concluded the day's court.

HOUSE ENDORSES GOVERNMENT WHEAT POLICY

Combined Opposition and Single Liberal Votes Against Legislation

TO DEBATE BUDGET

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 2 (CP)—Endorsation of the government's wheat acreage reduction policy is on the records of the House of Commons today, despite the votes of a combined opposition and a single Liberal member.

The long debate on a Conservative want-of-confidence motion demanding parity between farm and other prices and a C.C.F. amendment attacking the wheat policy particularly ended last night in rejection of both.

Today the House continues discussion of the wheat policy on an estimate of $35,000,000 to finance the payment of acreage bonuses to western farmers who reduce wheat seedings by increasing their summerfallow, coarse grain or grass acreage.

These acreage bonuses—together with the government's decision to continue the initial wheat price of 70 cents per bushel, basis No. 1 Northern at Fort William, on a limited quota of wheat deliveries based on 65 per cent of the 1940 crop—came directly in issue through a C.C.F. amendment to the Conservative motion. The amendment was defeated by 134 to 40, the main motion by 128 to 44.

Will Debate Budget

Regardless of whether the House disposes of the wheat question today it will turn to the budget debate Monday. At that time Conservative House Leader Hanson will act as chief opposition financial critic in a discussion of the new taxation and financing program announced by Finance Minister Ilsley in his budget speech last Tuesday.

The agriculture debate started before the Easter recess when Mark Senn (Con. Haldimand) proposed a want-of-confidence motion by way of amendment to the government motion to resolve the House in committee of supply. While Mr. Senn dealt with farm conditions generally, western members turned the discussion largely into a discussion of the wheat situation.

The C.C.F. amendment concentrated attention on this phase of the farm problem by expressing disapproval of the government's 1941 wheat program. It put forward the six-point program endorsed by the Saskatchewan Legislature as an alternative.

That program included an initial wheat price of 85 cents against the government's announcement of a 70-cent price, and called for a processing tax of 50 cents a bushel on wheat milled in Canada for domestic consumption, against the present tax of 15 cents, proceeds to be added to the initial 85-cent price.

Harry Leader (Lib. Portage La Prairie), an outspoken critic of the government's policy, voted with the C.C.F. group on this issue, as did all new democracy members and a majority of Conservatives. Five Conservatives, J. S. Roy of Gaspe, Percy Black of Cumberland, George Black of Yukon, King Hazen of Saint John-Albert and Harry Jackman of Toronto-Rosedale voted against it with the Liberal following.

Refrained From Voting

The main Conservative motion drew united support of all Opposition groups. Mr. Leader refrained from voting.

In announcing his support of the C.C.F. amendment, Mr. Hanson said he was at first disturbed lest a 50-cent wheat processing tax should increase the price of bread but on inquiry had been informed wheat was a small factor in the price of bread and the proposed tax need not force up bread prices.

As the sitting ended Mr. Hanson gave notice he would demand that Trade Minister MacKinnon give details of the Canadian Wheat Board's operations, its holdings of wheat and the prices at which it was selling.

Would Not Give Price

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said he would ask the Chairman to rule out discussion while an agriculture estimate was under consideration of a matter that was entirely within jurisdiction of Mr. MacKinnon's Department.

Earlier E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle) pressed Trade Minister MacKinnon for the prices at which wheat is being sold to Great Britain and said his information was that no wheat was being sold for less than 80 cents a bushel.

Mr. MacKinnon said the British Government was unwilling to make public the price and the Canadian government proposed to stand by that decision.

Mr. Perley contended that if the Wreat Board was selling wheat, for more than 80 cents a buhel it could pay the farmers 85 cents without suffering a loss.

The Saskatchewan member, a wheat farmer himself, described the operation of grain elevators under present conditions as a "racket" and said some elevators were earning 80 per cent on their capital.

"I say this government should take over this whole thing (operation of elevators) for the duration of the war and they will save $40,000,000 which can be added to the price paid to the farmers," he said.

Stand Endorsed

Mr. Leader said that during the parliamentary recess he held meetings of farmers in his constituency. They had endorsed his stand against the government's wheat policy and asked a minimum price of 85 cents a bushel on wheat in excess of the quotas and forego acreage bonuses for reducing wheat acreage.

He said his vote on C.C.F. amendment "must be against the government" and against what "must be considered a ghastly piece of legislation."

J. A. Bradette, (Lib. Cochrane) said no person could legitimately object to members moving a want of confidence motion but, now that there has been a general debate, he suggested the position should not demand a recorded vote.

Criticism of the government's agriculture policies came from L. E. Cardiff, Conservative-North Huron who declared the Agriculture Minister, Hon. J. G. Gardiner, had lost the confidence of the farm community.

It was apparent from the small attendance of Liberals for the farm debate, that agriculture could expect little from the administration, he said. He feared that government farm policies would create more disunity than any other circumstance associated with the war effort.

C. N. R. Constable Donates Auction Sale Proceeds To Fund

A rather unique, and at the same time commendable method of raising money for the British War Victims' Fund was brought to light this morning when it was learned that the proceeds of an auction sale, minus the expenses, and which was held at a Foster Ave. address on Wednesday were turned over for this charitable purpose.

The principal of the case was Mr. Fred Chapman, former chief constable for the Canadian National Railways at the Belleville yards and who recently accepted another position with the same company at a western point. Prior to his removal to Toronto, Mr. Chapman offered the major part of his household furnishings for auction and with Belleville residents entering into the spirit of the occasion, an amount of approximately $400 was raised for the British War Victims' Fund.

Police Searching Driver Of Car

Pembroke, Ont., May 2 (CP) — Police were searching today for the driver of an automobile alleged to have struck and seriously injured two soldiers near Petawawa military camp early yesterday after discovery of an abandoned automobile.

Provincial Constable E. V. McNeill of Pembroke said last night that paint marks on the clothing of the soldiers, Spr. Alfred Goulin and Spr. A. Violette, corresponded with that of the abandoned car.

The car owned by an officer at the camp, was reported stolen Wednesday night.

The Day in Parliament

(By The Canadian Press)

TODAY

The House will consider Agriculture Minister Gardiner's $36,000,000 estimate to finance the government's 1941 wheat policy.

The Senate stands adjourned until May 13.

YESTERDAY

The House defeated by 123 votes to 44 a Conservative want of confidence motion based on Canadian agricultural conditions voted down 134 to 40 a C.C.F. amendment to that motion urging adoption of a six-point wheat program endorsed last February by the Saskatchewan Legislature; went into committee on the $36,000,000 wheat estimate.

The Senate did not sit.

Col. T. A. Kidd Claims Country's War Effort Lagging

Saint John, N.B., May 2 (CP)—Criticism of Canada's war effort was made here last night in address by Lt.-Col. The Hon. T. Ashmore Kidd, Kingston, Ont., Supreme Grand Master and Sovereign of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America and Loftus H. Reid, Toronto Grand Secretary of the Order. They spoke at a banquet for New Brunswick members of the Order meeting in annual convention here.

Col. Kidd, claiming the country's war efforts is lagging advocated conscription "in full" and declared the previous 30-day and present four-month army training plans, were nothing more than "money down the sewer."

He referred to Newfoundland as "one of the most loyal sections of the Empire" and said that under the present system of compulsory training Canada could not send her "draftees" to help the colony if it were attacked, because 'they are retained for defence of Canada only."

The Orange Order felt that Canada's leaders must speed up the war effort if "traditions handed down by our ancentors" were to be maintained, he said.

Mr. Reid said Canada "is only playing at war, is only playing at politics and this playing must cease if Canada and the Empire is to emerge victorious."

The Orange Order had advocated conscription of the country's manpower and all other resources since 1939. "Taxation is not voluntary, why should defence of the country be voluntary?" he asked.

Some factories in Canada are working only eight hours a day when they should be working 24, asserted Mr. Reid. "The government has got to quit playing and go to work."

Another speaker was James Black, Winnipeg Grand Master of the Grand Black Chapter.

Operator Charged After One Killed

Toronto, May 2 (CP)— William J. O'Brien, 76, suffered fatal injuries and nine other persons were hurt when a Toronto street car ran through an open switch early today. A. Barker, operator of the car, was charged with driving negligently and causing grievous bodily injuries.

Police said that a preceding car had turned up Lansdowne Avenue leaving the switch at the Bloor Street intersection open. When the car operated by Barker ran into the switch, passengers were flung to the front end of the car and several persons were thrown out.

Vivien Leigh (Scarlet O'Hara) and Laurence Olivier, hero of "Rebecca," enact a stirring love story in "That Hamilton Woman," coming to the Belle Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"Come Live With Me"

A high spot in motion picture entertainment is now at the Belle Theatre, where "Come Live With Me" co-starring James Stewart and Hedy Lamarr, closes its engagement tonight. No happier combination could possibly have been found than the conservative and bashful Stewart plus the glamorous Lamarr in a story tailor-made for both of them.

Pete Smith's "3rd Dimensional Murder", a new metrscopix thrill sensation, the latest March of Time and an unusual and entertaining screen miniature complete the program.

"That Hamilton Woman!"

In launching "That Hamilton Woman!" his first Hollywood production and his most ambitious picture to date, Alexander Korda selected Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier—the most glamorous couple in the world—to play the stellar roles in this great romance. "That Hamilton Woman!" which is slated for its premier at the Belle Theatre tomorrow unfolds on the silver screen one of the most stirring and unforgettable love stories of all time, the romance of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson.

Briefly, the story of "That Hamilton Woman!" concerns the spectacular career of Lady Emma Hamilton, wife of Sir William Hamilton, who came into this world as the daughter of a blacksmith Her rise to prominence in Neapolitan society began with a profitable deal between the bankrupt Charles Greville and his uncle, Sir William. For ceding his sweetheart, then Emma Hart, to his uncle, Greville received funds to pay off his debts. Although the lady at first resented the exchange, her instinct for power and luxury told her that it was probably the chance of a lifetime.

Outstanding Cast

Vivien Leigh is, of course, the fascinating Lady Hamilton, whose captivating beauty was idealized on canvas forty times by the great portrait painter, Romney; Laurence Olivier is seen in the role of Lord Nelson, the hero of Trafalgar; Gladys Cooper is Lady Nelson; Henry Wilcoxon is Captain Hardy and hundreds of others fill the unusually large cast; Miss Leigh is Emma, wears forty-two costumes, designed for her by the noted French couturier, Rene Hubert, most of them copied from the Romney and Gainsborough paintings of the famous beauty.

"Golden Eggs" is the title of a funny Walt Disney color cartoon to be presented on the same program with the Belle latest World Events. On Saturday matinee the Dead End Kids appear in a new chapter of the year's best serial, "Junior G-Men."

A continuous show is presented at the Belle every Saturday.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Adam Had Four Sons"

A lot can happen in one generation, laughter and tears, birth and death, and love. A panorama of life and a lifetime of drama, of hate and riches, poverty and war and peace; and, in this stirring background of a changing world, Columbia's "Adam Had Four Sons" tells the dramatic history of a colorful family, a saga so adroitly told that it rightly had won the critical acclaim of all of Hollywood, so moving and so powerful that it easily becomes one of the most entertaining films of the year.

Based upon "Legacy," Charles Bonner's best-seller, "Adam Had Four Sons" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with Ingrid Bergman and Warner Baxter starred, and a wealth of brilliant character players lending them intrinsically valuable support.

The story of five attractive men—four devil-may-care sons and their patient, understanding father—and of two women ready to destroy each other in order to win them, "Adam Had Four Sons" is a romantic, breath-taking beautiful story told with intimate, burning reality under the direction of Gregory Ratoff.

Baxter is seen as the father who almost fails in his trust; Miss Bergman is cast as the governess who acted as mother of another woman's children, who fought for their lives and their happiness with every weapon at her command. Susan Hayward is the sultry-eyed newcomer to the screen, portrays a modern Scarlett O'Hara, the daughter-in-law whose reckless kisses ruthlessly destroy a home. Fay Wray is seen as the mother whose death, while her children are infants, precipitates the tense drama which is "Adam Had Four Sons."

Helen Westley, as the understanding aunt who joins Miss Bergman in their fight to keep secure the happiness of their loved ones, Richard Denning, Johnny Downs, Robert Shaw and Charles Lind, as the sons, are of splendid assistance to the stars in bringing to the screen a production that is stirring to the bottom of its heart, a true and memorable picture of family life.

Mr. Bonner's novel was adapted to the screen by William Hurlburt and Michael Blankfort, who have captured in thrilling fashion the scenes of unforgettable romance, of struggle and of victory which made "Legacy" one of the mightiest stories of the human heart ever to win best-selling honors.

Frankie Darro and Marjorie Reynolds in a light musical comedy hit entitled "Up In the Air", also the first chapter of "The Green Archer", an Edgar Wallace story, and an excellent technicolor cartoon in addition to "Adam Had Four Sons" make this a show you'll thoroughly enjoy. The program is to run continuously Saturday.

Domestic Wines Advance In Price

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—Price increases on domestic wines ranging from 25 to 30 cents a gallon were effective today following a meeting of the Ontario Liquor Control Board with representatives of wineries in the provinces. The effect of the new Dominion budget on the price of wine was discussed.

Prices for 26-ounce bottles are up five cents, 40-ounce bottles, up 10 cents, and gallon jugs up 25 to 50 cents depending on quality.

HEROIC FIGHT

Yugoslav airmen put up a heroic fight against the Nazi invasion according to the British Broadcasting Corporation which reports that the force which counted only 100 uptodate fighter aircraft in the entire force, made a valiant attempt to save their country and during the first day of fighting over Belgrade shot down fifty German aircraft. The next day their guns took a toll of fifty more Huns.

At last the climax came with only three Yugoslav planes and thirty airmen left. Yet these fliers took on a formation of forty Italian bombers and shot down nine of them.

This heroic little band of airmen again proves the superiority of the democratic spirit. Here was the Yugoslav performing deeds of glory shooting down Huns and Italians.

But there was no glory for the Huns and the Fascists in attacking the nation whose only wish was to remain free and to determine their own way of life.

A SHIP-BUILDING NATION

Canada is developing as a nation of ship-builders. She has built large freighters and corvettes for war service and now will build large vessels for the United States. This building of ships for the United States will do much to help the exchange situation.

The Dominion of Canada has oceans to east and west and her shores on the north are on the Arctic Ocean. Canada is on the highways of world travel and transportation by sea, rail and air. To the east across the ocean is the continent of Europe and to the west lie the riches of China and the Orient, India, the Dominions of Australia and New Zealand in the South Pacific. Canada must be a great trading nation and hence a ship-building nation. Nature has destined her for this honor. And she has fortunately had the example of Britain in world trade. Canada has been one of the chief exporters of the world.

ATHENS AND HITLER

There is one man in this world who cannot understand what Greece and the type of democracy it gave to the world mean—that man is Adolf Hitler, ignorant of everything noble and refined, the man who has forced the world into war and has overridden the glorious traditions of noble races in Europe without any compunction or feeling, because he has none. It might be interesting to dissect the mind of this dictator and find what caused this dictator figure to come as a blight upon the world, for he is lacking in every quality which civilization claims and respects.

Without any shame—for he has none—under his authority the Nazi emblem is raised over that glorious hill of the Acropolis in Athens where was the centre of the life of Athens and the Greek world. Where the great philosophers walked and spoke and taught their noble philosophy, the savage sounds of the Hun can now be heard. Where the human mind reached the proud pinnacle of supreme greatness and where there were beauty of form, the rich harmonies of the Greek tragedies, teaching the great lessons of life on the stage, and Greek serenity there have come the brutality of the Nazi and the sight of the dull Hun soldier, whose mind has been mechanized and hardened into almost the rigidity of the robot, along with the lust for violence and destruction.

Athens knew conquerors in the past. And she rose again.

It pleases Britons to know that Britain has been associated with the revival of freedom in Greece won over a century ago and that she has been at the side of the Greeks in these past months and that these two great democracratic peoples will together join in victory over the Hun. The Greeks in farewell to the evacuating British said they would soon see the British again under the auspices of victory. In that day there will be no trace of the Hun Hitler on Grecian soil.

Two million tons of shipping will be assembled forthwith in the United States for the task of carrying vital war supplies to Great Britain.

The United Maritime Commission now will place fifty tankers at the service of Britain in a few days.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

News Item:—Fisherman in Tenessee claims he caught a five-pounder that actually made sounds with its mouth when being taken from the water.

Ole Pete the Pike flipped a lazy tail as he lay in the warm water near the edge of the creek. He thumbed his pal, Mike the Trout, as he sped by hard on the trail of Minnie the Minnow. Mike shoved his left dorsal fin over to starboard, and glided to a stop beneath Pete's water-lily awning.

"What's the matter, yuh big lug," he growled, "can't yuh see I'm keepin' a date. That dame has stood me up so many times I feel like Grandpap Speckle, who now decorates a board in an uptown poolroom. She must think I'm a sucker."

"Pipe down, yuh little fresh water runt," comes back Pete. "Yuh needn't get hot under the collar. Save that till yuh keep that date with a fryin' pan. I just wanted to warn yuh that yesterday the humans declared open season on yuh and if yuh don't watch your diet you'll be a dead pigeon."

"Within the next few days there'll be more bait dangled in front of your nose than a chorus gal sees in seven springtimes. You're a handsome youngster and you've got more speckles than a dogfish with the measles, but I wouldn't want to see yuh bite off something yuh can't chew."

"Listen, frogmouth," comes back Mike, "you ain't so hot yourself. Remember last winter when some of those ice-fishin' guys dug a hole in the ice and lowered a hook draped with perch-eyes. What didja do. You gulped 'em down like a thirsty hobo guzzles his first draft and the only thing that saved yuh was the fact that the hook was rusty. It broke off, and brother, yuh came down faster than a scuttled Heinie freighter."

But Pete was unperturbed. He made a slow lunge at a passing minnow, cocked a wise old eye at the youngster and remarked. "Listen, me trouty young lad, it might surprise yuh to know that I make a study of the human being—have done so since I was no bigger than a finger. When you're married and got a couple of aquariums like me, yuh get kinda wise. Yuh want a night out with the boys and have got to figger out an excuse, and believe me, yuh can't get a better education along those lines than listenin' to a couple of these humans when they take time out from a Saturday afternoon sail down the bay to do a little fishin'."

"You've got a swelled head now, Mike," the old pike said, "but you, or any of us as far as that is concerned, never attain the size and importance we think we have until one of those humans have us hooked. And the further from home they are the bigger you get before they chuck you in an ice-box to await the fryin' pan."

"My twin brother, Bill, got crazy last summer and went for a worm which was doin' a hoochy-koochy under his nose. Bill weighed 4 pounds, but I heard 'em talkin' the next Saturday about him ,and by the time they got home, Bill was a runner-up to that whale guy which swallowed some bird by the name of Jonah."

"I remember," continued Pete, "my old granpappy told me a story once of how he and some of his pals trailed a boat for hours up the bay. The humans had no luck and one with skirts on got so mad she threw the lunch-box overboard. They all made a dash for it and found it filled with sandwiches made from some of the boys belonging to Brotherhood No. 61, 2nd Salmon School, B.C. Grandpap was considered a witty guy in those days, so when they weren't looking he grabs the basket, swims to the surface and puts it back in the boat with a note which read: 'Next time make 'em ham, whatinell do you think we are, cannibals?' "

Suddenly he cocked his eye toward the surface. "Look out, Mike," he whispered. "There's a pretty gal in that boat up there —and here comes the bait. Hey, lay off you dizzy son-of-a-trout. I know it's pretty but stay away or you'll be somebody's breakfast. Watch out. for those pretty humans with skirts on. They'll dangle the bait in front of you, tell you you're the biggest fish in the pond and the next thing you know they've gotcha hooked. Then they'll probably throw yuh back in the water after a while, and start fishin' again. So go ahead and chase your girlfriends but see that no strings are attached to what they offer.

There'd be no need for courage, no cause to set things right.
The desert sands are sunny,
where seldom falls the rain,
But beauty worth the having is grown by toil and pain.

No way to pride through pleasure! No gate to strength through ease!
Strict is the code of honor; life gives no cheap degrees.

Knowledge is gained by study, patience and strength of will,
And hours of tedious practice.
All these are paid for skill.

Would you be more than clever

You can be if your spirit is only

You must supply the patience,
the will to work and wait,
For these alone, young fellow,
can make you truly great.

Action At Tobruk Prelude To Decisive Battle

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 2—(AP)—New crises for Britain in both North Africa and oil-rich Iraq, 1,000 miles or more eastward, are developing almost before the smoke of the lost Battle of the Balkans has cleared away.

In Iraq there is friction over the landing of additional British troops at Basra. Just how serious this may be is not yet clear. But renewal of the Axis assault on the Tobruk outpost in Libya hints that a decisive battle must come soon on the North African front.

Tobruk in the hands of the British forces has been a potential thorn in the flesh of Axis troops in their drive toward the Suez Canal. As this was written its fate was still uncertain. Its outer defences had been penetrated by Nazi-Fascist attacks, but the fight was still on.

Another British evacuation there seemed possible even before the all-but-miraculous escape from Greece was completed. Surrounded except by sea, Empire forces at Tobruk have already held out longer than appeared possible.

Tobruk has already largely served its purpose if the British rearguard stand there has enabled the scattered Army of the Nile to reassemble in force eastward, beyond the Libyan-Egyptian border, for a final stand.

Its retention is not essential to British defense of the Suez Canal or that flank. Its reduction by the held-up Axis Libyan drive is vital, if the push into Egypt is to be driven home effectively.

Prelude to Drive?

That is the probable chief significance of the heavy Axis attack on the besieged Tobruk garrison. The battle there must be intended by the Nazis to be a prelude to renewal in force of the thrust that by-passed Tobruk and has reinvaded Egypt.

Available information on the situation in Iraq indicates that something of greater consequence for Britain than debate over treaty terms is involved. Britain's right to move troops through Iraq is not challenged by the Axis-minded Gailani regime which has seized power there, but has not yet shown open hostility. What is reported to be the actual basis of the new friction is a British demand that units of the Iraq Army stationed close to the huge British air base at Dhibban (near Lake Habbaniyah) be withdrawn to avoid "incidents."

That British air base at the junction of bus routes spanning vast stretches of desert to Mediterranean outlets and overlooking even more essential pipe lines is the key to Britain's hold in the region. It has kept the roads open and oil flowing as Britain willed despite restless desert tribesmen.

The strength of British forces there has not been revealed, but Iraq is credited with an army of 50,000 men dominated by the military clique which put one of its number, Gailani, in power. The admitted leaning of Gailani and his group toward the Nazi-Fascist Axis due to Axis victories is a grave matter for London.

No Kid-Glove Tactics

There have been direct official hints in Parliament that it would not be handled with kid gloves. That may account for the present uncertain situation in Iraq.

Yet to meet whatever danger there may be an actual uprising against Britain by the Iraq Army or among the tribesmen of the deserts who could menace British communications and oil resources a decisive British military victory in North Africa might be more effective than additional troops sent to or through Iraq. The effect of a victorious pitched battle in Egypt to end the most dangerous Axis stab at British prestige and power in the Middle East must be weighed by London and Cairo in reaching a decision as to where and when to stand in North Africa.

They cannot much longer risk a retreat strategy on that front. The Axis attack on Tobruk whatever its outcome, could be the prelude to the most decisive battle yet fought in the Mediterranean struggle.

Airplanes carried about 25 per cent more passengers and 32 per cent more express shipments to and from Cuba last year than in 1939.

Does America Want Peace?

New York, May 2—The thesis of this column has been, since the beginning of hostilities in Europe, that this is a world war, and that the defeat of Britain, by "peace" if possible, by war if necessary.

This viewpoint has now been completely justified and set forth in proposed Japanese plans for a "negotiated" peace. Twelve points are presented by the Japan Times Advertiser as a peace basis. The newspaper is an organ of the Japanese Foreign Office, and recalls Foreign Minister Matsuoka's recent proposal that Japan offer her good offices to mediate peace. The proposals appear along with the suggestion that Mr. Matsuoka come to America and induce President Roosevelt to join Japan in an attempt to mediate the war.

The terms proposed as a basis for negotiation make clear the minimum demands in case of an Axis victory. They also clearly represent the present war situation as a condition of victory, should an armistice be sought.

Terms Destroy Empire

The terms leave the British Empire and Commonwealth merely a name. They utterly destroy it as a power. India and South Africa are to be given independence. Under the present power conditions of the world and other provisions of the "peace," this simply means that both would immediately be gobbled up. Australia is to be opened to Japanese immigration, which means that in a very few years it would be colonized by the Japanese, and, being incapable of defending itself under other provisions of the proposed peace, would belong to Japan.

All Western and Eastern bases of the British Empire—Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, Red Sea, Singapore, Hong Kong—are to be demilitarized, and therefore rendered open to capture. The Dutch East Indies and French Indo-China are to be made independent under Japanese economic control.

The seat of authority of the British Empire — which, under these terms, will be de facto completely liquidated — is to be transferred "gradually" to Canada.

Predicted Long Ago

Germany is to organize the entire continent as one corporate State, with its capital in Berlin. Translated into terms of reality, this means that nationality in Europe, except for the fact of language and local administration, is to be abolished. The entire complex is to be organized as a huge vertical trust in which the executives, directors and majority stockholders will be the German Nazi Party. To this are to be attached the colonial resources of the whole of Africa . . . for an "independent" South Africa vis-a-vis such a complex would be more helpless than Czecho-Slovakia or Poland.

If the Americans were completely ignored in any such "peace," this country would be isolated, completely surrounded and helpless. But we are not ignored. Senator Wheeler may think this is "just another European war," but Hitler and Matsuoka happen to disagree with him.

The "peace" terms apparently concede that the British Fleet would escape to Canada and they regard the Anglo-American Fleet as one. The one place where the United States and Britain are superior to the Axis is in naval power. We are to agree to cease building any more naval ships until the Axis—Germany and Japan—attain parity. After that, we declare a "naval holiday."

We are to give up all naval bases west of Hawaii and to 'reduce that stronghold in importance."

The United States is to agree "not to form a hegemony in South America" and "accord the fullest freedom and equality of opportunity to Germany and her allies in that 'continental brotherhood.'" This means that we are to agree to the fullest political, economic and ideological penetration of all sorts in Latin America.

Ultimatum to United States

These peace terms are an ultimatum to the United States. They pen up Britain and America together on the North American Continent, completely encircled, and utterly powerless to take an offensive. They mean the mastery of the globe by Germany and Japan.

Senator Wheeler has advocated a "negotiated" peace, and recently in Chicago recommended a boycott of all who are opposing him, among them this columnist. I should like to ask the Senator a candid question: Would he be willing to sit down at a conference table and bargain on such a basis? Would Colonel Lindbergh? Would General Wood?

How long is the United States going to wait before taking the initiative that is the only possible answer of a great nation to such proposals? How weak and divided must the Axis powers believe us to be that they have the effrontery to make public such proposals? What would be the answer of any individual American citizen to such proposals? And is not the answer of the nation the sum of the answers of its people?

"If I should think that any power or group of powers planned to dominate the world, I should think they must be resisted," said Neville Chamberlain, reluctantly, and at long last, acknowledging the facts that confronted Great Britain.

How long will America take fully to recognize the facts of the twentieth century?

SELF-STYLED GESTAPO AGENT

Bruno Johannes Valianski, self-styled agent of the dread Nazi "Gestapo" secret police, is shown at Ellis island where he was questioned. Valianski was arrested April 1 in connection with a small theft at Riverhead, Long Island. Questioning at that time revealed that he was an alien illegally in the U.S. Under questioning he unfolded a lurid tale of his service as an alleged agent of the "Gestapo" and revealed Swastika scar brand on his arm.

SAND IN WAR AND PEACE

Military experts say that the troops who know the most about sand have the best chance of winning in North Africa.

A thorough knowledge of sand dunes, sand drifts, sand formations and the effect of sand on machinery is required for the successful operation of mechanized forces in desert regions.

Probably few people fully appreciate the important part that sand plays in our daily lives.

Sand is essential to the national defence program and its uses in our industrial system are numbered by the hundred.

Special sands are used for roofing, cement-testing, oil refining, treating and washing coal, welding, flooring, fluxing, making pottery, silicate of soda, fused silica, gypsum-plaster combinations, lime brick and for many laboratory, chemical and metallurgical purposes.

Sand is used in making glass and for industrial and municipal filters.

Structural sands are used in paving and building; engine sand for linings and beds; abrasive sand for grinding glass, stone and marble, for scouring, for sandblasting, for wire-sawing, for sawing stone, for polishing metals, and for making sandpaper and sand belts.

Sand is used in various paints, asphalt shingles, asbestos roofing, filler in rubber and paper, porcelain and tile glaze, quartz wood filler, battery boxes, enamelers' flint, scouring powders and pastes, soaps and dozens of other commercial products.

Even the manufacture of explosives and other munitions require sand.

Quicksand is a bed of loose, wet sand into which heavy objects readily sink. It differs from ordinary sand in that the grains have been worn small, smooth and round by the action of water.

Singing, musical and barking sand are names given to certain sands and gravels that emit peculiar sounds when shaken, stirred with a stick, walked upon or driven over with a vehicle.

Such expressions as "the sands of time" and "the sands are running out" allude to the use of sand in hour-glasses.

To number the sands means to undertake an endless or impossible task.

A person with pluck and courage is said to have sand or grit.

MANY LANDS GIVE BRITISH BIRTH

For Census Purposes List is Made of Widespread Parts of Empire

Ottawa (CP) — From Zanzibar and Socotra, from the Solomon Islands and Grenada, from Sierra Leone and Gambia, from Basutoland and Trengganu come varied peoples with a compelling hand of unity—their British citizenship.

The census enumerators who make the rounds in Canada starting June 2 must be able to say who is entitled to be marked as a British subject, and no matter how obscure the colony or protectorate he will know its status.

One trade and commerce official reciting the list of lands which make up the British Empire said it reminded him of the roll of drums, and here it is, prepared for the use of enumerators:

Any person born within the British Empire or on board a British ship is a British subject by birth. Following are countries, colonies or other parts of the British Empire.

The United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, Irish Free State (Eire), Newfoundland (including Labrador).

India, provinces, states and agencies; Jersey, Guernsey and adjacent islands; Gibraltar, Malta, Cyprus, Gambia, Sierra Leone, Gold Coast, Nigeria, Ascension, St. Helena, Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, Bechuanaland Protectorate, Basutoland, Switzerland, Zanzibar Protectorate, Kenya, Uganda Protectorate, Nyasaland Protectorate, Somaliland Protectorate.

Mauritius, Seychelles, Aden (including Perim), Socotra, British Malaya, Straits Setlements, Federated Malay States, Unfederated Malaya, Straits Settlements, Feder-Trengganu, Kedah, Perlis.

Brunei, Ceylon, State of North Borneo, Sarawak, Hong Kong, Territory of Papua, Fiji, Gilbert and Ellice Islands, British Solomon Islands, Tongo Islands.

Bermuda, Bahamas, Barbados, Grenada, Jamaica, Cayman Islands, Turks and Caicos Islands, Leeward Islands, St. Lucia, St. Vincent, Trinidad, Tobago, British Honduras, British Guiana and Falkland Islands.

British Naval Officers To Take Over U. S. Coast Guard Cutters

Boston, May 2 (AP)— Fifty-seven British naval officers, who said they were part of a detachment being sent to the United States to take over coast guard cutters being transferred to the British government, passed through Boston Thursday, en route to New York.

A British battleship and war sloop brought them to an east coast Canadian port and they travelled thence by rail, they said.

BRITAIN GREETS CANADA'S MUSIC

Business Women's Contribution to Harmonies of England Makes Hit

Ottawa (CP)—Canada's Federation of Business and Professional Women got headlines in the London papers when the first shipment of mouthorgans and other musical instruments for the forces arrived.

"Mouth organs from Canada," "We shall have music" they read while Field-Marshal Lord Milne welcomed them enthusiastically and expressed the appreciation of the troops.

"The playing of these instruments is exhilarating and good for the soul—if not always for those who listen," he said. "It would be a mistake to worry about the listeners. After all I know men who would hate listening to an excellent performance of a Beethoven symphony as bitterly as to the worst performance of Waltzing Matilda on a mouth organ—so go ahead boys."

Brain, Eye Pierced By Pitchfork Tine

St. Johns, Que. May 2 (CP)—Her brain and eye pierced by a pitchfork tine, Mrs. Charles Gordon, 43, of nearby Lacolle, was in hospital here last night while police held Gerard Sharpe, 25-year-old neighbor, on a charge of attempted murder.

Police said Mrs. Gordon was injured during an altercation in her own home. The dispute arose between her husband and Sharpe over the trade of a horse and cow, and Mrs. Gordon was struck during the scuffle.

German Dud Bomb Sent To Deseronto As War Souvenir

Last week a number of people in Napanee and community had the privilege of seeing a German incendiary bomb, such as is being used in the Nazi raids in England. The bomb, a dud, was sent to a woman in Deseronto by her son, who is now in England. The cap of the bomb had been removed but the part remaining was about two feet long and a trifle larger around than a spade handle. It was made of aluminum and was said to have been filled with magnesium, which starts to burn after the bomb strikes and melts the aluminum case, spilling out the burning contents on whatever the bomb happens to land. There was very little weight to the bomb, and consequently hundreds of them could be carried by a plane.

May Equip Planes To Fight

London, May 2 (CP)— Because the crews flying aircraft across the Atlantic frequently spot German submarines, the Ministry of Aircraft Production may consider equipping the service to fight.

These big bombers and flying boats travel from Newfoundland to Britain in eight hours and 45 minutes.

It is reported that several ships have been saved from torpedo attack merely by these unarmed planes roaring down on half-submerged U-boats and causing them to crash dive.

DIGESTION IMPROVED
Complexion Cleared Up

Happy Woman's Story

Everyone who is subject to any form of indigestion should know of this woman's experiences. Advice from one who has had such severe attacks is advice worth having. She writes:—

"I suffered from indigestion, gastritis and constipation, and was so very ill, I had (on medical advice) to live on soda biscuits and milk for three months. Well, a friend advised me to take Kruschen, and now I am pleased to say I am greatly improved. I can eat and enjoy a good meal without any painful after-effects, my skin is clearer—in fact, quite clear—and there is no sign of constipation. I would advise anyone suffering the same to take Kruschen."

—(Mrs.) M. R. L.

The immediate effect of the several salts in Kruschen is to stimulate your liver and kidneys to normal action and help to free your system of poisonous waste matter. Soon after you start on Kruschen you will find that you are able to enjoy your food without distressing after-effects.

A MESSAGE TO WORKERS FROM A WORKER

Right Honourable ERNEST BEVIN

"It's a sensible thing to do," said Britain's great labour leader, in his broadcast to Canadian workers, in support of War Savings Certificates . . . "a great double-barreled weapon which helps to bring victory now and prosperity at the end. The greater the willingness which people show in placing their surplus cash, large and small, to support war effort, the greater is their faith in ultimate victory. We know that if we slacken production for a minute we are prolonging the war."

Urgent Appeal To Save Wild Flowers

All over Canada the apeal to save the remaining wild flowers of the country has again been made by the various Horticultural Associations of the Dominion. Some of Canada's most beautiful wild flowers have disappeared forever and the species that remain are in danger of the same fate. The appeal to all Canadians is emphasized by the Provincial Horticultural Associations, and in the case of Ontario special stress is made by the Ontario Association with reference to the saving of the White Trillium, the floral emblem of the province which is in grave danger of extinction. The appeal is directed against the reckless plucking of wild flowers. The preservation of wild flowers does not mean that no one is ever to pick any of them but the appeal does emphasize the necessity of a little thought on the part of the picker.

Some of Canada's wild flowers should not be picked at all because through doing so they will eventually become extinct. In this category of wild flowers which should better be left alone in all their native beauty is the White Trillium. The Trillium like others of its kind, cannot be picked without removing all the foliage upon which depends the maturing of the bulbous root for the following season's crop of flowers. Far better than picking, is to transfer the entire plant to some quiet nook or in the garden. There are many little spots in busy cities where the White Trillium or other wild flowers could flourish, and in this way, in Ontario at least, the emblem flower would be saved from being a name in history only but, instead, present ever-living evidence of the beauty of the province.

Other species of wild flowers, like violets and hepaticas, whose flower stems rise directly from the roots, may be picked at will, provided the body of the plant is left undisturbed.

Tearing up a plant by the roots to gain a bloom is wanton destruction and should be condemned by all who believe in the present system of civilization.

There are many other agencies at work in the disappearance of wild flowers. Birds which pick the seed, the woodman's axe, clearing and cultivating farm lands, building up cities, close grazing of fields and woodlands, forest fires, and soil erosion have all been responsible for the gradual destruction of much of the natural floral beauty of Canada.

BLAME HUSBANDS AS TO SLACKERS

Prejudice in Middle-Class Families Against Wartime Work is Alleged

London (CP)—Accusing husbands as being responsible for part of the shortage of women labor because they object to their wives and daughters working, British women members of parliament and women's organizations asked Labor Minister Bevin for action.

Mr. Bevin is considering an appeal to husbands. Dr. Edith Summerskill, M.P. made scathing remarks in public meetings as well as in the House to the effect that this "is not so much a reflection on their manhood as on their patriotism."

A woman executive in the Labor Ministry says this prejudice is to be found chiefly among middle-class families in the Midlands and the North. "Often wives and daughters take the same attitude and look down on women who go to work, whatever the work may be," she said. "One would say this point of view had gone out 40 years ago with bustles and hobble-skirts, if we did not know the facts."

Under the registration ruling women in England called up for service are, if they object to the work to which they are directed, free to go to an Appeal Board with an independent chairman and a woman member. "But women will be obliged to abide by the decision of the board," Mr. Bevin has warned.

Women to be called up will be first picked from among those least usefully occupied. Women with concientious objections to working in munition factories will be enrolled in the land army or nursing services.

Miss Megan Lloyd George suggested there were "more shirkers and slackers than we care to admit. Some of these women want either a 'cushy' job or none at all."

Asks Catholics to Support Loan

Quebec, May 2 (CP)— Cardinal Villeneuve appealed yesterday to Roman Catholics to help bring about quick victory by lending their full support to the Dominion government's "victory loan" opening June 2.

In an official communique, the Cardinal urged the press to encourage local committees and recommended loan organizers to the hospitality of Catholic cures throughout his Archdiocese.

Girls' Banquet At O. S. D. Proves An Enjoyable Affair

Awards Made to Student Athletes for Various Events in School Year

INSTRUCTOR HONORED

Honoring the captains and members of winning teams, and the school's Girl Guide Company, the annual girls' banquet at the Ontario School for the Deaf was a fine success last evening. The auditorium was artistically decorated in red, white and blue with flags grouped on the platform and the tables carrying out the patriotic color scheme. Red white and blue candles in silver holders and streamers and flags in clever John Bull holders, designed by Mr. Vaughan, gave the tables a very attractive air. Eighty girls were present at the banquet with their teachers and guests.

A cordial welcome was extended to those present by Mr. W. J. Morrison, principal. "The banquet," he said, "completed the year of games during which the girls had become skilled in skating, baseball, volley ball, badminton and are now learning basketball." Organized sports were begun for the girls under the direction of Miss Keeler, later by Miss Connell, Miss Maloney and now Miss Watt will have charge. The Girl Guide work is being splendidly carried on, and although it presents some difficulties outside the city, the girls are enjoying the work and are progressing under Miss Keeler's supervision. These activities would all aid the girls to make friends after leaving school. The banquet had been arranged under the direction of Miss Watt and Miss Keeler, with the delicious menu being the work of the matron, Mrs. McCluggage.

An Annual Affair

The banquet is an annual affair, the first for some of the junior girls, the last for those who will graduate this term. Mr. Morrison hoped that next year the shadow of war might be lightened and the banquet be held in circumstances more cheerful.

Mr. George F. Stewart and Mr. F. Cunningham acted as interpreters of addresses, finger spelling the words of the speakers for the pupil. Mr. Alec Gordon led in the singing of the National Anthem following which Mr. Morrison introduced the guests of the evening.

Tabs were presented by the Superintendent to the members of winning teams and the reply to his words of congratulation was made by Mary J. Yurek, representing the captains of the winning teams. Miss Yurek gave a gracious speech referring to the pleasure the girls had taken in their games and expressing thanks to Miss Maloney and Miss Watt for their work in teaching them to play the different games. The captains of the winning teams are as follows:

Intermediate Softball — Eileen Barratt.
Intermediate Rounders — Joyce Brohm.
Intermediate Volley Ball—Roma Johnston.
Intermediate Badminton—Betty Bergeron, Donna Latawiecz.
Intermediate Table Tennis—Donna Latawiecz.
Intermediate Shuffle Board — Donna Latawiecz.
Senior Softball—Phyllis Thompson.
Senior Volley Ball—Mary Yurek.
Senior Table Tennis — Mary Churchill.
Senior Shuffle Board — Lucille Bourdeau.
Senior Badminton (a) — Jessie Auld, Phyllis Thompson.
Senior Badminton (b) — Norma Alstrop, Roberta MacDonald.
Senior Rounders—Vivian Richardson.

The fine, healthy appearance of the girls who had come forward to take their awards was evidence not only of the excellent supervision of the school doctor and nurse but of the beneficial results of their recreation schedule.

Greetings Extended

Mrs. Leo B. Riggs, district commissioner of the Girl Guides, who with Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, deputy commissioner, was a guest at the banquet, brought greetings from Belleville Girls Guides. Girl Guide work is not possible in any country but a democracy as it was founded on democratic principles and all activities carry out the democratic spirit. She spoke of her pleasure at being present at the banquet to which she looked forward with keen anticipation each year.

Miss Catherine Ford who, as Mr. Morrison pointed out, more than anyone else watched over and took care of the boys and girls from the moment they first came to school, spoke of the pride with which their teachers looked upon such a happy, healthy and bright looking group of girls. The fact that they were members of a winning team showed that they had learned how to be good sports and to do their particular small part of work on the team well. Never in the history of the world has it been so important for each one to do their special work well and bravely. If they remembered the lessons of good sportsmanship and of Guiding they would always be the fine girls their teachers know them to be.

Miss Helen Keeler who has introduced and fostered the Girl Guide movement in the school, taking it on as an extra activity was called upon. As captain of the Fourth Belleville Extension Company, which has the honor of being the only deaf company in the province, she had stressed the ethical and social work at Guide meetings, the badge work being beautifully carried out by the teachers. Miss Keeler referred to the work of Miss C. Maloney who has been sports director for two years and on behalf of the girls presented her with a gift in remembrance of her kindness as their leader.

Miss Maloney charmingly thanked the girls for their lovely gift and spoke of the pleasure it had given her to work with the girls whose fine spirit of sportsmanship and co-operation had made her tasks easy. Under Miss Watt she was sure the girls would advance in sports, especially basketball of which Miss Watt is an expert player. She counselled the girls to remember their Guide laws in all their future undertakings.

Mr. Morrison in introducing Miss Evelyn Watt announced that Miss Maloney is now a teacher of language in the senior school after teaching sports to the girls for two years during which she introduced many new games at which they had become most proficient.

Miss Watt in her address thanked Miss Keeler and all those who had given such fine assistance in making the banquet a success. She expressed appreciation to Miss Maloney and the girls for making her first weeks' on the staff so pleasant.

ST. JULIEN CHAPTER TO HOLD TAG DAY

Queen Alexandra annual Rose Tag Day, through which the I.O.D.E. raises funds to help carry on its extensive undertakings, will be held in Belleville Saturday by St. Julien Chapter of the Order. Great demands have been made on the resources of the Order, each Chapter having been [illegible] a certain task, in the wartime program of the organization. Belleville public has ever been generous in support of the St. Julien Chapter work, showing by their contributions and co-operation their admiration of the Chapter's activities. It is hoped that the same generous response will be accorded taggers tomorrow.

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER VI

The week that followed stretched interminably. Full of resolve to learn the pattern of her mother's life, Devona found it impossible to emulate the lovely Vara when she had only fleeting glimpses of her. Difficult even to know where and how to begin to please her temperamental mother.

But Vara seemed never to be alone. Between rehearsals and conferences with advertising managers or servants, and the steady stream of guests that swarmed to the spacious hacienda at luncheon and cocktail and dinner hours, Vara simply was never free.

Only once did Devona muster courage to tap lightly at Vara's door. It was late in the morning, and Devona had just come in from her swim. Wong was just taking in Vara's breakfast tray. Surely, Devona thought, dressing quickly, Vara wouldn't be too busy now. On impulse, she knotted a ribbon around still-wet curls, brushed a powder puff across her nose and slipped across the hall to Vara's room.

Devona Visits Her Mother

Trembling, Devona pushed open the door. Lovely as some fragile bit of Dresden in champagne satin negligee, Vara sat bolstered by mounds of lacy pillows, her blond head against the padded, satin head-board of her Louis Quatorze bed, sipping her coffee and flicking through the stack of letters on the bed-table tray.

For a moment, Devona stood admiring the exquisite picture her mother made. She was so lovely to look at. Even the tired circles under her eyes were becoming and the faint pallor of her face gave her a sort of delicate unrealness.

Vara glanced up from the letter she was reading. "Oh, it's you. Come in. I'll ring for more coffee."

"Please don't bother. I had breakfast quite early," Devona perched gingerly on the edge of the blue satin chaise-longue.

"Oh—nice. Must be fun getting up early," Vara smiled vaguely, went back to her letter. "Not that I've been out of bed before noon since heaven knows when. Tried the pool yet?"

"Oh, yes. Many times. It's grand," Devona said enthusiastically. "I've been riding, too. Jim, the groom I mean, has been so kind about letting me take the horses. And they're such beauties. I—I——"

Vara Won't Thaw Out

Enthusiasm dissolved in her throat, bound it with stammering uncertainty as she realized Vara wasn't listening.

"Hm. Did you? How nice," and folding the long sheet, ripped open another envelope. "Yes, they're nice horses. I paid enough for them. Dale likes to ride."

Dale again. And Vara's obviously possessive attitude. Devona worried the handkerchief she carried and struggled valiantly with the awkward silence that followed.

"Do you?" she managed finally.

Vara glanced at her, puzzled. "Do I what?"

"Like to ride?"

"Heavens, no. I haven't time."

And a stray little hope that companionship might be found on the bridle paths died prematurely in Devona's heart.

Question Unanswered

"Mother—Vara, I mean," she amended hastily, flushing. "I—wondered if you would rather I—that——"

"Damn!" Vara's pretty mouth snapped shut on the oath as she ripped a letter into shreds, flung the fragments aside dramatically. "I told that woman I wanted blue satin for the third act. Ring for Wong, will you. That's a dear. This means I'll have to dash into town this morning. And hordes of people will be here for cocktails this evening, too. I'll be a rag. You run along now. Or was it something important?"

Devona shook her head. "No—nothing important."

"Good. I'll see you at dinner then, darling." And smiling she dismissed Devona with a graceful little shrug.

Devona Sings

Late one drowsy afternoon, George Barnard found Devona singing some of the sentimental old ballads from a pile of old sheet music she'd discovered. Songs her father'd loved—one she'd sung for him many times in her soft contralto.

"I didn't know you sang," Barnard said bluntly and came to lean over the top of the piano. "Let's hear some more."

"Oh, I can't sing. Not really. I mean—I used to just a little but only to please Dad," she stammered, embarrassed by her unexpected audience.

"Don't stall," he said curtly. "Go ahead."

Her pride stinging under the rebuke, she selected a dog-eared sheet of music, played the introduction quietly, surely. Her voice sounded smaller than ever now that she had a highly critical audience. But she pushed on doggedly.

"You're voice is untrained, but there's an unusually fine quality there," Barnard said when she'd finished. "Reminds me of Vara's speaking voice — mellow, rich in overtones."

"Thank you." He was just being polite, of course.

"Why don't you do something with it?" His keen gray eyes challenged her.

Barnard Has a Scheme

"With your mother's influence you'd get the breaks," he said dryly. "Look, does Vara know you sing?"

"No."

"Why don't you surprise her then." He began thumbing through the music.

"What do you mean?"

"Tonight, for instance. She's having the cast from the play—special dinner-party. Suppose you plan a surprise concert. Be one way to help her entertain her guests and,'" he smiled, "get her interested in helping you train your voice at the same time. How about it?"

Devona's eyes brightened, "Really—do you think she'd—care?"

"Sure. I know she will."

"Then, I'll try—gladly."

"That's the spirit. Take this one first," and put a waltz song on the rack. "I'll play for you."

So she stood in the curve of the grand piano and poured out the lovely lilting melody. Barnard's accompaniment was real support and she knew the song by heart.

"Not bad," Barnard conceded when she finished.

"Bravo! Encore!" Another voice added applause from an armchair where, unseen, Talbot had dropped down to eavesdrop on the little concert. "More. More."

"See, a public already," Barnard smiled. "Here, Tal, you play. You're the musician in the family."

Altogether, Devona sang nearly a dozen songs, selected six for tonight's surprise concert. Some ballads, one aria, one Southern folk-song.

"Say," Tal drawled, his slim fingers pursuing a chord aimlessly. "What are you two up to?"

"And her guests will clamor for more," Barnard added. "Skip along now. I must have words with Brasher here."

"Thanks so much," Devona said before she fled. "I'll try not to let you down."

Must Send Her Away

Then, even before the click of her heels on the tiled stairway faded away, Tal was saying:

"What's the idea, Barnard? You know damned well Vara doesn't go in for any competition—especially at her own parties."

Barnard deliberately selected a cigarette from the heavy glass container, lit it before he answered. "Right. And I know damned well Vara doesn't do her best work when there's something on her mind."

"Meaning——?"

"Meaning that this daughter stuff is cramping her style. You know as well as I do, she's not putting her best into this show." His gray eyes leveled on the younger man. "She can't bring herself to make a decision about the girl. Something's got to be done to get Devona out of the way. A couple of years of voice study in some school might turn the trick."

Talbot watched his fingers pursue a run the length of the keyboard. "Poor little kid. Vara will be furious."

"I hope so. Furious enough to make a decision and make it right now," Barnard said dryly. "Don't waste your sympathy, Brasher. After all, this is your show, too. Don't forget that. And don't forget, either, that everything depends on Vara."

"You're not telling me anything. I know that play's lousy."

"No, but weak," Barnard conceded. "It'll take all Vara's got of the best to put it over. And she hasn't been giving us her best. Not since the daughter turned up to remind her she's not as young as she used to be."

"So—that's that," and punctuating it with a crashing discord, Tal pushed away from the piano and stood up. "Well, it should be an interesting, if heart-rending, bit of stage play tonight."

Mrs. W. C. Haggerty, Cherry Valley, Is Guest Speaker

3rd Sidney — Mrs. W. C. Haggerty of Cherry Valley, vice president of the Conference Branch addressed the members of the Woman's Missionary Society at their Thank Offering service on Sunday morning.

Quoting from the war time pamphlet of Basil Mathews: "Should Missions go on", and the words of Dr. Woodside, who had addressed the Branch meeting the previous week, Mrs. Haggerty said Christianity had not failed, but real true Christianity had not been touched by the masses. Re-generation of the world must come about through Christianity, she said, re-born Christianity that will fill the human hearts with love, courage and faith that the Lord Jesus Christ is still the Saviour of the world, and willing and able to break down all barriers. It is the business of the church to look after the re-birth of the race and Mrs. Haggerty reminded her listeners that one loving heart sets another on fire. Her closing appeal was to all to witness for Christ and build for true honest Christianity like unto that of Jesus, then all would realize that Missions must go on.

The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. Fred Westover. The Scripture lesson, Matthew 28, was read by Mrs. Everett Hubble.

At the close of the address "The Old Rugged Cross" was sung by Miss Barbara Hamilton. Anthems were sung by the choir and the Mission Band, who were in attendance. A pageant was put on by Gordon Grills, Keith Kells, Carl Moon and Ray Scott, members of the Mission Band.

Cut flowers and potted plants adorned the front of the church and a cleverly designed poster, showing the cross and the open Bible as the only weapons that can rule the world on a new order, added to the beauty of the Service. The poster was the handiwork of Gordon Spafford.

The Thank Offering envelopes brought in over twenty dollars, to be added to the funds of the Society to be used in the interests of Missions.

Sympathy is extended to Mr. Wm. McMullen and Mr. and Mrs. Leon McMullen, 2nd line, in their loss by fire on Monday afternoon, of their fine large barn and well-equipped drive house.

Hay, grain, some live-stock and a quantity of lumber were lost. With the timely assistance of the neighboring community, the house and pig pens were saved. During the conflagration, several planes from the near-by Trenton airport were droning overhead, reminding the workers in a small way, of the more drastic scenes taking place in England.

Centenary Red Cross had a quilting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Orr.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Haggerty, of Cherry Valley, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Westover and Mr. Douglas McPherson were dinner guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Spafford.

Several men from this line attended the sale on Wednesday afternoon of Mrs. Ernest Burkitt, 4th of Sidney.

Mrs. Harley Hubble spent Sunday with Mrs. Chas. Moon and Miss Jennie Moon, 2nd line.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dyck of Frankford, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dyck and son Edwin, called on Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Jones of Consecon, on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Vandervort of Thurlow spent Sunday evening with the latter's mother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Colin Bonisteel. Mrs. Vandervort's mother, Mrs. Wm. Bonisteel spent the evening with friends on this line and called on Mrs. Chas. Moon, who is still confined to her room.

Mrs. W. H. Kells spent an afternoon recently with Mr. and Mrs. John Orr.

Miss Jewel Bailey was accompanied home on Wednesday evening by Miss Dorcas Bird of Belleville, a fellow student of the B. C. I. V. S.

Masters Gordon Grills and Burton Hubble celebrated their thirteenth and twelfth birthdays on Monday, April 28th, and were treated to a theatre party by the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carmen Grills, on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Hubble and sons, Donald, Burton and Harley, were supper guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moon.

Plan Beautification Rural School Grounds

A vigorous campaign to improve and beautify the grounds of the 6,186 rural schools of Ontario will commence on Arbor Day, May 2nd, and will continue through May, June and the fall months, it was announced today by V. K. Greer, chief inspector of Public and Separate Schools, Toronto.

School inspectors, trustees, teachers and pupils will all be encouraged to landscape school property until it is a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." They will have the sympathetic backing of a central committee at Toronto composed of officials of the Ontario Departments of Agriculture, Education and Forestry. The whole-hearted co-operation of Horticultural Societies in the various districts is assured.

The first step in improvement will be a clean-up of each rural school site and putting in order all fences and other equipment, to be followed by the planting of shrubs and flower gardens. Teachers will be asked to take "before and after" snapshots of the premises.

Mr. Greer points out that it is specially desirable to have school property neat and trim this year in view of the expected influx of American visitors. Well-kept school grounds will aid materially in creating a good impression of Ontario. The Department of Education is greatly impressed with this fact and as a result 96 schools on provincial highways have been chosen for special attention and will be examples for demonstration purposes in their district.

A number of schools will be entered in Ontario Horticultural Society districts and county competitions for the J. A. Carter trophy given to the school showing the greatest improvement in surroundings during the year.

St. Paul's Group, Marmora, Guests Of Christ Church Club

Marmora — Members of St. Paul's Laymen's Association enjoyed the hospitality of Christ Church Men's Club at Christ Church Hall, Belleville, on Tuesday evening at a recreational social. Members of St. John's Laymen's Association of Stirling were also present. Teams for carpet bowls were selected while others enjoyed ping pong. Choice refreshments were served after which felicitious speeches were made. An enjoyable evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Born. In Marmora on Saturday, April 26th, to Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Flynn (nee Teresa Crawford) a daughter.

Born. At Deloro, on Saturday, April 26th, to Mr. and Mrs. Carl McCoy (nee Kay Doyle) a son.

Lieut. Percy Gray of Camp Borden spent the week end at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson Connor of Campbellford visited Mrs. C. Nichol on Sunday.

Born. In Marmora, on Thursday, April 24th, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brown, a daughter.

Mr. James Murphy is a patient in St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough.

Mr. Leo. Murphy has returned to his home in Gravelburg, Sask., after visiting relatives here for a few days.

Fashion Flashes

Well-earned leisure is more enjoyable with the aid of a charming negligee. Double sheer in palest pink is used for a nice model made with a double cascade of self-ruffling that widens out at the hem, where it continues as a hem flounce.

It doesn't matter if we are going toward warmer weather—furs are still very much in the fashion picture. A new cape of silver fox has a big face-framing collar that extends down to the shoulder, where it is dropped and worked into the body of the cape.

Garden party atmosphere surrounds many of the new hats, especially those created for early summer wear. Pale pink shantung straw is used for a heart-shaped brimmed hat that has pink and red roses covering the crown. Black velvet bows under the brim in back.

The rustle of spring might well be taffeta, since it is such an important fabric this season. A smart daytime ensemble has the dress in gray taffeta with a printed design in henna, green and black. Worn with the frock is a long slim coat of henna-colored wool lined with plain gray taffeta.

Coming along into the fashion picture are one or two novelties, likely to be snapped up by women who want to be different in their choice of clothes. One such model is a dinner dress, the skirt in black sequins, the top in white sequins, in the form of a sweater that stops short of the midriff.

No matter what colors are being promoted, black with white is always the favorite. A wearable dinner dress, done on slim, two-piece lines has a ruffled yoke of tucked and embroidered white batiste. Daisy buttons in white plastic.

Centenary

Centenary — Choir practice was held at the home of Mr. Geo. Sutherland on Friday evening.

A record attendance of the Sunday School on Sunday was very encouraging to the superintendent and teachers. A special feature was a song "Early in the Morning" sung by Evelyn and Dorothy Ray, Shirley Hall, Fern Calvert and Margaret McMechan, also a reading "Out in the Fields with God" given by Douglas Bird.

The regular morning church service with Mr. Blythe Lehman, a returned Missionary from Nigeria, as guest speaker, was well attended. Mr. Lehman's message was most inspiring and left an impression on all present, that will not soon be forgotten.

Miss Myers of Wooler spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sinclair and daughter, Shirley of Detroit, spent the week end with the former's mother, Mrs. H. McLeod and Mr. McLeod.

Quite a lot of excitement was caused on Friday afternoon when an R.C.A.F. plane made a forced landing in a small field on the farm of Mr. Roy Thrasher.

Warrant Officer W. A. Peters, R.C.A.F., and Mrs. Peters spent Monday evening with Mr. and Mrs. D. Holton.

Jersey for Dinner

Although the spotlight invariably shifts in the direction of bizarre or odd fashions, it is the well-bred dress that attracts the real attention and appears as the choice of the woman of fine taste. Here, Olivia de Havilland wears her newest dinner dress, a simple but most effective model. It is of bagheera finished jersey in a delicate robin's egg blue. The high-waisted line with the fluid graceful skirt is invariably becoming as is a bodice with intricate drapery, of the type used for this model. The belt is of gold kidskin, and a handsome gold and diamond pin is thrust through the drape of the bodice. This is a dress that can be worn right through Spring and into Summer.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Spring Brides Ask "What Shall I Wear?"

"What shall I wear?".... "What shall I wear?" This is the theme-song in a deluge of letters in my mail these bright Spring days.

If you're being a bride in the grand manner, with a formal church wedding, you may wear the classic white or ivory satin. Perhaps heavy glowing slipper satin, though this is not so often chosen for a Spring wedding as it is for a Fall or Winter wedding. However, if you still yearn for a traditional satin touch, you might like to choose a dress with a satin bodice and a billowing net skirt.

White crepe is always lovely, and I think is not often enough considered. It's practical, too, for the wedding dress may be designed for double-duty, being made over into a handsome evening dress, minus the train. If you're streamlined, white jersey might well be your choice. Or if you're the statuesque type, you might like to rustle in taffeta, or perhaps wear a taffeta jacket over a marquisette or net dress.

All brides dream of wedding gowns that float ethereally down the long aisle, wedding gowns of sheer, billowing fabrics as light as their dreams. This year the fashion of full, frothy skirts gives them this dream-come-true. The highlights in this Spring's fabrics are filmy marquisette, diaphanous net, frothy tulle, delicate point d'esprit, youthful mousseline de soie. In this flattering group is one of my very favorites—soft chiffon, very flattering, very rich-looking over a satin sheath. Organdie and organza are, I'm happy to say, still in the fashion picture, especially for later-in-the-season weddings. Charming for garden weddings.

Wedding growns this Spring are kept simple. For their effectiveness they depend on their line — from the dignified line to the little-girl look—and, mainly, on their lovely fullness of skirt. Sometimes they have a simple lace trimming, sometimes a few lace panel inserts in silk marquisette; sometimes a heart-shaped neckline outlined with seed-pearls. Sometimes the midriff is snugly-fitted, sculptured, with fullness above and fullness below, in the skirt.

When the dress is of simple, dignified design, the sleeves are usually long and sometimes they follow the present fashion of other dresses and have below-the-elbow sleeves. Many of the dresses, especially those designed to achieve the little-girl look, have pertly puffed sleeves, with which the bride may, if she wishes, wear short white gloves.

The wedding veil may be dreamlike mists of billowy tulle, or cascades of net or of exquisite lace. It may be of the same fabric as the gown, a chiffon veil with a chiffon gown, for example. Still high in popularity is the fingertip veil, worn back or over the face. Caps and bands and bonnets and haloes are of every conceivable design, often fashioned to feature a pompadour hair-do. Orange blossoms are eternally in fashion, but this year other fresh white flowers are sometimes used in the cap arrangement.

This year, judging by my letters, an increasing number of brides are choosing to carry a prayer-book rather than flowers. It's always an appealing picture, a bride carrying a white prayer-book with satin streamers tied with lilies-of-the-valley, or even more magnificently, with sprays of white butterfly orchids.

Bodice Novelty In Shirtfrock

By ANNE ADAMS

The shirtwaister plays a return engagement season after season in the smart woman's wardrobe. Here it is in a new and strictly 1941 version by Anne Adams, Pattern 4746. The bodice is deftly, knowingly planned to do away with bustline problems. Notice the deep curve of the yokes as they meet the center bodice panels; the concealing gathers in the soft-cut side sections. This treatment, together with the tailored, notched collar and the buttoning to the waist, makes the eye travel up and down rather than across. Even the skirt joins in the slenderizing work with front and back panels. Though just short sleeves are sketched, a long sleeve version is included in this becoming, wearable style.

Pattern 4746 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3 3-4 yards 35-inch fabric.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, May 3

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE PLANETARY configurations both by lunar and mutual aspect, should presage such as unusual, intriguing and perhaps spectacular trend of events as to suggest a state of mental confusion or obscurity in the public consciousness. And public community or group interests may be of transcendent importance, with the nature of developments surprising and bewildering. In such circumstances great discrimination and discretion are required in the happy and successful manipulation of private lives. Being carried away by personal emotions holds hazards.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may participate in a year of great excitement or spectacular adventures, probably of a public or sensational nature. The personal emotions and excitements are liable to carry to heights of excessive expression or regrettable unconventionality. The mentality may be chaotic or confused, luring to dangerous intrigues, while discretion should bring proper gratifications and safe rewards.

A child born on this day should have many talents of a high order and possibly in the line of unique expression—artistic, musical, dramatic or scientific. It may be mystical as well as romantic.

Wear Your Company Face—Smile

By HELEN FOLLETT

SWINBURNE wrote about a "sweet, red, splendid kissing mouth." Well, lips are red enough these days to suit any poet, but they don't look kissable. Observe the ladies in the buy-ways as they stalk bargains. Faces tense, lips tight together, expressions strained. Why can't they wear their company face all the time, give the world a smile now and then? Maybe the world isn't worth it, in its present state, but certainly human beings are.

The small fibers around the mouth are delicate; there are many of them all interlacing. If a down-in-the-mouth expression is worn long enough the face takes it on as a permanent fixture. Chin tissues sag, as do the muscles along the jaw line. Wrinkles come before they should. You will find some old ladies with smooth skins; always they are cheery, happy souls, with courage in their hearts.

A jar of massage cream, plus a hopeful nature, will do much to correct facial seediness. Use the cream at bedtime after the face has been washed. Anoint the fingers, give the complexion a spanking. Blood streams will start to skip and run; and that means that a revitalizing process is going on.

Don't send the finger tips in wide circles, as is the custom. Tapping and slapping will prove better influences for youthifying. In the morning dash on cold water, dry gently, apply an astringent.

The granules that give the hairs its individual coloring can be seen under a microscope. The hair shaft itself is white. When the frost of the years touch it, it is because the coloring cells have disappeared Why they vanish nobody knows.

During the salt and pepper period dyeing is difficult. No woman should attempt the presto-change act. It is much better and wiser to seek the services of a specialist who knows what all the chemicals are about, how they will act, what the result will be.

Whooping Cough Most Dangerous to Children Under 2 Years Old

This is the time of the year to be on guard against all the common infectious diseases of childhood such as measles, scarlet fever, mumps and whooping cough. Due to its contagious nature and laxness about quarantines, nearly every child is likely to have whooping cough at some time or another, and it is one of those illnesses that hangs on and hangs on for weeks, wracking the child with a heavy cough and wearing down the nerves of mothers and fathers.

Among my patients I once had a family in which eight children contracted whooping cough within a period of a few weeks. The first children to get it were not isolated by the parents from the others. What a household it was turned into! I remember driving up the long lane time and again to the accompaniment of a barrage of whoops from inside the house. And I remember what a wreck the mother was after she had nursed all of them through the siege. It was a wonder to me that she managed to keep going. Yet even frail mothers seem to summon super-human strength at such times.

This mother never let up in her vigil because she realized what a menace whooping cough can be. It can be very hard in the younger children. In their cases it is more apt to be serious for there is a greater danger from such complications as pneumonia and bronchitis in winter and diarrhea in summer. If the coughing becomes too violent it may injure the heart. Or rupture of the lung tissue may occur.

Fortunately, however, no dangerous sequel needs to be feared in the majority of cases in children over two years old. Whooping cough occurs chiefly in children from six months to six years. Girls seem to be slightly more susceptible than boys. After six susceptibility usually diminishes with age.

Sometimes, however, a parent who is nursing a child with whooping cough will develop the disease herself. When this happens the adult is in for a bad few weeks.

In this disease, the coughs come in spasms of 15 or 20. The child coughs and coughs until he is quite out of breath. Then, in the midst of a cough, he tries to inhale and the result is a high-pitched cry that sounds like a "whoop" and which has given the disease its name.

The coughing spasms—and the whoops, often become much worse at night. This is probably because of a lack of fresh air and to lack of moisture in the air in the patient's room. Anyway, coughing can be reduced if there is lots of fresh air and the humidity is a bit above normal in the room.

In recent years a serum has been devised that is of great use in fighting this infection. It isn't a hundred per cent efficient yet, but it does greatly reduce the number of cases. It should be given the child during the first year of life. Usually three doses are injected into the arm, with a week between doses. There is no serious reaction to the serum except that the arm may swell for a few hours.

But even when the child is protected with a serum it is a good idea to keep him away from possible infection. Whooping cough is usually contracted through direct exposure to sick persons or contact with the sickroom or clothes used by the sick. The germ causing the disease is a small bacillus that may be expelled either through the mouth or nose in the paroxysms of coughing. It is contagious both before and after the whoop; Even mild cases which do not have the characteristic whoop spread the disease.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Another Wife-Beater

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married two years, and have no children. I'm only 17 now and unhappy. I loved my husband dearly when I married him, but he doesn't act as if he loves me. If he sees one of his girl friends while he's out with me, he leaves me and goes with her. But if I as much as go for a walk with one of my girl friends, he gets suspicious and says I'm out with other men. Then he waits up for me and beats me. Those walks are my recreation and they make me feel refreshed. I don't bother with other men.

My husband drinks heavily, doesn't contribute to my support, and my grandmother clothes and feeds me. When he takes girls out he comes home and tells me about it. Please tell me whether I ought to continue to live with him, or leave him before we have children?

M. W.

Sorry as I am for any girl who marries a young man who has no idea of the responsibilities of marriage, still I can never understand why a woman puts up with being beaten. There are laws in this country which prevent brutal men from beating horses, dogs and other animals. Why should a woman submit to brutality? My suggeston to you is to have your husband bound over to keep the peace.

It's incomprehensible that in this day and age a woman should be prevented from going out to walk, to get a little fresh air and exercise. Thousands of jobs are now open for young people. See what you can do toward earning a little money and being financially independent of a wife-beater.

Wants To Return To Her Old Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a young widow; my husband died several years ago. Three years after that my mother died. All my sisters were married and had homes of their own. I had my home, too, but as I have no children it was up to me to come home and take care of my younger sister and brother. That was three years ago.

My home is just as I left it—furniture and all—as it seems as if I just couldn't sell out, and I'd always hoped to go back to it. I get so lonesome and dissatisfied here that I don't see how I can stay on. I feel sorry for my father, and although I've never told him how dissatisfied I am, he senses that I'm unhappy.

He had a nice woman friend he said he could marry, but he doesn't want to bring anyone into mother's place. But don't you think he ought to consider me a little? I would like to have another companion so I could go back to my own home life, but I'll never meet anyone here in the country. I will appreciate so much if you will tell me what you think is best for me to do.

Unhappy.

Sometimes being absolutely frank is the only solution of a problem such as yours. Why not tell your father that you would like to return to your own home? That should be easy enough for him to understand. If he doesn't want to marry, why doesn't he employ a respectable middle-aged woman as housekeeper? Good housekeepers are not impossible to get.

If he inquires among his friends, it's likely he will get the right sort of woman. You've shown a keen sense of responsibilities in assuming these duties for the past three years, and it seems high time that you should be able to lead your own life.

Young Women's Guild

On Monday evening the Young Women's Guild met at the home of Mrs. Tripp on Charles St. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Mills conducted the business of the meeting.

The devotional period was based on the picture of a new Heaven and a new Earth as prophesied in the Book of Revelation. This was a very appropriate introduction to the theme of the evening.

Mrs. Wishart led the discussion on "Begin Here, Begin Now." It was a review of plans for world peace after the present war is over. Addresses by Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Willkie and Mr. King were reviewed to show the ideas of the state. They seemed to agree that such planning must begin now if the right kind of state is ever to be achieved.

Mrs. McIntosh told the story of a Welsh miner who went from a locality where apples and turnips were left to waste to a coal mining district where food was scarce and coal left to waste. This started him thinking of the evils which must be eliminated before a better world can be made and so he wrote his Plan for Britain.

Mrs. Gibson spoke of the Malvern Conference as an example of the plans of the church. This conference was in meeting in England of Anglican bishops and clergy who met to study present world problems.

They agreed on the need of guidance by the Holy Spirit, that the disease of civilization is war and that it is the duty of Christian people to take part in public life. A wider acceptance of God's sovereign power and the Christian faith is necessary before a change in civilization can be brought about.

Mrs. Wishart closed the discussion by first showing Catholic and Protestant ideas of what is needed. She quoted Dorothy Sayers as saying "There is no such thing as a lasting peace—it cannot be a static thing but must be built." In closing she quoted William Blake's hymn:

And did those feet in ancient time
Walk upon England's mountains green
And was the Holy Lamb of God
On England's pleasant pastures seen?
And did the countenance divine
Shine forth upon our clouded hills,
And was Jerusalem builded here
Among those dark satanic mills?

Bring me my bow of burning gold!
Bring me my arrows of desire!
Bring me my spear! O clouds unfold!
Bring me my chariot of fire!
I will not cease from mental fight,
Nor shall my sword sleep in my hand,
Till we have built Jerusalem
In this our green and pleasant land.

Bucky Walters Stops 9-Game Winning Streak Of the Dodgers By Scoring Winning Run in 11th

Hit Double and Scored on Joost's Single but Team Still Third in Standing

FELLER WINS FOURTH

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sport Writer.

One of the most drab, colorless pitchers in big league baseball is William Henry Walters, Jr., of Cincinnati Reds. He is a tallish, slender, sandy-haired righthander who says little off the diamond and nothing at all on it. He has the kind of eyes that never show excitement.

But Bucky Walters, once a mediocre infielder deserves to be rated right now as the best hurler in the National League and quite possibly the best man in the "clutch" in any league. He also is a good man with his bat, when necessary.

Bucky stopped the nine-game winning streak of Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday, just as he had calmed the Flatbush fury at the same stage a year ago, with the most courageous and effective effort of the season.

The temperature dropped 16 degrees to 51 in Brooklyn during the game, and Walters' fingers got cold just like those of the 15,000 fans. But he was able to turn on the heat at the right moments.

Fanned Two to End Game

In the 11th, with the score tied and two out. Walters stretched a hit to centrefield into a double with a daring slide and scored on a single by Eddie Joost. When the Dodgers loaded the bases in their half of the inning on two singles and a walk, Walters never wavered. He fanned two lefthanded pinch hitters, Pete Reiser and Babe Phelps, to end the game.

The defection of the Dodgers gave St. Louis Cardinals an opportunity to increase their first-place margin with a 5-0 triumph over New York Giants. It was the sixth straight victory for the Red Birds.

In the only other National League game Pittsburgh Pirates rose up in the wrath that comes from long frustration and overwhelmed the Phillies 15-2.

Cleveland Indians kept their winning string intact at seven games by outslugging Philadelphia Athletics 13-8. Bob Feller held the A's to eight hits and hit a home run himself with two on as part of Cleveland's 18-hit offensive. It was rapid Robert's fourth victory of the season and the second homer in his career.

Big-Hitting Day

It was a big-hitting day in the American League with the exception of Washington's 7-0 shutout of Chicago White Sox. Each team got eight safeties in this one.

Boston Red Sox battered Detroit Tigers 15-9 in a spectacular session that included 20 hits by Boston and 13 by Detroit, none of them homers.

New York Yankees, who bombarded St. Louis Browns with 14 hits Wednesday, increased the shelling to 17 safeties yesterday and won 14-5.

Joe Krakauskas Sent To Syracuse

Syracuse, N. Y., May 2—(AP)—Syracuse Chiefs of the International Baseball League announced last night the acquisition on option from Cleveland Indians of Joe Krakauskas, lefthand fast ball pitcher. He will join the Chiefs immediately.

Krakauskas, from Hamilton, Ont. and a veteran of four seasons in the major leagues, comes on a 24-hour option. He went to Cleveland last winter from Washington, but has seen little activity with the Indians this spring, with Washington, Krakauskas won 23 and lost 29 games in four seasons. He also formerly played with the Albany, Trenton, N.J., and Brockville, Ont. teams.

Regina And Sydney Ready For Struggle

By LORNE BRUCE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, May 2—(CP)—While old timers gasped at hockey in May, Sydney Millionaires and Regina Rangers were poised for a fight to the finish here tonight to decide the 1941 Canadian Senior Championship.

The veterans who used to lock up their equipment in March were a little uneasy about the precedent but like everyone else they were braced for what shapes up as a terrific battle between the sectional champions.

The prospect of seeing Rangers and Millionaires, who broke even on points in the five scheduled games for the Allan Cup meet in a game that will be continued until one emerges as the winner is expected to draw a crowd of more than 7,000 fans which would be the largest crowd in the west in several years.

If the score is tied at the end of the regulation 60 minutes, 10-minutes overtime periods will be played until one team finishes one of these in the lead.

Kingston Admitted To New Ball League

Ottawa, May 2 ((CP)—The newly-formed Interprovincial Baseball League's schedule opens May 24, it was decided last night at a meeting here.

Opening games follow: May 24, Hull, Que., B. and B. team meets Kingston, Ont., and Hull Volants meet Smith's Falls, Ont., May 25, Volants play B. and B., Smith's Falls meets Ottawa Royal Canadians, Kingston meets Buckingham, Que.

Saturday's games are at Kingston and Smith's Falls and on Sunday the respective teams play at old Park Royal, Hull, and Buckingham.

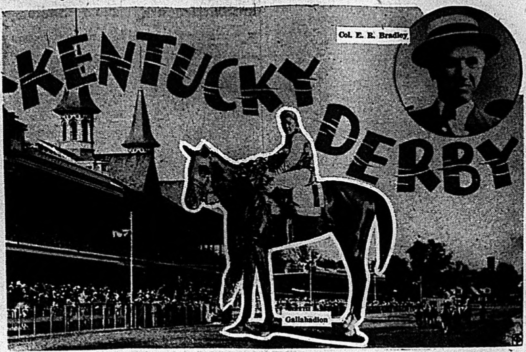
Dope for the Kentucky Derby to be Run May 3



By WALTER L. JOHNS
Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—America's greatest sports event, the Kentucky Derby, is on tap and this mecca for horse lovers awaits the greatest Derby throng in history, a mob estimated at anywhere from 60,000 to 100,000 persons.

This will be the 67th running of the historic Blue Grass classic and at this stage, a wide open race with nary an outstanding favorite in the field.

Some writers put the 1940 crowd at 95,000 people. Col. Matt Winn, major-domo of the Derby, says if it's sunshiny on May 3, the Derby date, he may realize his ambition of a 100,000 crowd.

Prices Are High

As has been our custom, we give you some Derby dope with the help of Frank Menke, the demon Derby publicist. And brother, if you're going to the Derby, pay attention!

First, as to prices. There's a special bleechers' section erected at the Downs where the admission price is but 50 cents. Here ordinary prices prevail for soft drinks and food. Grandstand admission is $2.35, and for clubhouse enclosure it is 5.65—without a seat! The cheapest reserved seat is $8.40. If you can get one in the de luxe third floor of the clubhouse it will cost you $16.60, which includes admission and taxes.

It is estimated that it takes more than 6,000 workers, including police, ushers, ticket sellers, maids, porters, track crews and the like, to handle the Derby on Derby Day.

Housing accommodations for the Derby are a big problem. The hotels, generally sold out months in advance, charge high rates, some $10 a day, and have to be taken for three days. Private homes are used by many visitors and rooms here can be had from $2 to $5 per night. Best transportation to the Downs is by street car, which costs but 10 cents.

The first Derby, run in 1875, was won by Aristides. It was over a mile and one-half distance. Last year Gallahadion, Milky Way Farm colt, won in a surprise finish, beating the favorite, Bimelech, by one and one-half lengths and paying a $72.40 mutuel price for a $2 win ticket.

Bradley Missing

Among the best-liked horses in the 1941 race are Whirlaway, Dispose, Our Boots, Porter's Cap, King Cole, Curious Coin, Attention, New World, Blue Pair and Robert Morris.

The Derby is over a mile and a quarter distance. The track is a mile with a quarter-mile chute. Post time is about 5.30 p.m., Eastern Standard time. The race lasts a little over two minutes.

It costs $25 to enter a horse for the Derby. This makes him elegible until 45 minutes before the race is run. Then he is either declared out or his owner must put up an additional $500 for the privilege of sending the horse to the post. To this "stakes" money, the winner of the race gets $53,000 from Churchill Downs. Owner of the second place horse gets $8,000, and so on down.

For the first time in many years, Col. Edward R. Bradley, grand old man of horse racing in Kentucky, does not have an entry in the Derby. He has had four winners.

Only one filly, Regret, in 1915, ever won a Derby. Earl Sande and Isaac Murphy, the latter a negro boy, each have been on three Derby winners. A total of 667 thoroughbreds have gone to the post in the Derby since it began. Last year only $465,149 was wagered on the race, the smallest since 1935. The reason was—Bimelech, the Bradley colt which was such an odds-on favorite.

It's our guess that Porter's Cap will win the Derby. We look for Whirlaway to be right up there, too. A guess, remember, which isn't much.

ELEVEN LIKELY TO FACE STARTER IN THE DERBY

Our Boots Held Favorite at 8-5 With Porter's Cap Next in Line

100,000 TO ATTEND

By ORLO ROBERTSON

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Louisville, May 2 (AP)—Eleven aristocrats of the turf idled away the time in their closely guarded stalls today as politicians, society folk, business men, movie actors and actresses and just plain Mr. and Mrs. turned this usually tranquil city into a bedlam for tomorrows' renewal of the 75,000 Kentucky Derby.

Following brief speed tests soon after dawn this morning the stars of the American turf's most colorful spectacle returned to their quarters, ready for the word that will send them away in quest of the pot of gold and garland of roses awaiting the winner at the end of Churchill Downs' classic mile and quarter. Post time is scheduled for 5.45 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Thousands poured into the city by train, automobile, bus and airplane last night and still they came—from every section of the nation, from every walk of life.

Matt Winn, promoter of the extravaganza, predicted the first 100,000 Derby crowd and a mutual handle of $2,000,000 for the day, a mark exceeded only in 1926 when Bubbling Over won.

Our Boots, offspring of Bull Dog from Royce G. Martin's Toledo-owned Woodvale farm remained the favorite at 8 to 5. Charles S. Howard's Porter's Cap was quoted at 2 to 1.

Whirlaway from Warren Wright's Calumet farm was the horse that really had everybody guessing and getting nowhere. He was quoted at 6 to 1.

Other entries were Dispose, at 8 to 1 Robert Morris and Blue Pair, at 10 to 1, and Market Wise at 12 to 1.

Little Beans, Staretor, Swain and Valdina Paul were rank outsiders.

DISTANCE IS SHORTENED

Amsterdam, The Netherlands (via Berlin), May 2—(AP) — The Netherlands Sporting Association today banned all running competitions over distances of more than 5,000 metres (about three miles) as well as Pentathlon contests until further notice.

It was stated the measure was taken to prevent over-exertion of athletes in view of the present food situation.

ICE IN YUKON RIVER GOES OUT

Dawson, Y. T., May 2 — (CP) — The ice was going out in the Yukon River Thursday but hundreds of persons who had guessed the time of the breakup — and backed their guesses with hard cash—tore up their tickets in the big pool without knowing who had come closest to being the winner.

Electric apparatus which stops the official clock at Dawson when the ice goes out failed to work yesterday when breakup came. The pool — amounting to $4,000 this year — goes to the person whose guess is nearest the exact minute of the breakup.

The money will be carried over until next year, although smaller pools will be decided by public drawings. The breakup came at approximately 10:50 A. M., the second time on record the ice has moved out in April.

TORONTO LEAFS LOSE OPENER IN TEN INNINGS 8-5

Baltimore Orioles Nick Dick Fowler for Three Runs in Tenth

BEARS BEATEN

(By The Associated Press)

As President of the Parent Brooklyn Dodgers Larry MacPhail naturally is interested in seeing his No. 1 farm team, Montreal Royals of the International League, get "ahead". As a matter of fact he sent them one.

Ed. Head 22-year-old pitcher brought up to Brooklyn from Elmira, another Dodger "farm," last July, joined the Royals about a week ago. The youngster originally started as a southpaw but wound up as a right hander after his left arm was broken in an automobile accident.

Head's biggest asset is speed, but like most young pitchers he is inclined to be wild, which is the main reason for his conditioning with Montreal.

There was little evidence of wildness yesterday however, when making his first start for the Royals, he hurled a six-hitter to beat the league leading Newark Bears 3-2.

Baltimore Spoils Opening

Along with Montreal, Rochester Red Wings and Buffalo Bisons also had successful home openings, but Baltimore spoiled Toronto Leafs day by winning out in the 10th inning, 8-5. Buffalo swamped Syracuse Chiefs, 10-5 while Rochester edged out Jersey City, 5-4.

Tom Hafey put the Orioles back in the game with a ninth-inning homer that tied the score at 5-all, then the Birds landed on Dick Fowler for two doubles and two singles for three runs in the 10th. Orin Collier went all the way for Baltimore, yielding nine safeties, for his first victory of the year.

Freddy Hutchinson notched his fourth consecutive victory, allowing the Chiefs nine hits, while his mates blasted a trio of Syracuse moundsmen for 17. The victory boosted the Bisons into third place in the standings.

Tomorrow sees the 67th running of the second oldest consecutively run turf event on the North American continent—the Kentucky Derby. The oldest running race in the western hemisphere is Ontario's King's Plate, raced at Woodbine Park in Toronto. The Kentucky Derby is as American as the expression "sugar daddy" or "hot dog", but all "sugar daddies" aren't American, it seems. Of the 112 nominees for the 1941 Derby, three are foreign horses, one being Sugar Daddy and the other two Colorado Lad and Fairmond. Incidentally imported horses have fared rather poorly in the Derby, although it must be admitted only a few have competed. The only winning "foreigner" was Omar Khayyam in 1917, while Star Hawk, another imported horse, finished second in 1916. Last year Gallahadion won in a surprise finish, beating the favourite, Bimelech by one and one-half lengths. Perhaps one of the most colorful turf events in the world, it is the ambition of the promoters to see a 100,000 crowd attendance, maybe tomorrow.

Only two jockeys ever rode three Derby winners, they being Isaac Murphy (colored) in 1884, 1890 and 1891 and the immortal Earl Sande in 1923, 1925 and 1930. Sande is to be honored publicly prior to the 67th running of the Kentucky Derby on Saturday, incidentally. For the first time in many years Col. E. R. Bradley did not enter a horse, despite the fact he is heralded as "the grand old man of the Derby" and has had four previous winners. Among the outstanding favorites this year are Whirlaway, Porter's Cap, Dispose, Our Boots, Curious Coin and King Cole and we like the first two mentioned in the list as rank favorites. The 66 previous Derbies—1875 to 1940 inclusive—developed 23 odds-on post favorites and of these 13 won, seven ran second and the others were actually out of the money for these sticklers of turf statistics. It is estimated it takes more than 6,000 workers to handle the Derby on Derby Day.

Winners of the Kentucky Derby seem to be hardy animals. Of the 66 which have come home on top since the long-gone year of 1875, eighteen were reported as still alive at post time in 1940. The most ancient of all was Exterminator, the gelded son of McGee, victorious in the 1918 Derby and continued to successfully race until he was nine years of age. The horse Aristides won their first Kentucky Derby back in 1875 when he stepped the mile and one-half distance in 2.37 4-5, the fastest time for that yardage ever hung up by a three-year-old in the United States. Experts still wonder how fast Aristides would have covered the present-day route over the now well-manicured race tracks. After winning tomorrow the horse to come down in front has a mammoth job ahead of him to complete the "hat trick" of American racedom, namely to go on and win the Preakness and Belmont Stakes, also for 3-year-olds. Sir Barton, Gallant Fox, Omaha and War Admiral are the quartette of triple champions. Whose next, the 1941 Derby winner?

The jockeying for players in the city softball loop is at its height, this corner hears Skipper Barriage feels his Corby A. C. club is sitting in the driver's seat with two seasoned moundsmen, Johnnie (Poker-face) Bawden and Connie Harris. Elongated Jim Hunter, formerly with the National Grocers and Dracup Tire squads, is to be the mainstay of the Stephen-Adamson mound corps, while the reliable "Ding" Luffman and "Ski" Brant are being depended upon by Bobby Gaulin's Cementmen. The pitching strength of the Reliance squad is somewhat of an unknown and unproven quantity as yet, although 'tis rumored that Archie Major, of goaltending prominence with the "plane-movers" is a softball hurler of parts. "Red" Townsend would give his most cherished possession for a sure-fire winning pitcher, although he has three likely looking juniors firing 'em at practice.

Mr. and Mrs. Herb McCabe received a letter from their son, Ralph (High-pockets), who is now with the Norfolk Tars of the Peidmont League. Ralph has been working out with the Tars for some weeks, but had not pitched a league game at the time of writing. The league opened last week with Norfolk beating Richmond in the league opener. The Norfolk Tar Club is a farm team of the New York Yankees.

Do you remember when Fred Toney of Cincinnati and Jim Vaughan of Chicago pitched hitless baseball for nine innings 24 years ago today in a National League game. Toney did not allow a hit in the 10th inning but his teammates solved Vaughan's offerings for two to win 1-0.

District ball fans will welcome the news of Kingston being accepted into the Interprovincial Baseball League, along with Buckingham and two clubs in Hull in Quebec, Ottawa, Smiths Falls and Kingston. Games will be played on Saturdays in Smiths Falls and Kingston and in the other four centres on Sunday. Having had hockey success by adopting the name "Combines," the Kingston Ball Club will adopt that nickname as well, abandoning that famous Kingston "Ponies" name that has been acquainted with baseball for nearly a half a century. If the Kingston club proves equal to the Interprovincial competition they should draw well throughout Eastern Ontario, as the Combines will provide the only baseball from Cobourg to Brockville and should capitalize on their position.

SPORT HASH—As was the case last year, errors robbed 10,000 Toronto baseball fans at their International League opener, yesterday, when the Orioles beat the Leafs 8-5 in extra innings. . . . The Leafs literally kicked away the game for Pitcher Dick Fowler, committing the game's only four errors. . . . They're afraid of rain tomorrow at Churchill Downs, in which case Our Boots would be favorite. . . . Providing Joe Louis is still champion (and who doubts it) Billie Conn will get his shot at the heavyweight title on June 18th at the Polo Grounds. . . . Bucky Walters halted the Dodgers at nine straight victories, as the Reds beat the Brooklyns 2-1 yesterday allowing the Cardinals to take undisputed lead in the National League. . . . It was all Bob Feller as the Indians won over the A's yesterday to dominate the American League, with the Yankees closing the gap in second place. . . . Now it's your turn.

LOUIS TO MEET CONN JUNE 18

New York, May 2—(AP) — Promotor Mike Jacobs announced today that Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will defend his boxing title against Billy Conn at Pittsburgh at the Polo Grounds here June 18—provided Louis still is the titleholder after he meets Buddy Baer in Washington, D.C., May 23.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was just thinking, saying, My, my, 7 billion dollars.

Did you win it in a lottery or are you referring to President Roosevelt's appropriation? pop said, and ma said, I'm referring to the Roosevelt donation, of course. Seven billion dollers, she said.

You mentioned it before, but it's big enough to bear repeating, pop said, and ma said That's what I mean, the enormity of it simply baffles conception.

Yes indeed, if ever a sum of money deserved to be called a lump sum, that must be it, pop said, and ma said, I cant believe that any such exalted amount really exists.

It probably wont exist very long, pop said, and ma said, It stupifies the imagination. Even a million dollers apears to me like something too impractical to even think about except in a humorous way, and a billion just seems out of human reach especially with a doller sign to start it but 7 billions really, Willyum, I mean really she said.

I share your emotion, pop said, and ma said, I suppose it would take a lifetime to even count it.

I imagine it would take several life-times if it was counted in small enough units, pop said and ma said, It seems incredible that any such unbelieveable sum of money could affect our own little private budget, but I was considering having my fur coat made over because sleeves and shoulders are going to be a little different next season, but then I decided not to consider it because it didn't seem worth the expense but now that I compare the cost to 7 billion dollers it just seems to throw it in a new light, or rather to practically extinguish it altogether, so I've planned to have the work done.

And I'll treat myself to a vest pocket full of 25 cent cigars tomorrow though the heavens fall, pop said.

Sounding half sourcastic and half as if he thought it was a good idea.

Not What He Wanted

A recruit was trying to dodge military service.

"I'm afraid my shortsightedness will prevent me from doing any actual fighting," he said.

TENDERS FOR COAL AND COKE

Sealed tenders addressed to the Undersigned and endorsed "Tender for Coal" will be received until 3 P.M. (E.D.S.T.), Thursday, May 29, 1941, for the supply of coal and coke for the Dominion Buildings throughout the Province of Ontario.

Forms of tender with specifications and conditions attached can be obtained from the Purchasing Agent, Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and the Supervising Architect, 36 Adelaide St. East Toronto, Ont.

Tenders should be made on the forms supplied by the Department and in accordance with departmental specifications and conditions attached thereto.

When the amount of a tender exceeds the sum of $5,000.00—whether it be for one building only or more—the tenderers must attach to their tender a certified cheque on a chartered bank in Canada, made payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to 10 per cent of the amount of the tender, or Bearer Bonds of the Dominion of Canada or of the Canadian National Railway Company and its constituent companies unconditionally guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Dominion of Canada, or the aforementioned bonds and a certified cheque, if required to make up an odd amount.

The Department also reserves the right to demand from any successful tenderer a security deposit, in the form of a certified cheque or bond as above, equal to 10 per cent of the amount of his bid to guarantee the proper fulfilment of the contract.

By order,

J. M. SOMERVILLE,

— Secretary

Department of Public Works,

Good Advice

An East London man who had been advised by his solicitor upon the matter of making everything over to his wife in case he got killed in an air raid, later wrote to his legal adviser thus: "Dear Sir—Having as you advised put all my possessions in my wife's name, regret to say I now have no money to pay you for your services."

Memories Of Albanian Campaign

Daniel De Luce had his baptism of fire as a war correspondent in Poland. Since then he has been assigned to the Balkans and spent the winter months with the Greek army at the Albanian front.

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Associated Press Staff Writer

A chilly mist screens Hill 1615 beside the Drinos River where 5 Evzones (Greek mountain troops) holding an advance post are attacked by a full battalion of Italians at dawn..the first noise of the battle, like an exploding package of firecrackers, awakens reporters near the mountain village of Labova. After a couple of minutes there is dead silence.

The Greek counter-attack that afternoon gains ground..not one of the Evzones had tried to retreat.. and as their comrades move forward they see the bodies of the 52 sprawled in a gruesome jumble with 145 Italians..a single sentence in the night's general headquarters communique covers the whole incident.

Interviewing Gen. Alexander Papagos on his arrival in Albania.. what the Greeks need, the General said over and over, are American planes..they never came.

Traversing a shelled road 15 miles beyond Klisura..we come to the horrible canyon of death where a makeshift Greek third line finally stopped the deperate Italian offensive..the ravine is 50 yards wide and strewn with hundreds of bodies..these men died a week ago.. on the crest of the hill across the way the Italian infantry is entrenched..shells from mortars begin bursting..a burly Greek sergeant falls on top of me. I have no helmet..he has and he protects me..

Crossing a mined meadow at Pogradetz the same night the Germans reached the Yugoslav shore of Lake Ohrid..we admire the camouflaged machine-gun nests Major Maniatakes calls his masterpieces.. a whimsical fellow, the Major..calls the Italian shells mosquitoes..orders his orderly to play his guitar before breakfast at dawn and says: "All winter our straying pack mules got destroyed by our own mines. Stay and watch the fun when those mulish Fascists try to approach."

A blunt British Major, visiting the line near Tepeleni, sums up the Greeks.."Bags of gust and a withering talent for gunnery."

The Italians know that talent.. in four months in Albania I saw many peasant lads of Greece die..I saw their strange collection of French, German and Czech artillery and saw it outwallop the heavier and newer Italian batteries .. sometimes the Greeks captured dazed Italians..these Italians invariably said: "Italy fighting alone cannot defeat Greece."

The flying dervish..tall, scrawny, ascetic..a man with a black goatee and most remarkable aplomb as he sailed his 1924 plane across the Italian lines, dropping sermons with his explosives..he would dodge the big Italian patrols and weave through the snow-covered canyons, his beard lashing out in the wind.

One day he didn't come back .. we heard later his rickety old plane had gone under in a dogfight behind the Italian lines.

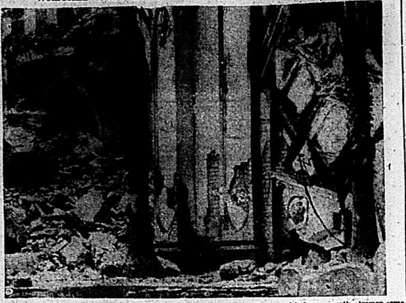
WRECKED WHEN EARTH TREMOR STRUCK MEXICAN CITY



This picture showing the wreck of a church gives some indication of the terrific force of the earthquake which shook the Mexican city of Colina, claiming a toll of over 84 lives and virtually levelling the town. Though of heavy masonry and steel construction, the edifice was shaken to a twisted heap of ruins by the shock. The same town was hit by an earth tremor some years ago with similar devastation and many of the buildings now ruined, including this church, were constructed after the previous quake.

Trousers, No Cuffs

Tailors of England have decided to return to the custom of making trousers without cuffs, in the alleged interest of cloth conservation; they threaten to make coats shorter, too. It is not many years since cuffs on pant legs were unknown, just as shirts lacked the so-called French cuff. In that day the only cuffs ever seen at trousers' ends were when the legs were turned up on a rainy day. As it rains often in London, it became the practice of the mocking throng to shout, "It's raining in London," whenever a chap on this side of the water attempted to protect his pants' ends from the wet. The mud of the macadam streets made this precaution advisable. Boots then were the order, not shoes, or, rather, oxfords. And the boots had straps on the back, which, contrary to the saying, did not permit the wearer to raise himself by his bootstraps, but did permit him to don and doff them with a minimum of unlacing. This was hard on sock heels, but so are oxfords. Experts could change the narrow-legged pants of the period without removing the boots. Dislike of effort promotes a certain kind of ingenuity. Not only firemen can take off pants, long underwear and socks, with one motion and in one piece. More men than one would suspect can and do perform this feat.

Trousers are of very ancient origin. They are not as old as the toga, perhaps, but they are older than the Highlander's kilt, which he persists in wearing but which the Irish abandoned many years ago, although they were allegedly benighted in those olden times. The superior races of North and Central Europe wore trousers, and if the encyclopedias are to be believed, so did the Phrygians (who were they?) and the Persians. In Turkey, up to Kemal Pasha's (Ataturk) reforms, the men wore trousers of cotton, in the legs of which half a bale of hay might be stuffed, not to mention a couple of jereboams of ardent liquor, or a hookah and a goodly bundle of tobacco. Beau Brummel, who was a bit of a bounder as well as the foremost dandy of his day, is credited with introducing the modern form of trousers into England, where previously gentlemen wore tights with straps to prevent them creeping up and the hoi polloi wore leather breeches or indifferent cloth contraptions. Since then the trousers have prevailed, despite periodical attacks such as that made by the plus fours a few years back. Plus fours, by the way, had their merits; for one thing, hand-me-down or custom-made, they all looked alike, save for the size of the checks.

Compared with the pants of grandfather's day the modern trousers are things of beauty, joys while they last. The man or youth of today can go into a shop, even a department store basement, and get a suit to fit, thanks to the standardization which the manufacturers in this very city of Montreal were among the first, if not the first, to adopt. Some of the best men's clothing in the world is made in Montreal factories by the highly-skilled designers and cutters. Before this standardization, the buyer of a ready-made suit had not much choice, as the suits were much of the same cut. To choose the pants, it was the custom to grasp the end of a leg with each hand and then stretch out the arms at full length. If the arms could not be outstretched to the full, the pants were too short according to the seller, and another pair was tried. If they were too long, all right; the merchant cut an inch or two off the end and made a hem—no cuff. The too-long coat was simply hemmed up. In those days it was a common sight to see a tall man with a coat which failed to hide his beam and a short man with a coat which came half way to his knees. And highwater pants, that is, nether garments which failed to reach the boot tops and thus revealed a few inches of woollen or cotton sock, were as common on the streets as are automobiles today. That is saying a whole lot, seeing that many a man will not buy a new suit at Easter because he would rather buy gasoline instead. Times have changed.

The tailors of Tooley or Bond street by their no-cuff order have recalled trying times in the last war—hard times which threaten to come again. Towards the end of the conflict wool was so scarce and dear that the price of custom-made suits went up to $100 in some instances, and the suits that could be bought for half that sum were part cotton and wretchedly dyed. Men with good jobs could not afford to buy good clothes—they wore their old ones to the limit. Boots went up to $10 and $20 the pair and many men wore canvas boots or running shoes—sneakers. Nor did the ordinary household have butter, use of which dropped when the price went over 75 cents a pound. A benevolent government permitted the use of oleomargarine, despite the protests of dairy makers. Eggs were $1 to $1.20 a dozen, and all-wheat bread was not permitted to be made. This time Canada has more wheat than it knows what to do with, so there can be no shortage of wheat bread. As there is better regulation today, it is unlikely that there will be any butter, sugar, tea or other food shortage in Canada. But prices will inevitably rise with higher wages; they are starting.

To return to trousers, wool also is regulated, so worsted, tweed and serge suits are likely to be equal to the demand. In the former period of scarcity there was an overall movement in the United States, which was joined by even some professional men, and which brought down the too-high suit prices. Cuffless trousers are all right. They do not gather snow in winter or dust in summer; nor do they catch in the auto starter or brake pedal. The thing is to have trousers, for without them a man is lost—unless he be a kilt-wearing Scot. — T.A.K., in Montreal Gazette.

Albury

Albury — A number of ladies met on Tuesday afternoon to quilt a quilt which Mrs. Frank Dempsey had pieced for the War Emergency Fund.

Mrs. B. Peck and baby returned home from Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday afternoon.

On Tuesday several ladies spent the day at Rednersville Church Hall, quilting for the War Emergency Club. The Club was reorganized with the same president, Mrs. L. Brickman and Mrs. R. Pulver as secretary as Mrs. A. Gilmour had moved away.

She will be greatly missed from the work here. A hearty vote was tendered Mrs. L. Brickman for her work and all those assisting in the locality.

About 20 enjoyed the pot luck dinner.

Miss Helen Loyd spent the week end with her sister, Mrs. Earl Onderdonk.

Mr. Clifford and Beuford Peck called at Mr. Frank Bellyou's, York Road, on Saturday night, who had lost their barn by fire Friday night. Much sympathy is extended to them.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy White and family spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Beuford Peck.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Stephenson spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bonter and girls.

Produce Prices Generally Steady

Toronto, May 2—The egg section of the Toronto open produce market was unsettled all day yesterday and selling prices to the retail trade dropped slightly. The butter market was steady and prices held at previous levels.

The egg market developed an unsettled undertone in the morning and it continued unsettled throughout the day. Buyers appeared to have struck up a cautious attitude, but this did not appear to have affected the fair demand materially. Current arrivals proved ample to meet all requirements. Quotations dropped in the retail section to bring the price of grades "A" large and "A" medium to 23c and 22c respectively.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, May 2—(CP)—Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter, first grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 31c to 31 1-4c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 30 1-2c to 30 3-4c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling at A-large, 22c to 22 1-2c; A-medium, 21c to 21 1-2c; B-grade, 20 1-2c to 21c; C-grade, 18c to 18 1-2c. Receipts 5,693 cases.

WALL STREET

New York, May 2—(AP) — The Stock Market today took a turn on the rallying trail as buyers came in for Steels, Rails and Lead Industrials.

Trends improved at the start on expanded volume. Dealings slowed later and best gains of fractions to a point or more were reduced near the fourth hour.

Secondary carrier loans edged upward in the bond division. Commodities were a trifle mixed after their recent advance.

Canadian issues were quietly firm.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 2 (CP)— Toronto exchange was generally steady on afternoon trading today. Base metals showed a sizable drop in prices. Volume was small with 52,000 shares changing hands.

In industrials, losses of fractions for Famous Players, Canada Malting, Bell Telephone, Walkers Common and Standard Radio were matched by small gains for Brazilian, Moore Corporation, Abitibi Pfd., C. P. A. and Canada Bread A.

Hudson Bay and Smelters were sold for point losses and Noranda weakened 3-4. Dome, Sylvanite, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Jason were lower in golds while Kerr-Addison and East Malartic were slightly higher.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, May 2—(CP) — Cattle prices were generally steady for the week on the Livestock Market here. Veal calves lost 50 cents cwt. Hogs, sheep and lambs were unchanged.

A fairly heavy run of cattle was cleared although trade slowed a little toward the close. Weighty steers sold at a top of $9.25 for a few choice with others downward to $8. Butcher steers were $7.50 to $8.75 and heifers $7.50 to $8.50 with a few up to $8.75. Butcher cows held at $5 to $7. Canners and cutters were $3 to $4.75. Bulls ranged from $5.50 to $7 cwt. Fed calves were mostly $8.75 to $9.50. Stockers and feeders were firm at $8 to $8.25 for tops with bulk of sales between $7.50 and $8 cwt. A few cull stockers sold as low as $5.50. Good milkers and springers were steady at $80 to $90 each.

Veal calves opened at $11 to $11.50 for tops and closed at $10.50 to $11 with the bulk of common to medium supply selling at from $5 to $9.50 cwt.

Hogs sold to the local packers at $11.15 to $11.25 dressed with out-of-town buyers taking several hundred at $11.40. The live price was $8.40. Sows sold at $7.25 to $8 dressed.

Sheep and lamb receipts included 2,300 westerns. Prices were steady at $10.50 for best westerns as well as for some local feed-lots. Other lambs of last year's crop sold at $7.50 to $10 cwt. Spring lambs were slow sellers at $10 to $12 each for choice with others downward to $6. Sheep were steady at $3 to $6 cwt. for locals with light western ewes at $6.50. Summary of receipts:

Two RAF Pilots Tell Dramatic Story Of Ocean Flight In Damaged Plane

London, May 2 (CP)—A dramatic story of a flight by two Canadians who successfully piloted a damaged giant flying boat across the Atlantic for more than six hours was told last night by the Ministry of Aircraft Production.

The feat of Flight-Lieut. J. G. Fleming, D.F.C., of Calgary, and F.O. J. J. Meikle of Toronto, members of the Royal Air Force, in bringing a Catalina PBY flying boat to England after both ailerons had been torn off was called by the Ministry "one of the greatest epics of flying." The plane carrying the two pilots, two flight engineers loaned by the Fleet Air Arm and two radio operators who are Canadian citizens, left Bermuda under perfect weather conditions. Suddenly, at 18,500 feet, the automatic pilot jammed.

"At this critical moment the starboard aileron went full down," the account said. "The effect was to throw the machine into a spiral dive.

"Immediately the ailerons began to flutter because of the steep angle they were meeting the flow of air. The machine spun down almost 18,000 feet to only 800 feet above sea level."

Aerial Carries Away.

The pilots did their utmost to regain stability during the dive, but pressure on the ailerons was so great that one of them broke off. This was the worst moment for the pilots, because when the second aileron also broke the balance of the plane was restored.

The Ministry's story continued: "When the flutter started, Fleming told the radio operator to send out an SOS. This, however, was never received, because as it subsequently turned out, the fixed wireless aerial had been carried away with the ailerons. The plight of Fleming and his heroic crew seemed desperate.

"In efforts to regain control they found it necessary to jettison smoke flares, spare parts and their tool kit, including a £40 outfit which was the personal property of one of the flight engineers.

"Just when every one believed the Catalina must hit the water the pilots recovered control. Although they were six hours distant from home the captain, confident of his ability to reach the coast, refused to send another SOS.

"Instead from a trailing aerial, he simply signalled: 'Both ailerons gone'. The signal was received but no one believed it. It seemed impossible that a great machine like the Catalina weighing about fifteen tons, could still be flying without any lateral control.

"The machine now was flying due south. To remain air-borne without lateral control it is necessary to keep going straight ahead as use of the rudder without ailerons is liable to put the machine into a fatal flat spin.

"Fleming and Meikle were compelled to sit side by side, exerting all their strength on the controls to keep the machine in the air. They did not dare to remove their hands to look at a map. Fortunately Fleming had memorized the course and with Meikle's aid he managed to turn the machine very gently until it was on the correct course again.

"Only fortitude and endurance enabled the pilots to carry on. To add to their troubles, as they approached the British coast they flew into a storm. Despite this they succeeded in landing safely in the water of a British harbor.

"But they still had some miles to taxi and the sea was rough. This amazing pair, fearing that taxiing over the waves would make themselves and the rest of the crew seasick actually took off again and flew skimming just above the surface three miles nearer the moorings."

The Ministry added that "since this astounding flight" Fleming has flown the Atlantic once and Meikle twice.

Battleship, King George V, Has More Secret Weapons Than Any Warship

London, May 2 (CP) — Britain's latest and greatest battleship, King George V, has more secret weapons than any other warship, writes a Reuters correspondent, who was the first newspaperman allowed aboard.

One of the most interesting devices might be called "Prime Minister Churchill's secret weapon." The correspondent understood it was inspired by Mr. Churchill when he was at the Admiralty.

Here is the correspondent's description of the battleship, which recently took Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador; Hon. C. D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions and Supply, to the United States.

"This is probably the mightiest instrument of war that man has yet created. As I write in the depth of the ship I am surrounded by more marvellous devices for both offence and defense than in any area of similar size any where on earth.

"Nowhere is there a greater thickness of special steel against bombs, shells, torpedoes and mines, or so many guns so closely concentrated.

Gun Turret Big As a House.

"The first thing you notice as you ascend the gangway is the astonishing thickness of the armor plate. It is not possible to see all of it, but enough is visible to suggest the unofficial estimate of sixteen inches is not far wrong.

"On the broad deck you are confronted with one of the collossal quadruple 14-inch gun turrets. Outwardly it is as big as a bungalow. Altogether there are ten such guns—arranged in one quadruple turret forward, and another aft with a double turret to fire over the forward one.

"To enter one of the big turrets you squeeze through a tiny hatch and are confronted with a medley of machinery more Wellsian than in any H. G. Wells fantasy. Within the thick steel walls are levers, dials, tubes, telephones and wires in orderly profusion and along one side the breeches of the guns.

"Next you descend to the very bowels of the turret, where the shells come from. Gingerly you climb down many ladder rungs, past glistening copper tubes and other parts of the hydraulic machinery which turns the turret in action, swiftly and smoothly. They have hydraulic power instead of electric, so the guns can continue moving and firing even if the electric supply failed.

"Inside this cylindrical cavern, when a battle is on, 104 men will work levers and press buttons. If all ten 14-inch guns were fired at once the weight of metal hurled from the battleship would be no less than 15,600 pounds. The six forward guns alone can fire 9,360 pounds of shell.

"Back on deck, one notices the rows of 5.25-inch high-angle guns along both sides of the ship—sixteen in all—and on a higher level the multiple pom-poms.

"Air attack against 'K.G.5,' as the ship is known in the navy, would be a job for the suicide squad, which would encounter a deadlier barrage than from any other vessel afloat.

$890,000 on Fire Control

"The high-angle gun control especially impressed the American naval experts who inspected the warship when she arrived in America with Lord Halifax aboard. Forty officers from the Navy Department visited the ship. The fire-control instruments, the last word in this branch of war service, are said to have accounted for more than £200,000 (about $890,000).

"Before going inside the ship we visited the bridge, where, high above the sea, is another maze of instruments, many of them secret. They include aids to seeing which will make virtually impossible the escape of any enemy that comes within the range of the guns.

"The catapult gear for the ship's aircraft—used for spotting when firing and for general reconnaissance—is of brand new design.

"Internally the most obvious feature of the ship is the elaborate subdivisioning by means of watertight bulkheads. These subdivisions are much smaller than in earlier battleships and their design makes the King George V virtually unsinkable.

"The exact speed is a secret, but K.G. 5 is known to be the fastest British battleship. To ensure this she has a shaft horsepower of 152,000."

Radio Highlights For Tonight

Radio listeners tonight will hear Lady Kemp give a talk for the blind at 7:10 (D.S.T.) over CBL; at 9.00 (D.S.T.) over CBY an address from Toronto will be given by Dorothy Thompson; At 10 o'clock (D.S.T.) the War Savings Show with Alfred Wallenstein directing will be heard over CBL. Vivian Della Chiesa will be the guest artist.

BRITISH REQUEST

It is reported here that this change of attitude was due to the influence of Germany, whom the British suspect of planning a drive soon through Syria or Turkey toward Suez and the Mosul oil fields.

New York, May 2 (AP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation, heard in New York today, said hostilities between British troops and the pro-German government of Rashid Ali Al Gailani of Iraq broke out in that oil-rich middle east kingdom today with Iraq troops opening artillery fire on British forces.

The report said the Iraqs began shelling Habbaniyah airport, 60 miles west of Baghdad, at dawn and that the British forces were fighting back.

British women and children were said to have been taken to the airport for protection before the action began.

The Berlin propaganda radio previously had reported Iraq troop movements and the calling up of reserves, and claimed "demonstrations of loyalty by youth organizations in Iraq have taken place outside the residence of the Premier."

"The one important centre in the country not yet occupied by the Iraq army" is the airport, the German radio claimed, "and the British units which were landed have been surrounded by the Iraq troops."

(No official British statement on the Iraq situation has yet been issued in London. Semi-official sources said "a somewhat critical situation" existed.)

German Propaganda

"We have not sought the struggle, but now an appeal of country goes out to everyone. Everyone should shoulder a rifle or arm himself with a revolver or if he possesses neither, he should take some other weapon. We are waging a sacred struggle."

"Events of the past 24 hours appear to have developed almost an inconceivable martial enthusiasm in the Iraq nation which reveals an unexpected spirit of national determination", the Berlin broadcast said, obviously trying to promote anti-British feeling.

The radio quoted other alleged reports from Beirut, Lebanon, and Ankara in which it was said events in Iraq were being followed in political circles with the greatest interest.

The German radio claimed political quarters in Damascus, Syria, emphasized that developments in Iraq are of the greatest importance to Syria "since the two countries are inseparable."

More Propaganda

"The Iraq government has received innumerable telegrams of sympathy from all parts of Syria," the German radio said. "Reports from Palestine state that numerous Arab fighters for freedom are prepared to go immediately to Iraq should the further course of events render it necessary to come to the assistance of Iraq, or should the Iraq government issue an appeal for support of the Arab world."

In its Ankara dissemination, the German radio said political quarters were of the opinion that a conflict in Iraq was inevitable in view of the British attitude.

"Should such a conflict arise the Turkish government appears resolved to observe the same neutral attitude as toward the European war," said the broadcast. "The Turkish press still observes absolute reserve toward developments in Iraq."

Billion Dollars Invested

Britain has invested upward of $1,000,000,000 in developing Iraq and its oil fields, and if Hitler could get them it would be one of his greatest grabs of the war.

Britain since 1933 has quadrupled Iraq's petroleum output. This supply, upon which the Mediterranean fleet depends, is funneled by way of Haifa, Trans-Jordan and Palestine to the Mediterranean ports.

A second pipeline which ran to French-governed Syria has been cut off since the fall of France last summer.

Iraq, with an area of 116,600 square miles and a population of 3,500,000 got its present governmental set-up after the last war in which it won freedom from Turkish rule and was placed under British protection.

Army of 28,000

In 1938 the country had an army of 28,000 officers and men, including a small air force and 200-man camel corps. It also had a police force of 10, 711, of which 4,043 were mounted.

At that time Britain had three bomber squadrons and one bomber transport squadron, a general reconnaissance squadron and an armored car company.

The first British reinforcements landed at Basra, at the head of the Persian Gulf, last month, were said to have numbered 1,200 men, but the strength of the second force announced yesterday has not been disclosed.

It was during the period of the Arabian Night, which followed the Biblical and Persian eras, that Sinbad the sailor sailed from Basra and Ali Baba caught his forty thieves in Iraq's capital city, Baghdad. Iraq also is reported to have been the locale of the Garden of Eden and the Tower of Babel.

ROYAL NAVY

ese Islands and in Bulgaria.

Then there was the threat of the Italian fleet. One Greek army had capitulated. German motorized columns were sweeping down from the north, held back only by fiercely resisting rearguard units which were vastly outnumbered.

From what I saw as I came down through Greece and joined the waiting troops on jetties and watched the astonishing mechanics of the embarkation, I know the Navy didn't stop to ask the odds against it—it just went ahead and cleaned up the job.

I talked with many soldiers during the zigzag crossing and their morale was amazingly high. They're on their way to fight once more. Australians, Canadians, New Zealanders, and Englishmen all said they were eager to get at it again.

There was great hilarity aboard my ship one night when a Berlin radio broadcast announcer boasted that not a single British soldier who had fought in Greece would get away to fight again

Destroyed Equipment

"I guess the old navy has answered that one," said one tousle-headed Aussie as he swept his hand toward the sea lane dotted with ships packed with tens of thousands of Imperial troops.

The men who strode ashore in Egypt said they are ready to fight again. When they boarded ship in Greece they loaded tons of rifles, food, optical instruments machine-guns, anti-aircraft guns, ammunition and any other stores they could carry.

Much heavy equipment was destroyed to prevent its falling into German hands.

I heard engines roaring at top speed without lubricating oil and smelled the odor of their burning and watched the steel glow red hot before the pistons seized, damaging motors beyond repair.

There were hundreds of Greek airmen, infantrymen and gunners aboard the ships that crept out of the fog-shrouded harbor the night our vessel left. There was easy camaraderie between the Greeks and their British Allies, and they talked of revenge for the loss of Greece.

The Greeks made a point of the fact that now their people could boast that Greeks were still in the fight. Many of them brought their own weapons with them.

Spirit of Greece Lives

"They say the Swastika now flies over Mount Olympus," one Greek soldier told me with tears in his eyes. "Over Mount Olympus— the home of our ancient gods—and over the Parthenon, too. How can we go home?"

The spirit of the Greek soldiers who chose to leave their families and homeland to go on fighting is shared by the people who stayed in their ruined towns and cities. Before I left Greece I saw owners of little shops busily scraping away the words, "English spoken here."

But one merchant said he was voicing the general sentiment in saying: "Some day—and we hope it will be soon—we are going to put those words back on our windows again, along with the crossed Union Jack and the blue and white flag of Greece."

In almost every town where I halted for a few minutes to arrange transportation for the next jump in my scramble to keep ahead of the invading force, some Greek who had lived in the United States took me aside. One said:

"I tell my people here that I know America, because I have been there.

"I tell them America and Great Britain together will save us from this shame which we must bear for a little while.

"I tell them about how big America is, how big her factories are, and how no power can stop America and Britain together.

"That is why you see them still hopeful."

EQUIPMENT LOSSES

Unbroken and Unshaken

They are grim and sobered after the fury that was Greece. But they are unbroken and unshaken in the conviction that man for man they are better soldiers than the Germans and want only an opportunity to prove it.

And now with the British expeditionary force once more on Egyptian soil and with German planes flying to Africa in groups of 50 and 60, all indications are that action will not be long in coming.

In the desert the Greek situation is reversed. Here it is the Germans who must cross the sea and the British forces who are fighting closer to their own bases on land they know well.

The sand wastes of the desert offer the best opportunity the war has provided so far for achieving something so far not achieved — turning back Hitler's army.

AUSTRALIANS

Gen. Blamey said 3,000 men of the British expeditionary force, including a few Australians, had to be left behind on beaches in the Peloponnesus and other places as they were cut off by advancing Germans.

He asserted that increased mechanization of Imperial forces was the only way to cope with the present German military advantage. Gen. Blamey said Anzac troops proved decisive superiority whenever they met their foe on equal terms.

Attacks Beaten Off

With the British Fleet at Alexandria, May 1 (Delayed)—(CP)—A squadron of British cruisers and destroyers landed 5,000 Australian troops from Greece today after beating off persistent dive-bombing attacks in which German pilots dropped thousand-pound bombs.

The Australians set up Bren (rapid-fire) guns on the decks of their ships and used their rifles to aid in repelling the bombers.

Some near misses heavily rocked the ships, the troops reported.

The commander of one vessel said the troops were taken off lighters and small craft west of Athens which carried them half a mile for embarkation on the warships in pitch darkness on the night of April 25.

Sixty women nurses were among the evacuees.

The commander said the British squadron was attacked heavily by dive bombers while heading south in the Aegean.

BEAVERBROOK IS

Relieves Churchill of Duties

Lord Beaverbrook, who has speeded up airplane manufacture to meet the German challenge in the air, is expected to have undivided control of the production of guns, tanks and other equipment in his new post.

Concentration of his drive and energy on this problem would relieve Mr. Churchill of many of his cares and permit him to devote his full time to the military and diplomatic aspects of the war.

Political observers said Lord Beaverbrook's new post would make him, in effect, a sort of Deputy Prime Minister.

It appeared the change would not affect the composition of the existing war cabinet of which Lord Beaverbrook has been a member.

Two other minor government changes were made, Col. J. J. Llewellin and Frederick Montague trading their respective posts as Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Transport and Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Aircraft Production.

The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, said: "Lord Beaverbrook's transfer to a job without departmental cares means he can be thrown by the Prime Minister into the battle wherever it is hottest."

Expert on Shipping

Unification of the Ministries of transport and shipping brought favorable comment from most quarters. Mr. Leathers, who takes over the new wartime communications portfolio, has been adviser on coal to the Ministry of Shipping. Though his name does not appear in 'Who's Who' and he has not been prominent in politics, he is a director of 51 corporations with world-wide connections and is known as an expert on shipping problems.

Born in London's poor East End, he began his career as an office boy and is now Managing Director of the company with which he started.

Lord Beaverbrook whose origins were also humble long has been an important figure in public life, where he has earned a reputation as a gruff go-better.

He was born William Maxwell Aitken, son of a Scottish Minister, near Aurora, Ont., on May 25, 1879. Starting as a newsboy, he went into the insurance business and then into banking, engineering a series of financial coups culminated by the merger of several Canadian cement companies.

Before he was 30 he had amassed a fortune which later enabled him to become a powerful figure in Britain as a publisher.

He was influential in the unseating of the Asquith government and the rise of David Lloyd George to Prime Minister. He was raised to the peerage in 1917. His only public office before he was called into the government a year ago was as Minister of Information in 1918.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 2 — (CP) — Dressedweight were up 35 cents at Chatham, dressedweight up 15 cents at Barrie and liveweight up 25 cents at Chatham while prices were unchanged at other bacon-hog markets reporting today. While Toronto reports have quoted Chatham dressedweight as $10.95 and liveweight $8, Chatham reported today prices fell to $10.60 and $7.75 last April 25 and have been unchanged at those figures until today.

Liveweight: Chatham $8.

Dressedweight: Barrie $11.15, Brantford $10.65 plus transportation, Chatham $10.95, Hull $11, plus transportation, Stratford $10.50 plus transportation.

REVOKES PEGGING OF BUTTER PRICE

Wartime Prices and Trade Board Says Pegging Order is 'No Longer Necessary'

Ottawa, May 2 (CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced last night that the order of Dec. 27, 1940, fixing the maximum wholesale price for butter had been revoked.

At Montreal this price was about 34 1-2 cents a pound for first grade creamery solids.

An official of the Board said the order had been revoked "because it is no longer necessary."

"Actually, the current market price is about five cents below the maximum," he said. "It will be recalled that when we issued the Dec. 27 order, it was stated that the question would be reviewed at the end of the winter season."

Canada's butter supply had improved, the official said. The country, with cattle being placed out to graze, soon will have increased butter production.

Issuing the December order, the Board said that the butter supply of the Dominion was below normal.

It added that the pegging action had been withheld several weeks "in the hope that the gradual increase in prices would attract imports sufficient to meet any physical shortage feared by the market."

Ont. Gov't Hog Subsidy In Effect On May 5th

Toronto, May 2 (CP)—The Ontario Agricultural Department announced today that the Ontario government subsidy of $1 per hog carcass grading "A" and 50 cents for "B1" carcasses would apply to all hogs slaughtered in approved plants on and after May 5.

The subsidy will apply on carcasses graded in packing plants where a Dominion government grader is in charge of grading or in smaller plants which have been approved by the Ontario government. These plants will work in co-operation with the Dominion graders. Grading will be according to the Dominion standards.

Agriculture Minister Hon. P. M. Dewan cautioned farmers applying for the subsidy to make sure that the purchasing plant has government recognition.

To receive the subsidy the farmer must have his hogs identified so that the carcasses can be graded and a grading certificate can be issued in his name. In addition he must secure from the drover, packing plant or shipper, this grading certificate signed by the grader. Next he is to secure an application form from his shipper, packing plant or agricultural representative, to be attached to grading certificates and forwarded to the hog subsidy division of the Ontario Department of Agriculture within 60 days from the time the certificates are issued.

Cheese Board

Only three factories were represented at the opening meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board of Trade held in the City Hall council room Thursday night. A total of 116 boxes of cheese were offered for sale and all sold. Sixty boxes of white sold at 14 5-8 cents and 56 boxes of colored at 15c, Mr. W. R. McCreary being the purchaser.

The factories represented were Central with 18 white, Cloverdale with 56 colored and Quinte with 42 boxes of white.

Eastern Ontario Cheese Boards

Delta—Boarded, 730 boxes white, 164 colored. White sold at 14 1-2, colored at 15 5-8.

24 HOURS DAY, 7 DAYS WEEK, INDUSTRY'S GOAL

Pres. Roosevelt Calls for Longer Use of Machine Tools, Relieving Them Only for Overhaul and Repair

Washington, May 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt called today for defence industry to work its machine tools "24 hours a day and seven days a week," relieving them only for overhaul and repair.

He appealed through the office of production management for an expanded and expedited supply of new machie tools and said he believed exisiting ones could be used hours longer without boosting workers' individual hours.

Mr. Roosevelt made the plea to meet what he called the "ever-increasing demands for munitions, planes and ships, caused by the critical situation which confronts our nation."

In another defence discussion, at his press conference, the President was asked whether plans were being considered to speed up plane production by increased use of automobile plants and replied that efforts have been directed along this line for several months.

He added the idea was to have the auto makers turn out something, and where they could not turn out planes they could produce parts for them.

Mr. Roosevelt could not supply any figures, he said, when asked whether the present aim was to have plane and auto factories turn out 500 four-engined bombers a month.

Use Maximum Hours

In a letter made public at his press conference, he told William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, O.P.M. directors, it is essential that "industry continue to increase the number of vital machines manufactured and that every single critical machine in the United States be used the maximum number of hours each week."

He said he appreciated the increased number of hours existing machines were being worked, but that was not enough and that the goal now should be "to work these machines 24 hours a day and seven days a week relieving the machines only for such times as is required for overhauling and repair."

Discussing the letter with reporters, the President said he wanted a pool of useful or potentially-useful machine tools gathered from big and little plants, that they should be used where they are or moved to places where they could be operated, and that sufficent men be found to operate them.

He said he believed sufficient labor could be found without increasing existing individual hours of work.

Settlement Of Strike At Kitchener Announced

Kitchener, Ont., May 2 (CP) — Settlement of the strike affecting 92 out of 100 workers at the Dominion Truck and Equipment Co. Ltd., here was announced today. The three-point program of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee was accepted by the management.

The walkout yesterday was in protest against the discharge of a 17 year old machine worker in a small department. Union officials said today the boy was re-employed and that the management has agreed to enter into negotiations for a union contract within a week.

The management declined comment early today but said a statement would be issued later.

There was still no word of settlement of the strike in the Waterloo Manufacturing Company's plant at nearby Waterloo where almost 200 employees walked out yesterday. Union officials there said the strike was in protest against refusal of the management to meet with officers of the Canadian Congress of Labor, with which the S.W.O.C. is affiliated.

TRAINING FOR OFFENSIVE

While many people think the British army is training for defensive action against the enemy, British army commanders have other ideas and vigorous exercises are being carried out by troops to fit them for an offensive at the appropriate time. The army in the Middle East has already demonstrated that offensive spirit and the troops at home are preparing for the day when they, too, will attack and smash the enemy. A Tommy gunner keeps his eyes open for the "enemy" during an exercise.

ADDRESS OF TOBACCO CONSIGNMENTS

Ottawa May 2—(CP)—Canadians sending cigarettes and tobacco for free distribution to Canadian armed forces in the United Kingdom should address consignments to the assistant director of auxiliary services at Canadian Military Headquarters in London the Auxiliary Services Branch of the Defence Department announced today.

WORKER HOSTELS TO HOUSE WOMEN OF MUNITION PLANTS

London (CP)—New comforts for the women working in munition factories will be provided by the new hostel system in England.

One hostel already in operation will house 2,000 girls. The dormitories are divided into two-bed cubicles, there are shower baths, lounges, a "repair" (wash, iron and sewing room) and writing rooms. On the ground floor is a central hall for dancing, lectures, concerts and classes. Two more capable of housing 4,000 each are being built and plans are made to extend the system.

If the plan works out satisfactorily this may solve some of the social, housing and health problems of factory workers in post-war England, is was suggested. Similar hostels are to be built for workmen.

THE WAR TODAY

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Two Associated Press correspondents who left Greece with British Imperial forces today counteracted by their personal witness stories German boasts of the alleged destruction or capture of around 40,000 Imperial troops of the Greek Imperial expeditionary force.

Robert St. John, safe in Cairo with a slight leg wound from machine-gun fire, reported on his 25-day flight from Yugoslavia via Greece, saying "something under 50,000 Imperial troops from Greece" had been evacuated in "one of the greatest feats of the British navy."

Larry Allen, another AP man who has been with the Mediterranean fleet almost ever since the war of the middle east broke out, reported a British squadron of cruisers and destroyers had landed 5,000 Australian troops at Alexandria, despite repeated Nazi dive-bombing attacks.

Visible discontent arose among axis-educated Iraq Moslems who scented danger in the arrival of a British protective force, apparently designed to defend the country's British-owned oil fields.

Some Iraq residents are believed to have fallen victim to the intensive Italo-German radio propaganda which has been disseminated within the last few years. The Italians, particularly, have been keen Moslem advertisers, giving Arabs radio sets which would tune only to Italian stations and proclaiming Mussolini as the "defender of Islam."

During their return flight from bombing raids over Germany, R.A.F. pilots recently "delivered" 75,000 small bags of tea to Dutch householders. The tea bags, CENTRE, a gift from the Free Netherlands Indies, were released through the flare chute of the bombing planes. Attached to each bag was a colorful label bearing the words: "Holland will rise again.... Greetings from the Free Netherlands Indies.... Keep you chins up." British pilots are shown examining the bags, LEFT and RIGHT, as they were loaded into the huge bombers.

Price-Fixing By Manufacturers And Dealers To Increase Price Of Necessities Of Life Disapproved

Ottawa, May 2 (CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board in a statement issued today expressed disapproval of price-fixing agreements by manufacturers and dealers to increase the price of necessities of life.

"The matter came to the board's attention yesterday through a newspaper report from Cornwall, Ontario, that all the bread companies and distributors in the community had decided at a meeting to increase the price and that the new price would apply to all firms vending bread," the Board said in its statement.

H. B. McKinnon, chairman of Board, immediately wrote to a representative of the Cornwall bakers expressing the Board's "definite disapproval", at any such joint action to increase prices under wartime conditions, particularly with respect to a necessity such as bread.

The board said it considered prices should be a matter of individual responsibility in the light of individual firm's costs and competitive conditions.

Mr. McKinnon in his letter, added that "bakers and dealers should have in mind that joint action to eliminate price competition may involve violation of the Combines Investigation Act and may necessitate proceedings under that statute."

Picton and District

Picton, May 2 (Special)—Miss M. Robins, assistant superintendent of the Children's Aid Society at Belleville, was guest speaker at the annual meeting of Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society on Tuesday evening. Miss Robins spoke on C. A. S. work, stressing the importance of suiting the personality of the child to the foster home.

Members of the Home and School Club, Warden D. O. Reynolds and members of County Council were among those present. President Cal. Spencer presided and gave a summary of the work. Superintendent Ralph Hubbs' report revealed a great increase in the work. Mrs. Harold Knapman gave the report of the secretary and Mrs. C. G. Rutter that of the treasurer. Rev. J. B. Creeggan sang and Mrs. Case Walters was pianist. Superintendent T. D. Ruston, Belleville, was also present. Refreshments were served with Mrs. W. S. Lane and Mrs. Knapman as conveners.

After the nominating committee had presented a slate of officers, Reeve H. S. Colliver expressed the opinion that new blood was needed on the board and felt changes would keep the public better informed of the work. As a result the following were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. S. P Dodds, Sr.
Pres.—Cal. Spencer.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. W. Van Blaricom.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Henry Williams.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Winston Hicks.
Secty.—Mrs. H. Knapman.
Treas.—Mrs. C. G. Rutter.

Board Members—Mrs. A. E. Calnan, Mrs. H. G. Blakely, Mrs. C. Ball, Mrs. H. Vancleaf, Mrs. John Goodwin, Mrs. W. S. Lane, Mrs. A. H. Walton, Mrs. S. R. Foreman, Mrs. Harry Clark, W. H. Nettleton, G. M. Hicks, L. A. Vanskiver, Mrs. Frank Morden, Mrs. H. M. Pyne, Mrs. A. Davis. Sherman McQuaid. Rev. J. T. E. Blanchard, Rev. F. E. Rice, also Reeve Roy Ketcheson and H. A. Anderson, representing County Council.

Ex-officio Vice-Presidents—Revs. J. F. Reycraft, J. B. Creeggan, S. R. Foreman, R. Dick, J. A. Meehan and Capt. C. Bonar.

Ex-officio Members—Mrs. D. B. Gorsline, President County W. I.; Miss L. Boulter, Regent I.O.D.E.; Mayor N. McKibbon, Warden D. O. Reynolds; representative of Boy Scouts, Cal. Spencer..

Given Shower

Cherry Valley hall was filled Wednesday evening when friends tendered a shower for Mr. and Mrs. Charles West. of Belleville The bride was formerly Alice Wiggins. The program included a song by Olga Balutansky, readings by Mrs. Arthur Fennell and Phil Dodds, vocal solos by Mrs. Stelmack, Mrs. Jack Beaumont and Mrs. Gordon Bell and music by Lyal Hicks, Douglas Moore, Larry Bell, Norbert Kavanagh and Douglas Moore. A husband calling contest with Mrs. A. Beckwith, Mrs. F. Kemp and Mrs. Beaumont taking part provided much amusement. In a celery eating contest Larry Bell won over N. Kavanagh, D. Moore and L. Hicks. Mrs. Willard Metcalfe was winner in a clothespin contest with Miss Thelma Blakely and Miss Freda Marshall also taking part.

As the bride and groom took their places in decorated chairs beneath a canopy of pink streamers, they were showered with confetti by Misses Nina Sills and Alleta Unger who also assisted in opening the many lovely gifts which were displayed on a long table. An address was read by Mrs. Keith Magee and several baskets of gifts were carried in by the little Misses Hopkinson of Greenbush, nieces of the bride. Mr. W. K. Browne, Picton, gave a short talk in which he paid tribute to the bride and presented her with a lovely keepsake. Both Mr. and Mrs. West suitably expressed their thanks and were greeted with "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows", with Mrs. E. Foster at the piano. Mr. Stilman, with violin, also provided accompaniment during the evening. After the National Anthem, the many gifts were admired by the crowd

Tag Day For Blind

A thorough canvass of Picton and Bloomfield homes as well as tagging on the streets is being held on Saturday in aid of the National Institute for the Blind. Picton captains are Mrs. J. Goodwin, Mrs. C. Herman, Mrs. H. Reid, Mrs. A. Adams, Mrs. B. Bailey, Miss M. Ward, Rev. J B. Creeggan, Colin Carter, all of whom will provide cars.

Bloomfield Captains are Mrs. McLeod and Barbara Foster, Shirley Singer, Jane Pike, Barbara Cooper, Marguerite Stacey, Elinor Fox and Wilma Biddle will tag.

Picton Public School canvassers are Helen McCoy, Phyllis Ferguson, Sheila Adams, Ruth Thomas, Roma Cross, Jennie Allen, Helen Beasley, Helen Andrews, Shirley Brisbin, Shirley Jones, Freda Hudgin, Charlotte Reid, Barbara Rutter Barbara Nourse, Evelyn Harrison, Bernice Lumsden, Catherine Dunlop Agnes Creighton, Phyllis McWilliams, Margaret Ductta, Alice Caton, Ivy Miller, Frances Ross, Noreen Smith, Patsy Hogle, Christina Cowan, Rebecca Francis, Barbara McStephens, Muriel Stark, Lois Frederick, Helen Myatt, Jean Thompson, Shirley Henry, Sheila Creeggan, Eva McCaw, Phyllis McQuoid, Ruth Allison, Beverly Williams, Earla Myatt, Doris Devine, Rita Heffernan, Sara Gentile.

Trenton, Ont., May 2 — (CP)—Major W. G. Grothier, officer commanding "C" Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton, has been appointed adjutant of the regiment.

British Press Views On Changes In Ministries

London, May 2 —(CP Cable)—Morning newspapers generally commended the government changes in which Lord Beaverbrook was made Minister of State and the shipping and transport ministries were merged.

However, the Daily Telegraph remarked that the war cabinet remains unchanged, and added that Prime Minister Churchill "re-distributed the offices in a manner which will make changes in the organization and personnel to deal with fresh problemms in the administration now arising."

The Daily Express said that "the changes in the government, dramatic and unexpected as they are, should not come as a surprise to the public. Lord Beaverbrook's transfer to a job without departmental cares means he can be thrown by the Prime Minister into the battle wherever it is hottest."

The Daily Mail commented: "It seems the Prime Minister now has partly admitted the idea of a supdeme war cabinet composed of men who will not be harassed by departmental duties but will be able to share in the general direction of the war policy."

Said the News Chronicle: "Lord Beaverbrook's drive and energy must not be lost to the nation. We hope he will be given the opportunity to be a useful as he was at the Ministry of Aircrafe Production." The newspaper added: "We warmly welcome the decision to appoint a minister responsible for transport and shipping."

The Daily Herald asked if Lord Beaverbrook's transfer was a step towards freeing the ministers of departmental responsibilities and enabling them to give the maximum attention to planning and coordinating general policy.

It asked further whether the shipping-transport merger foreshadows a "proper co-ordination of the transport system." It expressed the hope that the changes signal a drive to "achieve efficiency in every branch of the war organization."

Outstanding U-Boat Commander Reported Missing Since April 17

London, May 2—(CP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation reported today that Lt.-Cmdr. Guenther Prien, one of Germany's outstanding U-boat commanders, has been missing since April 13.

The BBC said the source of its report was a Reuters News Agency message "confirmed by neutral sources in Berlin."

Lt.-Cmdr. Prien commanded the U-boat which sank the British battleship Royal Oak in a daring raid on the Scapa Flow naval base early in the war.

Croatia Patterned To Fit Neatly Into Axis Orbit

Editor's Note:—Max Harrelson was the only foreign correspondent in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, when the German invasion began April 6 and his story is the first neutral eye-witness account of the creation of the new Croat state.

Cut off from the rest of the world for more than three weeks in Zagreb, Harrelson finally reached Budapest and last midnight announced to the Berne Bureau of The Associated Press:

"Well, I'm back from the dead".

By MAX HARRELSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest, Hungary, May 2 (AP)—The new independent state of Croatia, carved from the ruins of Yugoslavia, is a totalitarian state patterned to fit neatly into the Axis orbit.

It came into being almost at the same instant that German armored cars dashed into Zagreb, April 10—four days after the Nazi invasion began—and it promptly took on the familiar aspects of a Fascist state.

Among the evidences of the character of the new state which I saw during my three weeks there were these:

There is one political organization—Ustachi—which has rights and functions correlated with the regular civil administration.

The head of this organization (apparently similar to the one-party system of Fascism) and the head of the government is Dr. Ante Pavelic. The Zagreb press and radio began calling him "Fuehrer of the Croat people" soon after he was named.

Stern Measures Against Jews

It appeared that the new government will be as severe perhaps as any in Europe in dealing with Jews. Stern measures already have been taken in this regard and authoritative sources said further steps could be expected.

The geography of the new state is not clear but it is expected to include about 5,000,000 persons, roughly one third of the population of Yugoslavia. Italy is expected to take the Dalmation coast, cutting Croatia off from the sea, and other slices—by Hungary and Germany—may reduce it to about half the size visualized by Croat patriots.

Croatia is to have its own army and is to handle its own foreign relations through its own diplomatic corps. There are no signs of German troop withdrawals and the Germans are cooperating in travel regulation and in safeguarding against disorders.

Feeling against the Serbs is strong and the Croats lost no time in eliminating all signs of Serb influence.

Feeling against the United States also is strong. Some newspapers blame President Roosevelt for Yugoslavia's resistance to the axis. One of the new government's first acts was to prohibit the showing of American-made movies.

Awakened by Sirens

Excerpts from the diary I kept during the critical first five days of the war show that on April 6 Zagreb was awakened at 6.45 a.m. by the wail of sirens. Ten minutes later two German Heinkels broke through the clouds and circled leisurely at 10,000 feet while 50 anti-aircraft guns popped. The planes glided back into the clouds.

Then the people started pouring into the streets to find out what it was all about. One policeman said it was only practice but some of us knew that it was war. The news was not announced to the public, there were no newspapers and the radio gave no information.

Emergency measures by authorities finally convinced the populace it actually was war.

On April 10 Croatia became the newest 'independent' state in Europe after being under foreign rule since 1102. The new state came into being almost simultaneously with the entrance of German troops in Zagreb.

German motorized forces streaming through the main streets were given a welcome by the populace far different from the one witnessed in Holland 11 months ago. Many Croats climbed on the German vehicles and kissed the soldiers.

After nightfall scores of persons were taken to hospitals victims of mysterious attacks. There were some deaths, including the suicides of a number of Jews.

PERCENTAGE FAVOR BOMBING

London, May 2—(CP Cable)—Fifty-three per cent of Britons favor reprisal bombing of Germany, according to a Gallup poll.

The poll revealed 38 per cent against and nine per cent undecided. Sentiment in favor of reprisals was almost in inverse ratio to the amount of bombing experienced.

Iraqi Artillery Near Habbaniyah Airdrome Silenced By British Guns

A SERIOUS THREAT

London, May 3 (CP)—Fighting between British and Iraq forces at Habbaniyah airdrome stretched into the second day, an official announcement said today.

The statement said only that some Iraqi artillery had been silenced and "the fighting continues."

At the same time a Swiss radio broadcast heard here quoted an Iraq communique claiming that 26 British aircraft had been destroyed on Habbaniyah airfield a British base 60 miles west of Bagdhad and saying British motorized detachments had failed in an attempt to occupy another airfield.

With Premier Raschid Ali Gailani of Iraq reported to have called on Hitler for help, the Nazi menace to Britain's vital interests in the eastern Mediterranean assumed graver proportions.

An authoritative source declared plans had been made "long ago" to meet any interference with the oil pipeline from Iraq's oil fields to the Mediterranean shore.

As far as he knows, this source said, oil still is flowing through the pipeline. But he added any interference would not materially affect the British oil reserves in the Mediterranean area, which he called "numerous and adequate."

The Day in Parliament

By The Canadian Press

Today:

The House stands adjourned to Monday when Conservative House Leader Hanson will lead off in the budget debate.

The Senate stands adjourned to May 13.

Yesterday:

The House passed the $35,000,000 vote to finance the government's 1941-42 wheat acreage reduction plan, but details of the policy likely will be discussed again during consideration of general agricultural estimates; Trade Minister MacKinnon placed in Hansard a statement on wheat delivery quota expectations for this year's crop; members debated a private Senate bill authorizing the British Columbia Telephone Company to double its capital, but the effort of G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) to have it sent to committee failed and the bill may not be reached again this season.

Famous Writer Says Freedom Will Prevail

Dorothy Thompson Gives Address at Toronto

Toronto, May 4 (CP). — Dorothy Thompson said in an address here Friday night she knew of 'no one who pretends to knowledge who believed the British forces could successfully fight the immense German land army from a toe-hold in Greece". She spoke before the annual convention banquet of the International Affiliation of Sales and Advertising Clubs.

The internationally-known newspaper columnist compared the present world conflict to the fight of Texas for freedom from Mexico, and telling of the reverses suffered by the Texans early in their battles said the Greek resistance 'will yet furnish another battle-cry for the forces of freedom". In great struggles such as the present one, "defeats, retreat are all part of the picture".

She said Hitler "can't destroy us, and he knows it".

"In North America we have 150,000,000 people. If we act as one people, without regard to race or creed or economic conditions, nothing in the world can destroy us and whoever attempts to do so will be destroyed."

She listed the advantages and achievements of the North American continent — superiority in raw material and production; and told of inventions now in common use as weapons of war which had been invented on the continent. On this continent was "everything necessary to overthrow the menace and liberate the planet", but "the only thing we may not have is the will."

"If, in the face of this challenge, we cannot forget everything else except our manhood and our womanhood, our faith, and our intentions to survive, to triumph, to rebuild . . . then we will not survive as a people."

She said plans for a "negotiated axis peace" had been set forth in the Japan Times Advertiser, which she described as a "controlled organ of the Japanese foreign office".

The plans, as advanced by the Times Advertiser, would have the British Empire "utterly destroyed". The British Isles would be evacuated gradually to Canada, with the population reduced on the isles to obviate the possibility of further British resistance to the Nazi order.

She said people were learning slowly that they may sit dead at their desk or drop dead in their fields while minding their own business. "Before this epoch is over, every human being will have chosen," she said. "If he takes no side, he is on Hitler's side; if he does not act, that is an act—for Hitler . . .

"If we desire isolation we shall have it—the isolation of a prison camp in a hostile community."

War Office Writes Official 'Finis' To Greek Campaign In Statement

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 3 (CP Cable)—The war office wrote its official "finis" to the Greek campaign by issuing a 1,000-word statement today summarizing the heroic resistance that a relatively small contingent of British and Imperial troops, fighting side by side with the Greek army, put up against mechanized Nazi hordes sweeping down from the north into the ancient cradle of civilization.

quate forces had been allotted to characteristic of war office communiques, the statement showed that certain events—diplomatic and political as well as military— foredoomed the campaign.

Entitled simply "the campaign in Greece," the statement indicated that the first vulnerable point in the allied resistance lay in the fact that "disposal of the Yugoslav forces appears to have been governed not alone by military but also by political considerations and inade-

Couched in dry, terse phrases the south of the country where the real threat lay."

This dsiposal, it explained, had been planned by the pro-axis government thrown out in the sensational coup d'etat that preceded the Balkan campaign, and the new government under Gen. Dusan Simovic did not have time to revise the plans.

Germans Advanced Rapidly. CH

As a result, said the statement, the Germans were able to advance rapidly up the Strumitza valley and reached Salonika on the evening of April 8. That port had been evacuated at the outset, in accordance with the allied strategy.

Three Greek divisions in the east were cut off from the main body of the allied forces.

More serious still the rapid advance through Yugoslavia threatened the Monastir Gap, the strategic

LIVERPOOL PORT OBJECTIVE OF GERMAN RAIDERS

Communique Says Casualties May Be Large And Substantial Damage Done

REVERSE PROCEDURE

Liverpool, May 3—(CP)—German raiders, showering bombs by the thousands, battered this vast Merseyside industrial and shipping centre last night and early today in the severest attack here in months—an attack from which casualties and destruction were feared heavy.

The Germans struck, too, along the east coast, smashing dwellings and taking lives in an east Anglian town, but Liverpool for the second successive night was target No. 1.

At the same time, British bombers were reported to have dumped explosives onto the big north German port of Hamburg and other targets in northwestern Germany. (Dispatches from Berlin said the raids were by relatively large forces of the Royal Air Force.)

The attack along the dock-lined Mersey River "was heavy and lasted several hours," a terse communique said. It added: "Early reports suggested that the number of casualties may be large and that a substantial amount of damage was done."

Beleaguered Defenders Repulse Axis Assaults On The Port Of Tobruk

Cairo, Egypt, May 3 (AP)— Axis assaults on Tobruk, failing at heavy cost to budge that Libyan port's beleaguered defenders, have tapered off and British forces across the border in the Salum area of Egypt have taken prisoners in a surprise foray into the axis lines, the British command announced today.

The day-long attack on Tobruk yesterday, its war bulletin said, was made with a large number of tanks but British troops "held their ground and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy."

"Before nightfall," the communique added, "enemy pressure relaxed and no further efforts were made during last night.

"In the Salum area one of our mechanized columns, after making a wide detour, surprised a considerable body of the enemy. A number of prisoners were captured, together with a field gun."

In Ethiopia, it reported a total of 1,235 additional Italian and colonial troops captured by British troops pressing in from north and south on Amba Alaji, Waldia, 50 miles north of Dessie, has been taken, it said.

EVACUATION COSTS TWO DESTROYERS, FOUR TRANSPORTS

700 TROOPS RESCUED

London, May 3 (CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the British withdrawal from Greece was accomplished with the loss of two destroyers and four transports.

The communique said only one of the transports sunk had troops [illegible] and that 700 of the men aboard were rescued by British destroyers.

Both these destroyers, the Diamond and the Wrynock, were later sunk by German dive bombers and it was feared the casualties were heavy, the Admiralty said.

British sources have told of the withdrawal of from 45,000 to 48,000 of the 60,000 British soldiers sent to Greece for the Balkan campaign.

The survivors from the destroyers "reported that they were repeatedly attacked by machine-gun fire from German aircraft while they were in the water," the communique said.

New York Marine Circles Report Shipping Losses

These Losses Apparently Occurred Over Period of Some Time and May Have Been Included in British Admiralty Statements

(By The Canadian Press)

New York marine circles in the week ended May 2 reported British and Allied shipping losses totalling 94,620 tons.

These losses, however, apparently occurred over a period of some time and, although the ships named had not previously been reported sunk, may have been included in previous British Admiralty summaries.

These summaries, issued weekly up to the end of March, now are to be given out each month, and figures for April are expected within a week or ten days.

The losses reported by New York marine circles were in two groups. One, totalling 37,361 tons, covered sinking of four British and one Belgian ship in the Atlantic. As these reports apparently were based to some extent on wireless distress signals heard it is not certain that all did not reach port, although New York marine circles implied their outright loss.

The second group, comprising seven British and one Yugoslav vessel totalling 57,259 tons, covered sinking by Axis raiders in the Pacific.

TOBEY CHARGES U.S. GOV'T WANTS TO USE CONVOYS

Disclosed Senator Pepper Would Advocate That Navy Would Guard Shipments to Britain

'TRIAL BALLOON'

Washington, May 3 (AP) —A charge that the United States administration "wants to use convoys" but is being deterred by public opinion was voiced today by Senator Charles Tobey (Rep.-New Hampshire), as friends disclosed that Senator Claude Pepper (Dem-Florida) would advocate in the Senate Monday that the navy guard war shipments to Britain.

Pepper's projected speech, following closely a plea for convoys delivered in the Senate Thursday by Senator Joseph Guffey (Dem-Pennsylvania), led Tobey to observe that the administration appeared to be attempting to pave the way for such a program.

'All this" said Tobey, "lends additional support to my thesis that the administration wants to use convoys but is being prevented from doing so because of public opinion."

Fliers From Yorkton Training School Crash on Routine Training Flight

Yorkton, Sask., May 3 (CP) — Two members of the Royal Canadian Air Force, one from Eastern Canada, were killed late yesterday when a plane from No. 11 Flying Service Training School crashed near here.

The dead: Sgt. M. E. Davidson, whose widow resides at Galt, Ont., and AC. T. R. Heibert of Saskatoon.

While Sgt. Davidson's widow now lives at Galt, it is believed that he came to Yorkton from Hamilton, O.

On a routine training flight the airmen were 12 miles northwest of Yorkton when the Harvard trainer crashed. A court of enquiry has been assembled by Group Captain G. R. Howsman, Officer Commanding the school.

Former King Carol Leaves for Cuba

Lisbon, May 3 (AP)—Bound for sanctuary in Cuba, former King Carol of Rumania, Mme. Magda Lupescu and their faithful former Palace Chamberlain, Ernest Urdares, sailed at midnight on the African Export liner Excambion.

They planned to debark at Bermuda and obtain passage thence to Havana, ending their long flight which began Sept. 6 when the Iron Guard revolution sent them hastening first to Switzerland, then to Spain and finally to Portugal.

Carol and the woman for whose love he once renounced his rights to the throne as a youth, slipped aboard the liner at 1.30 p.m. Friday wearing dark sunglasses. Mme Lupescu brought along their four pet dogs.

NAZI FREIGHTER INTERCEPTED BY BRITISH CRUISER

Attempting to Run British Blockade From Rio De Janeiro Believed Scuttled and Set Afire

ARRIVED MARCH 3

New York, May 3 (AP).—Maritime sources said today that the 3,290-ton German freighter Lech which left Rio De Janeiro five days ago in an attempt to run the British blockade was intercepted yesterday by a British auxiliary cruiser and was reported sinking off Bahia, Brazil.

No other details were available here. The information that the ship was sinking indicated she was scuttled by her crew.

The Lech, a North German Lloyd ship built at Bremen in 1939, arrived at Rio De Janeiro March 3 with an airplane and chemical products for Brazil.

Capt. Frederich Brinkmann said then the Lech would remain until the end of the war and that the arrival proved that "Germany delivers the goods".

The ship was camouflaged and it was reported she had come from Bordeaux.

FREIGHTER LINES LIFT EMBARGO

Embargo Imposed Two Weeks Ago Because of Wage Dispute

Buffalo, N.Y., May 3 (AP)—Two Great Lakes package freighter lines announced Friday lifting of an embargo imposed as the result of a wage dispute with the International Longshoremen's Association (A.F.L.).

A spokesman for the lines—the Great Lakes Transit Corporation and the Minnesota-Atlantic Company—said movement of freight by the two companies probably would begin Monday with loading operations scheduled to begin today.

The embargo, called last weekend, tied up 17 vessels and made 1,000 dock and warehouse workers jobless as the lakes navigation season officially opened yesterday.

H. T. Hoopes, President of the Minnesota-Atlantic line, reported it was decided to lift the embargo after being informed the Buffalo and Duluth, Minn., locals of the I. L. A. had agreed to arbitrate differences with the companies. He said an "informal" conference between union and company representatives was scheduled for Tuesday.

In announcing the embargo, the companies asserted the I.L.A. had threatened a work stoppage of 500 Buffalo dock workers. The union, he added, is asking a basic wage of $1.10 an hour compared with the present rate of 80 cents.

London, May 3 (CP).—Sir Kinahan Cornwallis, British ambassador to Iraq, reported to London today that "all is quiet in Baghdad".

"While the situation there is tense, no incident has so far occurred." an official announcement said.

(The Nazi propaganda radio previously had pictured the British ambassador as personally distributing leaflets on the streets of Baghdad. It asserted he was chased back to his embassy by anti-British Iraqis.)

Extensive Damage Caused By Fires In Industrial Area

Admiralty Statement On Troop Withdrawal

London, May 3 (AP).—An Admiralty communique Saturday on the troop withdrawal from Greece said:

"During the night of April 24-25 about 13,500 of the Imperial forces were withdrawn from the Rapthis and Nauplia areas. During this night an empty transport ran aground. She was bombed and burned out.

"On the night of April 25-26 about 55 men of the Imperial forces were withdrawn from Megara.

"One transport was bombed and sunk by enemy aircraft. Fortunately, the transport had not embarked troops and was empty. The same night an empty transport was damaged by enemy ai rattack. She was taken in tow by a destroyer but afterwards became a total loss.

"On the night of April 26-27, about 16,000 men of the Imperial forces were withdrawn from Greece.

Transport Bombed.

"Over 8,000 of these were withdrawn from the Kalamata area; over 4,000 from Nauplia and 3,500 from the Rphina and Rapthis areas.

"While the troops were being withdrawn from Nauplia, a transport was bombed and set on fire after having embarked troops. The destroyer H.M.S. Diamond (Lt.-Cmdr. P. A. Cartwright, R.N.) at once went to the rescue of troops from this transport. Although H.M.S. Diamond and boats from the transport were continuously attacked from the air, the destroyer picked up about 600 men. On leaving Nauplia, H.M.S. Diamond was joined by H.M.S. Wryneck (Cmdr. R. H. D. Lane, R.N.) and both destroyers returned to Nauplia to search for further survivors from the transport.

"H.M.S. Wryneck rescued a further 100 men and the burning wreck of the transport was sunk by a torpedo from H.M.S. Diamond since it was a danger to navigation and was providing the enemy with light by which to deliver his air attacks.

Both Destroyers Sunk

"H.M.S. Diamond and H.M.S. Wryneck then left Nauplia.

"The next morning both of these ships were attaked by German dive bombers and sunk. It is feared that casualties were heavy, altho' some 50 survivors were picked up by another destroyer sent to search the area and it is believed that at least one boat may have reached the Greek shore.

Survivors from these destroyers reported that they repeatedly were

Express Convoys May be Used to Win Atlantic Battle

London, May 3 (CP)—Britain and the United States were said reliably today to be easing pressure on Eire for bases and to be concentrating on a new plan of express convoys to win the battle of the Atlantic.

An American source with good opportunities for an objective picture of the whole war situation described the British position at the moment as "pretty grim."

Need for quick aid is so urgent, he added, that even if Eire decided to turn over its bases the machinery might be so cumbersome they would be of little immediate advantage.

Britain's greatest need, he declared, is swift institution of a new system of convoys under close cooperation of the British and United States navies.

Two Nazi Supply Ships Attacked Off Netherlands Coast—One Set Afire And Other Sunk

EMDEN ATTACKED

London, May 3 (CP)— British bombers heavily bombed the German port of Hamburg last night, causing extensive damage and huge fires in industrial areas and around the docks, an authoritative source said today.

Other planes attacked Emden and oil stores at Rotterdam, in the German-occupied Netherlands, this source added.

During daylight yesterday two Nazi-controlled supply ships of about 500 tons were attacked off the Netherlands coast. One was set afire and the other was believed sunk.

Four British planes were reported missing.

Fanatical Moro Band Attacks Post And Loses 21 Tribesmen

Manila, May 3 (AP)—A fanatical Moro band armed only with knives and spears left 21 of their own dead on the wire entanglements of a constabulary post they attacked yesterday at Taglibi, Sulu Province.

There were no casualties among the 42 constabularymen of the Taglibi garrison. After the suicidal attack, the survivors withdrew at nightfall. The band was led by a chieftain named Hamjadi.

Reinforcements were sent to the wild and isolated region, scene of numerous recent uprising among the Mohammedan Moro tribes. In a clash with the constabulary last month, 25 tribesmen were killed.

DISLOCATES SHOULDER WHILE AT PLAY

While playing at Queen Mary School yesterday Mac Royle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Royle, 212 Coleman Street, had the misfortune to dislocate his shoulder and fracture his arm below the shoulder. He was taken to hospital where Dr. Brebner reduced the fracture.

STIRLING CONTRACTOR AWARDED CONTRACT

Mr. Roy Eggleton, well-known Stirling contractor, was awarded the tender for the re-construction of Sidney Town Hall Cheese Factory, which was destroyed by fire two weeks ago. Tenders closed on May 2nd and construction of the factory will commence at once. It is expected that the factory will be completed and ready for operation by the first of June, a period of only six weeks elapsed time from the date of the fire.

First Of The New Asparagus Sells Well On Market

Liberal offering of potted plants and flowers, garden plants for transplanting and perennial roots made market attenders definitely conscious of the spring planting season this morning, with many varieties of such plants featuring the weekly market display. Cabbage and tomato plants and Spanish onion sets were plentiful, with the first two varieties selling at 15 cents per box and onion sets ranging from 15 cents to 50 cents per flat according to sise. Pansies were 25c per box and perennial roots 20c each. Several vendors offered wild flowers at 10c per bunch.

Offerings of butter on the inside market struck a new low for this season with many of the regular butter vendors having ceased churning in favor of the cheese factory. Butter still maintained the usual figure of two pounds for 75c, however, with eggs also being quoted at last week's prices of 25c for grade "A" and 22c and 20c per dozen for other grades. The chicken offering was not large with prices ranging between 25c and 28c per pound. Broilers sold at 80c per pair.

Asparagus was offered on the outside market for the first time this season, selling at 15c per bunch or two for 25c. Rhubarb suffered a decline in price with last week's quotation of 10c per bunch being cut in half. All other fresh garden produce, such as celery and onions sold at 5c per bunch. Last year's vegetables such as carrots, turnips and beets sold at 30c per peck and onions at 50c for the same quantity. Potatoes sold steadily at $1 per bag. Offerings of apples were not large with best grade Northern Spys selling at 80c per peck or at $1.75 per bushel. Russets were 40c per peck with other cooking varieties selling at $1 per bushel.

White fish and lake trout were offered at last week's price of 25c per pound. Mudcats were two pounds for 25c with other varieties also retailing at previous prices.

Only a few loads of wood were offered, stove wood bringing $8 to $9 for soft and mixed varieties, while one load of slabwood was being sold at $6 per cord. Young porkers sold at prices ranging around $5 each according to age and sise.

RAMESES TEMPLE POTENTATE

S. A. Marshall, high Shriner dignitary, who headed a delegation of Rameses Shrine members at a district convocation held in Belleville Friday evening.

Toronto Shriners Convene In City

Shrine Nobles of Rameses Temple, Toronto, and associate members throughout Eastern Ontario, convened at the Quinte Hotel Friday evening in a ceremonial of their ancient right of Masonry. Bedecked in the conventional fez and headed by the renowned Rameses Temple band, the Shriners paraded the main streets of Belleville prior to their convention and attracted large gatherings of interested persons along the Front St. parade route. Shriners from as far east as Perth, Smiths Falls, Kingston and west to Toronto, Hamilton and intermediate points were present at the convocation presided over by Stanley A. Marshall, Potentate of Rameses Shrine.

The evening was devoted to sociability and fraternizing. Potentate Marshal accepted hospitality of the Belleville and district Shriners for their invitation to return to Belleville after a 20-year absence from this city. Speaking on the endeavours of the Shrine on this continent, however, Potentate Marshall gave a short resume of their crippled children's effort, which is world renowned.

Maintain 15 Hospitals

"We maintain 15 hospitals on this continent for the crippled children, two of which are in Canada, one in Montreal and the other in Winnipeg. It might be of interest to the members to know that since the inception of these hospitals, maintained solely by the Shrine, there have been 86,000 children released from these institutions, many of whom were able to take their place in the business world and earn themselves a living," was the essence of Potentate Marshall's remarks as he inferred " we are still our brother's keeper." Other Shrine notables of Rameses Shrine reported as to the humanitarian work of the order in their respective areas.

Music by Rameses Shrine Band

The evening's entertainment was enhanced by music provided by the Rameses Shrine band, monologues by George Cornish and a bagpipe parade by Jamie Clarke.

Potentate Marshall was accompanied to Belleville by the Shrine Divan and several Past Potentates while the local reception was in the hands of Noble E. T. Cherry, Potentate's Aid for Belleville and other local Nobles. Potentate's Aids from out the immediate district who were present included Nobles E. T. Cherry, Belleville, Dr. Grant Fraser, Madoc, John Maher, Picton, W. J. Potts, Trenton, Lester Caughey, Cobourg, Harold Beatty, Port Hope and Cameron Hay of Kingston.

The convention was the first of its kind to be held in Belleville in exactly 20 years. In October, 1921, the Rameses Temple Shrine held a ceremonial in Belleville at which time Tris Speaker, than star professional baseball player with the Cleveland American League Club and Les Nunamaker, catcher, with that baseball team, were both present as invited guests.

Committee to Meet Council to Request Building of Sidewalk

As the result of a parents' meeting held at the King George public school on Friday evening to discuss the necessity of having a sidewalk built along the west side of North Front Street, From Ridley Street over the west side of the overhead railway bridge and continuing north to the school, a committee of eight was appointed to meet the city council at their next regular meeting relative to a decision on the matter.

The matter of building a sidewalk at this point has been a point of contention for a considerable time, with parents living on the west side of North Front Street sending children to this school demanding that the sidewalk be constructed. At the present time children living in the district west of North Front Street, have to cross this street twice, while travelling to and from school.

A stainless steel wire coil has been invented to be placed in a tobacco pipe to prevent ashes and tobacco particles entering a smoker's mouth.

Bd. Of Education Offers To Retain Mr. MacLaurin As Science Teacher

The following statement was released to the press today by the Belleville Board of Education.

"To clear up any confusion that may exist in the minds of the public, or Student body of the Collegiate and Vocational School, the Board of Education has authorized the following statement:

"The Board, realising that the combined position of Principal and Science Teacher, in a school of this size, cannot be effectively carried on by one man, decided that it was necessary to separate the work.

"In view of Mr. MacLaurin's long years of faithful and able service in the Teaching Profession in general, and under the Belleville Board of Education in particular, the Board has offered to retain him after the end of this School year as Science Teacher, at the same salary as he is receiving at present, for the balance of the time until he goes on the Superannuation list.

"This matter has been under consideration for some time and was definitely decided at the Board meeting last Monday, April 28th."

Organizer Demands Government Probe Of Labor Situation

Kitchener, Ont., May 3 (CP)—Demand that the government conduct a public investigation into the labor situation in Kitchener, "so that these evils may be eradicated," was made by Arthur Williams, Canadian Congress of Labor organizer, at a mass meeting of workers here last night.

More than 200 employees of the Waterloo Manufacturing Company and the Dominion Truck and Equipment Company are still on strike.

McBride Baggage Company workers, numbering more than 150, returned to work yesterday afternoon after voting to go out on strike. They went back at the request of the C.C.L. organizer.

"This an organized policy of the part of the manufacturers of Kitchener not to have anything to do with trade unionism," Mr. Williams continued.

All three local plants involved in the disputes have war contracts. The government [illegible] Ainsborough of the Department of Labor, left Kitchener early last night for Hamilton.

He is expected to return by Monday.

"There are no new developments in the situation today," Mr. Williams said in announcing that a mass meeting will be held in a Kitchener theatre tomorrow afternoon with Mayor Joseph Meinzinger and Charles Millard, Toronto executive director of the C.C.L., as speakers.

Accidental Drowning Jury's Verdict

Accidental drowning was the coroner's jury verdict returned at an inquest held in Deseronto Friday evening looking into the death of Adam Corby, who was found drowned in the Deseronto harbour by youthful Richard Brant, on April 26th. last. The inquest was held before Coroner Dr. J. A. Boyce of Deseronto, with assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson conducting the investigation.

Young Brant told of fishing off the Deseronto dock last Saturday and believing his fish hook had encountered a snag, reeled in only to discover he had hooked the body of a man. Provincial Constable Hendren, of Belleville, concluded the evidence by informing the tribunal that the deceased had been missing for two weeks. The jury arrived at an accidental death verdict.

Successful Euchre Held By Madoc Women's Institute

Madoc.—On Monday night Madoc W.I. held a very successful card party and dance in the Eastern Star Hall, Madoc. The winners of the bridge prizes were Dr. Beatty and Mrs. Burris, while the euchre prizes went to Mrs. Fred Stewart and Mrs. Russell Lewis. The prizes in each case being War Savings Stamps. During the evening the draw for the lucky ticket on the Tip Top Tailor suit took place, Mrs. Earl Armstrong of Madoc holding the lucky ticket.

After lunch the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. The War Work Committee of which Mrs. Ambrose Smith is convener wishes to express their thanks to all who helped to make this project such a success. Quite recently the committee packed 1 pair of socks, 1 package of cigarettes and shipped to each Madoc boy serving overseas.

Moving Pictures

On Wednesday evening the citizens of Madoc village and community were given the privilege of seeing moving pictures of an Eastern Ontario unit overseas and shown by Caps. Hicks. Pictures were also shown of historic places in England many of which have been destroyed recently by the air raids.

Also many beautiful flower gardens for which England is noted. A number of the Madoc boys were recognized in the pictures. During the changing of films extra numbers were given by Mrs. L. Ashley and Mrs. Hulin giving an instrumental duet, Miss Broad gave two readings and Mr. Bill Hawthorne sang "Till the Lights of London Shine Again." The evening's entertainment was sponsored by Mrs. W. Parks and Mrs. Stockloser's group of the Women's Association of Trinity United Church.

Dr. H. W. Outerbridge From Japan To Speak At Bridge St. Church

Rev. Dr. Howard W. Outerbridge who recently returned from Japan, will preach at the morning service on Sunday, May 4, at Bridge Street United Church. This outstanding scholar and missionary will tell the latest news of Japan.

Dr. Outerbridge was appointed to Japan in 1910. He was unusually successful in his language study of Japanese. He taught at Kwansei Gakuin, Kobe, in the Academy Department. Two years were spent in the evangelistic field at Hamamatsu and later he became professor of Kwansei Gakuin where he had great influence in moulding the lives and characters of the student teachers of Japan. He also became bursar of the institution. His latest post in the university was that of Dean of the Department of Law and Literature. He has also been secretary and treasurer of the Japan mission. He was a delegate to the International Missionary Conference held at Madras in 1938.

Obituary

MRS. SERAPHIN JENKINS
(Toronto)

Bonarlaw, Ont., May 3 (Special)—Mrs. Seraphin Jenkins, a visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Barlow, died suddenly Friday morning from a heart attack. Mrs. Jenkins, of Toronto, was the former Miss Liberty of this place and has been visiting friends in this vicinity for several weeks. She has been in poor health for some time. She was in her 79th year.

MRS. MANLEY WESCOTT
(Springbrook)

Rawdon (Special)—Mrs. Manley Wescott died on Tuesday afternoon, April 29th, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Burton Bateman, Springbrook, in her eighty-third year.

Deceased was formerly Julia Anne Hubble, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hubble, Mount Pleasant, Rawdon and was born April 17th, 1859.

Following her marriage she resided for many years in Rawdon and Sidney Townships, later moving to Stirling to reside. Her husband predeceased her thirteen years ago and following his death she journeyed to Shannonville to reside with her son Russell. Wherever she lived she made many friends and was an ardent Christian and she was esteemed by all who knew her. Early in 1940 ill health overtook her and it was necessary that she reside with her daughter, Mrs. Burton Bateman, who has lovingly cared for her all through her last illness.

She leaves to mourn four sons, Wesley, of Windsor, Walter of Latta, Lorne of Toronto, Russell at Shannonville and three daughters, Ethel, Mrs. C. W. Munro, South Lake; Irene, Mrs. Burton Bateman, Springbrook; Alice, Mrs. Elton Pollock, Windsor, seventeen grandchildren and six great grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. A. E. Hubble, Windsor and one brother, Mr. G. F. Hubble, Campbellford.

The funeral cortege left the house on Thursday afternoon, May 1st and proceeded to Springbrook United Church which was filled with friends and relatives who had come to pay their last tribute to a life well spent.

Rev. R. W. Young, pastor, brought a comforting message to the bereaved and the choir rendered "The Old Rugged Cross." Mrs. Carman Sine sang "Good Night and Good Morning."

Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket.

Following the service the funeral cortege proceeded to Mount Pleasant, Rawdon, where the interment was made in the South Cemetery beside her husband. One son, Wilfrid, predeceased her a couple of years ago.

THOMAS W. McMULLEN
(Bowmanville)

Thomas W. McMullen, a resident of Bowmanville, and father of Mrs. D. F. Cameron, Trent Road, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Saturday morning. Mr. McMullen, who was visiting his daughter for the past month, was in failing health for some time and ten days ago he fell and suffered a broken hip.

The late Mr. McMullen was born 76 years ago in Bowmanville, being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McMullen. All his life was passed in that district and he was highly esteemed. In religion he was a member of the United Church.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. A. R. Cousins, Toronto, and Mrs. D. F. Cameron, Trent Road, Sidney Township; three sons, Mr. Harry McMullen, Saskatchewan; Mr. George McMullen, Bowmanville, and Mr. Charles McMullen, Toronto; one brother, Mr. David McMullen, Kendal, Ontario. His wife died last September

The funeral will take place at Bowmanville on Monday.

BUDGET DEBATE TO BE OPENED BY OPPOSITION

Conservative House Leader Hanson Will be the First Speaker

BILLS DISCUSSED

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)—The House of Commons was ready today for debate on the budget which opens Monday afternoon with Conservative House Leader Hanson leading off, as opposition critic.

Although the budget presented by Finance Minister Ilsley last Tuesday was the most exacting in the history of Canada, observers here predicted a fairly short debate.

They said there may be criticism of some of the methods by which the government hopes to obtain an increase of $300,000,000 a year in revenues, but that it is not expected there will be any protest from Conservatives at the efforts to follow the "pay-as-you-go" policy in war financing as far as possible.

Yesterday afternoon's sitting of the House was almost completely occupied with debate on a private Senate bill to authorize the British Columbia Telephone Company to increase its capitalization from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000.

The measure, sponsored in the House by G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) was moved for second reading by common consent of the House, although no specific time has been allowed for discussion of the 34 private bills on the order paper.

Effort Fruitless

But Mr. McGeer's efforts to get the bill sent to a committee were fruitless. After nearly three hours' debate, during which the measure was attacked by several British Columbia members, debate was adjourned by R. W. Mayhew (Lib.-Victoria) and it may not be reached again.

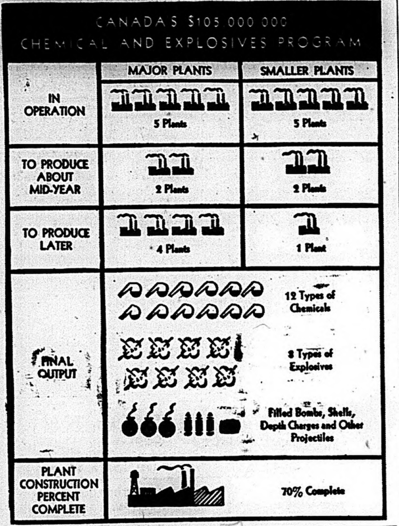
Feature of the afternoon's sitting, however, was the last minute adoption of the $35,000,000 supplementary estimate to finance the wheat acreage reduction plan. This item was before the House for several days before the Easter adjournment and was discussed at considerable length this week.

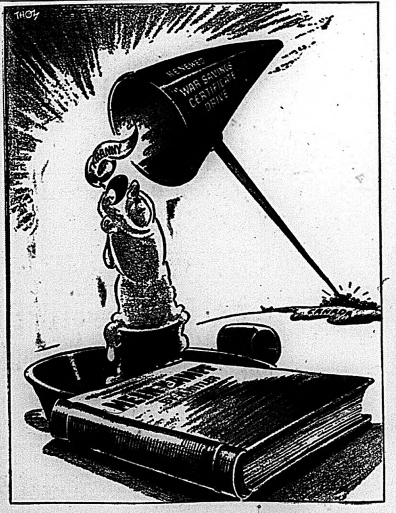
Just before adjournment for the week-end the item was reached again and Chairman Vien put the question. Some members apparently thought the committee was merely reporting progress, but the vote was declared adopted and was so reported back to the House.

Bruce McNevin (Lib. Victoria, Ont.) protested strongly. He said it was evident to the whole House that other members wished to speak on the motion.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner said there would be ample opportunity on the other agriculture estimates for members to say anything they might have desired to say on the $35,000,000 vote.

This item was the only form in which the House was asked to deal with the government's 1941-42 wheat policy which involves an effort to reduce wheat acreage this year by paying Prairie farmers up to $4 an acre bonus on former wheat lands sown to other crops or summer fallowed this year.





Trouble in Iraq Grave Problem To British Gov't

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 3 (AP) — The "holy war" in Iraq, instigated by the Axis, is a grave new complication for Britain. London reports that gunners of the Iraq Army, who were trained by British forces, have been shelling the vitally important Royal Air Force base at Habbaniyah.

Failure to deal promptly and effectively with this situation would add immeasurably to Britain's peril in the Near and Middle East and the Mediterranean.

Her ability to do so presumably rests upon the military force already available at Habbaniyah or landed at Basra. There is no definite information yet as to the strength of British forces in the country.

Nor is it wholly certain that the reported appeal of the pro-Axis Iraq regime for German help will go completely unanswered. Long-range Nazi or Italian bombers might take a hand in the struggle. At the least they could strike at oil pipe lines running from Iraq oil fields to the Mediterranean. Oil from those pipe lines power British warcraft, planes and tanks in the Eastern Mediterranean and North Africa.

Long Jump For Planes.

It is a long air jump from the Italian Dodecanese Islands off the Turkish coast at the southern entrance to the Aegean Sea to the coast of Palestine, where those pipe lines reach the sea. It is a long hop, also, from advance Nazi-Fascist air bases in North Africa; but neither span actually forbids air participation in the fighting in Iraq. Nor is there certainty that axis aircraft and even air-carried troops have not not been smuggled far forward across the deserts in preparation for just what has happened.

Serious disruption of the oil flow from Iraq wells for use in ships, planes and tanks in the Mediterranean and North and East Africa would be a grave matter for Britain. The Habbaniyah air base was established under Anglo-Iraq treaties to guard against such disruption. The pipe lines run many hundreds of miles across the desert.

Even restless tribesmen remote from Iraq, but racially and religiously akin to the Iraqs could menace that vital British oil supply. That is the danger back of Gailani's reputed summons to his people and all the Moslem world surrounding them to enter a "sacred" conflict against Britain. However, the report emanated from Berlin and must be viewed with caution.

Lacking even unofficial estimates of the British force set ashore at Bara, there is no way of estimating British chances of suppressing or limiting the conflict. There is as yet even no assurance that an Axis trap, prepared in conjunction with Gailani, was not laid for the British. He apparently acquiesced in an initial landing of troops at Basra, only to turn upon the British troops when a second expedition was sent.

More Than Air Base.

Another unknown factor is the British force and equipment at the Habbaniyah base. It was conceived and established as more than a Royal Air Force centre. In normal times, and probably even now, the equipment included mobile guns, tanks designed for desert use and other mechanized equipment to supplement air power in keeping oil and road routes open. The British-fostered road-building program, which has spanned the desert with bus routes converging in the Habbaniyah region, also was worked out to make that base an effective protection.

Whether the emergies of British-Axis war in North and East Africa or in the Balkans led to any serious reduction of the Habbaniyah garrison or withdrawal of much of its mechanized equipment for use elsewhere remains to be seen. The British landings at Basra, however, disclosed that the force available there was not deemed sufficient to meet feared emergencies.

Aside from strictly military considerations, the effect of the British-Iraq clash at Turkey's back door must also be kept in mind. It might cut Turkey off there from British contacts, as she is already cut off in the Aegean by Nazi conquest of Greece.

His Money's Worth

"It's scandalous for that farmer to charge us girls $10 for towing the car only three or four miles."

"Never mind. He's earning it—I've got the brakes on."—Parade.

HOCKEY STARS VISIT COMMUNITY CLUB AT TWEED

"Dit" Clapper and Herb Mitchell Reminisce on Hockey Experiences

ANSWER QUESTIONS

Tweed, May 3 (Special)—Thursday, May 1st, will be a day long to be remembered in Tweed, especially by the younger generation, as the date of the visit of Aubrey "Dit" Clapper, star defenceman of the Boston Bruins, 1941 Stanley Cup winners. The "Father and Son" banquet arranged by the Community Club, gave the boys an opportunity to meet the hockey star. Mr. Clapper was accompanied by Mr. Herb Mitchell, coach of Hershey Bears, and one of the foremost hockey mentors of the present day.

Nearly one hundred men and boys were "jammed" into the diningroom and sitting-room of The Huyck House at 6.30 when dinner was served. Following the banquet, a sing-song under the direction of S. H. Connor, with Claremont Morgan at the piano, was enjoyed by all. The toast to The King was preceded by the singing of the National Anthem.

Special Film Shown

A special feature of the evening's entertainment was the showing of a film, "The Miracle of Electricity" by Mr. Norman Lake of the Ontario Hydro Commission. The extent of the power development in Ontario as depicted in the film was a revelation to everyone. President Beatty of the Community Club expressed the thanks of the gathering to Mr. Lake and to Mr. Miller Johns Manager of Tweed Hydro who was instrumental in arranging the showing of the film.

Activities Outlined

Secretary S. R. Curry gave a brief summary of the activities of the Community Club during the past year. These included the Santa Claus parade at Christmas, the Mass Meeting in connection with the sale of War Savings Certificates, the organization of the rural district for the same purpose. During the year an infant had been sent to The Sick Children's Hospital for treatment, with the Community Club assuming a major share of the expense involved. Receipts for the year totalled $181.92, expenditures were $135.91, leaving a balance of $46.01. Mr. Curry reported that steps had been taken to advertise Tweed and Stoco Lake as ideal tourist and fishing centres.

The question of Daylight Saving in Tweed was discussed and the meeting expressed itself as favorable to advanced time especially as Tweed Steel Works, Paul Rashotte and Jos. Rashotte had all adopted "fast" time. A delegation was named to meet the Council on Monday night.

Musical Program

During the program a piano duet was played by Billy Beatty and Pat Corcoran; Clare Morgan also contributed an enjoyable piano number.

"Dit" Clapper, the guest of honor was introduced by Billy Beatty in a neat speech. Mr. Clapper expressed himself as being more fearful of facing an audience as an after-dinner speaker than a ganging attack by an opposing team in a hockey tussle. His address was more in the nature of an interview as he answered questions asked by some of those present. He gave many interesting highlights of games during the season, and very modestly told of his progress from the day when he first began to play hockey to his present position on the Boston Bruins, a team with which he has spent the past fourteen years. He strongly advised the boys to live clean lives; smoking and drinking during both the playing season and the off-season are frowned on by the managers of professioal teams and few players smoke or drink. Pat Corcoran expressed the thanks of the audience for the address.

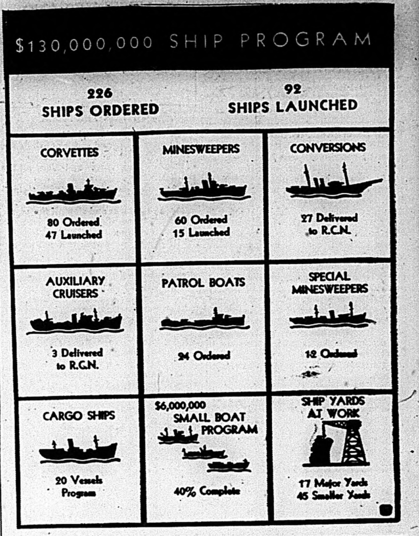
Mitchell Introduced

Mr. Herb Mitchell, was introduced by S. R. Curry as an old Belleville boy, who was the third base star of the baseball team of that place twenty-five years ago. He is now coach of Hershey Bears and one of the foremost coaches in hockey.

Mr. Mitchell told of his experiences as a hockey player and coach. He gave the boys some excellent advice, as Mr. Clapper had done. Clean living is imperative if a boy would become and remain a hockey star. Mechanical ability and the ability to think are essential in a hockey player who would rise above mediorcrity. Mr. Mitchell told of the introduction of hockey into Hershey seven years ago, and of its growth until the present day.

Dr. [illegible]. E. Welsh, M.P.P., Roslin, spoke briefly. He told of a conversation during the day between his son, Ted and a school mate, who said "Oh, you're going up to Tweed tonight to hear "Dick" Clapper of the Boston "Balloons". Dr. Welsh expressed the appreciation of all to Mr. Clapper and Mr. Mitchell for the inspiration they had given the boys.

Mr. Beatty expressed the regret of the Community Club at the removal of Mr. Art Leman of Tweed Forestry Branch who had been removed to Kenora; and of Mr. George Elwood, accountant on the Bank of Montreal staff whose application for admission in the R. C. A. F. had been accepted.



Teamwork by Two Sergeants Secret of Night Fighting Success

London, May 3 ((CP)—Teamwork is the secret of the success of two sergeants who have shot down thirteen enemy planes, one at night, with their two-seater Defiant plane.

One, as pilot, concentrates on flying the machine, while the other, manning a four-gun power-operated turret behind him, fires at the foe.

The two sergeants, both of whom hold the Distinguished Flying Medal and bar, took part in their squadron's most famous action, when in one day over Dunkirk the squadron destroyed thirty-nine enemy planes.

They spotted their thirteenth victim about 1,000 yards away at night. The sergeant gunner described how the pilot manoeuvred into a position where he could give the enemy a burst of fire.

After two more attacks the fight had dropped some 9,000 feet to cloud level. "The last we saw of the bomber was as it plunged steeply through the thick cloud, belching smoke," said the rear gunner. "We heard later that it hit the dock near Godalming."

Simple Mistake

He climbed up to capture it.

The parrot looked at him and said sharply, "What do you want?"

The countryman touched his cap. "Beg pardon, sir. I thought you were a bird."— Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph.

LORD BEAVERBROOK'S NEW POST

Lord Beaverbrook has been given the new office of Minister of State which really places him in the position of virtual chief of Britain's war time industries. Lord Beaverbrook as Minister of Aircraft Production has done a big task in a big way. Other cabinet changes have been made by Prime Minister Churchill.

It is believed that Lord Beaverbrook will now have undivided control of the production of guns, tanks and other equipment. Some political observers see the post as virtually giving him a sort of Deputy Prime Minister's post. This will relieve Mr. Churchill of many of the responsibilities over these matters and permit him to devote his whole attention to the military and diplomatic aspects of the war. Lord Beaverbrook will not be harassed with departmental cares, says the Daily Express.

LONG-DISTANCE U.S. BOMBER

The advance of science is very marked. Aviation reveals scientific progress perhaps as easily as or more easily than any other development. It is not so long ago that airplanes were very limited. Today, much of the action in war is associated with the airplane because of its speed and the fact that it has no obstacle and travels through air. Planes hop distances, cross oceans, climb over mountains and do the most amazing things.

There has just been developed and tested a new American bombing plane which has a non-stop range of 4,500 miles. Such a plane can soon get outside its own country's boundaries. In Europe such a plane becomes of the utmost advantage where distances are comparatively short.

These developments seem almost out of the grasp of comprehension. It is only now such are possible. A few days ago they were "the impossible." In such an era of development there seems little possibility of the limitation of progress in extension of range of such machines.

THIS EARLY SPRING

One of the pleasures of this unusual springtime has been the early opportunity of doing work outdoors. Gardening has been advanced weeks ahead of time as a result of one of the most kindly Aprils in history. The cleaning-up of premises which has been becoming more and more easy, thanks to the improvement of properties, has also been ahead of time. Opportunity offers for further improvement with the early spring and the clean-up paint-up campaign should attract many citizens. Ground this year was not very moist and soon dried off under the mild spell of April, the only adverse factor being the lack of rain, which is greatly needed.

There is an exhilaration about cleaning up and improving property and it is not to be wondered at that the appearance of properties is much to be preferred to that which formerly prevailed, when there was less community spirit and there was less recognition of the citizen's duty to make the city as beautiful as possible, for work on a lawn and garden can achieve the almost impossible.

NEW TESTAMENT IN 1,000 WORDS

There is to be a Basic English New Testament using only one thousand different words of the English language. It means the changing of many words and some of the beauty of the King James version must inevitably disappear in the austerity and frugality of the number of words used.

As explained in the London Spectator this version "is not intended for general use but is mainly for children to whom its simplicities should appeal, and still more for foreigners who will find it an easy way of acquiring enough English for all ordinary purposes." The newspaper quotes the precedent of George Burrow who taught himself several languages by reading a New Testament, with the English of which he was more familiar than most people, in different tongues.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

DOWN ON THE FARM

Down on the farm 'bout half past four
I slip on my pants and sneak out the door.
Out in the yard I run like the dickens,
To milk all the cows and feed all the chickens,
Clean out the barnyard, curry Rhoda and Jiggs,
Separate the cream and slop all the pigs.
Hustle two hours, then eat like a Turk.
By heck! I am ready for a full day's work.
Then I grease the wagon and put on the rack,
Throw a jug of water in the old grain sack,
Hitch up the mules, slip down the lane,
Must get the hay in, looks like rain.
Look over yonder, sure as I am born,
Cows on the rampage, hogs in the corn;
Start across the meadow, run a mile or two,
Heaving like I'm wind-broke and got wet clear through.
Back with the mules, then for recompense,
Rhoda gets astraddle the barb-wire fence,
Joints all aching, muscles in a jerk.
Whoop! Fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.
Work all the Summer 'till Winter is nigh,
Then figure at the bank and heave a big sigh.
Worked all the year, didn't make a thing,
Less cash now than I had last Spring.
Some folks say there ain't no hell.
Shucks! They never farmed, how can they tell?
When Spring rolls 'round I take another chance,
As fuzz grows longer on my old gray pants
Give my galluses a hitch, belt another jerk.
By gosh! I'm ready for a full YEAR'S work.
—Anon.

"Yep," soliloquised the elderly farmer, "we fellers down on the farm have all got to give our galluses another hitch, the belt another jerk and go after more production if we are goin' to win this war. But I can't help thinkin' how different the old place folks seem to those of years ago when I was a boy. There was no rush and bustle to get things done in a hurry; no radios; no automobiles or tractors. Folks was all workin' and because they were they were happy. There was grain in the barn, hams in the smokehouse, pork in the barrel, a bit of money in the bank and happiness and goodwill toward your neighbor in peoples' hearts."

"The old homesteads were all paid for in those days and not, like a lot of 'em are today, runnin' around the highways on rubber tires. Old Ned and Dobbin and Maud were something to be proud of and spent their last days in the pasture, instead of being sent to a glue factory. Sure, we blew out the lights at nine o'clock sharp and rose when the first hen was openin' a sleepy eye. But we had good times avisitin' each other. If we wanted to go places we hooked up the hackney to the buggy or the team to the democrat or surrey and didn't think a thing of drivin' fifty miles to see Brother Tom or Aunt Kit."

"I ain't sayin' anything against the folks of nowadays but we've got to admit that this age of speed and get-there and get-everything-done-in-a-hurry idea has affected the rural folks, somewhat especially the younger fellers. But they are all the same folks under the skin. The veneer of the modern age is only coverin' the surface. Machines, tractors, gadgets that do three men's work while you're lightin' the corncob, hasn't affected the hearts of folks."

"They are still the same old sturdy folk that went to barn-raisin's, county fairs, corn-huskin' bees and sleighrides. They are still the same fine stock that broke the wilderness years ago and carved a livin' for themselves out of tracts of timbered land. They had to work hard in those days and they can do the same now. And now that this war is on, and the rural folk are in it the same as anyone, you will see the same fine spirit that characterized their grandaddies and grandmothers."

"Right now help is very scarce. All the young fellers have joined the army or are workin' in other kinds of war work. That means that we older fellers have got to jerk up the belt and buckle down to some hard work. That battle of life fought by our forebears years ago was no tougher than this war—and they showed what good Canadian hearts and hands can accomplish when they set their mind to it."

Let Us Face The Truth

(From The New York Times)

The Statute of Liberty in New York Harbor has looked down across the bay at many men who have crossed the ocean to find freedom. It stands now as a silent witness to the fact that we are already locked in mortal combat with the German system.

American courage and American idealism, together with the sound common sense of the American people, summon us to the defense both of our physical security and of those moral and spiritual values which alone make life worth living. This defense means many things. It means, in the first instance, a clear recognition that the most dangerous of all courses we could follow in this hour of decision is a policy of drift: of do-nothing while there is still time to act effectively; of letting hesitancy ripen into disagreement, and disagreement curdle into factions which will split the country.

It means strong leadership in Washington: a willingness to forego the methods of indirection and suprise and veiled hints and inuendo, and to state the plain facts of the situation boldly. It means leadership which is as generous as it is strong: leadership which is willing to forget old quarrels, ready to bring into positions of high power and into the innermost confidence of the Government the accredited spokesmen of the opposition party; leadership which is at last prepared to delegate all necessary authority to the engineers of American production.

It means a genuinely firm insistence that strikes or lockouts defence industries will no longer be tolerated by public opinion. It means more immediate aid to the brave people who are now fighting in the front line of our defense. It means encouragement to American aviators who are ready to fly our own planes in the battle over Britain. It means a determination to see that our vital supplies reach England, under the protection of our own guns. Above all else it means a decision to avoid the same mistake that the democracies have made over and over again—the mistake of "too little and too late."

There is no escape in isolation. We have only two alternatives. We can surrender or we can do our part in holding the line. We can defend, with all the means in our power, the rights that are morally and legally ours. If we decide for the American tradition, for the preservation of all that we hold dear in the years that lie ahead, we shall take our place in the line and play our part in the defense of freedom.

German Cuckoos In the Japanese Nest

When Sir John Latham left Australia to represent the Commonwealth Government in Tokyo, with him, representing Australian Associated Press, went Mr. Clive Turnbull, of the staff of the Herald, Melbourne, and he sent back from Tokyo this analysis:

What does the average Japanese think about Germany? He thinks that his government thought it expedient, at a time when England appeared to be in greatest danger, to tie up with Germany, and now he has begun to wonder very seriously whether that was wise. What does he think about Italy? He doesn't think about Italy at all.

It would be a mistake to think that the Japanese are pro-German or pro-British, or pro anything but Japanese. Neither are they even anti-foreign: here, again, they are merely pro-Japanese. Cerainly you find plenty of now generally elderly business men who are pro-British, and plenty of militariste who are pro-Nazi. But they are not representative. The average Japanese, waiting in the Ginza and meditating on the quality of sake these days, or who is going to win the sumo wrestling tournament, cares no more about the respective merits and demerits of British and Germans than the average Australian cares about the respective virtues of Singalese and Annamites. He is adarmed, perhaps, by what he considers American belligerence; he usually lets it go at that.

Among the minority who make policies and public opinion, of course, it is a different matter. They are beginning to wonder whether they have not been left holding the Axis bag.

At the time when the tripartite alliance was entered into a large number of Japanese firmly believed that Britain was about to collapse and that, in co-operation with a friendly Germany, Japan could proceed to reparcel the world, taking as her share a protectorate over the East Indies, Thai, Indo-China and Burma for a start. In the first flush of enthusiasm Nazis were encouraged, or at least allowed, to enter Japan in droves. Now there are some thousands. On one plea and another they wormed their way into Japanese departments.

These "fifth columnists" of Hitler likewise made their way into other departments. They have succeeded in subverting a portion of the press, and even getting anti-Jewish drivel published, although the average Japanese would not know a Jew from a jereboam. The German Embassy is reported to subsidize one Japanese journal to the extent of 20,000 yen a month —probably in smuggled yen at that, bought at depreciated rates in Shanghai. German language students are scattered all over the country. In Manchoukuo Germans ride about the country, lording it over the inhabitants.

Being unable to get their propaganda material out of Germany today, they have made Japan the base for the printing of vast quantities of German publicity, which is being dumped in the South American countries. At the same time they are stirring up anti-American sentiment.

They are background workers. Their social behavior is impeccable. There are no frictions in Tokyo's extraordinarily cosmopolitan foreign community. The Imperial Hotel in Tokyo is filled with a larger proportion of the world's spies and counter-spies, log-rollers, diplomats, official and back stairs, and lobbyists, than has probably gathered together since great days of espionage in Switzerland in the last war.

But the extent of the German drive for Japanese support is not to be minimized. The Nazis have made "cultural" penetration a fine art, and indeed have left other nations standing. No less a personage than Richard Strauss composed special music for the 2,600 th anniversary of the Japanese Empire; you can buy the records in Tokyo today. There are finely produced German magazines for sale at low prices—printed in English, of course, for Axis and non-Axis alike must speak it in Japan. It is curious to hear someone saying in perfect English to a Japanese: "Well did you hear the good news about the Fleet?" and to realize that he is a German and that it is to German claims about damage to the British Fleet that he is referring.

In spite of all this the Japanese are faced by a very thought-provoking reality. That is that the China War does not show the slightest sign of conclusion; that the United States has adopted what is construed to be a threatening attitude; and that the Soviet Government is quietly squeezing the Japanese in the north, exacting a concession here, a concession there.

Japan has acquired two allies one of whom is useless in any case, and the other unable to render any practical assistance. And she has around her in a far from friendly condition three of the largest and two of the most powerful countries in the world—China, Soviet Russia and the United States.

If ever a nation got itself into a tough spot it is Japan. Japan has no essential love for the Nazis or the Fascists. It has no essential love for any foreigners. A political clique has let the Nazis in. It is quite on the cards that, one of these days, the whole lot will be tossed out again.

Stewart Says—

How Religion Would Rid World of Dictators

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

Washingeon. — Father Fulton J. Sheen, professor of fundamental theology at Catholic university in Washington, makes the interesting point that wicked dictators are only a symptom; not the underlying disease. He recognizes that they are a mean symptom which has to be doctored.

Nevertheless, as he sees it, the elimination of some particular dictator affords only temporary relief. The patient has to be completely cured or he's liable to break out into a fresh evil dictatorship at any time.

Societies are the patients, according to Father Sheen, and they've got to be spiritualized to cure 'em, he holds.

Economists, politicians and militarists aren't the specialists who can do it permanently, he says. Germany has 'em, but it also has the dictatorship rash. Italy doesn't seem to be very strong on militarists, but it has economists and politicians aplenty, and it has the dictatorship symptom, too. Democratic military and economic massage may get that symptom under control for awhile, but it can't be depended on not to manifest itself again, if Germany, Italy and Japan remain infected under the skin.

Well, what kind of specialists are needed? Father Sheen recommends "saints."

The fact is that the fundamental theology professor didn't employ the medical allegory that I have. I've rather interpreted his remarks. He delivered a series of Lenten sermons and religion was the antidote he prescribed for the dictatorial malady.

Religion—on the Side

For generations, he reminds us, the world's been trying to create a new and better order with economic, educational, political and social dope, without stirring any religion in. That's been classified as something separate—as a good thing, but only "on the side," so to speak.

Now, I'm not very orthodoxly religious myself. Probably I'd be listed as an agnostic. Where I came from and where I'm going I don't profess to know.

All the same, it seemed to me, listening to Father Sheen's remarks, that his argument made a lot of sense. He didn't advocate any union of church and state. He referred to religion in a purely general way, as an essential ingredient in the world's "new order" mixture, if it's to be a mixture with any chance to "take."

"It won't," he said, "be a political, economic, military or social leader who'll save the world. It'll only be saved by saints.

"Let's not believe that we'll have a better world, once we drive out the evil dictators. All the evil isn't in these men. It's in society; in every person."

Take Germany, for instance.

The democracies don't hate the Germans. It's Hitler that they want to exterminate. But it's hard to get away from the consideration that the Germans (except a few of them whom Adolf has been persecuting) stand for him. As Father Sheen says, it doesn't seem as if they'd do so if there weren't something wrong in their whole organization. Is it a lack of true religion in their midst? Apparently that's the professor's conclusion.

And in Italy

Ditto Italy. Why do the Italians put up with Mussolini? Is there something basically the matter with their psychology, too? Maybe they're getting sick of Benito at present, but it isn't because he's what Father Sheen calls an "evil dictator." It is that he's a clumsy one.

Father Sheen's thesis is that what's lacking in both countries is true religion; that if Hitler and Mussolini are licked by the democracies, their respective countries presently will accept a couple of others of the same sort—unless they get a big injection of real religion pumped into 'em.

Denominalization isn't what he specifies; it's religion.

And, of course, it might be desirable for the democracies also.

Father Sheen doesn't urge governmentalization of it. He wants it in people's hearts.

He makes a first-class new order talk.

GRANDPA ON THE LOOSE

You had better watch him, Grandma, there's no telling what he'll do
To the modern code for childhood and the diet methods new.
He will buy them chocolate soda without reason or excuse,
And go whooping into peril when a grandpa's on the loose.

There's no law or rule can check him. Let him out with them alone
And he'll take them to the orchards where the lollypops are grown.
He will buy them all the gladness which such lovely sweets produce,
And no end of things can happen when a grandpa's on the loose.

To the places of enchantment down the street they've come to know,
And they'll raid the candy counters, having slipped the guarding noose,
And do much you say they shouldn't when their grandpa's on the loose.

It's a sign, perhaps of weakness, and a self-indulging trait,
An impulsive reach for gladness since the time is growing late;
It's his war 'twixt sense and folly —and there'll never be a truce—
But it's fun for all the youngsters when their grandpa's on the loose.

SKIMBLE SKAMBLE STUFFF

An Associated Press dispatch from Hollywood informs us that Billy Henry, Los Angeles Times columnist, conceived the idea of making men's pajamas with feet.

"Jiffy-jamas" recently made their debut at a Los Angeles fashion show and are recommended especially for new fathers who must walk with the baby in the wee hours of the night.

All this recalls the fact that when pajamas were advertised in London shops about 70 years ago as a new fashion they all had feet sewn on them.

The practice of sewing feet on pajamas originated in India, where such garments were so equipped to protect the wearer from ants.

Many years passed before Epropeans woke up to the fact that feet on pajamas were not necessary in the Occident to keep ants out of the pants.

Our contemporary Believe-It-Or-Not Bob Ripley has made a remarkable discovery—a dog in Philadelphia that perspires through its paws!

A dog that does not perspire through its paws would have been a more remarkable discovery.

Most of the sweating done by dogs occurs on the soles of their feet, where the largest sweat glands are located.

Under so-called international law, prisoners of war are supposed to be paid the same amount by their captor governments as they were paid by their own governments.

Officers and privates are entitled to their regular pay according to their respective ranks whether they are in active service or held prisoners by the enemy.

For instance, the German and Italian prisoners of war in Canada may receive the same pay that they received while in the German and Italian armies and navies.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER VII.

The party that evening was even more elaborate than usual. Devona recognized that fact the instant she stepped into the spacious drawing room. Vara, in a new dinner gown of gold lame that made her look like a ray of desert sun herself, was holding special court for all the members of her cast and for some of the more important guests from the Palm Springs Hotel. People whose approval would matter.

Hesitating in the wide, arched doorway, Devona watched unnoticed for a moment, and listened to Vara's skillfully cadenced laughter.

Devona Meets a Critic.

"Reba, darling," she was saying to one guest wreathed in smiles and too many diamonds and yards of billowing gray chiffon "I want you to meet Paul Darnell. He's the vicious first-nighter who simply never has a kind word to throw to struggling actors."

Paul Darnell. Devona had seen that name often on the Stage and Screen page of a Los Angeles newspaper. One of the outstanding critics. His judgment would make "Fools In Paradise" a hit—or a flop—overnight! No wonder Vara was turning on her charm full strength.

Mr. Darnell lifted one dark eyebrow, bowed gallantly. "I save my kind words for artists like yourself, Miss Vadne."

Tal To The Rescue.

Talbot discovered Devona a moment later and thrust a frosted glass into her hand.

"Here, drink this and see if it won't do something for that woebegone look on your sweet mug." He grinned and sat down beside her. "Why are you hiding off here in the corner?"

Devona sipped the drink, tried to smile. "Oh, trying to keep out of the way."

"Uh-huh. I thought I saw the great Darnell give you the cold shoulder a moment ago," he nodded, took Devona's hand. "Don't let that long-haired sour-puss get you down."

"I won't. But I wish I knew more about the theatre. I feel so—so out of things."

He smiled down at her and Devona really tried to notch her chin higher. But she couldn't force down the cocktail. And a little later even the delicious dinner didn't tempt her. She only toyed with the food and fought a desperate desire to escape from that long, brilliant table, fly back to the haven of her own room.

Devona Sings.

After coffee and liqueurs had been served, Barnard gave her the signal and she and Tal moved, as if aimlessly, toward the piano. She was an adult in a very adult world. She'd show them she did belong.

"Make it casual," Barnard had suggested earlier. "Just you and Brasher move up to the piano after dinner while everyone's bored stiff trying to keep up scintillating conversation. It'll catch on. You see."

It did catch on, too. Little by little each of the twosomes or threesomes scattered around the long drawing room, interrupted their talk, their bright, brittle laughtery to listen. Until finally the whole group payed homage to Devona's really lovely, young voice by listening, not politely, but really caught in spite of themselves.

"Swell," Talbot murmured sotto voce, winked at her as they finished the first number.

"More."

Dale Hears Her.

In the middle of the second number, Devona realized that some one else had come to stand in the arched doorway. From the tail of her eyes, she made sure what it was the sudden leap of her heart had told her. Dale!

But he wasn't expected until the next morning. Still—their eyes met for a fleeting instant—there he was. His smile warmer, his tall slimness better looking than she'd remembered. He smiled a greeting, gave her a mocking little salute.

After that, she sang for him. Sang for the pleased surprise in his face, for the warm appreciation in his smile. And for the swelling tide of happiness within herself that simply had to find expression.

When Devona had sung all the numbers they'd planned and several more besides, her little audience finally released her. She bowed her last thanks graciously, slipped away from the piano toward Vara, anxious for the first word of approval she felt sure she must now have earned.

"Very nice," Vara drawled as Devona drew near. "I didn't know we had another exhibitionist in our midst."

For an instant Devona couldn't believe the frosty coldness she heard in her mother's voice. Not until she looked straight into her eyes and saw there cold, measureless fury!

"Thanks so much. And now Paul, dear, what was that you were telling us before we were interrupted?"

Dale Comforts Her.

Mute with embarrassment, Devona pressed her lips hard to still their quivering, murmured some excuse and escaped to the veranda. Dale caught up with her just as she sank, trembling, to a shadow-hidden bench, drew a long, sobbing breath of the balmy night air.

"Lovely, Devona. Why didn't you tell a guy you were a songstress?" and took her hand in his.

"I'm not—really. But, Mr. Barnard thought people might be amused. That Vara—might——"

"Amused is no word for it. You have talent, young lady. Real talent."

Devona shrugged. As if talent counted for anything. "Thanks, mister. You're very kind," she managed lightly, but her spirits sagged heavily.

"No, I'm not. You have talent and beauty and youth and—" he hesitated, his voice breaking on a husky little laugh, "and rare sweetness. No wonder I couldn't get you out of my mind all week."

"What! Thinking of me instead of dope runners?" Devona teased, trying to take her cue from his light banter. But it was no use. One gleaming tear escaped from the corner of her eye, slipped stealthily down her cheek.

Dale tipped her face up so he could look into her eyes. "Something's haywire," he said, serious now. "Aren't you going to tell me?"

Love In His Eyes.

For a moment, Devona just looked deep into those clear blue eyes while her heart stood on tiptoe. Then, suddenly, nothing was wrong. Nothing mattered, even. Except what his eyes were saying.

Dale's grasp on her arm tightened. "You're lovely, Devona. So lovely I can hardly believe you're real."

Devona escaped just as scalding tears blinded her. She stumbled to her own room to bury her sobs in her pillow

She swam the length of the pool twice, then climbed gracefully onto the tiled edge. "Hello. What gets you out so early?" came Dale's voice over her shoulder

A little silence—a lovely, warm silence that wrapped them into a special little world of their own. While their eyes said things their lips hadn't found words for yet.

And then shttteringly, Vara's voice broke into that magic world and it fell into a thousand glittering fragments.

"Dale, darling!! I didn't know you'd arrived."

Dale stiffened and turned away. "Hello, Vara. Yes, I got through a little early so—here I am."

"Devona, my angel," Vara's voice was clear and smooth but still cold. Terribly cold. "Will you excuse Dale now?" Vara stood silrouetted in the open door, the soft light behind her making a halo through the soft, gold tendrils of her hair. "I want to talk to you, Dale, about the new set."

"Be right with you," Dale promised and turning to Devona, "You're not forgetting our date for a swim tomorrow morning, are you?"

Devona shook her head. Forgetting it! It had been the one bright light in this whole strangely dark week. "Of course not."

"Good. Daybreak, then. Two pool's lengths. See you then." Dale caught her hand, pressed it firmly. "Goodnight and sweet dreams."

Alone With Her Thoughts.

Then he was gone, following Vara into the lighted room beyond. Devona stood one hand pressed against her heart to quiet its thunder. Sweet dreams. She must be dreaming right now. Reality couldn't be so unbelievably nice!

As she slipped along the veranda, avoiding the crowded drawing room, and up to her own room, a happy smile curved her lips. Because a new thought pushed her first worries out of her mind—at least for the moment. Dale cared—a little. She was sure of it. Not that he'd said a word. Not that there was really any reason save her own wishful thinking. Still—she was sure. Something told her so.

Without turning on the light, Devona went to the open window and slipped out onto the little balcony. Pressing her flushed cheeks against the cold grilled iron ballustrade, she breathed deeply of the warm fragrance from the garden below. Dale cared. Nothing else mattered, now. Not even Vara's anger.

"Daughter of a strange destiny," she murmured to the stars that glittered almost within reach. And the old fakir had said 'a great love'. He'd been so right. Smiling in the dark she shut her eyes as if to hold within her all the happiness that was suddenly welling high within her.

Daughter of a strange destiny, indeed. And below her, in the richly paneled library, Vara's silk-smooth voice began to weave the pattern for another chapter of Devona's destiny.

CHAPTER VIII.

From the library window below, Dale stood watching the same shadow-patterned garden that Devona studied dreamily from above. But it wasn't dreaminess clouding Dale's eyes as he tamped brown curls of tobacco into the bowl of his pipe.

Vara, her bright head resting against the tapestried back of her carved chair, watched him covertly. "So you see, darling," she said smoothly, "the set as it is will be quite impossible."

Dale turned towards her, a faint scowl drawing fine lines between his dark brows. "How does it happen you're so late finding that out?"

"Because Talbot had to rewrite part of the second act. It simply didn't play well. My scenes were entirely too choppy.

"And the original set can't be rebuilt?"

She shrugged, a masterful little gesture of disdain matching the soft pout of her lips. "Oh, Dale. That would be awful. It's so important to have a play well mounted. You know that."

"I know this will cost a neat little sum, too. Have you any idea how much?"

Vara's Pleading.

"Oh, not more than 2000 or 3000." She took a cigarette from a carved ivory box at her elbow, lit it slowly, her eyes studying him over the bobbing flare of the match.

"Good heavens, I should hope not." Dale's scowl deepened. "Two thousand or three thousand more on top of what's it's already cost me! That will just about clean me out."

"Don't be ridiculous, Dale." She let a pretty laugh drift toward him charmingly. "You talk as if you were penniless."

But Dale wasn't laughing. "I am—just about."

Rising, lithe and graceful as a cat, Vara moved toward him. "Down to your last million, are you, darling?" she teased, mocking his gravity. "But think how much money our play will make for you some day."

His lips twisted into a grim smile. "Maybe. I'm not counting those chickens yet, however. If it gives Tal the break he needs, that's all the profit I'll ask."

"I know, darling." Vara's mood changed instantly. "And we simply must have that new set or he'll worry himself ill."

"Tal worries too damned much."

"Tal is an artist." Smiling, she laid slim, white, crimson-tipped fingers against his coat lapels. "His temperament, his moods, his trigger-taut nerves—al lthat is part of his genius. And if we are to protect, help him develop that genius——?"

Using Her Wiles.

Vara left the question in midair, watched Dale's face slyly as she snapped a blossom off a bouquet on the desk, fastened it into his coat lapel.

Then, when Dale didn't answer, she added softly, "And all that we are doing is for his sake, isn't it?"

He glanced at her sharply. "Yes, of course. Sometimes I wonder why I do it. Dad would have got him a job in a bank and told him to forget his artistic temperament."

"But your mother——?" Vara suggested quietly, following his every flickering change of expression. "Like you, she had faith in his genius, didn't she?"

A muscle along Dale's jawline jumped spasmodically. For a minute he only paced the room silently. Then, "Yes, she did. She'd have given anything to see him succeed."

"And you know, too, don't you, that I wouldn't have considered doing this play except to—please you?" she persisted, moving toward him again.

"You know that, don't you, darling?" she repeated softly, slipped smooth white arms around his neck. "You said that without my help Tal could never put this over. Didn't you?"

For a long moment, Dale looked at her, his hands just touching the arms she'd coiled around his neck again, his lips not offering to accept the invitation her soft mouth extended. Then, finally as if he'd arrived at a delicate decision, he bent, kissed her once.

"I understand," he said quietly. "Go ahead with the set, Vara. I'll send you a cheque."

Barnard Comes In.

Then, releasing himself from the circle of her white arms, he walked quickly from the room. Not back toward the crowded drawing room, but through opened French windows out into the deserted garden beyond.

Vara watched his retreating shadow. All the softness had gone now from her gray eyes. A little smile curved her beautiful lips.

"Well, what luck?"

"Lots of luck. It was simple. He's sending me a cheque tomorrow."

Barnard shifted his big cigar from one side of his mouth to the other. "Now what about our other problem?"

Vara turned from the mirror. Devona, you mean?"

"What have you decided to do about her?"

"Nothing—yet. I can't put the child out." Vara sagged into a chair, pressed her fingertips against her temples.

"And you can't keep her a secret, either, I suppose you realize. She looks too much like you, for one thing. And, for another, she's got a talent she won't want to hide behind any bushes," he said dryly, watching her.

Vara's gray eyes went hard. "Yes, so I discovered this evening. Little—showoff!"

"I'll bet half the people in that room are guessing she's more than just a friend," Barnard went on, jerking his head toward the drawing room. "Having a 19-year-old daughter isn't going to make you seem any younger, you know."

Vara drummed a cigarette against her fingernail, her face clouded with annoyance.

"Unless you want to start playing character parts."

"I don't," she snapped, "and you know it. I couldn't bear that—growing old and fading and—" she shuddered, "having to compete against my own daughter!"

His Scheme Works.

Sudden tenderness in his eyes almost betrayed him, but he said curtly enough. "You'll be 40 in June. That's not juvenile." Then his smile softened that. "But nobody would guess that—unless they knew about Devona."

Grimly, the beautiful lips set. "Then, they must not know."

"That's the stuff." Barnard sat erect suddenly. "Now you're talking."

"But what can I do?" She came to sit on the footstool before him, arms curved around her knees, head thrown back to reveal the slender column of her throat. "After all, I am responsible for her."

"Ship her off to some school. There must be places that would take her off your hands for——"

"A handsome tuition," she finished. "And I need every cent I can put my hands on."

Barnard was silent a moment. "How much is Brasher going to kick through with?"

"I told him we'd need between two and three thousand. He'll probably make it three," she smiled. "Dale doesn't quibble."

"Good." He tapped the ash off his cigar carefully. "That'll get us to New York all right and leave enough to farm the girl out somewhere."

Is Vara Jealous?

Vara stared beyond George, out the window to the garden, where Dale still paced rhythmically. Slowly, she nodded. "Yes, I guess you're right, George. I can't have her around here much longer."

Barnard, following her glance, smiled slyly over his cigar. "Of course, there is one other possible solution."

Vara glanced at him sharply. "What do you mean?"

"One that wouldn't cost you even a year's tuition at some school." Calmly he tossed his cigar stub into an ash tray, pulled a new one from his vest pocket and bit off the end.

"Well—?"

"Let her marry Dale."

Vara stiffened, a scowl etching lines in her forehead. "What are you talking about?"

"Sure. Give the girl a couple more weeks, and she'll have him snagged. Dale's nearer her age than yours, my sweet. And he's pretty badly smitten already. Or hadn't you noticed?"

Vara flung herself out of her chair, paced to the window, her quick anger visible even in the set of her head. "That child! Dale's not a fool."

"He's a young man and susceptible. And Devona"s no infant," Barnard reminded her ruthlessly.

The Plan Works.

"But she's entirely too young to think of marriage!"

Barnard smothered a wry smile. "You were married at 17 yourself, if I remember correctly."

"Well, I don't intend that Devona shall——" Savagely, she bit her lip, stared into the darkened garden.

"Shall have your—friend, Dale?" Barnard finished quietly. "Then I suggest you set a maid to packing her trunks tomorrow. The sooner she's out of the way, the better."

Vara nodded. "Yes—the sooner the better."

In the room just above, Devona sat, still dreaming, smiling happily as she watched Dale measuring the shadowy garden in long-paced strides.

"Dale," she whispered softly to the darkness. "Dale"—and it seemed the answer to—everything.

Playing Safe

Three managers of chicken farms in Germany were being questioned by a Gestapo man. "What do you feed your chickens?" the first was asked.

"Corn."

"You're under arrest. We use corn to feed people!"

The second overheard this conversation, and tried to play safe.

"What do you feed your chickens?" came the question.

"Corn husks."

"You're under arrest. We use the husks to make cloth. And you?" he asked, turning tothe third man.

Optimistic

A farmer had been to a fair and bought a horse. After stabling it, he gave it some feed. The animal refused to eat. A little later it refused water.

The farmer's eyes gleamed hopefully.

ENGAGEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. John Tuepah, Stirling, Ontario, wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Mary Cecelia, to Charles F. Wright, of Ivanhoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. German Wright. The wedding to take place on May 17th, in St. James' Church, Stirling, at 10 o'clock. m3-1t

MARRIAGE

ROBB-COONEY—On February 22, 1941, Simon Eaneas Robb, Harold, and Sarah Cooney, Springbrook, Rev. W. J. Walker, Belleville, officiating. m3-1t

Mrs. Ralph Ketcheson has returned from Toronto where she was the guest of Mrs. William Connor for the past week.

Mrs. W. J. Hume, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Coggin, Windsor, is leaving this week-end to spend several weeks holidaying in Belleville, Montreal and Quebec.

The many friends of Miss Mary Daley, 164 West Moira Street, who is a patient in Belleville General Hospital, will be glad to learn that she is progressing favorably.

On the occasion of her eighty-second birthday, Mrs. Archie Thompson was honored at a party last evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Thornton, Trent Road. About thirty-five members of the family and friends gathered to offer best wishes to Mrs. Thompson and celebrate the happy occasion with her.

Honoring Cyril Gardner, son of Inspector and Mrs. Frank Gardner, previous to his departure to join the Royal Canadian Navy, a surprise party was held by Misses Doris and Dorothy Hanna at their home, George Street. Guests were twenty-five boys and girls, friends of the guest of honor. Games and dancing were enjoyed and during the evening Cyril was presented with a ring with the crest of the Navy. Delicious refreshments were served.

A number of girls gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Clazie to enjoy a social evening recently, with their classmate and friend, Helen Brown, previous to her marriage. A great deal of fun was caused by a mock wedding enacted by the girls, after which an address was read by Miss Verna Brown. This was signed by Mabel Reid and Pearl Clazie. A basket of lovely red was presented. Helen thanked red was persented. Helen thanked the girls, inviting them to her new home. A dainty lunch was served by the girls.

8,354 Books Used By Library Patrons During April

The regular monthly meeting of Corby Public Library Board was held last evening with Mr. J. E. Bateman, the chairman presiding. The librarian's report was presented as follows:

Monthly Report for April, 1941.

The total use of books for the month of April was 8,354; of these 5,900 were adult, 2,114 boys and girls, and 340 reference books consulted. Information on St. George proved to be the popular reference question of the month with 20 reference books consulted in the matter. Information was supplied on fifty reference questions during the month and 10 books were borrowed on Interlibrary Loan from Queen's and Toronto University Libraries, for borrowers engaged in serious study.

With heavy use of books during the winter months, the mending problem is always with us. Approximatey 90 books were mended in the month.

Continuing our plan of closer cooperation between library and school, further lists of new books in the boys' and girls' library were prepared by Miss Delaney and sent to all the schools of the city. These lists are primarily to acquaint the teachers with new books relating to the course of study.

During the month, I was asked to act on a committee of four Ontario librarians to prepare lists of basic books for boys and girls libraries. The lists were to be graded for various sized budgets and are to be distributed at the London Conference of the Ontario Library Association in June. Since over one hundred books were involved in the choice it meant that much time and thought must be expended in their preparation.

Various displays of books of current interest have been arranged through the month. The present display on Gardening has proven of great interest. We hope to link our display of books on House Decoration with the Chamber of Commerce sponsored campaign for Clean Up-Paint Up Week.

A donation of an American General Class book for third grades dated 1830, was made by Mrs. McKinnon.

Respectfully submitted,
KATHRYN GALLAGHER,
Librarian.

During the business of the meeting Miss Gallagher was appointed delegate from the Board to the Ontario Library Association annual meeting.

"I Was Young Then"

By GENEVIEVE FOURNIA

Two of my most prized possessions are a small china preserve dish in the lovely original willow pattern, and a sterling silver teaspoon. Both have been handed down from United Empire Loyalist ancestors, until they have reached me. My grandmother was Sarah Weeks, a descendant of those Weeks Loyalists who lie buried at the old U.E.L. burying ground at Adolphustown. They pronounced their name WIX. I wish I knew their history. My grandmother died when my mother was only ten years old, so my mother could remember nothing of their history, except that they originally came to Canada from near Philadelphia, Pa. The sterling silver teaspoon is engraved R. and H. W., which my mother remembered stood for Ruth and Henry Weeks, our ancestors. The teaspoons and the dishes (for others of the family have similar pieces) were among the few treasures Ruth and Henry snatched when the angry American mob drove them from their home, before they burned it, because they were British sympathizers.

Anyone who is a descendent of these United Empire Loyalists; teachers who wish the children of today to appreciate their Canadian heritage; and all lovers of Canadian history should read that superb history of the Loyalists, 'Oliver Wiswell", written by the distinguished historian, Kenneth Roberts, the author of "Northwest Passage".

When you have read this book—the Battle of Bunker's Hill won't be merely a name to you—it will be a drama—played just outside Boston where so many Loyalists had fled from angry, incendiary, murdering mobs. These Loyalists were protected by an army of at least three thousand red-coated British "Regulars" who went down in defeat before the cannon shot of a mob of lesser numbers, partly because their generals were more interested in wine, and even women, than in realizing the desperateness of this American mob, and partly because they fought on a scorching August day, in hot uniforms, with eighty pound packs on their backs—fought in a formal, standardized way, against a riff-raff mob who even resorted to piercing their cannon balls with rusty nails to harass the British. It is a great, sad and thrilling story, first published in November 1940, and already reprinted twice since. Even the name of Weeks—and other names appearing on headstones in the Adolphustown burying ground, appear in this history, and we, their descendants, will revere them more after we have read this fine story of their loyalty.

Fashion Flashes

HATLESS girls are weakening in the face of the very attractive new hats. Hard to resist is a tiny tricorne of pale turquoise Milan trimmed with a large pink silk rose and swathed in pale pink tulle veiling.

TAKE A FLING into Spring with a printed silk suit for wear under a coat now and on its own afterwards. A charming model is in dark gray silk crepe with a green and red cherry print. A three-tiered skirt is worked in wide box pleats. Knee-length fitted jacket with plastic cherry buttons.

EXTRA SPECIAL attention is being given to the dinner dress ensemble this season. A smart model has a simple, surplice-closed bodice of black crepe and a long, slim skirt in a vivid, exotic flower print. The skirt is softly gathered in front and has a self belt. With the dress is a hiplength Chinese type coat of black crepe edged with the print fabric.

INCOMPLETE is the word for a new costume unless there is a new handbag. A nice model is a long bag in black patent, made in four long pocket-like sections. Bag is lined with bright red faille to match piping and initials in red leather cut-outs.

PRIZE-WINNER is the airy, bouffant type of evening frock. A delightful model is in silk marquisette layer on layer in pale pink, pale blue and pale lilac.

ALWAYS SURE of acceptance is the ruffled lace evening frock. A charming model in Chantilly type black is form-fitting, the slim silhouette marked by narrow self ruffles from the low straight decolletage to the flared hem.

TESTED RECIPES

ASPARAGUS

The delicacy of asparagus as it comes to the market fresh, crisp and green typifies spring. Asparagus is often classified as a luxury vegetable, but newer knowledge of nutrition emphasizes the value of green coloured vegetables and therefore it should be used often during the short season. Simply boiled and served with butter asparagus is delicious, but there are many ways in which this vegetable may be used.

The Consumer Section, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests the following tested recipes:—

Asparagus Potato Puffs

1 cup asparagus puree
2 cups hot mashed potatoes
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup bread crumbs
3 tablespoons butter

Mix asparagus, potatoes, salt and well-beaten egg. Drop in spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Brush surface with melted butter. Sprinkle lightly with crumbs. Bake at 400 degrees F. until golden brown.

Chicken and Asparagus casserole

12 stalks asparagus
1 cup cold cooked chicken
1½ cups water
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons butter
5 tablespoons flour
1 cup bread crumbs

Cook asparagus 15 minutes in water. Drain and reserve water. Melt butter. Add flour. Cook until frothy. Add asparagus, water and milk. Stir until thickened. In a baking dish spread half crumbs, then chicken and asparagus. Pour sauce over. Top with bread crumbs. Bake 20 minutes at 32 degrees F.

Cream of Asparagus Soup

2 cups milk
1 cup asparagus water
½ cup asparagus
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper

Press asparagus through a coarse sieve. Melt butter. Add flour. Cook until frothy. Add liquid. Stir until smooth. Add asparagus puree. Season and serve at once.

To can asparagus at home use only freshly cut stalks.

Cut off any woody portion.

Scrub thoroughly with a brush to remove sand and scales.

Tie in bunches of size that wil conveniently slip into a pint jar.

Stand the bunches upright in a saucepan with about two inches of water.

Cook closely covered for four minutes.

Pack in jars, allow one-half teaspoon of salt to each pint jar and fill with boiling water. Use the water in which asparagus was cooked, adding sufficient freshly boiled water to fill all jars to overflowing.

Put on rubbers and tops and partially seal. If screw top jars are used, seal completely, then loosen one-half turn. If spring top jars are used press down one clamp.

Place jars in sterilizer. If pressure canner is used follow directions for the type and allow forty minutes at fifteen pounds pressure. If water bath canner is used allow water to cover jars at least two inches and sterilize two hours. Be sure that water is kept boiling.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, May 4

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a most conflicting one. While the faculties and forces are keen, constructive and keyed to high pressure, yet there is danger of being carried to excess and regrets by excitement and emotional impulses which may have unfavorable reactions on the health and those immediately involved. Elders in the household may seem affected, unless patiently treated.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be under a menace of a year of fluctuating circumstances, with the abilities and ambitions keyed to achievement but beset by confusions, perils and several forms of menace and hazard. These seem largely to revolve around private relations, wherein elders, superiors, and those in the domestic circle or affectional life are involved. Safeguard and cherish all such relationships, lest they hamper constructive efforts.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, studious and responsible with much real ability and talent, but its inner life may suffer sorrow and defeat.

For Monday, May 5

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a day of major significance, with matters of first magnitude coming to the fore for clever and sagacious as well as well-directed manipulation. Large and expansive opportunity, in connection with large corporations, secret bodies or industrial enterprises of first importance. And while the energies, initiative and practical abilities may be defeated or miscarry through impetuous or reckless moves, by strife, estranglement or other over-indulgences. Shun extravagance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of great opportunity for growth, achievement and expansion, coming through influences of major scope. The forces and abilities are attuned to such advanced objectives but seem menaced by indomitable urges to express in the direction of violence, passion, indulgence and excess in one form or another. Such produce disruption, estrangement and ultimate defeat of excellent prospects, unless the brakes be put on. A child born on this day should be extremely talented and have great opportunity which it may undermine by wild, erratic and passionate behavior.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Broken Engagement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We had made all our plans to be married when she graduated from college. Her parents approved, and mine were for the match. It would have been impossible to find a happier couple than we were. I let her use my car when she wanted it, and gave her anything she wanted, whether I could afford it or not.

Here's where my problem comes in. Her girl cousin has always been an influencing factor in her life. Married recently, she came to my fiancee's home to pay a visit. I don't know what happened, but she was the cause of our breaking up and now my girl is going around with another young man.

Discouraged

I think your girl must have been pretty fickle and lacking in backbone to permit her cousin to break an engagement at the last moment and substitute another man in the way of a boy friend. You told me all the things you did for this girl of yours. It seems to me, if she intended to break with you, that she should have shown more consideration for your feelings than to drop you at the last moment.

Marriage demands something more steadfast in the way of a life-partner. There are ups and downs in the best of marriages, and the time is likely to come when you may thank the girl cousin for ridding you of a girl so easily influenced.

Never Gets a Compliment from Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband is very generous in all ways, but he never compliments me. He pays all bills, gives me a good allowance, and sends the children and me on a long vacation every summer. Also, he lets me use the car every day. But why doesn't he ever tell me I'm attractive, that I'm interesting, or that he is in love with me. It makes me very unhappy and I've often thought of leaving him. Other men have told me I'm attractive especially one, and I really wonder.

Cecile.

It seems to me, my dear Cecile, that you have a good deal more cake than bread provided by this more than generous husband. If he doesn't tell you you're attractive, it is probably because of your lack or appreciation of the good things he provides for you I suggest you count your blessings before they take their flight.

Never Came Near Him When He Was Sick

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For at least two years I have been very devoted to a young lady of 20 — six years younger than myself. I've given her everything she hinted for, allowed her to use my car, taken her to shows and concerts. I was glad to do these things, but here's what hurts.

I was in an automobile accident and was so seriously hurt that my life was despaired of. When I was able to have company, all my friends came to see me, with the exception of my girl. It worried me, so I wrote her a note at the hospital, thinking she might be critically ill.

To my great surprise I received a letter that she was well, but that she never visited hospitals because they depressed her. Now what do you think of that? I'm disappointed in her.

Michael.

I don't wonder you were disappointed with this girl. Perhaps it's just as well that you discovered, before your friendship went any further, that she was lacking in sympathy and all feeling and tenderness for a man who had been so good to her.

My advice be to look around for what the fates have in store in the way of a girl not lacking those qualities a wife should have.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DUTIES OF BRIDESMAID

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. I have been asked to be a bridemaid by a school chum of mine. Please tell me what my duties are.

2. Am I entitled to give a shower for the bride-elect?

G. A.

1. Bridemaids haven't any special duties, except to be graciously cooperative with the plans and wishes of the bride, to arrive on time (perhaps a little ahead of time) at all parties that are given and at the rehearsal and at the bride's house, to look as "pretty" as possible at the wedding, and to receive charmingly at the wedding reception.

The bride selects the dresses and accessories that her attendants are to wear at the wedding, but each attendant pays for her own attire. The attendants' bouquets, however, are customarily supplied by the bride's family.

2. Yes, since you are a close friend of the bride's, it is appropriate for you, or you with several others of the bride's intimate friends, to plan a shower for her.

CHURCH WEDDING

I am going to be married this Spring, a church wedding in the morning. We are going to have several bridesmaids and ushers, my father is to give me in marriage, and I am planning to wear a wedding gown with a long train and a veil.

1. What would be the most appropriate material for the bride's gown for an early-Spring wedding?

2. The bridegroom has no brother. I want to have my brother as best man, but he refuses, saying that he would rather be an usher. Would it be proper to have my brother-in-law as best man, since his wife is going to be my matron of honor, and since he has always been a close friend of my fiance's?

Bride-to-be.

1. Satin is always in fashion for the bridal gown, especially, of course, if the wedding is to be formal. Very popular for this year's Spring bride is filmy white marquisette, often combined with lace panels. Net can be used either alone or with lace. And Mousseline de soie. And always charming, and youthful, is white chiffon.

2. It is the bridegroom, not the bride, who makes the decision as to whom he would like to have as his best man. Undoubtedly your bridegroom, since he has no brother, would like to choose his best friend for his best man. However, you should leave this important invitation to him.

WHO IS TO BE INVITED

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Would you please help us out? The wedding reception is being held in the bride's home, with only the members of the family being invited. What should we do about inviting the husband of the matron of honor and the wife of the best man? The matron of honor and her husband and the best man and his wife are no relation to the bride or groom. The wedding is to be a formal one.

Reader.

It would of course, be, gracious if you could reach your guest-list to include the husband of the matron of honor and the wife of the best man, but if you really feel that you would rather not, I am sure that they would understand the wishes of the families if the situation is explained to them. But the situation should be explained by the bride to her matron of honor, and by the groom to his best man.

FOXBORO Y.P.

The regular meeting of the Foxboro Young People's was held on Monday night, April 28, in the church.

The president, Miss Milligan, opened the meeting with a poem. After the singing of a hymn there was a short business period. Miss Milligan took charge of the worship service, since Edythe Cook was absent. Following a hymn, Betty Elder, Phyllis Dafoe and Bernice McCaughan read the Scripture, Elinor Palmer led in prayer, Hazel Dafoe then read a poem. The topic for the evening was "The Poets of Canada." The lives and works of four great Canadian poets was given by Mary Hollinger, Myrtle Hubble, Nama Sine, and Mary Helliwell. The worship service was closed with the benediction. The roll call was taken and Miss Milligan asked questions on the poets of the evening. Jean Helliwell took charge of the recreational period. The meeting was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

THERE'S DANGER IF EXPECTANT MOTHER DOESN'T GIVE UP TOBACCO AND DRINKS

Should a mother smoke cigarettes or drink liquor when she is expecting a baby?

This is a question we doctors are called upon to answer more and more these days when the cocktail hour is a regular routine in so many homes, when drinking is just part of an ordinary evening's entertainment and when women smoke as much as the men do.

Naturally I think a woman who is pregnant and goes to her doctor for advice should follow it and if he says no smoking, then she should stop. But a good many don't do that, I have found. Some just ignore the fact that smoking and drinking may have injurious effects on the child and they keep right on without asking the doctor's advice, or heeding it if he does give it.

They're like the woman who came to me not long ago and announced: "Doctor, I'm not going to stop smoking even if I am pregnant." We had a little argument over this. I tried to explain to her "no smoking during pregnancy" wasn't just an arbitrary rule old fogies thought up to make women even more uncomfortable when carrying a child.

A woman expecting a child must remember that whatever she takes into her system is eventually passed on to her child. All cigarettes contain some nicotine, and it so happens that nicotine is one of our very active poisons. Nicotine certainly reduces the amount of pure air that is absorbed by the mother through the lungs and, of course, the unborn baby gets his entire oxygen supply from the blood of his mother.

Furthermore, scientific observations of the effect of smoking on pregnant women lead to the conclusion that the toxic effects of tobacco are conveyed to the infant through the smoking mother's blood. Just how harmful these effects are isn't completely established yet. Until they are, I have no hesitation in advising mothers-to-be to give up smoking. Why take a chance on injuring your baby when a little self denial will prevent it?

Smoking is also inadvisable during the period the newborn baby is being nursed. Analysis of breast-milk of smoking mothers, made by some European researchers, showed the presenc of nicotine in some samples.

As for alcohol, it certainly doesn't form a necessary part of the diet of an expectant mother. In fact, it can throw her diet off-balance. It also imposes a strain upon her kidneys at the very time when her kidneys are already being subjected to abnormal strain, disposing of the wastes of the unborn baby as well as of the mother. The expectant mother is always better off without liquor.

CANNIFTON W.M.S.

On Thursday evening, May 1, the Cannifton Woman's Missionary Auxiliary held an open meeting with a good number present and with Rev. and Mrs. Lehman, missionaries on furlough from Nigeria, as guest speakers.

Representing Bethany Auxiliary, Mrs. E. Treverton, Mrs. J. Ritz and Mrs. G. Denike conducted the worship services and the Misses Hazel and Bessie Walker contributed a duet with Mrs. C Eggleton at the piano.

In addition to showing the type of houses, utensils and manner of working of the natives, the slides showed the results of ways of living which only the incorporation of the Gospel into their lives can cure.

The meeting closed with a fine solo by Mrs. W. J. Davis and the benediction pronounced by the Rev. W. J. Davis.

A flat top office desk has been patented having an extra top that can be drawn over the regular one and locked without disturbing papers on it.

THE BEAUTY BAZAAR

By Delight Dixon

FINGER tips

First remove all polish and shape the nails. Use a fine-grained file for filing heavy nails and for gentleness on delicate nails.

IN respect to beauty, let your left hand know what your right hand is doing. Take care that both hands play the same game in your scheme to be perfection to your fingertips. The fact that you are handier with one hand than you are with the other should be no excuse for having one hand lovelier than the other. Today's suggestions for giving yourself a manicure are so easy to follow that even if you are less handy with one hand than you are with the other, you can do a perfect job of grooming all fingertips.

1 Remove old polish. Be sure to use a remover that is gentle on nails and cuticle. A glycerated remover does a thorough job while, at the same time, working toward making or keeping nails and cuticle in good condition. Be sure to use the remover around the cuticle in order to remove any polish discoloration from the base of the nails. Wrap an orangewood stick in cotton, dip it into the glycerated remover—or use the stopper-dropper that comes with the package—and work it gently around the base of each nail and under each nail tip.

2 Shape your nails. Of course, there is much to shaping the nails to conform to the hand, but I'm mainly concerned today in putting down the basic steps of a perfect manicure so that you can do both hands well and you won't have to play hide-and-seek with one hand. If your nails are so strong and sturdy that filing gets on your nerves, or if they are so dry and weak that the usual filing damages them, you are certain to like the new file which is as fine-grained as velvet and which literally flies smoothly over the nails. If you wear your nails moderately long, be careful not to file them in at their sides or you will narrow their base and weaken their tips. If your nails are quick to rough-up and tear off, you'll be wise to file away all roughness in order to give the nails a new start. Keep in mind that the shape of the nails must match each other, and try to suit their shape to your hands and fingers. When you have shaped all 10 fingers, scrub your hands lightly with soapy water. Dry well.

3 Groom your cuticle. And let me say here that this step and the next one work wonders toward making or keeping the fingertips lovely and in good condition. Glycerated nail groom is used this way: Apply a little of this delicately-perfumed cream to each fingertip; then, with the cushions of thumb and forefinger, massage over each nail and cuticle. This smooths and eases off rough cuticle without undue or unpleasant pressure, and without leaving rough or jagged edges. A small jar of this aid to hand loveliness via the perfect manicure will see the nails through many months of thorough grooming.

4 Remove cuticle. Using an orangewood stick tipped with cotton, apply glycerated cuticle remover and work it gently around the base of each nail. Then, using the spade-like end of your cuticle pusher, work the nail grooming cream and the glycerated cuticle remover together into a creamy lather. Gently push the cuticle back as you ease it from the nail. Use gentle, sweeping strokes, rather than short, choppy ones, in order to erase the cuticle without irritation to fingertips. Be careful, too, not to bruise the nails. White spots on the nails are bruises and might very well be the result of harsh treatment when grooming the cuticle. The use of the nail groom cream and cuticle remover together, however, practically eliminates all chances of and need for harsh treatment. Work cuticle remover over stained fingertips and under nail tips. It aids in bleaching and helps keep skin under and around the nails delicately white. Then wipe all lather and dissolved cuticle from the fingers.

5 Special care of tender nails. This step is of special benefit to nails that break or tear easily and to neglected nails. The special glycerated cuticle and nail oil is applied individually to the fingertips by means of small strips of flannel which may be purchased separately or which you can prepare at home. These strips are just wide enough to cover the full length of nail and just long enough to be wrapped securely around the fingertips. First, pour a small quantity of the oil into a little dish and place the dish in a shallow basin of hot water to heat. Place one end of the strips of flannel in the warm oil. Then take out the oil-soaked strips, one at a time, and wrap closely around the fingertips. Wrap each nail carefully. The penetrating action of the oil, increased by heat, serves to beautify and soften nails, cuticle and fingertips. Leave the strips on the hands for at least three minutes, during which time the flannel-wrapped fingers should be kept immersed in the warm oil. This step will aid in correcting dry, brittle nails not caused by a definite physical condition. Wipe each fingertip free from oil before going on with the manicure.

6 Because all excess cuticle has been removed by the use of the special cream and remover, it will not be necessary to trim the cuticle except for removing soft hangnails and extended or excess cuticle. If you've never used nippers, let me urge you to get acquainted with this perfect way of keeping the cuticle under control. Let me caution you, too, not to cut the cuticle too close or the "operation" will result in tender fingertips as well as redness and unattractiveness. Rinse fingertips in warm, soapy water, dry well, and use a towel for wiping off every trace of oil, cream and nail dust.

7 Dip nail white pencil into water and run it under each nail tip or, if you perfer, use the nail-white paste on the tip of an orangewood stick. Apply polish base, let dry, then put on polish. Choose your polish with an eye toward giving the hands the illusion of delicacy as well as carrying out the color scheme of your makeup. Here's a tip that will help you apply polish smoothly: Make one even stroke across the nail, outlining the half-moon, and three even strokes from nail base to or over the tips. Let the polish dry thoroughly.

Treat any tender nails gently. Wrap strips of oil-soaked flannel around tips to further soften and lubricate nails.

Trim off hangnails and excess cuticle with nippers. If you have followed previous steps carefully, you won't have much of this to do.

You can cover each nail with four strokes: one across the nail, outlining half-moon, then three even strokes from nail base to the tip.

Delight Dixon Says:

ANY woman past 40 can take years off her appearance by the clever use of makeup and an individually-styled hairdo. Remember that the lines of youth are firm and point upward. Keep this in mind and see to it that the corners of your lips turn slightly upward, that rouge is placed a little high on the cheeks, that facial contours, if they are weakening, are delicately tinted, that tips of brows go straight out or slightly upward, never downward, and that hairdo has an upward, perhaps off the face, movement. This all adds up to spell a more youthful appearance.

If you are under 20 and want to look your age, keep all colorful makeup aids in tune with your natural complexion tones, and use them sparingly. The heavy use of rouges, eye makeup and powder on a youthful face gives it a strange, weird look. Keep your makeup colors on the gay, youthful side.

If you like luxury-plus for yourself, or if you are looking for a gift for a very fastidious and luxury-loving friend, you'll find the answer in the attractive box containing three exquisite cakes of bath soap, individually wrapped in gleaming white satin which is imprinted with the signature of a well-known cosmetician. The soap is fine, rich and impregnated with a delightfully refreshing floral bouquet fragrance whose subtle scent lingers on the skin.

The use of a good perspiration deterrent or deodorant is becoming more important as the weather gets warmer. Use your favorite aid to daintiness often, and always be sure to follow directions that accompany the package.

Digging in the garden or flower pots, cleaning house or washing the automobile won't leave your hands grimy if you protect them with a pair of cream-treated lambskin gloves. The gloves are pre-treated so that they soften and whiten your hands while protecting them.

YOUR PROBLEMS

I REGRET that I did not heed your advice in time, when I first gained four pounds. Now I am definitely anxious to lose about 15 pounds which I have gained in the past 10 months. Please have patience with me now and help me regain my youthful figure.
ROSELLE D.

I'm sorry you did not send the necessary three-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope, but if you will do so at once I will be very happy to forward you my leaflets containing suggestions for losing weight quickly without endangering your good health and looks.

What would you advise me to use in order to make my hair grow? I shampoo it once each week and brush it every night.
TINY.

Introduce applications of a good hair and scalp ointment into your routine. The regular use of such a preparation would help check the cause and aid in encouraging the growth of your hair. In addition to weekly washing and daily brushing, massage over your shoulders, up over your neck just behind your ears and over your scalp every night before taking up your hairbrush.

I have been in the habit of plucking out dark chin and mustache hairs with tweezers, then using a liberal application of camphor. A friend of mine says I am courting serious trouble and advises permanent removal by electrolysis, but I cannot afford this. Please let me know if the tweezer method is dangerous.
BEARDED LADY.

The sensible plan, of course, is to have the conspicuous hairs permanently removed. Perhaps you could arrange with a competent operator to have a few hairs removed at one time. However, I have never heard of such dangerous results as your friend refers to, from the habit of removing facial hairs with tweezers.

What can be done about an itching skin, mainly on my arms, shoulders and face? Do you think it could be the forerunner of a serious condition?
L. HEFFERNAN.

The skin condition may be due to dryness or nervousness or, perhaps, something you are using to which your skin is particularly sensitive. However, I suggest that you ask your family physician to check over your skin. I regret that I cannot be of further service now, but please feel free to write me any time.

Do you advise the use of a regular cleaning fluid, the kind used for cleaning clothes, on the hair and scalp? A friend of mine uses it, but I am afraid it might not be a good plan and am writing to find out what you think of the idea before using it on my own hair.
BELLE ADAMS.

Certainly not. Such a practice is not only dangerous but extremely harsh to and harmful on the hair and scalp. There are a number of dry-cleaning aids made especially for use on the hair, so I beg you not to consider such a haphazard beauty method. Your druggist or I will be more than happy to furnish names of dry-cleaning products made for use on the hair.

Win Streaks Disturb Normal Course of Major League Races; Cleveland Indians Leading Loop

Indians Blossom Out as an Array of Hitters in Last Two Weeks

CARDINALS WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

This spring is setting some kind of a record in winning streaks in the major leagues—if not in length, then certainly in breadth.

Brooklyn Dodgers dazzled the baseball world for a while by running their string to nine games. Now before the shine has worn off this feat it is endangered from both Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Cardinals.

The American League leaders have won eight in a row and the National League pace-setters seven straight. These glittering streaks show how fast the races are at the moment and why teams with records good enough to be in first place most years are back in the pack.

Cleveland, considered a light-hitting combination at the start of the season, has blossomed out as an array of hitters and uncorked 56 hits in its last four games.

This power helped the veteran Mel Harder get credit for his third straight victory yesterday, 7-3, against Philadelphia Athletics. Jeff Heath hit a triple with the bases loaded, Hal Trosky made three hits, including a home run and Ken Keltner smacked three for extra bases.

Cards Win Another

The Cardinals, who won't come up against the Dodgers until their last series in the East, punched out a 4-2 triumph over the Phillies yesterday with another one of their young pitchers, Howard Krist, gaining stardom with a five-hit performance. He had a shutout until the ninth when the Phils put together a single, triple and a long fly.

The Dodgers showed no signs of a letdown following Cincinnati's interruption of their winning streak the day before. They crushed Chicago Cubs 7-3 as if nothing had happened, Whitlow Wyatt hurling four-hit ball for his fourth straight victory against one defeat, and Dolph Camilli clouting his seventh home run of the season.

New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates played the season's first tie game, 7-7 in 13 innings, finally yielding to darkness. Gabby Hartnett, one-time Cub star and manager, made his first start as a catcher for the Giants and got two hits, one of them a double scoring two runs in a four-run third-inning rally. Mel Ott, also making a comeback, drove in three runs, two on his fifth homer of the spring. The Pirates tied the score with a four-run splurge in the eighth.

Senators Win in 12th

Washington Senators and St. Louis Browns came up with another marathon which Washington ultimately won 7-4 in 12 innings. The payoff came on Rick Ferrell's single with the bases loaded followed by Pitcher Sid Hudson's double. It was Hudson's first victory and he went all the way, giving ten hits. Manager Fred Haney and Coach Fred Hofmann of the Browns were banished in a dispute with Umpire Cal Hubbard. It was the first time a manager has been tossed out this season.

Chicago White Sox cooled off New York Yankee, who had 31 hits in their previous two games, 8-1. Ted Lyons held them to five and the Sox ambushed Red Ruffing for five runs in the sixth inning after he had held them to one single in the first five frames. Joe Kuhel's double was the kingpin in this uprising and another by the same slugger figured in a three-run splurge against Charley Stanceu in the next inning. The victory lifted the Sox into second again.

Detroit Tigers kept their artillery white hot by reeling off 17 hits to beat Philadelphia Athletics 15—behind the seven-hit hurling of Schoolboy Rowe. He held the A's to four safeties and scoreless until the ninth.

FRITZIE ZIVIC EASILY DEFEATS TONY MARTELIANO

Welterweight Champion Will be Busy for a Couple of Months

WINS IN TENTH

New York, May 3 (AP).—Apparently Fritzie Zivic's performance against Mike Kaplan in Boston a couple of weeks ago was just one of those letdowns that can affect a busy fighter.

At least, Zivic fought an entirely different scrap against Tony Marteliano at the Coliseum last night and from the looks of his program he'll have to keep on fighting differently for the next couple of months.

Fritzie has two more bouts scheduled this month, an overweight affair against Phil Furr of Washington at Philadelphia May 13 and a title defence against young Freddie (Red) Rochrone of Elizabeth, N.J., at Newark May 26. Then a month later he's due to take on Al (Bunny) Davis, who once was expected by many to lift the welterweight crown off the Zivic head.

Davis, suspended for repeatedly fouling Zivic, was reinstated yesterday for a 12-round bout against Fritzie at the Polo Grounds June 25. Davis, now in the army at Fort Hulon, Tex., will be given a month off to get ready for the bout and promoter Mike Jacobs promised the army relief fund will benefit by at least $10,000.

Off last night's performance, Zivic should get through this strenuous program safely. He gave the willing but unskilled Marteliano a boxing lesson and a body beating and then left him over the ropes as the result of a 10th-round assault that did everything but end the fight in a knockout.

A series of smashes to the head, the last a terrific right uppercut, put Tony on the canvas once. He couldn't fight back after he got up, but when he fell on the ropes he was able to cling to them for two seconds until the bell ended the bout.

It wasn't a profitable affair for Zivic, except to restore his prestige, as only 4,100 customers turned out, paying $6,361 to see the show.

$75,000 Argument Down For Decision At Churchill Downs

By ORLO ROBERTSON

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Louisville, Ky., May 3 — (AP)— Months of minute preparations ended for the pick of the nation's three-year-old thoroughbreds today as they brought their $75,000 argument to Churchill Downs' classic mile and a quarter for the 67th running of the Kentucky Derby.

Eleven horses, 10 colts and a lone gelding, were named overnight for the richest derby since the Little Red Horse, Aristides, started this growing American madness in 1875. There was a possibility, however, that only ten would parade to the barrier at 6:45 p.m., EDT., as the combined bands of a half-dozen schools strike up "My Old Kentucky Home."

Lou Tufano, Jamaica, N.Y., paving contractor, said that he planned to scratch Market Wise, Wood Memorial winner, unless rain softened the racing strip as he feared the hard, paste board track would cause permanent injury to his colt's already none too good foot. (There was little likelihood of rain.)

It's a far cry from the days when Aristides showed the way home to the best of his day. Col. Matt Winn, President of the Downs, was one of the few thousand who saw that race. For today he predicted a record smashing attendance of close to 100,000 with $2,000,000 pouring through the mutuel machines for the first time since $2,096,613 was wagered in 1926, the year E. R. Bradley's horses ran one, two for the second time.

From far and near came a cross section of American life to pay homage to King Thoroughbred. Prices in hotels and restaurants skyrocketed, taxis charge a dollar for a 40 cent ride to the Downs but that made no difference. It was a free-spending crowd, apparently with more money to enjoy itself than at any time in recent years.

The race itself was so wide open that one man's opinion was as good as another.

Royce Martin's Our Boots, battling the jinx that has kept any Belmont futurity winner from ever capturing the Derby. Charles S. (Lucky) Howard's Porter's Cap and Warren Wright's Whacky Whirlaway came in for the bulk of the support but there was no standout.

Early odds quoted Our Boots at 2 to 1, Porter's Cap at 5 to 2 and Whirlaway at 5 to 1 but there was a strong possibility that the Martin and Howard representatives would end up mighty near co-choices.

THEIR LOSS—TO ARMY— BIG LOSS TO MAJORS

Uncle Sam's army soon will gain several top-flight major league baseball players, judging by their placements in Class 1-A. Hank Greenberg, Tiger star, is the biggest name ready to go. Hank, however, will continue to draw his reported 50,000 salary from the Tigers according to word from Owner Walter Briggs. The Washington president, Clark Griffith, is up in arms as he stands to lose his two stars, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis, the highest paid men on the team. Their salaries, however, will be discontinued when they enter the army. John Rigney, White Sox pitching star, is in Class 1-A, too. Hugh Mulcahy, the Phillies ace, already is in the army.

JUST DUCKY—RED DROPS BALL AND DODGEER IS SAFE

Bill Werber, of the Cincinnati Reds, fumbles the throw-in on Dolf Camilli's seventh inning single, and Joe "Ducky" Medwick, of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is safe at third base during game at Ebbets Field The ball goes past Fumble-fingers Werber—see it? Plate Umpire Reardon, who travelled from home, calls the play. The Dodgers won today's game by 13-2 score.

REGINA RANGERS WIN ALLAN CUP IN SIXTH GAME

Score 3-0 Shutout Over Sydney Millionaires in Best Game of Series

7,000 ATTEND

By LORNE BRUCE

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, May 3 (CP). — Regina Rangers who did all the things you can read about in dime novels held the Canadian senior hockey championship today, winners over Sydney Millionaires in one of the most spectacular finals in Allan Cup history.

The Regina team which was almost unable to enter its own league because of lack of players climaxed their story book season by beating Millionaires 3-0 here last night in the sixth game of a series that had been scheduled for the best of five.

No less fantastic than the story of the Rangers was the back-drop for the finale of the longest season hockey has ever seen.

The "destiny kids" coached by Freddie Metcalfe won the championship before a crowd of more than 7,000 fans who braved an electrical and rain storm and saw the title decided on a soft sheet of ice with a heavy haze over the surface because of a temperature of about 80 above zero in the arena.

Fans In Shirt Sleeves.

Many fans were in shirt sleeves and one spectator had his shirt off as Regina went ahead in the second period on Alf Kunkel's disputed goal and increased the lead on markers by Scotty Cameron and Stan Bladon in the third.

Sparkling in the Regina victory was goalie Jim Henry who returned to his mid-season form and with his cat-like blocking and smothering shut out the collection of stars from Sydney.

There were some who said Henry was mediocre as Sydney won the first two games of the best-of-five series by 8-6 and 8-3 and there still was some dissatisfaction as Rangers tied the third 1-1 and finally deadlocked the series with 5-4 and 3-2 wins.

But the loudest cheers today were for "Sugar Jim" who picked last night to give one of his best performances of the season.

Great Fighting Spirit.

Rangers are fast and clever but a great fighting spirit was the deciding factor in their triumph over the eastern champions. Millionaires needed only a tie in either the third or fourth games to carry the title back to the Maritimes.

Millianaires are an exceptionally fast group of players. Last night they looked lethargic at times beside the hustling young Rangers who went at top speed for the full 60 minutes and backchecked the eastern champions into submission.

The first Regina goal counted in the second period bounced almost to the blue line and the game was held up five minutes while Millionaires protested the puck had hit a post. The officials after discussing with the goal judge ruled it was a score.

Mel Snowden, Sydney defenceman, was in the penalty box when Rangers added another after 6½ minutes of the third and Rangers were coasting against a tired opposition as they added a third with only seven seconds to go.

TORONTO LEAFS TIE THE CHIEFS FOR CELLAR SPOT

Lose 8-4 Decision to Birds Winners Getting to Fischer for Thirteen Hits

BEARS BEAT ROYALS

(By The Associated Press)

Like water seeking its own level, Toronto Maple Leafs are slowly but surely settling into the depths of the International League standings.

A few weeks ago, before the season started, Toronto fans were just as optimistic about the chances of their team as the fans of any other town. The Leafs were starting off with a clean slate, a new manager to guide them and several promising new players. Toronto spent the last two years in the league cellar, but it was felt that this time things would be different.

However, after two weeks of campaigning, the Leafs haven't given their supporters much cause for rejoicing, having won only four of 12 games.

They dropped into a tie for last place with Syracuse Chiefs yesterday when they lost an 8-4 decision to Baltimore Orioles. It was the second straight victory for the Birds at Toronto.

Ken Trinkle was the pitching hero, allowing only one hit in the last 4 1-3 innings after replacing Don Kerr in the fifth inning after the Leafs had scored four runs. The Orioles got to Carl Fischer, making his first start of the season for 13 hits.

Home Teams Suffer

It was a bad day for the home teams all around, with Newark Bears trouncing Montreal Royals 7-3 and Jersey City Giants beating Rochester 4-2. The Syracuse-Buffalo contest was put back to be played as part of a doubleheader today.

Newark's Hank Borowy spaced eight hits winning his third victory, while his mates combed three Montreal hurlers for 11 blows. Al Sherer bore the brunt of the attack yielding five runs in as many innings and was charged with the loss.

The victory increased the Bears' lead over the second place Royals to 2 1-2 games and evened the current series at on game each.

Jersey City went into a tie for third place with Buffalo Bisons as Frank Pearce veteran hurler, turned in a four-hitter for his second victory. Three Rochester pitchers gave up 15 bases on balls to aid the Little Giants to square the series. Herschel Lyons started and was the losing pitcher.

Modern science seems to be without bounds, as we hear the very latest wrinkle is a "portable artificial ice rink." Actually there is one on the road in the United States today. Designed to furnish an ice surface which can be taken from place to place, the new rink travels complete in trucks and can be set up ready for use—indoors or out of doors—in a few hours. It is even independent of power supply, as diesel engines drive the compressors and two one-cylinder gasoline engines run the evaporative condenser and brine circulating pumps respectively. The unit can operate literally "in the middle of nowhere," as even the makeup water for the economizer and ammonia compressor-head cooling system can be supplied from a water tank carried with the outfit. The idea was invented by N. Taylor Todd, who resides in the middle states. At first the idea was scoffed at as "crazy idea—entirely impractical," but of late other engineers have admitted its possibility.

The "portable rink" contains no piping, as used in the present-style permanent artificial ice rinks. It consists simply of steel sections, about 20 feet by three feet and weighing 500 pounds each, clamped together over the proposed surface. Thus various size rinks can be erected to form as large or small an ice surface as desired. Ice is formed simply by spraying the pre-cooled steel tops of the sections, which are connected to the brine and compressor tanks, the steel sections having insulated pipes between a three-inch thickness of steel. The cracks between the sections are shut by a preliminary "sealing" spray and offer no difficulties whatsoever. It is estimated that about 20 sprayings are necessary before a perfect sheet of ice is obtained, but the artificial freezing is so rapid and intense, that spraying can practically continue, that is to say by the time one end of the rink is sprayed, the other end is dry. The rink sections, well protected on the bottom with treated canvas, can be laid anywhere.

Naturally, brine to freeze the rink is not available at every cross-roads in the country, so the unit carries a complete portable brine refrigerating system on wheels. Such an apparatus should prove a boom to the rinks in smaller centres, as two or three rinks could pool their resources and purchase a "portable artificial ice plant" on a community basis, thus cutting down on the initial expense. For an example, and providing the initial outlay was not too great, the management of the Hume Arena in Belleville and the Brock Street Rink in Peterborough, could purchase a unit on a co-operative basis. In the early part of the season the plant could be used alternately between the two cities and then in the late spring when there is little assurance of adequate ice for play-off games, the "portable rink" could be laid over the ice surface, created during the winter freezing season. Although it is still in primary stage, it will not be surprising if a lot more is heard about this new and provenly successful invention. What's next?

Is was with regret we learned of the death of Dickie Ball, former Montreal motorcycle racer of prominence. Ball, who made the fastest lap time in the Canadian Motorcycle championships held here in 1936, died the other day in a German war prison camp. Pat Christie, also of Montreal and who was pitman in Ball's pit during the race here which was won by George Pepper, is now a flight-lieutenant in the R.A.F. and recently returned to Canada after winning the Distinguished Flying Cross and Bar. Unfortunately Ball fell prisoner of war in the spring of 1940 and his unfortunate death was revealed in Canada only a short time ago. Incidentally we understand Geo. Pepper, Belleville's gift to the British motorcycle racing tracks in 1937 and '38, is in the service of the R.A.F. in England, while his brother Jim is also on war work.

Do you remember when Tommy Burns, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, enlisted with the Canadian military forces in the First Great War 23 years ago today. Burns claimed the crown after defeating Marvin Hart in 1906 and lost it two years later to Jack Johnson in Australia.

'Tis hoped Bob Ripley learns of the winning of the Allan Cup by the Regina Rangers, because he could manufacture a really good "believe it or not" for the future. Yesterday afternoon major league baseball was played in both big league loops, last evening the final Allan Cup hockey match saw ice hockey and today will witness the 67th running of the Kentucky Derby, all top-notch sport events in different fields and completed within a range of a few hours. Statistics aside—hats off to the Regina Rangers, 1941 Allan Cup champions. After losing the first two games the Rangers rallied to play the Dominion-wide packed Millionaires a 1-1 tie in the third contest and then staged another for Ripley by winning the next three in succession even if they had to draft a couple of 19-year-old kids to turn the trick. So the amateur hockey championship of the world returns to the west, after many years absence.

SPORT SPICE—The boom is on all over the continent, major league attendance in both leagues is far above that of the past two seasons, during the corresponding opening fortnight period..A number of Kingston sport executives were in the city last night attending the Rameses Shrine convention at the Quinte Hotel..They tell us their baseball team will be known as the Combines and operated in a similar manner to their championship hockey club.. Eleven three-year-old colts will face the starter's barrier in the Kentucky Derby, which will be broadcast approximately about 5.30 o'clock this p.m..... Chuck Barnett's Zeller gals' softball nine is seeking exhibition games with a Trenton team prior to the opening of the local league..... Ken Watt is keeping his Alemite gals squad well under cover, but practising regularly on the old circus ground diamond and we hear the "east enders" may prove the surprise team of the league.. ..say when.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

KILLED IN COLLISION

Hamilton, May 3 (CP)—George Awde, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., was instantly killed early today when his car, east-bound on the Queen Elizabeth Way, collided with the rear of a semi-trailer of a Toronto-St. Catharines transport driven by Anthony Brzezicki, Hamilton. The driver of the truck told Provincial Constable E. E. Bowen, who investigated, that he had stopped owing to motor trouble and had just finished putting up flares when the car crashed into the rear of the heavy trailer. The accident took place one mile west of Vineland.

Seeing To The World

He was a new recruit to the Navy and he joined it in the hope of fulfilling his youth's ambitions of adventure on the high seas and travel to distant lands. But at first he was sent to a training school and at the end of two weeks he had spent most of his time digging ditches, chopping trees and filling up holes. Finally he sought his superior officer.

"You see, Sir," he complained, "when I joined the Navy they told me I should see the world and here for two solid weeks I've done nothing but rearrange it!"

Bewildering Scene In Dressing Room After The Victory

Regina, May 3—(CP)—It was a bewildering scene in Regina Rangers' dressing room last night after they won the Allan Cup.

When the first words were spoken they came from the 19-year-old players, Scotty Cameron, Frank Mario and Grant Warwick who stamped around shouting:

"We're champs—we're champs." The "kids" appeared amazed.

When photographers attempted to take the team's picture, Captain Gord Davidson could not be found immediately. The milling crowd finally located him, lying on a bench with a towel over his face. He was completely exhausted.

The Sydney players lined up at the Regina dressing room to congratulate Goalie Jim Henry who had scored a shutout. 'Nice going, Henry," they repeated as they shook hands with the 20-year-old Winnipeg product.

Coach Freddy Metcalfe who fashioned the Canadian Senior Hockey Championship team from castoffs, rookies and 19-year-old players, kissed the goalie and went around hugging the other players.

The Difference

"What's the matter, my little man?" asked a sympathetic stranger of a small boy whom he saw crying in the street.

"Please, sir, my dog's dead," sobbed the boy.

"Well," said the man, "you mustn't make such a trouble of it. My grandmother died last week, and I'm not crying."

"No," said the boy, "but you didnt bring her up from a pup."

AFTER DIRECT HIT ON AIR RAID SHELTER

A dramatic picture made after the last, heaviest air raid on London showing wounded and bomb-shocked householders making their way from their all-but-ruined bomb shelter clasping their meagre belongings to them. Above the shelter all is in ruin, the result of a direct bomb hit. Their patient courage stamped on every face, air raid wardens work amid still burning wreckage.

MISSING FROM HOME

Brockville, Ont., May 3 ((CP)—Miss Fannie Latham, elderly resident of Junetown, Ont., who has been missing from her home for two days, was found Friday in woods, about a mile from her home by a search party headed by Provincial Constable Ward Kennedy. She said she took a wrong turn while out for a walk and became lost.

Why Clerks Go Crazy

The old lady had made the unfortunate young clerk fetch roll after roll of linoleum, until he had displayed everything in the store.

"What did you say it was for, madam?" he asked at last in despair.

"Oh, didn't I tell you?" replied the customer, brightly. "It's for the bottom of the canary cage."—Bradford Witness.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, My, Willyum, when you think of the marvellous age of inventions we're living in, you ought to pause and be thankful.

I would with pleasure, but I'm a little late as it is, pop said, and ma said, Just think, right here in this little breakfist room we're surrounded by comforts and conveniences that would of made a cave man's hair stand up on end with superstitition, that's how far we've advanced.

If I had enough hair to stand up on end without falling back again from stage fright, I dont know but what I'd swap with the cave man, pop said, and ma said, Now for instants just take this electric toaster that sends the toast popping out at you like a magician's wand, and take this electric coffee maker that makes the most perfect coffee in the world if you just remember to time it. And if it wasn't such a perfect sunny day we'd be eating here in oblivious comfort by the light of still more electricity, she said.

The sun's not a bad little invention itself, pop said, and ma said, Well naturelly, but the credit for that goes elsewhere. And that's only half the story. I mean you have your daily paper with news still damp from all over the 7 corners of the world, and if you wanted to talk instead of read you could still get the news from the radio. And meanwhile we're being comfortably heated by an invisible furnace, and if the weather suggested otherwise we'd be just as comfortably wafted by cooling breezing from an electric fan, she said.

Wich just then the telephone went and I answered it and it was Mrs. Hew's for ma, and ma said, O deer, she'll talk and talk and my nice coffee will get stone cold, I detest and dispize that telephone, and pop said, Why my deer, think of what would of happened to a cave man's hair at the sound of a telephone in the stone age.

Being sourcrastic.

Marmora

Marmora.—Miss Mary O'Neill left on Thursday for Montreal where she has accepted a position.

Mrs. Gregor Murray visited relatives in Belleville over the week end.

Mrs. Percy Fletcher and daughter, Marilyn, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. De Guerre, at Oshawa.

Mr. Lorne Gray and family have moved to their new home north of Marmora village.

Mrs. James McGrath and Mrs. M. McGrath are at Tipperary House, Crowe Lake, preparing for the opening of the tourist season in June.

Mrs. J. R. Bagg and sons, Keith and Carl of Oshawa, visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Sabine over the week-end. Mr. Bagg and Mr. H. Campbell spent the week-end at Crowe Lake.

Marmora cheese factory has opened for the season. With promise of early pasture and improved prices prospects are bright for a good season.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Henderson left on Wednesday for Woodlawn where Mr. Henderson has been re-engaged as cheesemaker for the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Hamilton have moved into part of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Henderson's residence.

Fred Burns and Irvin Gray spent a few days in Toronto recently.

Jewish Agency Calls On Bachelors to Enlist With British Forces

Jerusalem, May 3 — (CP) — The Jewish agency called Friday for all bachelors between 23 and 30 years of age to enlist with the British forces.

The agency said it was making arrangements with employers in order to release as many men as possible for active service.

It pointed out that some 8,000 men already had volunteered but said the total was not nearly enough.

Storage Curtailment Causes Egg Decline

Toronto, May 3—Curtailment of storing activities in eggs leaving more supplies available for domestic and export trading is blamed for the easy tone prevailing on the egg market here. Grade "A" pullets showed only drop, however, declining ½ cent to bring the range to 18 to 18½ cents per dozen. Butter and cheese held steady at previous levels.

There was a good demand for grade "A" medium and grade "B" eggs on the market, but prices held fairly steady. The firm tone earlier in the current week gave way to an easier one toward the middle of the week when prices in the graded section of trading on top grades declined from ½ to 1 cent per dozen with a good demand centreing on grade "A" medium and grade "B". There has been a fair volume shipped to Eastern points, several l.c.l. shipments going forward to the Maritimes. The warm weather of the last few days is reflected in the quality of recent arrivals. Some activity in breaking plants is still in evidence.

The butter market was steady but quiet and while offerings were not heavy they were sufficient to meet the demand. The odd lot was reported sold early in the day at 29¾c a pound, but it was reported that toward the close of the market it had dropped to the previous level of 29½c at which price it was not moving easily.

Hogs Marketed in Belleville District

It is most important that the farmer receive accurate grade information on the hogs that he markets. To make this possible the department has mailed out the grade release certificates to the farmers for the hogs marketed out of the Belleville district. The reason for the action on the part of the department was to make the system uniform.

It is necessary for the farmer to present the grade release certificate if he wishes to collect the bonus offered by the provincial government. This fact makes it no longer necessary to mail out the releases for the purpose of making the system uniform.

After Monday, May 5, the grade release certificates will be returned to the drovers who will distribute them to the farmers. All possible care must be taken not to lose these certificates because duplicate copies will not be readily issued.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of May 2nd, 1941, are as follows:

Judge Cameron Selected Chairman Of Hastings General Committee In Dominion Victory Loan Drive

Judge Charles A. Cameron, has been selected by Minister of Finance the Hon. J. L. Ilsley, to be chairman of the General Committee for the County of Hastings in the forthcoming Dominion Victory Loan Campaign to raise seven hundred and fifty millions of dollars for the prosecution of the war.

The exemplary ability of Judge Cameron to act in a capacity of this nature, which has been so ably demonstrated in previous campaigns of a war and civilian nature, has extended far and wide. He received a personal invitation from the Minister of Finance to act as chairman, and he promptly accepted.

Already the wheels of campaign organization are beginning to turn. Committees are in the process of being formed in Belleville, Trenton, and towns, villages and rural communities of the county, and by the time the opening gun of the campaign is fired at the beginning of June, a complete organization machinery will be in operation.

So successful were the organisation methods used in the last war years of 1917, 1918 and 1919, that a similar procedure will be used in the forthcoming Dominion War Loan campaign. The Victory Loans of those years were not only outstanding successes from a campaign point of view but exemplified the faith of the Canadian public in its government. That faith has never been shaken, in fact, it is now stronger than ever, officials feel, due to the dark days that now hover over the Empire.

Hastings Raised Huge Sum in '19.

Hastings County in the year 1919, gave evidence of the intense loyalty that has characterized its inhabitants since the days of the pioneers. In that year the sum of $2,959,000.00 was raised through the medium of the Victory Loan, which was eighty per cent. over and above the quota allotted. In that year, one person out of every twelve in this county purchased a Victory Bond.

The county's loyalty has not depreciated. In fact with the passing years it has grown stronger, if possible. That has been ably demonstrated in appeals for funds which have met with such a generous response during the present war.

The co-operation of the general public, which came forward with ready assistance in previous campaigns, will again be asked in order that campaign machinery will be able to move swiftly and efficiently when the opening day comes.

Name Other Officials Soon

Chairmen and other officials of the various committees will be named in the near future. These will be men and women of proven ability in this field, and the consensus is that with Judge Cameron at the helm, and a capable "crew" standing by, the forthcoming campaign ship, will sail through to a success achieved here during the latter years of the last war.

1,400 Dozen Doughnuts Have Been Delivered by Girl Guides, Brownies

Fourteen hundred dozen delicious doughnuts will decorate breakfast and dining tables in the city during the next few days.

Friday and today, Girl Guide and Brownie Troops of the city were busy delivering the confections to residents of the city whose generous response in the Doughnut campaign recently completed by the Guides will result in substantial sums being added to the coffers of the local branch of the Red Cross Society and their own organizations. Fifty per cent of the monies collected will go to the Red Cross and the remainder to the various troops for the important work they are carrying on themselves.

For the past two weeks the girls conducted a house-to-house canvass for the sale of the doughnuts. Householders were courteous in the treatment of the young ladies and showed their appreciation of their efforts along wartime lines, by giving substantial orders.

On bicycles, in cars, and on foot the young ladies in blue delivered their tasty packages. They covered the entire city and expected to have the job done early today.

Officials of the troops were loud in their appreciation of the response by general public to the appeal of the Girl Guides. Seven troops, five of Girl Guides and two Brownie organizations in a fine spirit of co-operation, canvassed the city during past two weeks and solicited orders for the doughnuts.

The sale of the doughnuts is but one phase of the war work being carried on by these energetic organizations. Troop-leaders and officers work hand in hand with the "privates of the line" and the result is shown in the success that always attend their efforts.

attacked by machine-gun fire by German aircraft while they were in the water.

"During the night of April 27-28 about 4,200 men were withdrawn from the Rapthis area by warships.

"It was then hoped to carry out final embarkation on the night of April 28-29. It was estimated that there were about 8,000 troops and a number of Yugoslav refugees to be embarked from the Kalamata area; about 4,000 troops to be embarked from Monemvasia, and about 750 R.A.F. personnel from Kithera.

Plan Abandoned

"Soon after midnight on April 29 our forces which had proceeded to the Kalamata area reported this had already been occupied by the enemy and that the plan to embark the 8,000 men and Yugoslav refugees from that area had to be abandoned.

"Despite the enemy's occupation nearly 500 men were withdrawn by our naval units from the Kalamata area during this night. At the same time, 3,750 men of the Imperial forces were withdrawn from the Monemvasia area and 760 R.A.F. personnel from the Kithera.

"On the night of April 29-30 our destroyers again operated in the Kalamata area in the hope of picking up survivors, but only 33 officers and men were found and embarked.

"On the following night, however our destroyers carried out another search in the Kalamata area and succeeded in rescuing a further 23 officers and 179 men.

High Testimony to Skill

"Soon after midnight on April 30-May 1, the commander in chief, Mediterranean, reported that about 45,000 Imperial forces and R.A.F. personnel had been withdrawn from Greece and also a large number of refugees. ....

"That an operation of this difficulty and magnitude was carried out with such a high degree of success and with only loss of two destroyers and four transports, only one of which had troops on board, is high testimony to the skill and determination of all concerned.

"The commander in chief has issued the following message:—

'Through these operations, under conditions of considerable danger and difficulty, there was no faltering and the determined way in which ships fought back against aircraft attacks with their defensive armament was magnificent. We of the Royal Navy and officers and men of the Imperial forces realise the extent of the debt owed to the merchant navy for their devoted work during these past weeks.'" pass through which the Germans forced their way down into the Greek peninsula.

WAR OFFICE WRITES

Furthermore, the statement pointed out, the greater part of the Greek army was in Albania some 30 or 40 miles away from the Greek frontier with its left flank to the sea and its right flank on the Yugoslav frontier.

The rest of the statement, all recent history relates how the British-Greek line held while fighting a bitter rear-guard action. When it became clear the Greek army could fight no longer, after the surrender of the Epirus army, the Greek government asked that United Kingdom and Empire troops be withdrawn.

The forces accordingly withdrew to the embarkation beaches, with a New Zealand brigade covering the withdrawal, the statement said.

The statement indicated that at least in the early stages of the campaign German parachutists were wiped out almost as fast as they came down.

At Rupel pass, the statement said, "the Germans employed parachute troops, dropping 150 behind the Greek lines. Of these 100 were killed quickly and the remainder were captured."

Heavy Casualties Inflicted

Throughout, heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans, "and the Germans themselves testify to the accuracy of our shooting" the statement said.

One of the most heroic moments in the campaign was when a small Anzac force fought two German divisions. The statement alluded to this briefly as follows:

"On the same day (April 15) a small New Zealand force which was holding the eastern entrance to Peneios Gorge, to the south of (Mount) Olympus was heavily engaged by far super enemy force driven back. The next day two battalions of the Australian brigade went to their support.

"This small Anzac force of about a brigade group fought two German divisions in the gorge. Losses were heavy, but the withdrawal was secured on our right flank."

The war office statement entitled "The campaign in Greece" said:

At 5.45 a.m. on April 6 the Germans crossed the Bulgarian-Greek frontier....

"The Germans came across the frontier at five points: down the Struma Valley to the Rupel Pass, over the Nevrokop Plateau towards Drama, towards Xante, towards Komotine and from Swilengrad down the Marista Valley. The last line of defence was not seriously opposed, nor was it intended to be and the enemy reached the sea at Dede Agatz on April 9.

"Elsewhere the Greeks successfully withheld the initial German attacks and inflicted heavy casualties. At Rupel Pass the Germans employed parachute troops, dropping 150 behind the Greek lines. Of these 100 were quickly killed and the remainder were captured.

Delay Germans Was Plan.

"Our plan was to make the high ground west of the Vardar valley our main defensive position and to delay the Germans on the Metaxas Line. We intended to inflict the maximum of damage on the enemy in Eastern Macedonia and Greek Thrace, but if necessary withdraw from that part of Greece which lies east of our main defensive line, including therefore, Salonika.

"Simultaneously with an attack on Greece, the Germans invaded Yugoslavia, which though partly mobilized, was not ready for war.

"Disposal of the Yugoslav forces appears to have been governed not alone by military but also by political considerations and inadequate forces had been allotted to the south of the country where the real threat lay. This disposal had been planned by the Cvetcovic government and Gen. Simovic had not had time to revise his plans. Consequently the Germans were able to advance rapidly up the Strumitza valley past both sides of Lake Doiran and down the Vardar valley. They reached Salonika on the evening of April 8. Three Greek divisions in the east were cut off from the main body of the allied forces.

"But the rapidity of the German advance in Yugoslavia held yet a more serious threat. Skoplje and Veles were reached April 8 and it was evident that the Monastir Gap was threatened. How serious this was, is seen when we consider the disposal of our and the Greek forces. By far the greater part of the Greek army was in Albania some 30 or 40 miles away from the Greek frontier with its left flank on the sea and its right flank on the Yugoslav fron-

60 to 70 Mile Front

"Two Greek divisions and the Imperial troops all under the command of General Wilson, who was, in his turn, under that of the Greek commander in chief, General Papagos, had taken up the strong natural line of defence running from the sea near Katerini through Veria and Edessa to the Yugoslav frontier.

"British armored force was out to the east of this line engaged in demolition work and similiar activities. The force under General Wilson therefore was opposing the Germans along a front of from 60 to 70 miles on the east while to the west the main bulk of the Greek army was opposing the Italians along a front of similar length: between two mountains southern Yugoslavia formed a barrier pierced by the Monastir Gap. This frontier was manned only by Greek mountain guards.

"By the evening of April 7 the disaster to the Yugoslav forces was apparent and the threat to the Monastir Gap became a reality. A small reserve under a brigadier consisting of a machine-gun battalion and some medium artillery was formed near Amintaion, south of Florina. The next morning General McKay was sent with his divisional headquarters one artillery, one anti-tank regiment and an Australian light brigade (less one battalion) to augment this force which remained in the Amintaion neighborhood to await the Germans. Meanwhile an armored force was ordered to blow demolitions and withdraw to Edessa behind the Australian division under whose orders it was placed.

Made Just in Time

"Preparations to meet the threat through the Monastir Gap were made only just in time. On April 9 the Germans appeared south of Florina and hotly engaged General McKay's forces during this and the next day.

"An Imperial force inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, but it became apparent that the stand could not be made indefinitely against the greatly superior German numbers.

"On April 11, therefore, the Imperial and Greek forces began to withdraw to a new line.

"The Greek divisions, having fought valiantly under overwhelming conditions and suffered very severe casualties, had now almost ceased to exist as a fighting force. The flank and rear of the Imperial force were accordingly threatened and further withdrawal was necessary.

"The imperial force now had to withdraw without further aid from the Greek army. The Greeks corps which had been fighting with our troops could do no more and the rest of the Greek army was away beyond the Pindus mountains.

"On April 4 the Australian brigade was ordered to Kalabak, at the head of the railway to the south, in order to cover our left flank of withdrawal. On April 15 the New Zealand brigade took up a covering position northward of Tiranavos. On the same day a small New Zealand force which was holding the eastern entrance to Peneios Gorge, to the south of Olympus, was heavily engaged by a far superior enemy force, and driven back. The next day two battalions of the Australian brigade went to their support. This small Anzac force of about a brigade group, fought two German divisions in the gorge. Losses were heavy, but the withdrawal was secured on our right flank.

"During the following days our forces withdrew to the Thermopylae position under heavy enemy bombing and by April 20 we were in new positions. The New Zealand division held to the sea while the Australian division held the pass to the left. Artillery of both British and Anzac forces played an important part in the campaign. They undoubtedly inflicted the heaviest casualties and the Germans themselves testify to the accuracy of our shooting.

TAKE SEVEN—WAR OFFICE ..6

Withdraw on April 24

"It was now obvious that the Greek army could fight no longer. The Greek Government, recognizing this, requested on April 21 that the United Kingdom and Empire contingent which sent its help should withdraw from Greece. The German forces which had been held up for some time by gallant rearguard actions at Peneios Gorge, had passed through Larissa and Lamia and were in contact with our forces' Thermopylae position. Meanwhile other German forces, freed from the rear by the capitulation of the Greek Epirus army, were rapidly coming in sight from Yanina, through Arta and Agrinion, and constituted a threat in rear of our position.

"On April 22 the New Zealand brigade accordingly had been withdrawn from its position on the pass to the south of Erythrai to cover the withdrawal of the remainder of our forces to embarkation areas and on April 24 the last of the forces at the Thermoyplae position withdraw behind Erythrai and began to embark at various beaches including Attica, Argolis and Peleponnese."

LAKE HABBANIYAH

fused with the axis base of the same name in Libya.)

The patrols—of seaplanes from the glassy lake created by overflow from the nearby Euphrates, and landplanes from the treeless desert —are necessary because the Arabs have a mischievous habit of destroying sections of the line from time to time, just for fun or from hatred of the "non-believers."

Habbaniyah itself is merely a collection of hangars and mud-colored dwellings sufficient to house the plane crews, armored car crews which patrol the nearby caravan routes, and the normally small garrison. The town's official name, Sinn-Ad-Dhibban, means "tooth of the fly."

Importance of Habbaniyah

Before the current war, Habbaniyah's only importance was as a desert outpost to protect British and other foreign-owned oil wells and the pipelines, and as a refueling point for Imperial Airways flying boats.

Basra, at the head of the Persian Gulf, is the kingdom of Iraq's only seaport, the home of Sinbad the sailor of "Arabian Nights" fame, and an overnight stop for commercial planes on the hop over the Persion Gulf between Palestine and Bahrein island.

American ships fly the Indian Ocean to Basra carrying dates, licorice root and other middle eastern products, but the port is chiefly noted among travellers for its airfield with a modern air-cooled hotel. Arabs come from miles around just to feel cool for once in their lives.

Planes from Basra to Habbaniyah over thousands of gleaming green date trees, irrigated from the nearby Euphrates, and over the reputed site of the Garden of Eden Otherwise the area is just hot and dreary desert.

EVACUATION COSTS

Completed April 30

Withdrawal of the Imperial troops and Royal Air Force personnel from Greece was completed shortly after midnight on April 30, the Admiralty said, and added that a large number of refugees also had been withdrawn from the now German-occupied country.

The bearing of all concerned in the operation, despite continuous air attack and heavy enemy pressure, was "splendid throughout."

After consultation with military authorities, it was decided after midnight April 30 "that no further withdrawal of troops or refugees could take place and our naval forces were consequently withdrawn from the vicinity of the Greek coast," the communique said.

One of the "large" British convoys carrying troops was "repeatedly attacked by E-boats (motor speed boats) when in the Kaso Strait," the Admiralty said, but the attacks were all driven off without loss to the convoy or to its escorts.

One of the destroyers lost in the operations, the Diamond, of 1,375 tons, is of the "defender" class and was completed in 1932. She carried a crew of 145 men, eight 21-inch torpedo tubes and four 4.7-inch guns.

The smaller Wryneck, of 1,090 tons was built in 1918. She carried four-inch guns. Although built as a destroyer she lately had been classified as an escort vessel.

TOBEY CHARGES

He said he regarded Guffey's speech as a "trial balloon," likely to be followed by even more aggressive utterances from Pepper.

Both Pepper and Guffey have been supporters of President Roosevelt's program of aiding Britain, but administration leaders denied they had an advance knowledge of Guffey's speech.

Democratic leader Alben Barkley of Kentucky said he learned of Guffey's plans to speak only a few minutes before the latter took the floor.

Some other quarters, however, regarded the Guffey and Pepper speeches as part of a concerted campaign by convoy advocates to offset charges made by Senators Burton Wheeler (Dem-Montana), Champ Clark (Dem-Missouri), Gerald Nye (Rep-North Dakota) and others in speaking tours that convoys would lead to involvement in war.

Tobey has asserted that the convoy issue would be brought before the Senate when a measure to authorise the President to take over foreign and domestic shipping is considered. He said he would offer as an amendment then a resolution pigeonholed by the Foreign Relations Committee, which would put Congress on record against convoys.

LIVERPOOL PORT

Nazis Reverse Procedure

The Germans touched off the attack shortly after dusk last night, reversing their recent procedure by pouring down explosives first, then fire bombs to light the wreckage and spread the ruin. Normally they set their fires first, then blast away by the light of the flames.

Dawn disclosed new damage to factories, business buildings and crowded residential districts, where workers dug to release townspeople trapped in the wreckage. A number were buried in the crypt of a church by one bomb explosion.

Four German Planes Shot Down

The raiders apparently were trying to finish up the destructive work they cut short the night before, presumably because of bad weather over their continental bases.

Four German planes were shot down during the night, two by night fighters over the Merseyside, another by anti-aircraft fire there, and a fourth by British fighters over a German airdrome in northern France.

The Air Ministry news service said the German plane shot down over France was put out of action at 1,000 feet by a Havoc, American-made combination fighter-bomber.

A pilot, a British sergeant, was credited with having shot down another German plane in the same way three nights before.

"The explosion when the enemy machine blew up shook the Havoc", the news service said. "When it returned to its base it had a propellor blade chipped, one engine cowling dented, and scars on both wings caused by bits flying off its victim."

Official Figures Given

Official figures for April for the first time credited night fighters with downing more raiders than any other agency and showed, too, a steady increase in the toll taken by the night fighter crews since the first of the year.

These figures listed the toll of German planes over Britain:

Shot down by night fighters — April, 49; March, 19; February, 4; January, 2.

By anti-aircraft guns—April, 35, March, 19, February, 7, January, 11.

By unspecified other means—16 since the first of the year; making the four-month total by all means 162 German aircraft.

At mid-day in Liverpool the search was still going on for people believed trapped or missing in devastated residential areas. Four hospitals were bombed without casualties and a number of schools and churches hit.

Ten people were killed and others seriously injured in the crypt of a church where 300 were sheltering. A bomb which scored a direct hit on an ambulance killed a policeman, a woman ambulance driver and a patient en route to a hospital.

BRITISH AND IRAQ

London sources said the fighting at Habbaniyah, $7,000,000 air base on the Euphrates River 60 miles west of Baghdad, reported to be the biggest Royal Air Force station outside Britain, might well be turned into a major strategical move.

They said they were not deceived by Berlin's recent "benevolent" interest in Iraq affairs and declared that the new turn of events constituted a serious threat to Imperial communications and oil supplies.

A German foothold in Iraq also would give the Nazi military machine a grip on the eastern jaw of possible pincers aimed at the Suez Canal.

Fighting still was going on around Tobruk, in Libya, as the Germans sought to consolidate their North African positions to strengthen the western jaw of this military clamp. British authorities said Axis troops had been thrown out of the fort's outer defences, however, and troops recued from Greece were on the way to help the beleaguered Tobruk garrison.

At Gibraltar, last British foothold on the European continent, Maj.-Gen. Clive Gerard Liddell, departing Governor of the Rock, broadcast that the stronghold is ready to take on German attackers any time they come. He welcomed the new Governor, Viscount Gort, with the declaration:-

"I do not intend to give an opinion on the impregnability of the Rock. Let Hitler send his marauders and bandits and find that out."

Begins at Dawn Friday

The conflict at Habbaniyah began at dawn yesterday when Iraq troops attacked British cantonments on orders of Premier Raschid Ali Al Gailani; who came to power April 4 in an Axis-inspired coup. The attack was said to have begun after British authorities ignored an ultimatum calling upon them to cease troop movements and plane flights.

During the day and evening, the Premier sent at least two urgent appeals to Berlin for help. London said the attack was German-inspired.

(The German shortwave radio claimed the Iraqis had risen in what it implied was a holy war against Britain. Dispatches from Berlin made no mention, however, of the receipt there of any appeals for aid from Iraq.)

The British garrison at Habbaniyah, which also is a base for mechanized forces used in patrolling the desert and the 1,200-mile-long oil pipe lines, is understood to be about 5,000 strong. Other troops were believed on the way from Basra and Palestine.

(A dispatch to Vichy from Beirut, Lebanon, unsupported by other sources, last night said five transports of newly-arrived British troops sailed Thursday for Basra, from Haifa, in the Holy Land.)

20,000 Troops in Iraq

Britain is believed to have about 20,000 troops in Iraq and military circles here expressed belief Iraq's army of 30,000 would be unable to cope with this force unless the Nazis were able to rush air-borne troops, bombers and fighters from their island bases in the Mediterranean.

Some quarters said they felt sure conflict in Iraq would put Turkey and Soviet Russia squarely on the spot.

(The exchange telegraph agency reported from Ankara that the Habbaniyah attack had aroused strong indication in Turkey since it jeopardized lines of communications and transport of goods to Turkey.)

Exit for Pipe Lines

French - mandated Syria — believed to be opposing Axis penetration. It was recalled that some French sources said a Nazi attempt to take Syria would be a signal for Gen. Maxime Weygand to throw his African colonial force into the fray against the Axis.

British - mandated Palestine — Haifa is an exit for the pipeline from Iraq carrying 4,250,000 tons of oil a year, the lifeblood of Britain's Mediterranean fleet.

Iran—Has an annual oil output of 10,000,000 tons. Some quarters suggested a Nazi attempt to get control of this independent state would meet strong opposition from Turkey and Russia.

FUNNY REASON GIVEN

Buffalo, N.Y., May 3 (CP) — A chance to sleep late was the reason given by an 18-year-old farm boy for enlisting in the marine corps.

"I get up at 4.30 every morning, so this should be a vacation," Edward F. Staebell Jr., of Andover, N.Y., told the recruiting officer. Marine reveille sounds at 5.45.

Legendary Letter Of Jesus Is Read

Washington.—An apocryphal incident in the life of Jesus Christ, involving an exchange of letters with a sick Syrian sheik who offered Him haven from His enemies in return for healing, was told here today by Dr. Lionel Casson of New York University, who presented a paper containing the texts of the letters as taken from a Seventh Century Greek-inscribed papyrus, before the Classical Association of the Atlantic States at the Hotel Mayflower.

The papyrus, a single sheet with writing on both sides, was discovered in 1936 by the Colt Archaeological Institute of New York among the ruins of two churches in Auja Hafir, in Southern Palestine. With other manuscripts found it was turned over by the institute for study and publication to Dr. Casson and Professor Ernest L. Hettich, both of the Classics Department of Washington Square College, N.Y.U.

Translation Is Given

Dr. Casson's translation of the papyrus, which names Abgar, Toparch (princeling) of the city of Edessa, as the second correspondent, is as follows:

"Abgar, Toparch of the city of Edessa, to Jesus, the Benevolent Saviour, who has appeared in the city of Jerusalem, greetings.

"I have heard about you and about the cures which you effect without the use of medicines or herbs. For it is said that you cause the blind to see the lame to walk, that you clense lepers and drive out unclean spirits and demons and that you heal men tortured with chronic diseases and that you raise the dead. When I heard all these reports about you, I made up my mind that one of two things were possible: either as God descended from heaven you are accomplishing these miracles, or as the Son of God. And because of this I am now writing to beg you to come to me and cure me of my disease. For I have also heard that the Jews are muttering against you and want to do you evil. Mine is a very small city, but honored, and it is sufficient for both of us."

Reply Attributed to Jesus

The reply of Jesus:

"Letter of Jesus Christ, Son of God, to Abgar Toparch of Edessa.

"You are blessed, and blessed is your city, called Edessa. You are blessed because you have had faith in me although you have not seen me. For it is written of me that those who have seen me have no trust in me, but that those who have not seen me will believe and abide in me. Because you have shown your trust in me, preparations for your health will be made for you in every way. With respect to my coming to you, of which you wrote, I am obliged to fulfill these duties for which I was sent here by my Father, and, after doing so, to be taken up by My Father who sent me. But I am sending you one of my disciples who will cure you of your disease and give eternal life and peace to you and all of yours, and who will make your city safe so that none of your enemies may conquer it. There I have written this letter in my own hand and sealed it with my seal."

Versions in Several Languages

The story of the exchange of letters between Jesus and Abgar is well known and is regarded as apocryphal, Dr. Naphtali Lewis of the Washington Square College Classics Department said yesterday. Versions of the texts exist in Latin, Syriac, Armenian, Coptic and Persian as well as Greek, Dr. Lewis added.

The Colt papyrus is important because it gives full texts, only part of the prescripts being missing, and because it is related to a source independent of the fourth-century "Ecclesiastical History" of Eusebius, from which almost all other accounts of the episode derive, Dr. Lewis explained.

The manuscript was dated by paleography, which is the study of ancient modes of writing, and is the property of the institute, which is headed by H. D. Colt Jr. of 470 Park Avenue.

The sequel of the episode related to the papyrus is that Abgar, sheik of Osrhoene, was cured after the crucifixion and ascension to heaven of Jesus by the disciple Addai, sent to him by the Apostle Thomas. The inhabitant of Osrhoene, of which Edessa was the capital, were converted to Christianity in the second century.—New York Times.

POST POSITIONS

Louisville, Ky., May 3 (AP)—Eleven three-year-olds expected to run in the 67th Kentucky Derby were entered Friday at Churchill Downs.

Almost without exception, the conditioners of the three-year-olds picked Our Boots, Porter's Cap and Whirlaway as the horses to beat.

Here is the lineup by post positions:

1. Swain, 2. Staretor, 3. Blue Pair, 4. Whirlaway, 5. Little Beans, 6. Valdina Paul, 7. Market Wise, 8. Robert Morris, 9. Porter's Cap, 10. Our Boots, 11. Dispose.

COMMITTEE NAMED

New York, May 3 (CP)—Domei, Japanese news agency, broadcast from Tokyo today that a Soviet-Japanese trade agreement presumably would be concluded as soon as certain preliminary questions had been clarified.

The report quoted a government spokesman as saying a committee had been named to draft an agreement.

Home on Leave—A Soldier's Reactions

"Infantryman" Writes in the Manchester Guardian

Leave is a blessed word to the soldier. It means more than going home. It means rest from army routine and a renewal of the sort of life which, if less useful these days, is much more to be desired than the army life.

First, of course, comes the pleasure of being with one's family and friends. The rest does not matter much, and even a leave spent in an air-raid shelter would be a joy if it were the right shelter with the right people in it. But not far behind come the pleasures of sleeping in sheets, of getting up late, of eating off really clean plates with tablecloths under them and not having to make do with the same knife for fish, flesh or good red herring.

Army food has its virtues. It fills up a hole that is bigger than it ever was in civil life, but civilian food and its concomitants are so different a thing that it is no wonder the soldier on leave is in some danger of being thought a glutton.

These are a few army habits that stick for the first day or so of a leave. I have found myself on the point o fpicking up a knife fork and spoon from the table and putting them in my pocket, as we do automatically in the dining-hall, and when the food came to the table I was almost on my feet to start dividing it into 12 equal portions to distribute to the clamoring mob whose absence from the table left me temporarily a little confused.

At the end of the day, too, I found myself looking at the clock to calculate how long was left before "lights out", and (what disgusted me more than anything else about the things the army has taught me) I woke up nearly every morning at about five minutes before what should have been reveille.

Civilian clothes I found lovely to wear after I had got used to putting on a collar and tie and looking in the right places for my pockets. But I did not get used to my civilian shoes and fear I never shall, for nothing is as comfortable as a pair of army boots when it is properly broken in.

My leave taught me something about myself and about civilians. I found my wife full of praise for my tidiness. I did not know I was tidy, but of course in the army you have to put everything away as soon as you have done with it. Life with 23 other men in one room is impossible otherwise, apart from the fact that the army has more than its share of Autolycuses.

I found, too, that discipline is now so ingrained in me that seven days was not a long enough time for me to get about carrying my respirator when I went out, or polishing my brasses when I wore my uniform. I could not forget such things because I did not think of them—they just happen automatically. It was automatic, too, as well as unspeakably embarrassing, when walking in the street in tweeds without a hat I smartly saluted an officer passing by.

About other people I learnt that they place fantastically high values on things we have forgotten in the army. They expect to have their feet dry, fuss about airing clothes before putting them on, and have no idea of standing in queues to wait for buses, or moving about the world as if they were going somewhere. Also they do not cut their hair and they have clean hands.

The main thing about being at home is the simple fact of being at home, and that cannot be written about. It teaches something, though. Einstein and, in another way, Priestley are right about time. It is an illusion. Seven days and seven hours are interchangeable. Seven days' leave passes like seven hours. Seven hours on guard can seem like seven days.

The outstanding thing about coming back to Manchester is how beautiful the city looks, and how like gods its citizens walk after one has been surrounded by fields and mountains and rude health for so long. Of course, the opposite is true in peace time, but then coming back to Manchester on leave and coming back to Manchester after a holiday are two different things. Manchester looked as grand as ever to me when I went back to my station, even though she had been knocked about above a bit while I was away.

AT THE BELLE

In all of Hollywood's annals, there has been no career to parallel—or even approach—that of tiny, black-haired Vivien Leigh. Her selection from comparative obscurity to play the role of Scarlet O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind" was an international sensation.

Vivien was born in the small resort town of Darjelling, India. Her father, then a stock broker of Calcutta, came of French forbears and her mother was born in Ireland. Throughout her girlhood, Vivien travelled from city to city in Europe, acquiring her education.

Vivien had decided to become an actress while she still wore pigtails and centered her studies around this childhood ambition. She concentrated on the drama in a French convent in Italy, during her finishing school days in Bavaria and during a visit to her mother's peat bog country in Ireland.

It was Alexander Korda who persuaded her to take a screen role, realizing her special gifts as a cinema light. "Fire Over England" was the picture that won her world-wide acclaim and in succession she appeared in "Dark Journey", "Storm In a Teacup", "St. Martin's Lane" and "A Yank At Oxford". She came to Hollywood on a visit with no intention of remaining for any length of time, when she was chosen for the role of Scarlet O'Hara and thereby made a new kind of screen history. In Hollywood she became Mrs. Laurence Olivier before starting work under Alexander Korda's direction in "That Hamilton Woman!" . . . the starring film romance now on the Belle Theatre screen. Here again Vivien's startling beauty is expected to make screen history. For she portrays a woman whose charm and fascination made her a reigning queen.

The Belle Latest World News Events and "Golden Eggs", a clever Disney color fun cartoon will be exhibited on the same program. Continuous shows will prevail today at the Belle Theatre.

Deseronto

Deseronto.—Leonard Jerome, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Gartland has returned home from the Hotel Dieu Hospital much improved in health.

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Stewart (nee Evelyn Brooks) at Belleville General Hospital, a son, on April 18th.

Pte. Gerald Houle, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Camp Borden, spent the week-end at his home here.

Brd. James McVicker, R.C.A., Petawawa, spent the week-end with his family here.

Mrs. J. Sharpe is confined to her home due to illness.

Mr. Jack McAfee is a patient in Kingston General Hospital.

Mr. Jack Edwards is improving after a recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. George Clement have returned home to Deseronto after spending the winter months at Athens, Ontario.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Buck Privates"

"Buck Privates" now on its fourth week and playing to record breaking laugh crowds, is a picture from Hollywood about the funny side of camp life of the conscriptees in Uncle Sam's fighting forces, "Buck Privates" comes to the Capitol Theatre, Sunday midnight.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, the serio-comic battlers of radio and the stage, who were immediately signed to a long term contract following their hit in "One Night in the Tropics," share prominent spots in the Universal hit with The Andrews Sisters, the boogie-woogie girls of rhythm, who also hit the boxoffice jackpot in their first film, "Argentine Nights."

Glamour Girls

In addition, there is a whole galaxy of glamour girls, including Dorothy Darrell, producer Joe Pasternak's newest "find"; Kay Leslie, one of the "13 baby stars of 1940"; Jeanne Kelly, Nina Orla and Elaine Morey.

The Andrews Sisters sing several new songs in "Buck Privates," all of them written by Don Raye and Hughie Prince, composers of "Rhumboogie," "Beat Me, Daddy, Eight to the Bar," and a score of other hits. Their new numbers are, "You're a Lucky Fellow, Mr. Smith," "I Wish You Were Here," "Bounce Me Brother With a Solid Four," "When Private Brown Becomes a Captain" and "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Boy."

Old Hit Revived

Arthur Lubin directed the picture from the screenplay by Arthur T. Horman. Alex Gottlieb was the associate producer.

The added select shorts include "Lady And The Lug" with Elsa Maxwell and Maxie Rosenbloom, "Going Places" with Graham MacNamee and "Cat's Tale", a colored cartoon.

Eastern Ontario Contingent Arrives

Somewhere in England, May 3 (CP Cable)—Joining a Canadian Corps, an Eastern Ontario contingent arrived at its English camps shortly after dawn Friday.

Capt. Charlie Box of Toronto, former senior football player with University of Western Ontario and Toronto Balmy Beach and now an auxiliary service officer, came with the troops, as well as Capt. Fred Howlett of Toronto. They started looking for a good ball diamond for the men.

STILL FACE HAZARDS

Hutchinson, Kas., May 3 (AP)—Pony express riders still face hazards. Kansas towns revived the once-famed service as part of a Coronado quarto-centennial celebration, and—a horse ran away with Raymond Sparks, grandson of an early day rider. A 1.17-inch rain fell on Mrs. John Rickard in her six-and-one-half mile ride. Other riders were hampered by automobile traffic. But the mail went through.

Has Scientific Plan To Pay $5 to $10 Monthly To Every Adult American

A. T. Gwathmey, Research Scientist, Would Distribute New Money to Amount of Difference Between Production and Consumption to End Depression

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Associated Press Science Editor

Richmond, Va., May 3 (AP) — A scientific plan to pay $5 to $10 a month to every adult American, rich and poor alike, was proposed to the Virginia Academy of Science Friday. The object is to end depressions. The proposal was made by Allen T. Gwathmey, Research Associate, University of Virginia.

The exact amount would fluctuate under his plan, but he said it would probably average the sums named. This money would represent the different in value between the United States total production in a year, and the amount of goods bought in the same period.

For example, he explained, total production in a year, or in a fixed period might equal $10,000,000,000; consumption $8,000,000,000. For that period $2,000,000,000 would be distributed.

Issue Money For Difference

This extra money would be issued by the government, and Gwathmey had an explanation to show why it would cause neither inflation nor disruption of business.

Science, he said, has now reached the point where it can, and does, produce more than the people can buy each year. The people cannot buy because of an outdated financial system.

Money and existing credits frequently are insufficient for them to buy the year's production. Depression is the result.

New Goods to Match New Money

Gwathmey also argued there would be no inflation for the money would be created only when there are new goods to match it.

The plan, he declared, would preserve the profit motive and private ownership of property, it would retain the present banking system in the main, most of the relief and forced charity would be eliminated and the money would represent the cultural inheritance of each citizen from the accumulated store of knowledge of organized society."

War taxes, too, would be fixed by this system. They would be the excess in purchasing power derived from war industry over the price value of consumable goods. War materials would not rate as ordinary consumable goods.

TURKS OFFER TO MEDIATE IRAQ DISPUTE, REPORT

Iraq Insurgents Reported To Have Cut Pipe Line Flow

Deposed Regent To Iraq Urges Iraq Troops To Return Peaceably To Their Posts

FIGHTING CONTINUES

Cairo, May 5 (AP)—Most of Iraq's air force "already has been destroyed," the British Middle East Command said today, and Iraq artillery which had pounded the besieged British airport at Habbaniyah was "rendered comparatively inactive yesterday by our aircraft."

The British garrison at Habbaniyah is intact and has suffered "very few casualties" the communique said, and British troops remain "without interference" in occupation of the Basra area, at the head of the Persian Gulf.

(The Iraqi Air Force consists of two army co-operation squadrons, a bomber-transport squadron, a fighter squadron and a communications squadron, besides planes attached to a training school.)

"The greater part of the Iraqi Air Force already has been destroyed by our air action, either while attempting to attack British camps or as a result of attack by our air forces on Iraqi air bases," the communique said, adding:

"After attacking an unarmed British construction party, which was in the vicinity, Iraqi forces on May 2 occupied Rutba."

London, May 5 (CP)—Iraq is reported to have cut the pipeline flow of oil to the Mediterranean from the high Mosul fields, and authoritative British sources predicted today that if Axis influences triumphed against the British in the Middle East kingdom they would thrust next at neighboring Iran, fourth-greatest oil producer in the world.

R. A. F. DESTROYS 4 NAZI RAIDERS OVER ISLE CRETE

Axis Bases At Derna And Benina Near Bengasi Bombed By R. A. F.

FOE TRANSPORTS HIT

Cairo, May 5 (AP) — British planes have shot down four Nazi raiders over the Greek island of Crete, the Royal Air Force announced today, indicating the Germans are beginning a long-expected intensive attack on Greece's new headquarters.

The war bulletin said anti-aircraft guns destroyed other Nazi planes over the island to which King George of Greece and his ministers moved before the fall of Athens.

In Libya, it reported, R.A.F. bombers raided the Axis air bases at Derna and Benina, near Bengasi. At least 100 Axis motor transport vehicles were listed as severely damaged by air attacks in North and East Africa.

Falls 25 Feet Into Concrete Pontoon Pit

Peterborough, Ont., May 5 (CP)—Falling 25 feet into a concrete pontoon pit at the lift lock, Betty Wallache, 22, of Toronto, received serious injuries to her head and back and is suffering from shock, hospital authorities reported today.

The girl's escape from death as a result of her plunge into the dark chamber beneath the east pontoon of the lift lock is considered miraculous. Two years ago a young man was killed by dropping into the same pit, although he fell 10 feet further.

The interior stairway is the only means of reaching the bottom of the chamber and was too narrow to permit a stretcher to be used.

Constables Gordon K. Hardy and John Morrow carried the injured girl in their arms up the stairs to the roadway.

There she was placed in an ambulance and taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

She was found to be suffering from a deep cut on the back of the head that required five stitches, an injured right arm and undetermined back injuries.

Double Daylight Saving Time Now In England

London, May 5—To get more daylight out of the waking hours, Britain advanced her clocks one hour Sunday on government orders.

With the clocks already an hour ahead, this meant double daylight saving time.

By utilizing more fully the hours of daylight, Britain serves the double purpose of conserving power and of concentrating most activity in the hours least likely to be interrupted by air attack.

Under the new time, there will be a six-hour difference between British and Eastern Daylight Time. At midnight E.D.T. it will be 6 a.m. in London; at midnight in London, it will be only 6 p.m E.D.T.

Body of Woman Found Along R. R. Right of Way

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—The body of Mrs. J. M. Gilroy of Victoria, was found early today along the Canadian Pacific right of way a few miles east of here several hours after she had been reported missing from a C.P.R. train.

Mrs. Gilroy, who boarded the train at Montreal last night, was missing when the train reached Ottawa. Search parties were ordered out to search the right of way.

Coroner Dr. W. R. Shirreff was not yet decided whether an inquest will be held.

BRITISH BOMBERS SCORE HITS ON NAZI BATTLESHIPS

Gneisenau, Scharnhorst, Tied Up At Brest, Again Objective Of Attack

WIDESPREAD RAIDS

London, May 5 (AP)— British bombers scored hits on the German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst last night in an attack on the naval base at Brest, the Air Ministry announced today.

A communique said: "Many heavy bombs were dropped and hits were observed on and very near the battle cruisers."

Widespread bombing action over France, the Netherlands and Norway and against shipping at sea last night and in daylight yesterday was reported.

Docks and shipping at Rotterdam, Antwerp and Le Havre were attacked and a direct hit was reported on a supply ship of 1,500 tons. A patrol vessel was bombed and left sinking in a daylight foray.

The communique said fires were started in a raid last night on the ports of St. Nazaire and Cherbourg, and an airdrome at Querqueville was attacked. During raids along the southern coast of Norway a supply ship of 3,000 tons was bombed.

New Dive Bomber Named Vengeance

Downey, Calif., May 5 (AP)—Vultee Aircraft, Inc., is making a new dive bomber which Richard W. Millar, President, claims "out-performs any known plane of similar type in the world today."

He said the ship, named the Vengeance by the British Air Ministry, is the first airplane of any time to embody all of the tactical experience gained in actual combat in the war.

Millar withheld specific performance and design data, but said the Vengeance has the most modern protective devices and armament, and exceptional range.

"Bombs are carried internally and landing gear is retractable to reduce the drag and permit greater speed," he said. "The Vengeance is powered with a Wright cyclone engine.

"Contract for a large quantity of the bombers was signed just 10 months ago by the British on the basis of preliminary studies and specifications developed by Vultee.

"Tooling for production in large quantity was well advanced before the first plane took to the air a few weeks ago.

"Materials have been on order for some time and deliveries have already begun. Deliveries of the completed planes in large quantity are only a short time away.

"In addition to immediate production of a large number of Vengeances by Vultee, the plane also is being manufactured under licence in quantity by Northrop Aircraft, Inc.

PROMINENT BREEDER DIES

Woodstock, Ont., May 5 (CP)—John McKee, 76, one of North Norwich townships best known residents, died at his home there Sunday. He was prominent as a breeder of Ayrshire cattle and for 33 years was Secretary-Treasurer of the North Norwich Agricultural Society.

Hitler's Speech Shows His Dream Of Quick Victory Has Vanished

By EDWARD E. BOMAR
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Hitler's speech of world defiance hints strongly that Der Fuehrer has come around to the view that this is destined to be a long struggle. What he failed to say was as significant as what he said.

Reporting to the German Reichstag on another victory, he omitted any prediction of an early peace which, he protested again, "God knows I wanted."

With virtually all continental Europe subdued Hitler saw fit, too, to omit any timetable for realization of the Axis New Order. Only last December 31, by contrast, he proclaimed to his fighting forces that "1941 will bring completion of the greatest victory in our history." To the Reichstag he predicted merely that 1941 "will go into history as the greatest year of our revolution."

It could be that the essential truth of an old military saying is beginning to impress itself on Hitler—"You can do almost anything with a bayonet except sit on it."

Hitler gave few clues to Ger-

Hubert Leclerc, 102, Has 375 Descendants

St. Hubert De Spaulding, Que., May 5 (CP)—Hubert LeClerc, who has more than 375 living children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, Sunday celebrated his 102nd birthday anniversary in this Frontenac County town near the Maine border.

Completely blind for 13 years, he is otherwise in excellent health. His wife whom he married in 1854, died years ago. They had 16 children, two sons and 14 daughters.

HITLER PREDICTS HEAVIER RAIDS ON BRITISH ISLES

Nazi Leader Says He Will Maintain Armament Superiority

RAGES AT CHURCHILL

Berlin, May 5 (CP)—Hitler, apparently faced with some sort of internal situation demanding an explanation to his people, bellowed Sunday in an address before the once-representative Reichstag that "neither force nor time will make use yield, let alone break us."

The Nazi Dictator, in raucous fettle, yelled at his cheering-squad hearers that what Germany has won cannot be wrested from her "by any power in the world."

"If already the German soldier possesses the best weapons in the world, he will receive still better ones this year and next," the Fuehrer shouted.

He did not refer to the United States by name in his 70-minute address but some of his references were interpreted as applying to that nation. At one point, after lambasting Prime Minister Churchill and claiming Germany's losses in soldiers slain in the Balkans at but 1,151 officers and men, Hitler declared:

"When today democratic agitators of a country which the German people never harmed and whose statement that the German people intend to do so is an absurd lie, threaten to throttle the National Socialist peoples' state with the force of their capitalistic system, then there is only one answer:

"The German people will never again experience such a year as 1918.

"The German people will profess more fanatically than ever the axiom that neither force nor time will make us yield, let alone break us...

24 NAZI RAIDERS SHOT DOWN BY BRITISH FIGHTERS

Belfast And Liverpool Raided With Heaviest Assault On Belfast

QUIET IN LONDON

London, May 5 (CP).—Northern Ireland officially announced today that "much damage to commercial, industrial and residential property" was inflicted on Belfast last night in a German air raid.

Nazi bombers pounded also at Liverpool—for the fourth successive night—in apparent continuation of the German effort to wreck British ports at which North American aid might be received.

"The attack on Belfast last night was heavy and sustained," said the second communique of the day from the Northern Ireland Ministry of National Security and Northern Ireland Air Force headquarters.

"Large numbers of incendiaries and high explosive bombs were dropped and there was much damage to commercial, industrial and residential property.

"Casualties will not prove as heavy as was at first feared and the loss of life has been less than was expected in view of the intensity of the attack."

Four Messerschmitts made a hit-run raid on a village in southeastern England this afternoon, dropping a few bombs and firing a few machine gun and cannon rounds. Little damage was reported.

German planes also were sighted in daylight over northwest England.

CHARGED WITH MURDER

Lia, Ont., May 5 (CP)—Lula Barkley, 40, of Orillia, was arrested at her home here Saturday night and charged with murder as a result of the death of 19-year-old Mildred Bissonette who died in hospital here earlier in the day.

Oliver Tyron, 23, of Kilworthy, also was arrested in connection with the case and has been charged with administering drugs.

Chief Constable William Carson said that the girl, who comes from Craig Lee, was ordered to hospital by a physician who had been called to the Barkley home. The doctor was said to have found the girl in a critical condition.

Dr. I. H. Erb of Toronto performed an autopsy yesterday.

Indomitable Courage Of British Tars Made Evacuation Possible

By ROBERT ST. JOHN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Despite Bomb Damage, Liner Crew Takes Ship to Embarkation Point

Cairo, May 5 (AP)—If you would know what made it possible for the British navy to evacuate tens of thousands of Imperial troops from Greece in face of almost incredible odds listen to the story of the Ulysseus.

Members of the Ulysseus crew told me the story themselves as we lay side by side on the deck of another ship steaming to safety.

The Ulysseus (that wasn't her name, but it makes no difference) was a British merchant liner assigned to evacuate men from the Greek mainland. She was just pulling in to an embarkation port when Stukas dive-bombed her and blew away both her anchors. Further operation with such damage would be hazardous. Dangers were doubled, but thousands of brave yet weary soldiers were waiting ashore to be taken off, so the Ulysseus went on.

She loaded her quota of troops, steamed two days to a disembarkation port and once there she had to float helplessly without benefit of anchors while her human cargo was discharged. Then she turned back for another load.

At the exact spot where she was attacked before, more German planes swooped down, skimmed her decks and machine-gunned and bombed as they came. One bomb hit its mark. The engine room was flooded. There was no longer any question of taking on troops. Now the problem was whether the Ulysseus could be saved.

Four-Week Flight in the Balkans Ended in Rescue by Royal Navy

(In one of the most dramatic stories to come out of the war, Robert St. John tells of his flight from Yugoslavia and Greece one step ahead of the Nazi invaders, and of the British evacuation under terrific aerial bombardment. St. John was wounded in the leg by a machine-gun bullet. Before entering Yugoslavia he was in Rumania, and flashed to the world the news of the bloody Iron Guardist rioting after Carol's abdication and flight.)

Alexandria, Egypt, May 5—After travelling four weeks night and day by almost every conceivable method of transportation, I finally have arrived in a safe port with the bloody story of the invasion and fall of Yugoslavia and the evacuation of Greece.

Here are a few things which happened along the way after that gruesome dawn of Sunday, April 6, when Nazi bombers rained terror on sleeping Belgrade.

With Russell Hill, of the New York Herald Tribune, Leigh White, of Columbia Broadcasting System and the Overseas News Agency, and Terence Atherton of the London Daily Mail, I left Budva, on the Yugoslav coast, in a 20-foot sardine boat we got in trade for an automobile as the Italian occupation force was entering that ancient walled city.

We set out with no compass, with automobile road maps in lieu of charts, with only 12 gallons of gasoline, and a gunny sack of black bread as our chief food supply.

Spain Reported Assuming Control Tangier Customs

London, May 5 (CP).—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Tangier said Spain assumed control of customs today at that former internationalized zone in Africa, just across from Gibraltar.

Spain occupied the Tangier zone last June and later decreed it to be a Spanish protectorate. From 1928 until then the territory had been administered jointly by Spain, France and Britain.

JAPANESE NEED FOR OIL PRESSING

China's Foreign Minister Appeals for Stoppage of U. S. Oil to Japan

Washington, May 5 (AP). — Japan's feverish hunt for vitally needed oil—for its army and navy as well as for industry—was reflected today in Commerce Department statistics showing considerably increased purchase in the United States.

During March the United States exported 1,553,000 barrels of petroleum products to Japan, compared with 1,279,000 barrels in February and 1,491,000 barrels in January.

The Japanese need for oil for further army and navy activity and reduction of stocks because of war in China and penetration into Indo-China was believed by experts to have forced intensification of efforts to import a lot of oil in a hurry.

Hull Gives Statement.

Although there has been some agitation, particularly from Chinese sympathizers, for an embargo on all oil shipments to Japan, State Secretary Cordell Hull recently said that if embargoes were instituted they would not be directed against any particular nation.

Dr. Quo Tai-Chi, China's foreign minister, in a radio address from Washington Saturday pleaded for the United States to stop supplying Japan with war weapons and especially with fuel for Japanese planes to bomb Chinese cities and towns.

In an analysis of Japan's oil resources E. Degoyler has reported to the National Petroleum Association that Japan's position in the event it decided to fight other nations as well as China "would be hopeless".

Author Of Caption Dropped As Co-Editor

London, May 5 (CP).—C. G. Grey, author of a picture caption which said the United States would support Britain financially "to the last Englishman", has dropped out as co-editor of the publication, "Jane's All The World's Aircraft", in which the caption appeared, it was announced today.

Leonard Bridgman, who had been co-editor with Grey, will continue as editor. It was not disclosed whether Grey would remain on the staff.

The controversial caption appeared in the new issue of the aerial reference work under a picture showing horses pulling Lockheed Hudson bombers across the United States border into Canada. It said: "Now that the United States has decided to support the war financially 'to the last Englishman' preparations are being made to fly Flying Fortresses to England".

A furore arose and the publisher recalled all copies and announced the caption would be deleted.

Grey said he wrote the lines before the aid-to-Britain bill had been heard of and used the expression ironically at the expense of American isolationists.

Britain Willing If Iraq Troops Are Withdrawn

BBC Says 'Cordial Relations' Will Be Restored If Certain Conditions Met

FIGHT OVER AIRDROME

London, May 5 —(CP)— Turkey has offered, or will offer, to mediate between Iraq and Britain, reliable reports said tonight.

Informed sources in London said Britain would accept mediation contingent upon Iraq's withdrawal of forces menacing the Royal Air Force at Habbaniyah airdrome.

New York, May 5 —(AP)— If Rashid Ali Al Gailani, anti-British Premier of Iraq, withdraws his troops from threatening positions near British bases and stops fighting "relations of full cordiality" will be restored between Britain and Iraq, the BBC said today in a broadcast heard here.

9 ESCAPE CAMP IN FR. SOMALILAND

Dramatic Story Told by Airmen Who Were Forced to Land

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, May 2 (Delayed)—(AP) — The dramatic escape f Flying Officer K. A. Lawrence of Quebec together with eight other airmen from an internment camp in French Somaliland was revealed today when the group rejoined their squadrons.

The Canadian, a member of the Royal Air Force, escaped with Sgt. W. H. Tomlin of Liverpool, Sgt. A. B. Houston of Glasgow and six South Africans.

Lawrence, Tomlin and Houston were forced to land after bombing Dessie, Ethiopia. One bomb exploded as the machine touched the earth, the Canadian officer receiving splinters in the heel. The South Africans made a forced landing in the same area.

On the night of April 16, with medicine bottles of water crammed in their pockets, they crept past sentries through a triple row of barbed wire, groping through darkened streets of the native quarter of Jibuti where dogs howled dismally at every loosened stone.

They obtained the services of Greek guides and made for open country. Just before daybreak, weary and footsore with the heavy going in loose sand, they crossed the frontier into British Somaliland whence a patrol boat later took them to Aden.

Unidentified Plane Drops Bombs In County Donegal

Dublin, May 5 (AP—A plane of unidentified nationality dropped high explosive bombs at Carlhage Hill, County Donegal, early this morning, shattering windows throughout the neighborhood.

Belfast, in neighboring Northern Ireland, was heavily bombed during the night by German raiders.

Explosives last were dropped on County Donegal March 12, near Carndonagh and Innishowen. That incident was the first since Dublin and nearby areas were raided Jan. 2-3, when three persons were killed and 12 injured.

Plane Flies So Fast It Disappears Before Sound Of Motors Is Heard

Los Angeles, May 5 (AP) — An airplane which flew so fast it disappeared before its motors could be heard, has made its debut—at a speed, its pilot said, of 458 miles an hour.

Lockheed Aircraft calls its P-38 Interceptor, given its first public demonstration before 50,000 spectators at an air show yesterday, the world's fastest fighting plane.

Test Pilot Milo Burcham also sent the craft straight upward at an estimated 300 miles an hour and put it through spectacular rolls and dives.

Eighty junior high school children were taken up in commercial transports, after the landing of scores of troops from Fort MacArthur, to demonstrate, officials said, that Southern California's 300 available transports could land 23,000 troops and evacuate 30,000 school children within 24 hours.

FO. DAVID SMITH KILLED IN CRASH

His Machine Collides With Another Plane While in Formation Flight

Winnipeg, May 5 —(CP)— Royal Canadian Air Force officials today investigated the crash in which Flying Officer David Smith of Hamilton, Ont., died in Western Manitoba Sunday during a formation flight.

Nine Harvard training planes were en route from Winnipeg to Yorkton, Sask., when Smith, according to eye-witnesses, collided with another machine. The second plane, slightly damaged, made a safe landing at No. 10 Service Flying Training School at Dauphin, near the scene of the crash. Its pilot was unhurt.

Smith's plane crashed in the dense bushland of the Riding Mountain National Park. Forest Rangers located the wreckage and brought the body to Dauphin, 200 miles northeast of Winnipeg.

The Flying Officer's mother, Mrs. N. A. Smith, lives in Hamilton.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CHILD KNOCKED DOWN BY CAR

Three-year-old Douglas Mitchell, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell, 1 West Moira St., sustained minor leg abrasions and shock when the little lad ran into the side of a motor car in front of his home over the weekend. The motor car was driven by Stanley May, R.R. No. 5, Belleville, who told police he was making a lefthand turn off the upper bridge to proceed west on West Moira Street when the little Mitchell boy, who was playing with other children, darted out and ran into the side of Mr. May's car and was knocked down. Mr. May took the injured lad to the surgery of Dr. G. S. Cronk, where the injuries were found to be of a minor nature as no fractures resulted.

3 WEEKEND ALARMS ALL MINOR RBLAZES

Three calls were answered by the fire department over the weekend, two on Saturday and one on Sunday, all alarms however being for minor blazes and with the exception of one no damage was reported.

On Saturday a call was received from 313 Front Street, the apartment of J. Diamond, where a chimney fire was in progress. On Saturday evening they were called to a residence at the corner of Great St. James and Dafoe Streets where a chesterfield in the living room was smouldering. The fire was put out with only slight damage being effected as the result of the fire.

When a pile of paper became ablaze behind the Walker Store on Front Street, the brigade was called to extinguish the blaze which was accomplished before damage resulted. This was the only alarm on Sunday.

FRACTURES LEG

The condition of Driver Fred McGuire, 3 - 47th Anti-Aircraft Battery Petawawa, who fractured his leg in two places while playing ball is as well as can be expected. Harry McGuire, another son of Mr. and Mrs. James McGuire, Brock Street, is with the Royal Canadian Navy and has received promotion to Leading Seaman.

$610 REALIZED ON ROSE TAG DAY

Officers of the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. this morning were profuse in their thanks to a generous public, who on Saturday responded so generously to the Chapter's annual Queen Alexandra Rose Tag Day, when a sum of $610.08 was realized, for the work of Chapter and for special war work. The response of the public surpassed all expectations of the Chapter officers and long before evening the supply of roses had given out with a hurry-up call to the printers for additional tags being necessary.

Chapter officers extend a special thanks to the public, to the taggers who worked so faithfully, and to any other persons who were instrumental in the splendid success of the day.

"GRENVILLE" PLACES BUOYS IN POSITION

Although navigation in the Belleville harbor is considered open with the arrival of the first oil tanker a few days after the disappearance of the ice, the official stamp of the Waterways Department is not granted until the gas buoys and navigation aids are placed along the water route. Over the week-end the department buoy tender, the steamer "Grenville," arrived unheralded into the Belleville harbor and picked up the gas buoys which are stored each winter at the Government Dock and placed them along the Bay of Quinte water route. The arrival of the "Grenville" at this date is somewhat earlier than usual.

175 NORWAY MAPLES PLANTED BY PARKS BD.

Just about the busiest men in the city these days are the employees of the Parks Board who for the past few weeks have been busy planting trees and cleaning up the city park system and getting them in readiness for the busy summer season. Approxmately 175 Norway Maples have been planted by the Parks Board at different places throughout the city, and the planting of these trees delayed park employees in their start at grass cutting, the grass on the park system having attained considerable growth before a start was made with the mowers.

It takes about two weeks for three Parks Board employees to cut the grass in all the city parks, and when it is completed, they merely turn around and start all over again.

MILITARY MOTORCADE VISITS LINDSAY

A modern motorized military unit of over fifty vehicles roared across the highways of North Hastings over the week-end. The motorcade, with its full equipment of men, guns, field pieces and signal equipment, of the 45th Battery of the Royal Canadian Artillery, passed through Tweed, Madoc and Marmora on Highway No. 7 en route to Lindsay, where a demonstration is scheduled to be held today. Manoeuvres into positions, observations and signal work will be seen near Lindsay. The purpose of the convoy is to bring the battery up to its newly authorized strength under the new Canadian military regulations. Residents in the villages along the motorcade route were impressed at the scene.

TWEED MAN THROWN FROM MOTORCYCLE

Ross McTaggart, Tweed, sustained painful injuries when thrown from a motorcycle he was riding near Thomasburg last Friday. He was proceeding north towards his home when the motor bike struck loose gravel on the road, throwing him from the machine. He was found lying unconscious by a resident, who assisted the lad to his home nearby. A Tweed physician was called and several stitches were necessary to close the wounds about the head.

GLEN ALLAN SOON TO START SEASON

The steamer Glen Allan, the only freighter which makes regular calls at the Belleville harbor, and which wintered at the local dock, is just one week away from slipping its moorings to begin its summer's trips up the St. Lawrence, to and from Montreal. For the past several weeks a skeleton crew have been engaged refitting the packet freighter for the coming season and in addition to the usual repairs to her machinery is sporting a new coat of paint. Next Monday morning it is reported she will slip her anchor and proceed on her first trip to Montreal.

MARINE TERMINAL NEARLY COMPLETED

Starting slightly over one week ago, the construction work on the new Cities Service Marine Terminal at the Belleville waterfront is proceeding rapidly and today the erection of the framework for the warehouse and pump house is complete, while the foundation for the garage is ready for building upon. On Saturday four new upright storage tanks, with approximately the same capacity as those which were destroyed by fire last year, were unloaded from flat cars and placed into positions on the site.

Obituary

MISS MERLE GROVES

Miss Merle Groves, employed at the Ontario School for the Deaf, died suddenly while at the home of an acquaintance on Saturday evening, May 3rd. A heart seizure was the cause of death.

The late Martha Merle Groves, who was in her 22nd year, was born in Elzevir Township, being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Groves who now reside in Madoc Village. For the past sixteen months she resided in Belleville. In religion she was a member of the Church of England and was well respected.

Surviving her are her parents Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Groves, Madoc Village; three brothers, James of Frankford; Percy at home and Ernest of Belleville; four sisters, Mrs. Percy Reynolds, West Huntingdon; Mrs. Bruce Phillips, Madoc; Mrs. Allan McCoy, Madoc and Mrs. Delbert Fleming, Queensboro.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

DONALD HEARNS
(Frankford)

Donald Hearns, the seven-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Hearns, R. R. 3, Frankford, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday, May 4th.

LATE MISS CLAIRE HITCHON

Many friends were present at the funeral of Miss Agnes Claire Hope Hitchon which took place from the family residence, 44 Alexander Street, on Saturday afternoon, May 3rd. An impressive service was conducted in the home by the Rev. C. T. Olmstead, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. F. T. Grafton.

Interment was made in Belleville Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Joseph Blackburn, P. C. MacLaurin, J. Wilfrid Holmes, John Jury, F. Cook and K. S. Hill.

A. C. HOSIE
(Formerly of Belleville)

A. C. Hosie, who was born near Belleville in May 1874, died in Saskatoon, Sask., on Wednesday, April 30th. As a youth he entered the employ of the old Canadian Northern Railway and in the year 1910 he was transferred to Saskatoon, Sask., as Locomotive Foreman. A few years later he left the service of the railway and entered the hotel business in Saskatoon. He was also interested in the real estate business. He was an enthusiastic sportsman and took a prominent part in the promotion of all sports, especially hockey in Western Canada. He was widely known, popular and highly esteemed. Fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order and the I.O.O.F. Old Friends in the Belleville district will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his widow, one son, Robert, both living in Saskatoon, two brothers, John Hosie of Belleville and Andrew Hosie of Cornwall, and two sisters, Mrs. J. Davidson of Belleville and Mrs. Owers of Glendale, Calif.

MARY H. HOSKIN
(Thurlow Township)

Mary Helen Hoskin, the five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hoskin, 6th. concession of Thurlow Township, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday evening, May 3rd., after an illness of three months' duration.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon and interment was made in Victoria cemetery.

Crown Probes Sudden Death Of Young Girl

Probing the sudden death of 21-year-old Merle Groves, native of Madoc and domestic at the Ontario School for the Deaf, a preliminary inquest was ordered by Chief Coroner J. J. Robertson on Saturday after the girl died rather suddenly in a Front Street apartment.

Visiting Friends at 227½ Front Street Saturday afternoon Miss Groves died a few minutes after entering the apartment of Mrs. Cleaton, where she had called to show her friends a new coat, Detective Fred Isard learned upon his investigation. The girl became violently ill before she died.

Coroner Dr. Robertson ordered a post mortem after the circumstances had been related by the police. A preliminary inquest was held and the body released for burial.

Miss Groves had been given a long weekend leave at the O.S.D. and had intended going to Madoc to visit relatives, Mrs. Cleaton told the police. Officials and friends at the O.S.D. assured the authorities that the girl appeared normal before leaving the O.S.D.

Dr. J. B. McKay performed the post mortem following which the stomach of the deceased was shipped to Toronto for analysis.

The coroner's Jury, summoned by Sergeant Arthur Harman, was composed of Messrs. John Lafferty, foreman, Jas. Taylor, G. C. Scott, Ed. Gartley and Jack Bush.

Quiz Contest, Band Concert Much Enjoyed

One of the most widely attended and successful Sunday night programs ever staged in the city was held at the McCarthy theatre Sunday evening when under the auspices of the Belleville Fire Department, the third of a series of concerts in aid of the British Fire Fighters' Relief Fund was held. The tracted over one thousand , local teur night and quis program attraced over one thousand local concert lovers, who contributed a sum of $77 to the fund. Over two hundred people were turned away owing to insufficient accommodation.

In the rendition of various popular and sacred numbers at different points throughout the program by the fourteen piece Aselstine "Moira Orchestra" who kindly offered their services for the evening, attendants were entertained by a group of musicians that have shown their willingness upon many occasions to give of their talents for the furtherance of any good cause.

Tommy Mason acted as master of ceremonies for the evening introducing the different artists, who helped to make the program a success, and likewise delighted the audience with a well-appreciated piano solo. Jimmy Corradi, another of Belleville's talented musicians, also favoured in his usual delightful manner with piano renditions.

Included among those, who contributed to the enjoyment of the evening and to whom the thanks of the firemen is extended for their kindly assistance, were George Sheppard, who rendered a much appreciated vocal solo, the pupils of Bruce Sills, who contributed several accordion selections, guitar selections by pupils of Harry Wagner, the Lloyd sisters vocal and guitar, Don Pomeroy for a cornet solo and to Miss Dorothy LePage for an accordian rendition.

One of the high points of interest on the evening's program and one for which many of those in attendance were especially waiting was the quiz contest. This contest was entered into spiritedly by the audience and with much success as the entire six prizes offered were given away. The public address system, which aided so considerably in everyone hearing the dialogue and musical entertainment was donated by the Sweet brothers.

HIGH PREMIUM PAID

Santa Monica, Calif., May 5—(AP)—Douglas Aircraft Corporation officials said yesterday they are paying a premium of $82,000 to insure the 82-ton B-19 bomber for $1,000,000 during the first 60 seconds of its test flight.

'Craps' Game Raided By Lone Constable

While patrolling his beat at the rear of Front Street stores early Sunday morning, Constable Peter Thomson found the rear door, leading into 356 Front Street, insecure. The officer entered the building to make investigations, when suddenly an inside door opened and a man walked out after bidding adieu to some person inside. P. O. Thomson stepped into the shadows and after the man left the officer continued through the inner door and upon hearing voices in the basement, quietly wended his way into the cellar, where he came upon ten men intently engaged in what is commonly known as a game of "craps," conventionally played with a set of dice.

The officer stood in the background momentarily before he nonchalantly walked into the centre of the proceedings and picked up $117 and a set of dice before the astonished players realised the "long arm of the law" was within their midst. The names of the player were taken and later they went to the police station of their own accord.

Ten Pay Fines.

On Monday, before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., nine men were charged with being found in a common gaming house and all pleaded guilty. A fine of $5.00 and costs was imposed in each case and subsequently paid. The man who assumed the responsibility of "keeping a common gaming house" was fined an additional "five spot."

Two local barristers, E. O. Butler and E. E. Follwell, appeared on behalf of "the manipulators of the galloping dominoes," the latter requesting that the money confiscated by the officer be returned, but Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. objected. "I think such money usually goes to His Majesty the King, under such circumstances," remarked Mr. Donnan. His Worship stated he would hold the matter under consideration for a few days.

"But my client was only paying off his gaming debts just as the officer walked in and confiscated the money," pleaded Mr. Follwell.

Tweed Council To Discuss D. S. T.

Tweed (Special) — The question of Daylight Saving has been a burning one in Tweed for some months past and is again the main subject of discussion this spring. During 1940 when Tweed adopted advanced time, it did not meet with general approval especially among the merchants, who found it necessary to remain open an hour later on "open" nights to accommodate the members of the rural community who had continued to operate on Standard Time.

During the winter months Tweed reverted to Standard Time. Again this Spring the question was raised and Reeve C. H. Kerr obtained a written expression of opinion from Tweed merchants of whom thirty preferred Standard Time and fourteen, Daylight Saving Time. With this as a cross section of public opinion, Tweed Council decided that the village would remain on Standard Time during 1941.

Whole Matter Re-Opened

The whole matter has been reopened however, as several manufacturing plants have decided to operate on "advanced" time. These include Tweed Steel Works, Joe Rashotte Lumber Co., and Paul Rashotte, who find it to their advantage to do so. Many of the employees of these firms have children attending the schools which are operating on Standard Time, making it necessary for housewives to prepare dinner at eleven o'clock for their husbands and again at twelve o'clock for their children with obvious inconvenience to many.

The council has decided to reconsider the matter on Monday night at the regular meeting when a definite ruling will be made to meet the wishes of the majority.

Find Dead Pilot's Watch

The wreckage of the plane which crashed on the farm of John Lajoie one mile south of Tweed on Tuesday carrying LAC. V. Blake to his death has been removed by crews from the airport to which he was attached.

On Saturday some local residents again attracted to the scene were digging in the hole from which the engine of the plane had been removed, when they came upon the pilot's wrist watch apparently undamaged except that the strap had been burned off. They also unearthed the altimeter which had jammed at the 290 foot level, which is approximately the height above sea-level of the district. It is understood that the articles have been turned in to the proper authorities.

DR. OUTERBRIDGE TELLS OF WORK ON MISSION FIELD

Native Missionaries Carrying on Work of Christian Church in Japan

Today is a day not of despair but a day of hope, Rev. Dr. H. E. Outerbridge, for thirty years a leading missionary and educator in Japan, told the congregation of Bridge Street United Church on Sunday morning.

"It is out of just such Gethsemanes that the great redemptive forces of God are set in motion."

This world situation is awakening the people to a new unity in Jesus Christ, he stated. Christianity has not failed.

"You and I cannot afford to lose the wonderful impetus and inspiration that comes from the Christian missionary enterprise. Nothing is so disinterested and so amply rewarded."

The preacher said that he did not believe the church should permanently withdraw from Japan. At present owing to the international relations most missionaries have left that country, at the request of the native Christian workers who feel that the presence of foreign missionaries might make their work more difficult at this time. The native workers give the assurance that the work of the Christian missions is proceeding.

It is just such a time of crisis in which Christianity rises to its height, the missionary declared, telling that in time of the Napoleonic threat to Britain the British and Foreign Bible Society was founded. Fifty years ago when Canada was passing through depression saw the rise of a missionary movement which sent missionaries to West China.

Today the evangelical churches, Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran and Baptist, have united for the work in Japan, while Roman Catholic, Russian Orthodox Catholic and Anglican operate separately.

Speaking in highest terms of the little churches in missions he said that they were in the front against paganism. He spoke of the two fronts, the one visible, across the Atlantic where, everyone can be thankful so many brave men are defending the line, and the invisible front line of faith.

Speaking of the trials of today, Dr. Outerbridge remarked: "If Lent and Easter mean anything it is the lesson that pain, suffering and death are not the end for after Gethsemane must come Easter morning."

Rev. Dr. J. Semple, pastor, had charge of the service.

Missed the Fun

Now comes a story of a small boy who was weeping:

Sympathetic Old Lady: "Why are you crying?"

Small Boy: "My grandma has just fallen downstairs."

Sympathetic Old Lady: "But, don't cry. She will get over it."

Small Boy: "I know, but my little sister saw her fall and I didn't."—Petrolia Advertiser.

Loyalty, Sacrifice Urged In Crisis

Rev. G. S. Buckingham of Ottawa, Speaks in Emmanuel Church

Rev. George S. Buckingham of Ottawa, Canadian representative of the World Federation of Daily Vacation Bible Schools, yesterday preached at Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church. In the morning he spoke on the text "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto Him we are able." (Matt. 20:22), and pleaded for the same courageous loyalty and sacrifice in the present world crisis as the early disciples had in their devotion to Jesus.

In the evening he drew attention to the magnificent faith and optimism expressed in Hebrew 2:8,9, "We see not yet all things put under, but we see Jesus." He assured the congregation that "so long as we have the faith and are willing to pray and serve like the author of this epistle, victory is certain."

He will speak on Wednesday evening on "One Pearl of Great Price."

Mr. Buckingham is on his way to Toronto where he will attend the Synod of R. E. Church of Canada, to be held May 8 and 9 in Christ Reformed Episcopal Church.

He has been associated with the work of Daily Vacation Bible Schools a world association which brings many interesting tasks to his attention.

On the work of the Daily Vacation Bible Schools, Mr. Buckingham has devoted a great deal of attention.

Mr. Buckingham was a student at Albert College in his youth and during his course at that institution he occupied the pulpit of Emmanuel Church a number of times.

He has been associated with the formation of daily vacation study groups in Belleville on several occasions.

POLICE BLOTTER

Jack Whiting, 60A Bridge St., reported the theft of a radio speaker stolen from his parked automobile on Saturday. The vehicle was parked at the rear of the Public Utilities yard when the speaker is believed to have been removed.

Eddie George, well known Market Square barbershop proprietor, complained to police that a motor car had been in collision with his parked auto on the square Saturday, the owner of the vehicle having driven away from the scene of the crash. Mr. George obtained the licence plate number of the fleeing vehicle, which he gave to the police.

City police patrols continued to check speedsters apprehended violating the speed limit within the city limits in an effort to curb fast driving over Belleville streets. Three such delinquents were apprehended over the weekend. The raiding of a common gambling house and the arrest of two intoxicants constituted the remainder of information gathered off the city police blotter today.

POLICE COURT

Highway Traffic Act and Liquor Control Act cases constituted the majority of cases listed for trial at Monday's local police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. Three inebriates appeared, two of whom paid the conventional "ten and costs" in fines, while the third man, who was 74 years of age, said he wasn't too sure about the charge.

"Are you ready for your trial?" asked Chief Kidd. "That's what I'm here for, but I doubt if I was drunk," replied the elderly man.

At this point Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., interrupted and informed the court the man was nearly blind. "We don't want this old man in the county jail, so we will not enter any evidence," continued Mr. Donnan. His Worship dismissed the case.

William Easton and Martha Baumhour were assessed $5.00 and costs on respective charges of careless driving following the recent check-up by police on their drive to make Belleville's streets clear of accidents.

A domestic case concluded the morning's proceedings.

FDR'S "FIGHT" ADDRESS MEANS UNLIMITED AID

Officials Do Not Believe Statement Imports Declared War

DEDICATES SHRINE

Washington, May 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt's declaration that the United States people "are ever ready to fight again" for democracy was interpreted in high administration quarters today as carrying a new promise of virtually unlimited assistance to nations resisting aggression.

This view was taken by some members of the party which accompanied the President to Staunton, Va., where he made the statement yesterday in dedicating the birthplace of Woodrow Wilson as a national shrine.

In Washington, Senator Gerald Nye (Rep-North Dakota) commented that "if the President is making a feeler for a declaration of war he will be quickly surprised to see that the people of America do not want to be involved."

Officials in the Presidential party noted, on the other hand, that he did not say Americans were ready to go to war and drew a distinction between that and his actual words. In the present instance, they said, "fight" was a broad term covering strong material support of democratic nations rather than military involvement in the war.

While the President spoke only of principles, developments in Washington indicated a growing pressure for further specific action on the problem of delivering war supplies to Britain, and the whole subject apparently was due for an early and thorough airing in the Senate.

New Shrine of Freedom

A crowd of notables and plain people heard the President's dedicatory address. It was delivered from a small platform on the walk in front of the old house in which Wilson was born.

"We are meeting here today to dedicate a new shrine of freedom," Mr. Roosevelt said. "By this action we are bearing true witness to the faith that is in us—a single faith in the freedom of democracy in the world.

"It is the kind of faith for which we have fought before, for the existence of which we are ever ready to fight again."

Woodrow Wilson's career, the President said, "was a triumph of the spiritual over the sordid forces of brute strength" and he declared that "physical strength can never permanently withstand the impact of spiritual force."

Applauded Judgment

Furthermore, he said, Wilson "taught that democracy could not survive in isolation. We applaud his judgment and his faith."

Elsewhere indications of increasing support for proposals to assure delivery of war supplies to Britain appeared in two quarters here.

Wendell L. Willkie, the Republican leader, declared that "we should protect our cargoes of arms and food to England," and he characterized the operations of the United States neutrality patrol—designed to provide safe lanes in the western Atlantic—as inadequate.

Senator Nye commented that Willkie was not representing the preponderance of sentiment in the Republican party in pledging support for any action the President might take.

Comments on Address

In commenting on President Roosevelt's assertion about Americans being "ever ready to fight" for democracy, Nye remarked that the statement "can mean much or mean little."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke much of spiritual values in his Staunton speech and he said that under Wilson's leadership "this country made great spiritual progress."

"Of Woodrow Wilson this can be said," he continued, "that in a time when world councils were dominated by material considerations of greed and gain and revenge he beheld the vision splendid.

"That selfish men could not share his vision of a world emancipated from the shackles of force and the arbitrament of the sword in no wise detracts from its splendor," the President continued. "Rather does the indifference of hostile contemporaries enhance the beauty of the vision which he saw and enlarge the glory of the world he sought to rebuild.

"He will be held in everlasting remembrance as a statesman, who, when other men sought revenge and material gain, strove to bring nearer the day which should see the emancipation of conscience from power and the substitution of freedom for force in the government of the world."

Magazine Favors U. S. Convoys to Britain

Collier's Weekly in its last issue went all out in favor of United States naval convoys for shipments to Britain. In its chief editorial the magazine presented this statement:

"We can't see anything for the United States to do but to help Great Britain to the hilt in the Battle of the Atlantic — meaning the struggle to convince Hitler permanently that his submarines, surface raiders and bombers cannot stop our shipments to Great Britain.

"If that means some kind of convoy work for the United States Navy — well, then, that is what it means. There is this consolation, at least: that our Navy in 1917-18 did such a superb job of convoy work that not a Europe-bound American soldier was killed by German submarine action. Our present-day Navy is not exactly inferior to our Navy in the World War.

"If Britain can win this battle, there is some ground for hoping that Hitler can be choked by combined sea and air power; that a large-scale invasion of Europe and a series of slaughters of young men can be avoided.

"Mussolini, punched by the British and the Greeks by land, sea and air, cracked with astounding rapidity. Hitler is a more successful man than Mussolini, and, with all due respect to the Italian soldiers, the Germans are better equipped. Nevertheless, it may be that Statism itself — not just Mussolini's brand of it — has a fatal brittleness about it.

"Certain it is that German Statism, Nazism, breeds hate instead of affection or respect in the countries it overruns. Witness the unending sabotage in Holland, Norway, Poland, Denmark. Those suppressed hates should explode as soon as those haters see a chance of a successful rebellion.

"All in all, it looks like a long road to victory yet, and a road paved with blood and tears, toil and sweat, as promised by Churchill. Yet, as also hinted by Churchill, victory may be closer than anybody now suspects.

"Whichever it's to be, we can see nothing for the United States to do but play its part in the Battle of the Atlantic to the limit of its capacities. As Benjamin Franklin said, if we don't hang together... ......"

Vast Power in The Singapore Base

Singapore naval base, within 60 miles of the equator, at the southernmost point of continental Asia, is built on a scale as great as that of any in the world.

Strategically it insures the mobility of the British fleet in the East, enabling it to operate at will over a large area of the Indian Ocean, the China Sea and the western Pacific. With the growth in size of capital ships in the last 30 years and a corresponding increase in the requirements of the fleet in refitting and repairs, it became obvious that the naval dockyard at Hongkong could not fulfill the role of the principal British naval base east of Suez.

Singapore was chosen for much the same reason that Sir Stamford Raffles selected the island for a British settlement in 1819, when he was seeking to extend British commercial influence in the Indies. It stands at the crossroads of the East, commanding the trade routes between India and the Far East and between the Far East and Australia and New Zealand.

From the naval viewpoint, however, Singapore had a further advantage. In the straits between the island and the mainland of the Malay Peninsula was one of the finest natural harbors in the East. It was, however, a harbor unused by merchant shipping and could therefore be taken over entirely by the Admiralty without interfering with established rights.

The decision to build the base dates no further back than the Imperial Conference of 1921, which adopted many of the suggestions of Admiral Jellicoe for insuring the mobility of the fleet east of Suez.

In those days the ground on which the base stands was a vast expanse of mangrove swamp with occasional patches of cocoanut and rubber plantations. The straits where great warships now may be seen were used then only for a few fishing boats and an occasional pleasure yacht. Eighteen years ago no European would have thought of living in the Seletar area because of the danger of malaria.

The function of the base is to insure that should the Grand Fleet move to Eastern waters it would find at Singapore every facility which it required — an extensive harbor safe from enemy attack, docks where even the biggest battleship could be accommodated for repairs and overhaul, workshops where machinery and guns could be serviced, wharves for revictualing and refueling, and shore accommodations for rest and recreation for officers and men who have been long at sea.

The Admiralty harbor may be considered as extending all the way from Johore causeway, which connects the Island of Singapore with the mainland, to Changi Point, and also including the mouth of the Johore river, which is protected by the islands of Palau Tekong and Pulau Ubin. Altogether there is more than 20 square miles of deep-water anchorage, more than enough to accommodate the entire British fleet.

The base itself, several miles up the straits of Seletar, covers an area of four square miles, which was presented to the British Government as a free gift by the Straits Settlements when it was decided to embark on the Singapore scheme.

The facilities for the fleet may be divided into five categories, stores and victualing yard, repairing yard, rest and recreation for personnel, medical facilities and headquarters for the command.

If stocks of foodstuffs and provisions are required for the personnel of the ships, stocks of oil are of equal importance for the ships themselves. Singapore is fortunate in being close to the oil fields of Borneo and Sumatra, but it is necessary to keep within the base or near at hand stocks which can be drawn upon immediately if the need arises. It has often been estimated that oil sufficient to maintain the fleet for six months is kept in Singapore, although no exact figure can be divulged.

Great mains bring the water supplies to Singapore, and in the unlikely event of all these ceasing to function there are within the boundaries of the base two reservoirs which hold water sufficient for emergency supplies.

In the armament depot, holding stocks of all types of naval shells, mines and torpedoes are magazines to withstand a direct hit by a heavy bomb. These magazines can supply ammunition to any man-of-war from a 15-inch gun battleship to an escort vessel.

Next to the importance of re-equipment, refueling and revictualing is the repair of ships. The repairing yard provides the facilities for these with a minimum of delay. There are two docks, one the King George VI graving dock, one of the largest in the world, and the other a floating dock.

Both can take the largest battleship afloat and the King George VI dock, which was formally opened two years ago, can accommodate the largest ship in the world.

Buildings have been constructed to give maximum protection against aerial attack whether by high explosive or incendiary bomb. Every workshop is safe against blast or splinters. For vital points within the base, completely bomb-proof construction has been provided so that even direct hits could create no more than a temporary disturbance to work.

Protection of the approaches to the base is largely the task of the military authorities. Indeed, the formidable land fortifications of Singapore are almost as famous as the naval base itself.

The local naval forces comprise units of the Royal Navy permanently based on Singapore, including those manned by the Straits Settlements Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve and the units of the Malay Navy.

One of the duties of these local naval forces is to maintain unceasing vigilance and to insure that the waters around Singapore are kept safe for navigation. Precautions must be taken against the possibility of enemy submarines.

Other local naval-defence measures include the examination service announced at the outbreak of war. This has been maintained ever since, and no ship can enter Singapore waters without satisfying the inquirer of the officers in charge of friendly intentions.

For the defence of the entrance to the straits and harbors there are contact mine fields. These make it necessary for any ship approaching Singapore to follow certain defined channels, which are swept daily. There are also protective devices of a more secret nature at the entrance of the harbors.

PHILIPPINES LIE ATHWART JAPAN'S IMPERIALISM

INDEPENDENT IN '46

By J. F. SANDERSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 5 (CP) — Lying across the path of Japanese imperialism in the South Pacific is an Archipelago of 7,093 islands, with a population of 16,000,000—The Philippines, a military headache and first class defence problem for the army and navy staffs of the United States.

The Philippine Commonwealth stands at the apex of the American defence system in the Far East, 8,000 miles across the Pacific from continental United States, less than 3,000 miles from Japan and only 120 miles from Japanese controlled Formosa—almost inside Japan's self-ordained sphere of influence.

Although the commonwealth will be granted independence on July 4, 1946, the defence of the islands remains the responsibility of the United States in co-operation with President Manuel L. Quezon and his local government.

In recent months, American army forces have been reinforced in The Philippines, particularly with air and coast guard artillery units under an experienced commander, General William Grunert.

The Filipinos have a regular army of 466 officers and 3,666 men with a trained reserve, built up in the last five years, of 132,000. They have two or three motor torpedo boats used in coast guard duty and an air force of 50 or 60 planes, none of them modern.

Singapore will be used as the permanent base for the American fleet.

Number Military Secret

In adidtion to these Filipino native forces which have been trained by General Douglas McArthur, a former chief of staff of the United States army, the United States maintains army, navy and air units in The Philippines. The number of American troops in the commonwealth is a military secret but there are several divisions and plenty of equipment for the type of fighting that might be expected.

If war developed, the Filipino and American forces would operate under a unified command.

From a naval viewpoint, the defence of the Philippines is a tough proposition. At Cavite, on Manila Bay, the United States has a naval establishment with repair facilities for small ships and at Subig Bay, a floating drydock capable of handling small ships. There are ample supply depots at both points but the Philippines has been regarded for years more of a naval outpost than a base.

The main Pacific base for the United States fleet is at Hawaii, 4,000 miles away. However, it is only 1,330 miles between Manila and Singapore, the British naval base on the tip of the Malay Peninsula and it has been suggested here many times that if war develops in the south Pacific involving the United States, Singapore will be used as the permanent base for the America fleet.

Several Air Bases

The United States army has several air bases in The Philippines, particularly on Luzon Island in the northern section of the archipelago. From an air viewpoints—and this is also true of the navy—one of the greatest handicaps in the defence of The Philippines is the lack of industrial development in the commonwealth. There are practically no factories that could build planes or shipways that could turn out warships bigger than "Mosquito" boats. All equipment of this sort must be flown, sailed or transported across 8,000 miles of ocean.

Whether The Philippines could hold out for long against a determined all-out Japanese attack is considered extremely doubtful. But it is equally true that the Japanese would have no walk-over victory. The Filipinos are tough fighters in their own country—that much was discovered by the American army 40 years ago after the Spanish garrison was defeated and attempts were made to subdue Aguinaldo and his followers armed with hatchets and a few smooth-bore guns.

If the Japanese try the same thing, they will find modern weapons and a race of people determined to maintain the status quo five more years—until they gain their long-cherished independence.

THESE TWO GREAT ALLIES

In the withdrawal from Greece, British and Imperial troops with the aid of the navy and the air arm have achieved the most difficult of tasks. The rearguard action leading down to the coast will live in history. The success of the evacuation must have been a disappointment to the Huns whose propaganda chiefs had predicted wholesale disaster for the Greeks and British. There was natural loss of equipment as has been admitted, but the spirit of the troops triumphed over the superior numbers of the enemy and the embarkation was another triumph of British courage and strategy.

The noble Greeks who saw their ancient land being overrun by the Hun invaders from the north performed an act of self-abnegation which matches the heroism they had been showing for months against the Italians and had defeated the Fascists steadily could only withdraw in the face of the preponderating numbers of the Huns. These Greeks, both in action and in thought for their associates, the British force which had come to their aid, have demonstrated to the world those qualities which have made them great and will keep them great to the end of time. The Greeks thought of the British and this was the message of the Greek Government to the British Government:—

> "Consequently the Royal Government is obliged to state that further sacrifice of the British Expeditionary Force would be in vain and that its withdrawal in time seems to be rendered necessary by circumstances and by interests common to the struggle."

Never will the glory of these Greeks and their Government fade. They have lived in the atmosphere of great thoughts and great deeds.

British and Greek fight on against the Hun, two peoples with a great heritage of spirit and immortal courage.

HOW NAZIS ROB FRANCE

How the Nazis are systematically milking France and gaining possession of the leading industries and of French investments in foreign countries is told in the New York Times. The Germans collect from the French 400 million francs a day for the Nazi army of occupation and yet the actual cost of occupation is only 125 millions. So 275 million francs a day remains to the Germans over the cost. The Nazis take this to buy up control of French industry and French holdings. Note circulation has climbed 80 per cent above last June 10th's figures. Two thirds of the increase of 140,000,000,000 francs is laid to the activities of German occupation and the balance to French failure to balance expenses.

Now the Vichy Government proposes ordinary expenditure for the second quarter of the year at only 250,000,000 francs a day against the daily Nazi occupation levy of 400,000,000 francs. The Times comments, "If there are one million German troops in occupied France, Vichy is required to pay out 400 francs a day for each German soldier, while its own budget allows only six francs a day for each French civilian,"

The Times concludes, "The entire situation is another illustration of the ruthless cunning with which the Nazi have developed their techniques of economic and financial aggression. The logical end of the process will be to find the Nazis in possession of most French industries and foreign investments and to leave the French with a debauched currency system. And the Nazis will no doubt protest with great innocence that they have been extremely considerate in paying for the French property they have acquired instead of merely confiscating it."

The world well enough remembers the German debasement of their own currency in the "twenties" whereby they robbed as many as they could and when inflation was pursued so madly that the German paper currency became less valuable than the paper it was printed on or even the cost of printing. The German system is outlawry and banditry.

The ideas of fairness and honor do not enter into the Nazi conception of financial and economic dealings. The Nazis who do this are the Nazis that destroy churches, machine-gun civilians, destroy historic monuments and pillage nations.

"IF"

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;
If you can dream—and not make dreams your master;
If you can think—and not make thoughts your aim;
If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two impostors just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn-out tools;
If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose, and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss;
If you force your heart and nerve and sinew
To serve your turn long after they are gone,
And so hold on when there is nothing in you
Except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"
If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!

—Kipling.

If you happen to be in the vicinity when one of the large modern transports rumble to a stop, and you hear the drivers conversing in a language that sounds strange to your ears, don't think they are fifth columnists, foreigners or what have you. They are just great big huskies, fine fellows all—who have developed a slang of their own. The army has its vocabularly, so has the navy and the air force, all of which ring strangely to unaccustomed ears. Now along come the truckdrivers, and some of their pet names are as humorous as they are difficult to understand.

The American Mercury had a gal reporter ride with a few of the boys and here are some of the terms they use and their definitions:—

Armstrong starter—crank handle.
Bareback—tractor without trailer.
Beach her—coast to parking place.
Bible—bill book.
Boom wagon—nitroglycerine truck.
Broke to lead—needs to be towed in.
Bull o' the woods—company officer in charge of district.
Buttoning her up—tying down a load on a truck or trailer.
Cackle crate — poultry transport truck.
Cement mixer — truck with noisy engine or broken muffler.
Chaser—company man who hurries drivers in loading.
Cinchers—brakes.
Cop caller—truck with noisy brakes.
Crash wagon—ambulance.
Down in the kitchen—creeper gear.
Emerjenson—emergency brake.
Gear fighter—driver who makes a noise shifting gears.
Grunt and squeal jockey—stock hauler.
Jesse James—police judge.
Killer—truck with no brakes.
Punctured lung—leaky radiator.
Push water—gasoline.
Smoker—cigaret haul.
Stem winder—hand-crank starter.

OLD CRANK MIRE'S VIEW

Said Old Crankmire with a chuckle: Let the family bickerings cease!
If the family wants to quarrel let it wait till we're at peace.
But it's not the time to wrangle and at one another frown,
Or divide on selfish issues when the house is burning down.

"When there's nothing much the matter and we've food upon the shelves,
When no threat of peril frights us we can fight among ourselves;
But when home itself is threatened and the house is apt to fail,
This should be the family slogan: 'All for one and one for all!'

"Now the family's in trouble and the future may destroy
All we've builded and have cherished for our children to enjoy;
And until that danger's over and to us the tyrant bows,
Let us fight and work together and postpone our family rows."

How Leeds Stood Up To a Bombing

From the Leeds Yorkshire Post.

A special report by Leeds Emergency Committee about a recent raid when "a large number of incendiary bombs, followed by high explosive bombs, fell over a wide area of the city", contains the following tribute:

"The assistance given by voluntary fire parties, fire-watchers and others in extinguishing incendiary bombs was undoubtedly the means of preventing many outbreaks of fire. Great credit is due to the civilian population for its splendid behavior and invaluable assistance in this direction. There were only five major fires."

There are facts in the report which cannot yet be disclosed, but it contains much in which the city can take pride.

For Civil Defence Services there is praise in these words:

Wardens' Service: 4,141 wardens were on duty, or reported for duty immediately the raid began, and many other wardens went on duty during the night. They dealt with many incendiary bombs, assisted in rescuing persons trapped under debris, and their general conduct had a steadying effect on the morale of the public. Four wardens were killed and some wounded.

Messenger Service: Approximate number of messengers on duty was 200. In spite of extreme difficulties the service functioned in the most efficient manner, and great credit is due to all for their encouragement and devotion to duty. Although some messengers were thrown from their cycles by bomb blast, and others had their cycles damaged, they continued on flat tires and buckled wheels. One messenger was seriously wounded and others were slightly injured.

Fire Services: These services dealt with a number of fires, which were all under control before dawn. A number of members were injured — four seriously — and 1,846 members of the regular brigade and A.F.S. were on duty.

Police: The whole of the police force, including the Special Constabulary and the Police war Reserve, were on duty. One special constable and some members of both the other forces were injured.

Casualty Services: Resources were adequate to meet all requirements. Seventy-seven ambulances made 111 journeys during the raid. One was damaged by falling into a bomb crater. A member of the service was killed and others were slightly injured.

Rescue Parties: Twenty-three were on duty. Work was continued throughout the raid, and a high standard of courage and resource was shown by all members of the service. One member was seriously injured and some slightly injured.

Control and report centres functioned efficiently, and 3,500 messages were dealt with during the night.

The report also refers to the efficiency with which the Transport Department adapted itself to emergency routes, and to the speedy manner in which roads were repaired. Twenty-one food and rest centres were opened to receive homeless people. All were supplied with hot tea and biscuits on arrival, and breakfasts, dinners, teas and suppers were provided.

Members of the W. V. S., with the assistance of other voluntary helpers, staffed the centres, and the committee thank them for their valuable aid.

Clothing, to meet requirements of a small number of homeless, was issued from the centres, and grants for the provision of clothing, averaging £4 10s a head, have been made by the Assistance Board in a number of cases.

Many lives were saved by shelters, and the report states that a survey of the damage to domestic and other shelters indicates "that the shelters have withstood the effects of the raid in a remarkable degree." "Domestic basement shelters", the report adds, "withstood the debris load dropped on them from a direct hit, and up to the present no case has been found where the occupants of any shelter which sustained the force of an explosion, other than a direct hit, have suffered serious injury."

ON THE RECORD
By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Story Of A Dictator

New York, May 5.—When I was out in Texas recently friends took me to the historic San Jacinto battlefield to see the famous monument memorializing what Texans call "one of the sixteen decisive battles of the world."

The monument, a towering needle of stone 570 feet high, and thus, I was informed, the tallest memorial on earth, is also a museum, where in picture, exhibits and maps is recorded the history of the building of an empire—the vast American empire of the southwest.

From the top of the monument one can look miles and miles away over that fabulous land of cotton, fruit, cattle and oil; toward Houston, whose channel port is now one of the two or three busiest in America. There lies a British ship—from here go vast loads of oil and guns to the Allies. And from here have gone also, and to our shame, the sinews of war to help the Japanese to conquer China, to help the Japanese wrest from us our interests in the Pacific. When high octane gas was embargoed, the octane rating, fixed by the regulation, was merely reduced by one-half of one per cent., and the gasoline kept on going to Japan. Probably it is still going. The men and women who stand with me on the top of the monument do not like this. They are indignant about it.

Texans loathe tyranny. For Texas became first a republic, and then a member of the United States, as the result of a war on a dictator. The story of that war is graven in stone, on the sides of the great monument. Descending to the earth we walk around it, reading the towering letters that tell the story of the rise and fall of the mighty Santa Anna, self-styled "Napoleon of the West".

* * *

Once Texan colonists were happy and satisfied members of the great state of Mexico, the stone letters tell me. "The early policy of Mexico toward the colonists had been liberal. The relationship between Anglo-Americans and Mexico was cordial. But following a series of revolutions begun in 1829 unscrupulous leaders seized power in Mexico and their unjust acts and despotic decrees led to the revolution in Texas."

* * *

We move to another facade, eager to read the history of triumph. But the cold stone letters record nothing but failure, nothing but defeat, nothing but death and despair.

The first shot of the revolution of 1835 was fired by Texans. . . . In resistance to a demand of Mexican soldiers for a small cannon held by the colonists. . . . Texas declared her independence.

"For nearly two months her armies met disaster and defeat.

"Dr. James Grant's men. . . . Killed.

"William Barrett Travis and his men. . . . Sacrificed, at the Alamo."

"William Ward. . . . Defeated at Refugio.

"Raymond D. King's men. . . . Executed.

"James Walker Fannin, Jr. . . . Put to death near Goliad."

There stands the proud record of defeat. I recall the words of Walt Whitman, who lived in the same heroic times:

"Revolt! And the bullet for tyrants!

Did we think victory great?

So it is—but now it seems to me, when it cannot be helped.

That defeat is great.

And that death and dismay are great!

And my eyes read, instead of Alamo—Refugio—Goliad:

Norway — Holland — France — Greece.

We move to another facade. This is a story as deliberate as stone.

"On this field, on April 21, 1836, an army of Texans, commanded by General Sam Houston . . . attacked a larger invading army of Mexicans . . . under Santa Anna.

"With the battle cry "Remember the Alamo! Remember Goliad! Texans charge. The Texans had asked no quarter and gave none. The slaughter was appalling, the victory complete, and Texas was free. On the following day . . . the self-styled Napoleon of the West received from a generous foe the mercy he had denied to Travis at the Alamo, and Fannin, Jr., at Goliad."

The next inscription tells us:

"Citizens of Texas and immigrant soldiers of the army of Texas at San Jacinto were natives of Alabama, Arkansas, Connecticut, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia . . ."

"They trekked in from all parts of the States," said my companion, a grandson of Sam Houston. "My grandfather used to tell about the Tennessee boy whom he met, ragged and footsore. He had come all the way on foot. 'What are you fighting for?' he asked him. The boy replied: 'For my rights'.

"In those days men seemed to think that their rights were at stake whenever other men were fighting for freedom."

Sure enough. The inscription goes on. "And men from Australia, Canada, England, France, Germany, Ireland, Italy, Mexico—oh, yes, from Mexico, too, Mexicans who hated tyranny — Poland, Portugal, Scotland."

It was an international brigade.

Texans still feel that way. "Hundreds of Texan boys have made their way to Canada, hitch-hiking many of them, to enlist in the R.A.F. a British vice-consul told me later in the same day. "They are among the finest fliers in the forces."

* * *

The last inscription is brief. "Measured by its results San Jacinto was one of the decisive battles of the world. Freedom won here eventually resulted in . . . the acquisition of one-third of the present area of the American nation."

* * *

More words of Walt Whitman come back to me:

"Not a grave of the murder'd for freedom but grows for freedom, in its turn to bear seed.

"Which the winds carry afar and re-sow, and the rains and the snows nourish.

"Not a disembodied spirit can the weapons of tyrants let loose.

"But it stalks invisibly over the earth, whispering, counselling, cautioning

"Liberty! Let others despair of you! I never despair of you."

* * *

The spring wind ruffles the long pool, reflecting the monument which marks the grave of the Napoleon of the West.

Out of the battle of San Jacinto came a new order of civilization.

But not the new order of the conqueror, Santa Anna.

GOLDEN FRUIT

Chemists at Hebrew University, in Palestine, are studying the possibility of making a high military explosive from orange peels.

A variety of orange from which the rind is easily removed is known as a "kid-glove."

One of the common kid-glove oranges is the tangerine, which gets its name from Tangier, Morocco.

The inside of an orange after the juice has been squeezed out is known as the rag.

Blossoms and fruit in all stages may appear on orange trees throughout the year.

One variety of orange is the source of perfume.

Fresh oranges and orange juice are rich in vitamins and oranges are the most important fresh fruit of international commerce.

Both fruit and rind are used in marmalade, preserves and confections and for flavoring.

The yellow, hard, close-grained wood of the orange tree is used in the manufacture of a number of small articles.

Southern China, Indo-China and India are believed to be the native land of the orange.

Both sour and sweet oranges still grow wild on the mountain slopes in parts of India.

Oranges were taken from Asia to Europe overland by the Arabs and by sea by the Portuguese.

The Sanskrit word "nagrungo," meaning the orange tree, finally became "orange" in English after passing through half a dozen different languages.

Orange trees were planted in Florida by the Spanish early in the 17th century.

The first orange tree in California was planted on the Feather River in 1856.

Seeds from this Mother Orange Tree, still growing in Butte county, sold for a dollar an ounce in the '60's.

Today there are nearly 35,000,000 orange trees in Florida, California, Texas and Arizona.

Two years ago the county supervisors ordered the removal of a wall that was obstructing the growth of the roots of the Mother Orange Tree, and last year the city fathers of Oroville used the five remaining granite hitching posts to build a protective fence around the historic fruit tree.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER IX.

Devona had no idea how long she had been sitting there, face pressed against the cool iron balustrade, cheeks fanned by the warm, fragrant breeze just stirring from the garden below, the dream in her heart matching the beauty of the star-spangled night. Then, as if he'd stepped right out of that dream, Dale had come striding across the empty patio below.

Devona recognized him instantly, even in the shadow. No one else walked with that same, long, even stride. Smiling, she felt the breath stop in her throat.

Dale stood for a moment beside the black, shimmering pool. Then slowly he turned back toward the house, hands thrust deep into his coat pockets. He stood watching the lighted windows below. If only he'd look up, she dreamed on, still not really believing she wouldn't wake up soon. Look up and speak to her.

As if he'd heard her thought, Dale did glance up, take a step nearer. Then he grinned, waved at her.

On The Balcony.

"Hello, there, Juliet on your balcony," he called in a husky stage whisper. "You are Juliet, aren't you? Or am I seeing things?"

Laughing softly, she nodded. "And thou, dear Romeo. Who let you in?"

"I scaled yon wall, fair lady, just for a glimpse of thee."

"Then thou must beware my vengeful kinsmen," she said, not realizing how nearly she spoke the truth.

Dale nodded, glanced toward the lighted windows below. "It's much too swell an evening to stay inside. And perfect for a swim. Look, why don't you slide into a suit and come on down?"

Devona hesitated. It was pretty late. Still—why not? "I'll be with you in a minute."

It was only a minute before she slipped out of her room, fingers still fumbling as she stuffed her soft hair under a bathing cap. At the head of the stairs she hesitated. Below, in the main hall, she could hear Vara bidding her guests good night. Better use the servants' stairway at the back. It would spare any painful encounter with Vara. And she couldn't bear any more of that. Not tonight, anyway. Not with Dale waiting.

She Meets Wong Again.

Fleeing, light-footed, along the narrow hall behind the kitchen and servants' quarters, Devona came, unexpectedly, face to face with Wong. A very jaunty Wong in his bright-striped sport coat and rakish panama. Obviously startled to meet her, he hid his surprise almost instantly behind a bobbing little bow, pulled off the panama.

"Yes, miss. Was there anything for you, miss?"

"No, thank you, Wong." Again that strange feeling of repulsion. Instinctively, Devona pulled her bathing cape closer and hurried past him.

The water, cool and invigorating, slapped against the tiled sides of the pool as they swam.

A little later they hoisted themselves to the pool's edge, sat dripping, gasping for breath, laughing about nothing in particular, except that laughing together was fun.

The dry desert air was like a warm shawl, and as they relaxed and sat smoking and talking, Devona caught herself crossing her fingers lest anything should break the spell.

"It's glorious out here," Dale said once, stretching his long body luxuriously on the soft grass, so that he lay looking up at the star-studded sky. "You'd never think anything could go wrong in a world that looked as perfect as this."

"Does it? Go wrong for you, I mean?" Devona asked, curled in the lawn swing so that she could watch his face in the moonlight and keep her own safely hidden by shadow.

"Sure. Often." He laughed — a short, bitter little sound. "Plenty wrong."

"Why?"

His Work Thwarted.

"I don't know why. If I did, it might help." He scowled at the moon's bland face for a minute. "But just when I think things are all set for a magnificent showdown something goes haywire."

"A showdown?" puzzled, Devona echoed.

"Yes. A raid, I mean. I know these boys are putting the stuff through. And I get everything lined up for the night they are expecting a big shipment, and then—" he snapped his fingers—"it blows up. Somebody's on to every move I make and I'll be damned if I can catch up with him."

Dale ran strong fingers through his hair, curling damply now and making him look as he must have when he was a sturdy 10-year-old, Devona thought, smiling.

"It's been uncanny!" he went on, savagely. "Like having some mind reader tell you what you're thinking right while you're thinking it. If I could just plug up this leak—"

Now his moment of seriousness exchanged for his usual good-humored teasing. "Look here, why do I always unload my grief on you whenever I get a chance at your ear?" Then, impudently, he pulled aside a wet curl, tugged at the lobe of her ear. "Pretty one it is, too."

Devona ducked away from him. "And what big eyes you have, Grandma," she mocked, laughing.

"All the better to see you with," he finished, catching her hands, pulling her down onto the soft grass beside him. "Sing for me, why don't you? One of those little sentimental lyrics you are wasting on that gang in there tonight."

Devona shook her head. "Certainly not. Especially when you call it soppy sentiment. Those were nice, sincere love songs, and—"

His View On Love.

Dale laughed, a glorious, heartwarming sound that reached right to the depths of her heart and tipped it over. "I bet you really believe in love, don't you? And living happily ever after, and all that stuff."

"Of course. Don't you?"

He shrugged, half serious, half in fun. "Once upon a time I did. Then I grew up to be an attorney and found out people never do anything just for love."

"Oh, but they do!" Devona protested. "Love—"

"Makes the world go round," he interrupted. "Sure, I heard that once, too. But I got over it. It's money, my sweet, that makes everything go. Money and more money. And the sooner you learn that in this cock-eyed world—" he shrugged, and the gesture, included the patio, the hambling stucco hacienda, then the whole glorious night—" the better off you'll be. Everybody has his price, I've found."

"That's not so!" Flushed, she tried to defend her most cherished ideal.

Dale laughed again. "You'll learn, little Miss Innocence. I'm warning you. Put your romantic notions in cold storage. They won't stand much daylight."

Little Miss Innocence. Devona realized what he really was telling her. She'd worn her heart in plain sight—and of course he'd seen it, felt sorry for her, and her "romantic notions". He knew she'd fallen head over heels at first sight, and gentleman that he was, he didn't want her to make a fool of herself.

Something hard and painful thrust itself into her throat, cut off anything she might have thought to say to hide the awful hurt of his rebuff.

Vara drew Dale into a chair, draped herself on its arm and pressed his head against her breast. "My poor, tired boy," she said caressingly

For a moment Devona looked into Dale's clear blue eyes, while her heart stood on tiptoe. Then suddenly nothing was wrong. Nothing mattered again, except what his eyes were saying

Dark Clouds Again.

So the silence hung, painfully, for a moment. Then Dale turned toward her again.

"S'matter? Did I hurt your feelings?"

"Of course not, silly. I—I was just trying to decide whether to take one more plunge before I go in," she fabricated quickly, faked a smile.

"Good idea. Come on," and pulled her up after him.

They swam again, up and down the swimming pool. But somehow, the water was colder now, the gay camaraderie gone, and they climbed out of the water.

"You're shivering," Dale said, and flung her cape around her shoulders. "Better run in before you catch your death of cold. These desert nights are treacherous."

Discovered By Vara.

Devona nodded. It wasn't the cold night, however, that chilled her.

Then, as they ran, hand in hand, across the grass, the sound of a voice stopped them short. Vara, calling from the balcony of Devona's room.

"Devona! Come in at once, please."

Stunned, Devona watched her mother disappear from the balcony. What had she done, what could she have done that Vara's very voice hated her this way?

"Excuse me, won't you?" she whispered to Dale, fighting to keep her teeth from chattering. "I'll have to hurry."

"Of course." But he kept her hand in his a moment. "See you in the morning?"

"Yes. Good night," and then she fled across the lawn, into the house.

Drawing the long bathing cape tight around her, Devona ran up the stairs, along the silent passageway to her room. She'd have to get out of this wet suit before—

But as she pushed open her own door, the door across the hall swept open. Vara, a cool white goddess in a flowing negligee, stared at her with hostile gray eyes.

"Please, will you come in here a moment. I want to speak to you."

"Certainly." Trembling and not entirely because of the clammy wet suit, Devona stepped past her mother into the elaborate boudoir, heard the click of the door's closing behind her, and felt, somehow, as if a trap had shut its jaws on her.

CHAPTER X.

"Sit down, please," Vara said coldly, indicating a little straight-backed chair.

Devona, obeyed, feeling as if she was a prisoner before the bar. Though why—what it could be that —. Dully her mind went around and around searching for a key to this strange tight-lipped mood of Vara's.

Tapping a cigarette rhythmically against her thumb nail, Vara moved slowly to her chaise-longue and sat down, head flung back against the pillows as she lit the match and blew the first shafts of pale blue smoke carefully. Again, Devona had that feeling of waiting for a cue. Every act, every gesture measured, timed as if for an entrance.

Finally, Vara turned toward her with a gracefulness, a cool poise that made Devona feel awkward, too tall, too young—too everything that was gauche and out of place.

"I would much prefer," Vara began slowly, anger gone from her voice now, and replaced with infinite coldness, "that you didn't go swimming by moonlight at this hour — either alone or in the company of my guests."

Flushing, Devona bit her lip. "I'm sorry. It was such a perfect night and Dale—"

Unconventional.

"Is a very charming young man, I'm aware of that." Vara lifted one eyebrow. "But, I'm afraid unconventional behaviour will lay you open to criticism. And that wouldn't be quite fair to me, do you think?"

Miserably, Devona shook her head, murmured, "I'm sorry."

"I'm really surprised that with your training," her smile drawled the sarcasm, "that you would be guilty of such things."

Hot tears swam into Devona's eyes and made the whole elaborate room wash together. "I didn't suppose there was any—harm. I'm—sorry. It won't happen—again."

"No. We'll hope not." Vara crushed out her cigarette and clasped her hands behind her perfectly coiffed head. "And now that you're here, I want to discuss another little problem with you."

Devona, fingers clenched tight in her lap, met her mother's eyes levelly. 'Another—problem?"

"Yes. The one concerning your —future."

"My future?"

"Because, of course, you can't stay on here, you know. You weren't planning that, were you?"

Devona felt the walls recede and then rush back at her. Not stay here? What did her mother mean?

No Longer Her Home.

Vara was smiling now, that slow, careful smile. "I'm sorry to disappoint you, my dear, if you had. You see this is only a temporary home for me, too. In another month, we'll be opening our play in Hollywood for the trial run and then we'll take it on to New York. You see— it would be quite impossible for me to keep you with me indefinitely."

Puzzled, Devona tried to collect her wits. "I—really—hadn't thought much—" she stammered, helplessly.

"Then, I believe we'd better do some thinking at once," Vara went on, dryly. "There's an excellent girls' school just out of San Francisco. Specializes in music, I believe. I'll wire for details tomorrow and I think we can get you off before the end of the week. You might as well get started at once."

Devona gasped in spite of herself. "Tomorrow—the end of the week!"

"Yes, you've wasted enough time already. Your father—" her eyes changed subtly, "never was one to realize that life has to have definite plan—purpose—if you are to achieve anything."

"Yes—of course."

"And now, good night." Vara rose, closed the little interview with a cool nod. She brushed a kiss against Devona's cheek, a frosted little gesture that served only to remind the daughter what boundless chasm lay between herself and her mother.

"Good night," Devona echoed, automatically, her voice fading to a whisper.

"And remember," Vara stopped her just as she was closing the door behind her. "Please don't make a nuisance of yourself to Dale—or any of my guests."

Tear-choked, Devona shook her head, closed the door and escaped to her room across the hall.

The Prowler Returns.

For hours she lay huddled in the wide bed, staring into the darkness, her heart heavy with this new burden. She was unwelcome in her mother's house! That much was plain enough and, as she thought back over the reasons Vara had given, unwelcome because of something more than that she was in the way.

Dawn had slid fingers of light through the long, open windows before Devona dropped into restless, dream-tormented sleep. And when a fitful breeze loosened a window catch and flung it shut with a crash, she awoke with a start, a frightened scream on her lips.

"Only a window," she said aloud, and slipping out of bed, ran barefooted across the thick-piled carpet to refasten it.

As she stood, hidden by the heavy draperies, one slim arm reaching for the opened window catch, she saw someone cross the patio below. A stealthy some one who skirted the flagstoned paths, walked noiselessly on the green velvet lawn.

Wong, again! But now strangely different. His jaunty white panama replaced by a woollen cap. His flashy sport coat exchanged for a dingy blue shirt and a torn sweater. Under his arm he carried a bundle wrapped in newspaper!

Through the murky half-light of early morning, Devona saw him hesitate under the palms lining the drive, dart quick glances toward the house, toward the very window where she stood now, frozen immobile. Then, as if he'd made sure no one saw him, he moved across the lawn below her window to a side door. An instant later that door closed soundlessly.

Dale To the Rescue.

Heart hammering, Devona pulled a negligee over her nightgown, thrust her bare feet into soft-soled mules, opened her own door noiselessly and ran swiftly to the head of the servants' stairway. At the landing one flight below she saw Wong hesitate, stoop quickly to pull off heavy, mud-spattered shoes, then steal silently down the hall to the servants' quarters. A moment later a door closed softly.

Devona stood there a moment trying to think what to do. Tell Vara? But, after all, what was there to tell? A servant chooses to——

Behind her a door opened suddenly. Startled, Devona whirled, a scream rising to her lips. It was Dale—thrusting his arm into a dressing gown, his hair still awry, his eyes still sleep-filled.

"What's up?"

"Dale!" she gasped down a little laugh. "How you frightened me."

Dale came toward her with long strides. "But what are you doing trailing around the hall at this hour?"

"I just thought I heard something —a burglar and—it turned out to be Wong coming in. I—I guess I'm just—nervous.

"I'm sorry," she sobbed. "I'm just —upset."

"Look here." One finger under her chin, he tipped her face up toward his. "Smile. A big one."

Devona managed a sort of lopsided little rainbow one.

"That's better," he grinned. "And tomorrow we'll go for a long ride into the open spaces and clear up these jitters with a little desert sunshine. How about it?"

She nodded, still not trusting her voice.

Vara Watches.

"Good girl. Run along now," and with that he stooped, kissed her swiftly on the lips—a fleeting gesture than caught her heart, sent it racing again. But not before another door opened. Vara's this time.

Turning, Devona realized her mother must have seen that sweet little caress. Guiltily she drew free of Dale's encircling arm, faced her, aware of the angry accusation in Vara's eyes, aware too of the touch of Dale's mouth against hers. She felt her own cheeks scorch with embarrassment as she tried to draw the wispy negligee closer. It must look —unconventional, as Vara would put it. And it had been so innocent.

But, Devona realized miserably, her mother wouldn't be convinced of that, probably. Not after having once warned her already tonight to stop "being a nuisance" to her guests.

"Well, Vara broke the silence finally, her silken voice drawling the word carelessly. "Am I interrupting something?"

Devona opened her lips to explain but no sound came. In the same instant she heard Dale saying, quietly:

"Devona thought she heard some one breaking into the house and came to investigate. I heard, either that of Devona herself. But it proved to be only one of the servants. Devona here," he smiled down at her again, had a little attack of the jitters. But she's all right now, are you?"

A Bitter Thrust.

Devona nodded, grateful for the bulwark of his calmness but perfectly sure that Vara didn't believe a word of what he'd said.

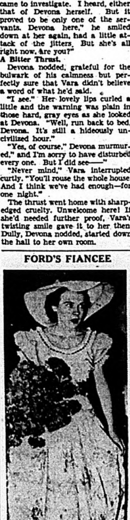
"I see." Her lovely lips curled a little and the warning was plain in those hard, gray eyes as she looked at Devona. "Well, run back to bed, Devona. It's still a hideously uncivilized hour."

"Yes, of course," Devona murmured," and I'm sorry to have disturbed every one. But I did see——"

"Never mind," Vara interrupted curtly. "You'll rouse the whole house. And I think we've had enough—for one night."

The thrust went home with sharp-edged cruelty. Unwelcome here! If she'd needed further proof, Vara's twisting smile gave it to her then. Dully, Devona nodded, started down the hall to her own room.

FORD'S FIANCEE



Here is a new picture of Edith McNaughton, fiancee of Benson Ford, 21, son of Edsel Ford and grandson of Henry Ford. She is pictured as she acted as bridesmaid at the wedding of a friend. Both she and Ford live in Grosse Pointe, Mich. He has been examined by the draft board but not yet classified.

Exhibit Of Art By Fred Down At Wooler W.I.

Wooler — The ladies of the Women's Institute held a very successful patriotic tea, in the parlors of the United Church recently, and apart from the regular and Red Cross activities an exhibition of "art" was displayed.

Mr. Fred Down, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Down, with the help of his mother, arranged properly, thirty works of art, which he had done in pencil, ink and oils. Fred always had a natural aptness for drawing and with the assistance of his mother, Mrs. Down, who is real clever in oil painting, which she received enlightenment on, when in Scotland before coming to Canada. Fred is to be congratulated on the talent his paintings represent.

Members of the W. I. served a tempting lunch with tea from a prettily arranged table for the small fee of ten cents to a grand crowd.

It was apparent the afternoon was thoroughly enjoyed and the proceeds, which were given to war work fund amounted to $17.00.

Mr. Carman Ruttan, after spending a few days at Pickering, returned home on Thursday.

Mr. Wm. J. Lawson sold his household effects on Wednesday afternoon. A good crowd was present with Mr. Oscar Morgan as auctioneer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Sharpe and family have rented Mr. Wm. J. Lawson's house and they moved in on Wednesday. Mr. Lawson reserved one room for his personal use.

Mr. Stillman Terrill is not feeling very well.

Miss Nina Meyers spent a few days in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Hodgett, superintendent of the Children's Shelter Board for Durham and Northumberland Counties, entertained Mrs. Stillman Terrill, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Gooding, Masters Bobby and Teddy King to a social afternoon in Port Hope on Wednesday. A nice program was given and refreshments were served, after which eight war guest children were each presented with a Canadian souvenir gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ellis and Mrs. Everett Ellis spent a day in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith spent last Saturday in Belleville and called on Mr. Ed. Herrington at General Hospital.

Mrs. A. Down and Mrs. J. W. Down have returned to Brighton.

Messrs. M. Herrington of Hilton and Lyal Herrington, R. C. A. F., St. Thomas, were recent callers of Mr. and Mrs. Stillman Terrill.

Rawdon

Rawdon — Relatives in Rawdon received word on Tuesday of the death of Mrs. John Judd of Berwyne, Illinois, U. S. A. Deceased was formerly Miss Isobel Grace of Rawdon and was born on June 1st, 1860. One sister, Mrs. Thomas Bedford is the last survivor of a large family of brothers and sisters.

A grass fire in the woods of Mr. Ernest Sarles, Rawdon, caused by a spark from an engine on Tuesday afternoon stirred up quite a commotion as men hurriedly gathered to beat out the flames.

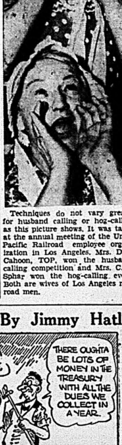
Mrs. Elton Pollock, Mr. Fred Hubble and his mother, Mrs. A. E. Hubble of Windsor, Mrs. Harry Cassan, Toronto; Mr. Walter Wescott, Latta; Mr. Russell Wescott, Shannonville, Mr. and Mrs. Burton Bateman and Bobby, Springbrook, Mr. G. F. Hubble, Mr. and Mrs. E. Norton and Mrs. Lee, Campbellford. Mr. and Mrs. G. Thompson, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Montgomery, Foxboro; Mr. Elleen, Mount Pleasant, were among the relatives who attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Manley Wescott at Springbrook United Church on Thursday May 1st.

Foxboro

Foxboro — The May meeting of the W. M. S. was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of the president, Mrs. P. V. Helliwell with a good attendance. The worship service was in charge of Mrs. E. M. Cook and Scripture lessons were read by Mesdames Marjorie Tummon, Mary Helliwell, Mrs. W. Wickett and Mrs. W. Hodgen, and Mrs. E. M. Cook read some very interesting thoughts from the Missionary Monthly.

Mrs. J. Daniels gave a "Meditation on Community Friendship" and Mrs. J. G. Sills gave a most instructive talk on "Work in Korea" and especially spoke of work done by Miss Marie Kim and Miss McKinnon, through whose efforts many were won to Christ. Mrs. Helliwell gave some practical happenings in China and the meeting closed with the benediction.

HUSBAND OR HOG-CALLING—



Techniques do not vary greatly for husband calling or hog-calling as this picture shows. It was taken at the annual meeting of the Union Pacific Railroad employee organization in Los Angeles. Mrs. D. J. Cahoon, TOP, won the husband-calling competition and Mrs. C. H. Sphar won the hog-calling event. Both are wives of Los Angeles railroad men.

Weddings

RITZIE—WHITEMAN

A pretty wedding was held Friday afternoon at the Salvation Army Hall, Port Hope, when Viva Arvilla Whiteman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Whiteman of Belleville, became the bride of Peter Ritzie, son of Mr. Ritzie and the late Mrs. Ritzie of Oshawa. Captain F. Brightwell conducted the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Venetian blue tuskin with sweetheart neckline and matching accessories. Her blue hat was interwoven with roses. She was attended by Mrs. Walter Longhurst, who wore a blue dress. Mr. Walter Longhurst was the best man.

A reception was held at Mr. and Mrs. Longhurst's residence, 158 King Street, Port Hope, following the ceremony. The bride and groom will reside at the same address after returning from their wedding trip to eastern points.

MALCOLM — MacKENZIE

Wick, Scotland, May 5 — Wick Free Presbyterian Church was the scene of a pretty wedding when Miss Doris Helen Cameron MacKenzie, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George MacKenzie, Wyvelsfield House, Thurso Road, Wick, Caithness, was married to Mr. Merwin E. Malcolm, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Malcolm, Campbellford. Rev. R. R. Sinclair conducted the ceremony, assisted by Rev. William Grant, Halkirk.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white velvet, cut on princess lines, with pearl trimming, and tulle veil with headdress of orange blossoms. She carried lilies and asparagus fern. She was attended by Miss Ada Hendry and Miss Elsie Sinclair, who wore green chiffon with veil headdresses to match. Their bouquets were anemones. Mr. Ian MacKenzie, brother of the bride, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Mackay.

The reception was held at Wyvelsfield, where the guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore a dress of grey and blue silk and brown fur coat. Later the couple left for the South, the bride wearing a blue musquash coat, the gift of her father, with green woollen dress, green feathered toque and nigger brown accessories.

MALCOLMSON—POMFRET

At Trinity United Church, Barrie a charming wedding took place on Saturday afternoon, April 26th, at four o'clock when Lucy Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pomfret, Belleville, became the bride of William Andrew Malcolmson, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. A. Malcolmson, Barrie. Archdeacon C. A. Moulton officiated.

Calla lilies graced the altar for the ceremony with Easter lilies and pink snapdragons also being used in the decoration of the church. Wedding music was played by Mr. C. H. Wright and Mr. Victor Knox was soloist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a crisp white lace gown on princess lines and bouffant skirt and slight train, long sleeves and sweetheart neckline. She wore a finger tip tulle veil and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. E. A. Twiss, Barrie, was matron of honor, in pink chiffon with accordian pleated skirt, matching hat and nosegay of mixed sweetpeas. Mr. E. A. Twiss, Barrie, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Neil McBride, and Mr. William Pomfret, brother of the bride.

The Third Barrie Troop of Boy Scouts, of which the groom is Scoutmaster, formed a guard of honor at the church.

A reception was held at the Queen's Hotel, Barrie, Mrs. Pomfret, mother of the bride, in maroon lace, with black straw hat and corsage of orchids and Mrs. Malcolmson, mother of the groom, in black, with black accessories and corsage of orchids, receiving. The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to eastern points, the bride travelling in a beige coat, cocoa fudge printed dress and accessories and beige and tan hat. She wore mink furs, the gift of the groom. Upon their return they will reside at 121 Mulcaster St., Barrie.

BRIDGE ST. W. M. S.

The regular May meeting of the W.M.S., of Bridge St. United church was held on Friday afternoon at 3 p.m. with Miss Lazelle Brown, the President, in the chair and Mrs. Houston in charge of the music. Miss Brown congratulated the society in having as a member, Mrs. Farnsworth, who has recently been appointed as Temperance Sec'y. in the branch. Because of the coming of the conference to the city in June, the next meeting of the W.M.S. will be postponed to June 13th.

A very much appreciated solo was sung by Mrs. Morrison, recently of Saskatoon.

A most interesting programme followed, led by Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson, assisted by Miss Brown, Mrs. Dixon, Mrs. Massie, Mrs. Everett, Mrs. Morden, Mrs. Cronk and Mrs. Finkle. The study centred around the life and work of Dr. Wrinch of Hazelton and Kisplox, B.C. Maps of British Columbia, distributed to each one present, were a great help.

Dr. Wrinch, back in 1894, as a student at Albert College, won a prize for general proficiency and later was supported in his work in B.C. by the Young People of Picton and Belleville districts. Always ready for a hard task, he gladly accepted the opportunity of going to Kisplox away up the Skeena River, where the Indians were in great physical and spiritual need. By 1904, with the assistance of his wife, a trained nurse, he had a little 8-bed hospital in operation in nearby Hazelton. Because of his wide experience in other lines, he also operated a first-class farm, which included a fine herd of jersey cattle and a canning outfit. Thus he gave scientific training to the Indians and better food to the community. From 1924-33 he was a valued member of the B.C. legislature and was always statesmanlike in his outlook.

Later a completely modern hospital was built serving a district of some 200 miles, all due to the loving service of Dr. Wrinch, a healer of souls as well as bodies.

The meeting closed with a brief devotional service, led by Mrs. Morrison on "Christ's Way of Service," concluding with the commission: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another."

Why Use A "Sissy" Laxative?

Chronic constipation has to do with the colon or large intestine. Unless the large bowel is thoroughly emptied from time to time you become a victim of chronic constipation and poisoning of the system which may result in colitis or other serious disease.

Mild or "sissy" laxatives merely cause a movement of the bowels without effecting a thorough cleaning out of the colon or large bowel. For this reason you are misled into thinking that you are doing all you can to overcome a constipated and poisoned condition of the system.

Those who know Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appreciate the value of a real medicine which not only effects a thorough cleansing of the colon or large bowel but also arouses the liver and kidneys to activity in filtering poisons from the blood.

Once you have proven the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you will never return to the use of "sissy" laxatives. Keep regular by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills once or twice a week.

Fashion Flashes

YOUR FAVORITE FRUIT is pretty sure to be available as hat trimming, judging from the fruit-trimmed hats seen about town. A nice little tricorne of fancy straw in black has its crown completely covered with white and red currants with green leaves. Hat is swathed in pale green veiling.

PICK FLOWERS as the favorite print design, with blossoms both huge and tiny appearing in the fashion world. A dress and jacket in gray taffeta is warp printed with flower clusters composed of violets and yellow primroses. Tiny composition violet buttons on the fitted jacket. Dress has pleated skirt.

IS YOUR PRONUNCIATION PERFECT?

Perhaps it's the radio, perhaps talking pictures, perhaps quiz programs, perhaps a general growth of good taste, that prods us to watch our speech more carefully.

Whatever is the reason, we are coming to realize that it might be better for our social well-being if we tune our ears to detect in our own speech certain pronunciations that will tattle-tale our slovenliness of speech.

To test your "pronunciation standing", say the following every-day, often-mispronounced words aloud and check how many you pronounce correctly.

Say:
Tuesday (Tewsday) not Toosday
Feb-ru-ary not Feb-u-ary
Height (hite) not highth
gov-ern-ment not gov-er-ment

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Mother Is Unduly Strict

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 18 whose mother won't permit her to go out with girls, much less boys. I'm the only child. My friends are allowed to bring their boy friends to their houses and they go out and have good times while I stay at home doing nothing.

Through one of my girl friends I met a young man whom I like very much indeed, and want to see him again. He's 23 and a gentleman in every respect. If I told my mother about him, she'd never let me go out again.

I don't drink or smoke. If I stay out after ten o'clock I am made to stay in the house for two weeks or even a month. My father wouldn't forbid my going out but he can't say anything about it. Won't you please tell me what to do, Miss Fairfax?

A Reader.

I've written so much in this column about the over-strict parent and the misfortunes this extreme watchfulness brings in its wake that I feel there's nothing more to be said on that subject. A girl of 18 who is not permitted to have her friends at the house is likely to run off and marry the first undesirable she meets.

This girl's father seems more open to reason, and I hope he will be able to persuade his wife to take a more reasonable attitude toward this couped-up daughter.

Her Sweetheart Married Someone Else

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm almost 18 years old and graduated from high school this June. I'm taking up a business course now, trying to fit myself for a job. But I am so discouraged.

The boy I love is 24 years old and has just married another girl. He asked me several times to marry him, but my parents didn't want me to make any promises until I finished school. He couldn't wait that long, but went ahead and married someone else.

He hasn't a regular job, and right now they are living with his mother and dad. I love him terribly, but my mother tries to console me by saying I'll be thankful before this year is over I didn't marry him. Do you think she's right?

Edie.

I believe a good many of us fall in love frantically before we're quite eighteen, and when we meet those sweethearts in later life are more than resigned that we didn't marry them.

A young man of 24, with no regular job seems a good deal of a risk to me. I'm willing to wager you something pretty that you will be thankful for that decision to graduate before you considered marriage.

Boy Friend Enlists: Shall She Go Out With Others?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went with a young man steady for over a year. Last November he joined the army. It was my idea that he go into the Service, so I'm wondering if I ought to wait until he returns, or go out with other boys. He asked me to marry him when he comes home and I promised to wait.

Don't you think almost anything could happen in this time, and that his feelings might change? We're both only 18, and I don't like the idea of sitting at home all this time waiting for him to come out of the Army. He's a dependable boy and I've never had cause to doubt his word. But I would like to go out with other boys just for company's sake.

Virginia.

As it was your suggestion that the young man join the Army, it seems to me that you are not without a certain obligation to him, especially since you promised to wait for him.

Why not write him and say, since you're both only 18, doesn't he think it pretty young to make definite promises, and that you are suggesting that he enjoy himself at those hostess parties where they all dance, and that you will go out with other boys occasionally. Eighteen is pretty young to be engaged.

COMING INTO THE PICTURE is the light fur cape. Pale beige fox is used for a hip-length cape, done on full, rippling lines and with a petal-shaped hem.

NOT ALL hats are meant to sit way back on the head. Very much tilted forward is a new hat in pale blue felt trimmed with a huge fancy of curled bronze coq feathers.

Every part of a G-E Refrigerator contributes to economy and convenience—the Stor-a-Dor, the Flexible Cold Storage Compartment, the Dessert Tray and a host of other convenience features plus the Sealed-in-Steel Mechanism. You can get nothing finer—no other refrigerator gives so much.

Flexible Cold Storage Compartment provides a combination of high humidity and near freezing—stores such bulky foods as fresh meats, fish, desserts, beverages or ice cubes.

CONVENIENT STOR-A-DOR adds extra space for storing small articles.

FROZEN FOOD COMPARTMENT 10° lower temperature in bottom chiller for storing packages of frozen fruits, vegetables, fish, frozen desserts, ice cream, fowl and game.

The General Electric Refrigerator has many exclusive features. First is the famous Sealed-in-Steel Mechanism—it is permanently vacuum sealed and requires no attention. Then there is the Vertical Condenser for cool, efficient operation. It never collects dirt. The Storage Bin provides handy space for a variety of articles such as boxes of crackers and cereals. The snowy-white finish provides a beautiful white exterior surface as easy to clean as a china plate. Budget terms.

FINGER TIP LATCH operates so easily that it enables you to open the refrigerator door, even when your hands are full.

THE SLIDING SHELVES permit easier access to the interior and are adjustable in height to allow taller articles to be stored.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

IMMUNIZATION SAVING MANY LIVES BUT IT STILL HAS OPPONENTS.

Perhaps its because only those active in opposition express themselves on the subject, but I get an astonishingly large number of protests from parents over the desire of educational authorities to advance the immunization of children against the various diseases of childhood. Sometimes they come out against vaccinating for smallpox; sometimes it is the toxoiding for diphtheria that draws down their wrath; sometimes they are opposed to all such operations.

Whenever I read such a letter, or talk to such a person, the thought always flashes through my mind: "I'll bet they are opposed to pasteurizing milk too." And I usually find that they are. They are consistent, anyway.

Vaccination for smallpox was discovered by Jenner 145 years ago, and every advance in its use has been accompanied by a reduction in the number of cases of the disease. Yet it still has its opponents. They are important because they are the same people trying to prevent children and adults from being given medical immunity against other diseases.

Immunity means the resistance of the human system to the infection of a contagious disease. Passive immunity is passed on to a baby from its mother. It is only a temporary immunity, however, and must be supplanted with an active resistance as soon as practical. Active immunity means the resistance resulting either from having the disease or contact with it, or from inoculations. Millions of lives have been saved by medical science through this knowledge.

I have found that persons who are opposed to vaccinations or inoculations usually have the memory of some unhappy accident years ago that has convinced them that the cure is worse than the disease.

One man I know was vaccinated as a child and his arm had become so infected that he nearly lost it by amputation. As a result of his experience, he refuses to have his children vaccinated.

A few years ago, vaccines weren't so pure as they are now, and these impurities sometimes gave the patient trouble. But generally the trouble was that the point of the vaccination became infected. The necessity of complete cleanliness wasn't appreciated fully then, and scarification was much greater than now.

When the operation was finished usually the sleeve of the undershirt was just pulled down over it. It isn't any wonder that some people had pretty serious reactions from such vaccinations. When I recall some of the vaccinations I saw old time doctors do, I marvel that there weren't more complications. I remember one who carried the instrument he used for the scarifying around in his pocket with his chewing tobacco!

Today vaccines and serums are highly purified. Instruments are sterile. Inoculations are not painful. And immunity IS produced. There is no real cause for opposition.

BABY'S CRY IS NOT ALWAYS TEMPER

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. When it's the "pain cry" give Baby's Own Tablets at once. Mrs. May Mundy, of Toronto, finds they work every time.

"I am the mother of nine children, three of them prize babies, and Baby's Own Tablets have been my only medicine in raising them to the healthy children they now are. As soon as my children became a little feverish I at once gave them Baby's Own Tablets and in a very short time the fever disappeared and the children were normal again."

Class Of 90 Is Confirmed At St. Michael's

The Sacrament of Confirmation was administered to a class of ninety by Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Archbishop of Kingston, in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel following 10.30 Mass yesterday morning. The beautiful edifice was enhanced with special decorations for the occasion, Union Jacks and papal flags being used in clusters on the pillars, while the altar was adorned with lovely Spring flowers. Members of the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus acted as a guard of honor to the Archbishop.

Music was by the children's choir and the sweet voices of the singers were heard in hymns appropriate to the occasion, with Sister Mary Joan directing.

Following Mass celebrated by Rev. C. E. Baker, greetings were extended to the Archbishop by the pastor, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., who said: "The beautiful month of May, the month of Mary, is most dear and many garlands of graces are woven for us by Our Lady's hands; today there is entwined a special blessing in the cherished visit of the Shepherd of our souls, our beloved Father in God."

The speaker referred to the signal honour conferred on the parish some months ago by Archbishop when he celebrated Pontifical High Mass and blessed the temple of God, the parish church. Today His Grace has blessed the living temples of God, the souls of the children of the parish, in the great Sacrament of Confirmation. In union with the devoted flock of St. Michael's he expressed to the Archbishop the warmest welcome and the most grateful thanks.

His Grace congratulated the clergy, parents and school on the preparation made for Confirmation and referred to the trinity of effort on behalf of the young people that such a combination made, church, home and school. The Archbishop stressed the home as being the very source of every best effort.

Spoke of Resolutions Made

He spoke of the three good resolutions the children had made, of being faithful to morning and evening prayers, receiving Holy Communion at least once a month and abstaining from all intoxicating beverages at least until they are twenty-five years of age. Confirmation, he said, was the great sacrament of faith, the great strengthening Sacrament, instituted by Christ Himself. There is need of faith today and of keeping faith alive with good works.

The Archbishop referred to the improvements in the parish made during the year and the work going on to supply the sisters with more accommodations for their work. It is evident that the people support the efforts of the pastors in this fine work of the parish.

Archbishop O'Brien spoke of the powerful weapon prayer is, and counselled that not only must natural arms be used in this war but particularly spiritual arms, namely daily prayer, to strengthen the arms of our soldiers and the decisions of our legislators. The Holy Father has issued a call to special prayer during the month of May, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, and asks the people to pray for peace based on justice and charity.

DANCE GARDENS AT ARENA OPEN

The opening of the Arena Dance Gardens was a gala event on Saturday evening when over seven hundred dancers, including out-of-town guests from Toronto and Montreal, enjoyed the first of the Arena summer series of dances. The beautiful new decorations added to the attractiveness of the affair and received the commendation of all who attended. Mr. S. R. Burrows entertained a party at dinner and dancing for the occasion. Music was provided by Gordon Brown and his Arena Gardens Dance Orchestra, and an excellent program greatly pleased the patrons.

THE WAR TODAY

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Iraq's coup d'etat administration headed by an apparent axis puppet, Rashid Ali Al Gailani, is reported to have cut the Mosul-Haifa oil pipe line which fed the British Mediterranean fleet, but London authorities declare the move was anticipated and that sufficient stores were established to supply present needs.

Size of the opposing forces in Iraq was not definitely known outside official quarters, but it was estimated when the action started that about 5,000 British troops of various branches of the service were available, against an Iraq army of about 30,000 indifferently armed ground forces and a small air force which suffered considerable losses in the first day's operations.

Berlin authorities so far have been unusually quiet on the subject of aid to the Iraquis, although German sources in Turkey were reported yesterday to have claimed Germany was taking reinforcements to its new allies by air, an operation which involves considerable flying.

Germany as a matter of fact is in a less favorable position to send troops to Iraq than Britain. Britain has command of the sea and the only Iraq port of consequence is Basra in the Persian Gulf. In addition Britain commands air bases in Palestine and Cyprus, far closer than the Bulgarian or Greek bases from which Germany would have to operate.

Germany continued last night to press its air attack on Britain, action which can be expected with increasing violence with the arrival of good British summer weather, but losses to night fighters were unusually heavy, indicating the possibility of a newly-developed British aircraft or a new technique of fighting aerial invaders.

Britain also continued its assault on German-held continental bases, making further use of the new "super-explosive" which has startled even the pilots and bomb-aimers who flew it over German objectives.

Stone Tools 7,000 Years Old Found In Indian Cave In Arizona

Cave Likely Inhabited From 5000 B.C. to 400 A.D.—Nine Mummies Found in Rubble

Tucson, Ariz., May 5 (AP).—Evidence indicating the southwestern United States was inhabited by man 5,000 years before the birth of Christ has been discovered in a cave on the Papago Indian Reservation, Dr. Emil Haury, university of Arizona anthropologist, reported today.

Dr. Haury said nearly 7,000 years of human history in the southwest was disclosed in chronological strata in twelve feet of debris on the floor of the cave.

Stone age implements of the 5,000 B.C. era were found in the bottom layer of rubble, he related, expressing the opinion the cave was occupied continuously from that time to 400 A.D., and since then only occasionally.

The scientist found what he believed to be the first evidence of the physical appearance of the Hohokam peoples who lived in the middle centuries.

Nine "reasonably good mummies" were found in the cave. Dr. Haury described them as medium to small in stature, of slight build, small bones, Mongoloid appearance, round heads and low, sloping foreheads.

One mummy, he said, had a wooden plug, an inch and a half long, through the nose septum.

April 1941 Hottest In 99 Years, Scientists Think Summer Here to Stay

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—April just past was the warmest April in 99 years of Ontario history. The mean temperature for the month was 50.5 degrees and the only April that has approached that average degree of warmth since 1842 when records first were kept in 1878. The mean temperature that April was 49..

Reason for the warmth of the month—with a corresponding advapce in the farming season—is a combination of circumstances which meteorologists can reel off fast enough to make your head swim. To the layman, however, it boils down to something like this: High pressure areas from the Arctic have been moving eastward rather than southward and the warm influence of the sunny south has been able to penetrate these parts to an unaccustomed degree.

The warm season was established early and by "established" the experts explain there was a combination of lots of sunshine and little moisture in the atmosphere and no high winds and no storms. It works out something like this: With little moisture in the air the sun can shine without any cloud interference and there's no rain. With no rain there is not so much surface moisture to be absorbed and so there are no clouds and the sun keeps on shining. It sounds simple. It appears that once a season starts sunny and dry, it's likely to keep on that way unless a lot of humid air comes in to change things.

Now that things have been going nicely for a month or more, they are likely to keep on that way and the meteorologists believe summer is here to stay.

If you are interested in a few statistics, here are some. There were 232.4 hours of sunshine during the month and the normal is only 183.2. The record April, however, was in 1925 when there were 246.6 hours of sunshine. There were only 1.3 inches of rain, the normal being 2.2 inches. April also produced another record: The last day of the month the temperature was 82 degrees—the highest April 30 on record, but not the highest April temperature. On April 22, 1842, the temperature reached 90 degrees.

TRENTON BOY, 15, SUSTAINS INJURY

Left Ankle Injured When Bicycle and Automobile Are in Collision

Trenton, May 5.—Neil Haffey, age 13, of Victoria Street, narrowly escaped serious injury on Saturday when an automobile collided with the bicycle he was riding. The boy suffered injuries to his left ankle.

The car driven by Elvin Coe of Vimy Barracks, Kingston, was making a left hand turn from Dundas Street to Front Street, when the accident occurred. The boy was proceeding west on Dundas Street and was crossing Front Street when the vehicles came into collision.

Constable F. Lozo investigated the accident. A charge of careless driving was laid against the driver of the car.

The Trenton Softball League will be opened with a bang on Friday, May 9 when a huge parade will be held. President Jesse Baker is endeavouring to have the Trenton Air Force band in the parade.

The Lions' Club boys' band and a number of citizens will take part in the parade to be held prior to the opening game. Mayor Harry Cory will pitch the first ball of the game between the Continental Can and the R.C.A.F. Intermediate "B" champions of last year.

Proceeds of the game will be given to War Service Work.

Following a short illness Edward Finlay Sills of the English Settlement died at his home this morning. He was in his 64th year.

Born in this district, the late Mr. Sills has resided near Trenton all his life. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. J. Dopking, both of the English Settlement. The funeral will be held on Wednesday afternoon from the home.

SECOND TRIAL FOR NEWELL OPENS

Aircraftman Faces Charge of Murdering His Wife Last October

Toronto, May 5 — (CP) — The second trial of Aircraftman Hugh Alexander (Bill) Newell on a charge of murder in connection with the death of his wife, whose strangled body was found in a secluded part of Toronto Island last October, opened before Mr. Justice W. D. Roach today.

The jury at the first trial disagreed after deliberating almost twelve hours and listening to evidence for three weeks. Newell, 27-year-old veteran of the Russo-Finnish war, is charged with strangling his wife, Aune, with one of her silk stockings.

Heavy Casualties Inflicted On Axis Forces

Cairo, May 5 (AP)—Imperial forces counter-attacking the Germans and Italians at Tobruk were reported by the Middle East command today to have broken up Axis preparations for renewal of assaults on the encircled Libyan port.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Axis forces, which are still holding a small sector in Tobruk's outer defences, the war bulletin said.

In East Africa, the high command announced a further advance against Amba Alaji, some 280 miles northeast of Addis Ababa.

Fresh fighting has broken out in the Salum sector of the North African front, along the Egyptian-Libyan border, with losses inflicted on Axis troops and vehicles, it was announced.

Canadian Press Writer Missing On Sea Vogage

Ottawa, May 5 (CP—Sam Robertson, Canadian Press London superintendent and war correspondent, is listed as missing as a result of enemy action while on a sea voyage, according to official word received here from London. Internationally known as a correspondent and news service executive, Mr. Robertson had visited Canada on a month's furlough in March and April.

"We are hoping that Mr. Robertson has been rescued by some ship that has not yet reached land," a Government official said. "But so far we have received no word except the announcement that he was listed as missing."

Mr. Robertson, who was returning to his post in London, had spent fifteen months in England directing the flow of news of the Battle of Britain to Canadian newspapers and acting as war correspondent with the Canadian forces before he returned to Canada for his vacation.

He went to Britain in December, 1939, with the Second Contingent of Canadian troops on his appointment as acting London superintendent and war correspondent. He was named to succeed Edwin S. Johnson as London superintendent last Nov. 1.

Pays Tribute to Fine Worker

"J. A. McNeil, general manager of The Canadian Press, last night sent the following message to the staff:

Sixteen months ago Sam Robertson took up the task of directing to Canadian newspapers and thus to the Canadian people news of embattled Britain and of Canada's fighting forces. As a reporter his post has been in the front line of the war for freedom of the world's democracies. He has occupied that post with the unfailing cheerfulness that endeared him to all of us in peacetime, and with a devotion to duty that is beyond praise; a gallant devotion that found expression not in grimness but in a laugh and a light word.

Only recently some us were privileged to talk with him when he returned to Canada for a brief interlude with his wife and friends, away from the strain of the front. The essential optimism of his nature was untouched. He was the same Sam as the lad who used to run the night crew in Toronto, pencil parliamentary copy at Ottawa, and tap out running hockey stories from Madison Square Garden.

Tonight he is reported missing at sea. For us there is simply this: Hope that by some fortunate chance of which we cannot know he has been picked up and is safe; whatever the future, pride as individuals and as an organization in association with a fine character and a gallant man.

Fight For Freedom Will Be Won Because Canada, Britain And All Associated With Her Work Together

Defence Minister Ralston Addresses Rotary Convention at Toronto

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—The fight for freedom will be won "because" Canada, as well as Britain and all those associated with her, will stop at nothing which can effectively be done to ensure the oerthrow of Nazism," Defence Minister Ralston said today.

In an address to Rotarians at which Canadians played host to American brothers in Rotary, the Defence Minister reviewed Canada's marshalling of her power for war and called for the most united strength and the most unfaltering energy which Canadians can muster.

"I think of our most dangerous enemy on this side of the Atlantic is the idea that we have plenty of time," he said,

But he believed the events of the last few weeks—United States steps for increased aid to Britain and the Allies—"Have given that enemy a mighty wallop."

"What we have to steel ourselves for is to strive and work just as resolutely and just as hard in systematically planning, preparing and fitting ourselves as if the enemy were at our gates," said Col. Ralston.

"That is hard to do; it is hard to get ourselves into that frame of mind, but that is the grim, unflagging task of 1941."

Nothing Unreal About War

There could be no doubt, were a person able to get a bird's-eye view of the Dominion, that Canada was at war though in the pleasant environment of a Rotary luncheon the American visitors would not see much war activity.

A war without casualty lists seemed unreal. Canada's army, navy and air force casualties to-date totalled only about 700 whereas in the last war after a year and a half of war more than 15-000 Canadians had given their lives.

"The fact we have suffered so lightly so far is no guarantee for the future," he said. "The time will come when all we can do in the way of preparation will be put to the test.

"Let me tell you all, there is nothing unreal about this war—it's a fight to the finish and Canadians need to have that said to them just as much as anybody else."

Col. Ralston reviewed the growth of Canada's armed forces since war started—the expansion of the army and the navy and the bringing into operation of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. "The Canadian navy, which had only 15 ships when war broke out, now has over 180 and the strength of the 'silent service' has increased from 2,000 to 17,000 and will be 25,000 before the present fiscal year is out.

175,000 Under Training

"Nearly 60 army mobilization and training camps are operating across the Dominion. In these camps about 175,000 soldiers of our active army are fitting themselves for service anywhere, and there are also about 10,000 young men called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act for defence of Canada.

"The Royal Canadian Air Force has grown to a strength of about 50,000.

"You may not know it but many graduates of the Commonwealth Air Training Schools are already in England to take their part in the battles of the air.

"The record is that twice as many pilots and observers have been graduated as were planned for up to this time and before the year is out we expect that these schools will have produced six times the number which the original schedule called for."

Canada had a two-fold task in the war—to supply men and to supply materials. Canada, in common with the United States was an arsenal of democracy.

"But," said the minister, "whether you are Americans or Canadians please don't think that I have any intention of overlooking what the United States had done and is doing in this struggle which affects the very foundations of the way of living we have in common."

He spoke of the Ogdensburg agreement, the formation of the joint United States-Canadian Defence Board, the Hyde Park declaration, the turning over to Britain of 50 American destroyers and the Lend-Lease Bill.

"It would only be painting the lily for me to attempt to dwell on the importance of all those history-making measures," he said. "They are striking enough in themselves, but the heartening, cheering significance of them is beyond words. They leave no doubt where the great heart of the American people is in this struggle."

Hanson Urges Government To Exercise Utmost Economy

Conservative Leader Says People Willing to Accept Sacrifices but Want Expenses Cut to Bone

CRITICIZES C. N. DEFICIT

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—Conservative House Leader Hanson today called on the Government to give a lead to the Canadian people by cutting its peace-time expenditures to the bone and exercising the utmost possible economy.

Leading off in the Budget Debate Mr. Hanson expressed confidence the people would accept the sacrifices involved in the new taxes but warned the government there was widespread dissatisfaction with the way money was being spent.

"I am firm in my belief that the Canadian people will willingly undergo the trials and sacrifices that so surely lie ahead of us," he said.

"I am equally confident that their demand is for that high and inspiring leadership which a Churchill is giving in Britain and a Roosevelt in the United States and which, setting the example, will fearlessly press on, light the way and guide our people along the path to ultimate victory."

Earlier in his speech he sounded his warning in these words:

"Peace-time expenditure in every sphere of governmental activity must be cut and cut to the bare bone, and I call upon the Minister (Finance Minister Ilsley) and this government to lead the way and set the example.

"If this is done, the new imposts will be paid, in most cases cheerfully. But, without this retrenchment, there will be resentment, if not resistance."

C. N. R. Deficit $16,000,000

Mr. Hanson said he was surprised that the Canadian National Railways deficit last year ran to $16,000,000 and demanded an explanation.

He also criticized continuance of work on the C.N.R. terminal and a reported plan to relieve traffic congestion between Moncton and Halifax which would cost $1,200,000.

He said he had been informed there was no control over costs in the operations of Federal Aircraft, Limited, the government corporation building Avro-Anson aircraft.

The Conservative leader approved of the proposal to ask the provinces to vacate the income tax field but critical of the Dominion's invasion of the succession duty field.

He hoped all provinces would accept the offer made to them but regretted the matter was not dealt with by agreement in advance at the recent Dominion-Provincial conference. He asked that arrangements be made to protect municipalities now drawing revenue from income tax.

Protests Federal Succession Duty Impost

A federal succession duty meant two imposts on the same property.

"I do protest against this injustice," he said. "I hope between now and next year negotiations will be opened with the provinces with a view to reaching some conclusions so that double taxation may be avoided."

Surprised at No Increase on Spirits

Surprise was expressed by Mr. Hanson that no increase was made in the levy on spirits. He had no objection to most of the luxury taxes but feared the 20 per cent motion picture tax would drive small town theatres out of operation.

He thought the five per cent National Defence Tax, coupled with Unemployment Insurance levies and higher living costs, would bear too heavily on workingmen.

A complete revision of the Excess Profits and Corporation Taxes was urged by the Conservative House Leader who described the former as "hasty legislation." He suggested Canada might follow the British practice, drop the corporation tax entirely, allow business a reasonable standard profits and take the whole of the excess.

He regretted application of the Sales Tax to building materials going into small homes as new houses were needed in many districts.

He questioned, however, if the government had gone far enough to curb and discourage civilian spending in other directions.

"Deferment of expenditures and restriction on consumption could and should have been applied on a wide scale to luxury articles," he said. "I believe the people were anticipating and were prepared for a severe curtailment of their rights to purchase non-essential commodities of many kinds."

DR. ANTONIO PLANET VISITS NEW YORK

New York, May 5 —(AP)— Dr. Antonio Planet, former Chilean Minister of Foreign Affairs, said on arrival by steamship today that he believed the United States, in the event it decides to enter the war, should consult with its South American neighbors and not act separately.

Complete neutrality is the official position of the Chilean government and the prevailing sentiment of its population, he added.

Feller Called On To Extend Indians' Winning Streak As Cleveland Shows Way In Loop

Indians Have 3½ Game Lead Due to Ten Straight Wins

NEWSOM BEATS YANKS

By BILL BONI

Associated Press Sport Writer

Bobby Feller is due to go back to work for Cleveland Indians today, which is enough to make the American League leaders a good bet to run their winning streak to 11 straight against Washington Senators.

Since the surprising kayo Chicago White Sox hung on his chin on opening day, Master Robert has won four starts. Twice he has pitched six-hit, twice eight-hit ball —an average of seven hits a game.

In running their victories through 10 straight—the latest a 12-4 rout of the Senators yesterday — the Tribe's grade-a hurling staff has given up only a fraction over seven safeties a game.

The batting support supplied Messrs. Feller, Milnar, Smith, Harder and Co. also has been noteworthy. Hitting held the upper hand yesterday, in fact, for a while Smith and Clint Brown, his relief man, were being touched up for 11 hits, the Indian sluggers were coming through with 15 that included a six-run outburst in the eighth against Bill Zuber, a former Clevelander. This hoisted the team hitting performance to better than 10 safeties a game during the streak.

Set Day's High

Philadelphia Athletics set the day's high in their 17-11 victory over the White Sox. The A's, aided by four Sox errors in the first inning, got five runs for a starter; had a 12-4 lead at the end of the fourth and picked up another five in the seventh, as they came out of a seven-game losing streak.

New York Yankees, still in second place, fell 3 1-2 games off Cleveland's pace when big Buck Newsom set them on their collective ear 10-1 with a five-hit pitching job. Bobo, who didn't walk a man and fanned four in his first full game, also batted in a couple of runs and got home run help from Rudy York (his sixth) and Billy Sullivan.

Grove Wins First of Year

In St. Louis Lefty Grove hung up his first victory of the year as Boston Red Sox, mainly on one big inning, thumped the Browns, 11-4.

A rookie pitcher, Tom Hughes, was the day's standout performer in the National League. The 21-year-old Philly hurler set down Cincinnati Reds 3-0 with three singles, only two Reds getting as far as third.

The front-running St. Louis Cardinals ran their string to nine in a row. Held to six hits by the Braves, the Cards bunched five of them in the eighth against Manuel Salvo for all their runs and a 3-1 victory.

An error that paved the way for four unearned runs, three of them on Elbie Fletcher's homer, helped Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-4 triumph over Brooklyn Dodgers and cost Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin his first defeat.

Break Losing Streak

Another sort of streak was broken when New York Giants, who hadn't won in seven starts, belted six Chicago Cub pitchers for 13 hits and a 9-4 score.

In Saturday's American League games, St. Louis Browns turned back Washington 9-7, the Indians jumped on Mike Ryba for four runs in the first inning and a 4-2 triumph over Boston, Detroit squeezed through 5-3 against the Athletics and the Yankees turned back Chicago 6-5. Over in the senior circuit, St. Louis shutout the Phillies 6-0; the Braves downed the champion Reds 3-2, Brooklyn took the measure of the Cubs 4-3 and Pittsburgh beat the Giants 3-2.

CASTOFFS WIN

James Otto (Tex) Carleton who'll be 35 years old next August and who already knows the familiar baseball transition from "hero" to "bum", appears to be getting ready for another major league comeback.

A veteran of seven major league seasons with the Cardinals and Cubs, Carleton was shipped off to Milwaukee in the American Association two years ago and pitched so effectively that he was picked up by the Brooklyn Dodgers. He achieved baseball's hightest stardom just about a year ago—April 30, 1940 —by pitching a no-hit, no-run game against the mighty Cincinnati Reds. And he finished the season with an earned run average of 3.81.

But this spring the Dodgers had no place for a veteran on their roster and shipped him off to their Montreal farm. He made his first start for the Royals yesterday and pitched them to an all-important victory that meant second place in the International League standings.

Taking the hill after the Little Giants had won the first half of a doubleheader, 4-3, to push ahead of the Royals, Carleton turned in a four-hit performance to carry Montreal to an 8-2 triumph. He didn't allow a run until the seventh and final inning.

Another major league castoff, Joe Krakauskas, Hamilton, Ont., athlete, turned in virtually a duplicate of Carleton's performance to give Syracuse an even break in their doubleheader with Rochester Red Wings. Krakauskas, whose speed and wildness were the hope and despair of Washington Senators for several seasons before he was traded to Cleveland, did a two-hit pitching job in his first appearance for the Chiefs. He struck out eight batsmen and walked seven in the seven innings as the Chiefs pounded out a 5-2 decision. It was the first Syracuse victory in Rochester's Red Wing stadium since 1939. The Red Wings had taken the opener, 8-5, as George Kurowski socked a homer with bases full.

The league-leading Newark Bears were the only club able to win a doubleheader returning home to beat Toronto 9-6 and 9-8 in a one-day stand. Buffalo Bisons playing a single game, took a 10-inning, 4-3 decision over Baltimore Orioles.

Baltimore's Al Sieling hit a homer with two on base in the ninth to tie the score against Buffalo, but Bisons won out in the next inning on Dutch Meyer's double, an error, a walk and Dixie Parsons' fly.

On Saturday's games, Montreal exploded seven runs in the sixth inning to score a 9-3 victory over Newark. Young Chet Kehn turned in a six-hit pitching job while the Royals got a dozen blows. Ten men came to bat in the big sixth. In other games, Jersey trimmed Rochester 7-6, the Chiefs nipped Buffalo 5-4 and Toronto spit a doubleheader with Baltimore, 9-4 and 4-0.

"Buster" Maynard

James Walter (Buster) Maynard, rookie outfielder with the New York Giants, comes up from Richmond with a .337 batting average, and the ability to smack 'em far and wide.

A native of Henderson, N.C., Maynard is now playing his fourth year of pro baseball having broken into the game with South Boston in 1937.

Maynard plays centre field and made his debut at the Polo Grounds last September.

He is 26 years old, five feet 11 inches tall and weighs 170 pounds.

Off the baseball field, Maynard is learning the automobile upholstery business. He received his nickname from his dad.

BOLD IRISHMAN AND WHIRLAWAY IN PREAKNESS

Whirlaway Breaks Track Record in Defeating Ten Others in Kentucky Derby

OUTSIDER SECOND

By ORLO ROBERTSON

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Louisville, Ky., May 5 — (AP)— Whether Warren Wright's Whirlaway, the vagabond king of the turf, returns to rags and roguelike ways or takes a strangle hold on the three-year-old crown will be determined next Saturday when the Kentucky Derby winner hooks up with Bold Irishman in the $75,000 Preakness at Pimlico.

It's going to be a mighty long time before Whirly's record-smashing performance in the Derby is forgotten by the 100,000 who saw the little chestnut burn up Churchill Downs home stretch Saturday with 2:01 2-5 clocking. But in Bold Irishman from Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Wheatley Stable, he'll meet a horse that also can turn on the heat in that final drive.

The Irishman, kept out of the Derby by a slight injury, is the only high-ranking two-year-old of 1940 that figures to bar Whirlaway's path to the mythical "triple crown," which includes the Belmont stakes.

Whether Whirlaway will repeat his Derby performance in the Preakness, not even Trainer Ben Jones is sure.

The Derby victory, worth $61,275 and the richest in the stake's history, boosted the earnings for two seasons to $145,326 for the son of the English Derby winner, Blenheim.

All But Slept With Horse

Jones, who won in 1938 with Lawrin, all but slept with his charge for six months. Morning after morning he had Whirly learning how to take the turns by having a lead pony force him into the rail. Pictures even indicated Jones dressed up the Derby winner with only one blinker — over his right eye—thus aiding him in keeping to the rail.

Then the night before the big race, Jones sketched a map of the track for Jockey Eddie Arcaro, showing him just where he wanted Whirlaway to be at each point. Arcaro, who never had ridden the colt until Friday morning, obeyed instructions well.

As much as 17 lengths back at the half-mile post, Arcaro moved Whirlaway into a contending position rounding the last turn. Then came the thunderbolt. He shot between the pace-setting Porter's Cap and Blue Pair and pulled away to win eight lengths, running the last quarter in 24 seconds.

He left Hugh Nesbitt's Staretor and Lou Tufano's Market Wise to fight it out for second with the decision going to Staretor and the remainder of the field strung out far down the stretch.

MR. MASSEY PRESENTS TROPHY

Mr. Vincent Massey, the Canadian High Commissioner, presented the Massey trophy to the Captain of the winning team in the Canadian divisional soccer final between a Central Ontario and a Quebec regiment. The latter were the winners.

URGES REVISION OF ACT

New York, May 5 (AP)— Mayor La Guardia, writing in the New York Times, urged yesterday that the ages for selective service be changed to 18 to 22 inclusive and expressed criticism of administration of the Act.

The revision of age limits, he said, "would prevent dislocation of families and would cause little if any disturbance to industry, agriculture, business and education."

(American citizens aged 21 to 35 now are liable for compulsory military service.)

All was well in the Blue Grass State of Kentucky after the playing of the traditional tune "My Old Kentucky Home" at Churchill Downs on Saturday. Whirlaway, a Kentucky-bred horse ridden by a son of Kentucky Jockey Eddie Arcaro, won the 67th running of the Kentucky Derby and won it the hard way. Whirlaway broke from the barrier in eighth position, was bumped before he settled away in the back stretch to come thundering down and win by something like ten lengths, with Staretor, a rank outsider finishing second. Porter's Cap and Our Boots, two of the favourites along with Whirlaway, were sad disappointments in this great turf classic. If Whirlaway can maintain his speed in the Preakness and Belmont Stakes, there is little doubt but the big horse will complete the "hat trick" of American turfdom.

In winning the 67th running of the Kentucky Derby, Whirlaway set a new track record for the event, covering the distance in 2.01 2-5 minutes, thereby shattering the previous record set by Twenty Grand in 1931 of 2.01 4-5. Thirty-six special trains, from as far away as Los Angeles, New York, New Orleans, etc., brought the huge Derby Day crowds into old Louisville. Eight brass bands entertained the race-goers inside the Churchill Downs enclosure. It is estimated that over 90,000 hot dogs were sold and over a quarter of a million bottles of beer and soft drinks were consumed on the grounds. In winning Whirlaway earned $61,275.00 for his owner Warren Wright. Another Kentucky Derby is now history and the next turf event of importance to Canadians will be the 82nd running of the historic King's Plate at picturesque Woodbine Park exactly two weeks after the Blue Grass classic.

It is with regret we report Gnr. Freddie McGuire of the 3-47th Battery R.C.A., sustained a fractured leg while playing softball with his unit club at Petawawa last week. Freddie was fielding a ground ball when the accident occurred and the only remark he made was to Pitcher Lum Carson when, as he lay helpless on the ground. Freddie remarked: "Gosh, Lum, I'm sorry I dropped the Ball." Incidentally Harold Reid and several other formerly Belleville softball players are with the 3-47th Battery softball team and they hope to have the opportunity of playing a couple of exhibition games versus their old Corby AC teammates later in the summer. P.S.: Freddie is in military hospital recuperating nicely.

Do you remember when Paul Dean, younger brother of the Dizzy-Daffy pitching team of the St. Louis Cardinals, had a piece of cartilage removed from his pitching arm four years ago today? The operation restored some of Daffy's hurling prowess and he pitched a few games later in the 1937 season. He is now with New York Giants.

Recently we referred to the advisability of supervised sport as a medium in the possible reduction in juvenile delinquency. To more forcibly bring the point out a case was heard in the Arnprior juvenile court, held before Magistrate A. Lieff, when eight delinquent lads appeared in the court, Magistrate Lieff ordered the boys to play baseball after reprimanding them on charges of theft.

"I want you boys to play more," the magistrate said in giving them suspended sentence. "Have games if you want to but have them on the playing field. I am going to let you off on suspended sentence this time, but I am imposing another condition—a promise that you will play. "I want you to organize a ball league. Every one of you is to participate." The boys must report progress from time to time to the magistrate and police chief.

The following golf chatter paragraph taken from Peterboro' Fred Craig's column should prove of interest to local dubbers and duffers. It reads:

"In landing Willie Spittal as its pro for this season the Peterborough Golf Club has made a hole in one. Spittal is one of Canada's known professional golfers and he should be a source of strength to the Peterborough Club this season. In open competition he has always been up among the leaders and as a matter of fact he holds the record for the qualifying rounds in the annual competition of the Ontario Golf Association with a score of 138 over the Rosedale course. He has been runner-up and semi-finalist twice in the Ontario tournament and a further proof of his ability is the fact that he was on the Ontario professional team that met the British Ryder Cup team on its last visit to Canada. Spittal has been professional at the Oakdale Golf Club, Toronto, for some time and is widely known not only as a player but as an instructor. He should be a big help here."

pitching fettle and the Tigers blasting some Yankee rookie pitching for ten hits, things are more rosy in Tigertown today after Detroit beat the Yankees 10 to 1 Sunday. The Yanks have two more games in Detroit before moving to Cleveland for the most important stand thus far in the American League. The Indians are hot, having rung up their tenth consecutive victory yesterday and this Yank-Indian series will be watched with interest. Over in the National League the torrid St. Louis Cardinals chalked up their ninth straight win over the weekend. Luke "Hot Potato" Hamlin, who had won three straight for the Dodgers, was blasted from the Brooklyn hilltop by the pesky Pirates and the Dodgers' drive momentarily halted yesterday, when the Giants shook off the losing streak and returned to form with a 9-4 win over the Cubs. Mel Ott and Young had three hits the latter hitting for the circuit.

Little Benny's Note Book

The Mystick 3 were having a secret meeting around the letter box before school this morning, being me and Puds Simkins and Leroy Shooster, and Reddy Merfy came up and spoilt it by standing there claiming he didn't give a darn if it was a secret meeting or not, and I said, Aw, what's a use of arguing? and Puds said, Sure, it's time to get started for school anyways, and Leroy said, Sure, let's get started.

Wich we did, Reddy Merfy just keeping on standing there with his arms crossed leening against the letter box as if he thought he owned it, me saying, Darn that guy, who's he think he is? and Leroy Shooster saying, Well whoever he thinks he is, he's wrong, I can tell him that much.

Sure, sometime I got a good mind to give him a good stiff poke where it'll hurt the most when he least expects it, I said, and Leroy said, Me too, if he thinks everybody's afraid of him it's time he started to learn different. Good night I'd of poked him one right then in another minute, he said.

Wich just then Puds whispered, Hay, cheese it, he's right behind us listening. O boy are you 2 going to get good pushes in the face and maybe worse.

Sounding like bad news, and I quick said, O well Reddy's not such a bad guy, it's not his fault if he's the best fighter around here.

Sure, that's what I say, can he help it if he can lick any other guy one handed easy? Leroy said, and Puds said, April fool he's nowherees near us, he's not in site.

Wich he wasn't, and I said, Wel: who thought he was? and Leroy said, That's a good one on Puds, we fooled Puds all right.

And we both started to yell, Reddy Merfy's a big stiff, Reddy Merfy couldn't lick a flea, and different things.

Yelling it pretty loud but not all our might, and looking in back of us every once in a while for good luck.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

AT THE McCARTHY

Anna Neagle in "Irene"

Gay and charming and thoroughly worth-while is "Irene" R.K.O. Radio's film version of the famous musical comedy, now showing at the McCarthy theatre with Anna Neagle and Ray Milland co-starred at the head of a distinguished cast.

Miss Neagle, the noted British dramatic star, proves herself an even more capable comedienne in this entertaining filmusical, and she and Milland both cover themselves with honor in their clever portrayals of the fiery little heroine and her wealthy admirer.

The story deals with the swift rise to fame of an Irish salesgirl in New York City. Her resourcefulness as a dress model for a fashionable shop leads to the shop's sponsoring her social appearance in the guise of a debutante, but in reality to serve as a walking advertisement for gowns.

How the scheme gets her into plenty of hot water as well as into a double romantic complication with two wealthy young men, makes for the delightful ending of the picture.

Alan Marshal, as the "other young man" in the case, does an excellent job of acting, as do such favorites as Roland Young, May Robson, Billie Burke, Arthur Treacher, Marsha Hunt and Doris Nolan. With the tuneful "Alice Blue Gown", "Castle of Dreams," "Irene" and other songs cleverly woven into the story and with the noteworthy production values and deft direction of Herbert Wilcox the pictures take ranks among the very finest offerings of the season. An unusual use of Technicolor in the "Alice Blue Gown" sequence, and the work of a Negro chorus in the revue scenes, are also among the film's entertaining features.

Latest Fox News

The McCarthy-Fox latest news events, also Charles Bickford and Owen Davis in a second excellent feature presentation "Thou Shalt Not Kill" is now playing in addition to Anna Neagle in "Irene." One of the major "glasbake" ovenware pieces is presented to the ladies, for only a five cent service charge on the evening admission ticket, and therefore we urge early evening attendance.

AT THE BELLE

"That Hamilton Woman"

Hats off to Alexander Korda and to brilliant co-stars Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier for bringing to the screen one of the most outstanding pictures of the last ten years—"That Hamilton Woman!" which is now on the Belle Theatre screen. Produced on a lavish scale and released through United Artists, "That Hamilton Woman!" brings to moviegoers everywhere one of the great romances of all time, the love story of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson

As portrayed by Vivien Leigh and Olivier, these two exciting characters come to life on celluloid and reach a new high in dramatic interpretation. Miss Leigh is of course superb as that exciting beauty of her day, Emma Hamilton, who was painted forty times by the great portrait painter, Romney. Olivier is seen in the role of the hero of Trafalgar, the man who almost staked his reputation that he might lay his love at the feet of the lovely and fascinating Emma.

First-Rate Acting

Equally outstanding in a superb supporting cast are Alan Mowbray as Lord Hamilton, Gladys Cooper as Lady Nelson, Henry Wilcoxon as Captain Hardy and Heather Angel as a street girl. Korda, who directed as well as produced this romantic dama, has made "That Hamilton Woman!" one of the most thrilling motion pictures on record. In addition to mirroring the opulent period of Emma Hamilton's time, he has concentrated on a love story that has few parallels for exciting and colorful incident, for pulse-tingling drama and emotion, and for thrilling suspense.

Miss Leigh, the Scarlett O'Hara of "Gone With the Wind" again wears stunning gowns to bring out her striking beauty. They were created by Rene Hubert, most of them copied from the Romney and Gainsborough painting of Emma Hamilton, and numbering forty-two in all.

The Belle latest world news events, and "Golden Eggs," a clever Disney color fun cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Buck Privates"

If army camp life is just a fraction as enjoyable as "Buck Privates" Uncle Sam's quota will be as crowded as the ticket line at the Capitol theatre was Sunday Midnight when Universal Fun-film began its engagement.

Radio-stage's Abbott and Costello, who were roaringly funny in their first picture "One Night in the Tropics," completely out-top themselves in this new hilarity-hit. The audience had a time keeping its feet still when the Andrew sisters of boogie-woogie rhythm got "in the groove" with their new songs.

Comedians in Khaki

Abbott and Costello are a couple of misfit kids in khaki in the army of "Buck Privates" and everything happens to them from K. P. duty to "solitary" in the guard-house, with Nat Pendleton their nemesis in the role of a hardboiled sergeant.

There is a nice thread of romance, too in the picture framed by a young "Sergeant Quirk," "Captain Flagg" rivalry, played by Lee Bowman and Alan Curtis, over the affections of a pert and pretty hostess, enacted by Jane Frazee. Incidentally, Miss Frazee who has made only one picture before this one, exhibits the most pleasing sort of personality and a whale of a lot of ability.

Song Hits Enjoyed

Every one of the new songs registers hit rating. Included are "You're a Lucky Fellow, Mr. Smith" "Bounce Me, Brother With a Solid Four" "Boogie-Woogie Bugle Boy", "When Private Brown Becomes a Captain" and "I Wish You Were Here." In addition, the Sisters charmingly revive an oldie, "I'll Be With You in Apple Blossom Time."

Arthur Lubin has given "Buck Privates" topnotch direction, and Arthur T. Horman is certainly entitled to a bow for his ingeniously funny screenplay. Alex Gottlieb was the associate producer.

The added select shorts include "Lady and the Lug" with Elsa Maxwell and Maxie Rosenbloom, "Going Places" with Graham MacNamee and "Cat's Tale" a colored cartoon.

There will be a special matinee on Wednesday for this great laugh attraction.

Turkish Papers Comment On Trouble In Middle East

Istanbul, Turkey, May 5 (delayed) (AP).—Turkish newspapers, while conceding that the fighting in Iraq might spread throughout the Middle East, expressed hope today the conflict would be settled speedily.

"Young Iraq must not play with fire which might consume her," said the newspaper Cumhuriyet, adding there were rumors that the Iraq prime minister went to Germany for advice.

"It is quite possible that the Arabs in Palestine will join the Iraquis," said the paper Tan, "and doubtless German and Italian propaganda will try to incite all other Arab nations to rise against England.

"So it is up to the British to quiet the trouble but perhaps it is too late because the Iraq request for German help gives the matter a different aspect."

The paper Vatan criticized the attitude of British officials in Iraq and said this was partially responsible for the trouble there.

"They are unworthy of their duties," Vatan said. "British work there has not been far sighted enough and gave the Germans great opportunity to work against them."

Ehi Sabah said "this is a great victory from the point of view of German daring but it saddens us that the Iraqis let themselves be used in such a way."

On another phase of Middle Eastern affairs, Aksham raised the question of how France could continue to rule Syria under a League of Nations mandate since Vichy has resigned from the league. This was the first mention of this question in the Turkish press.

SELASSIE NEARING CAPITAL

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, May 1 (delayed)—(AP)—Haile Selassie neared this capital city today to reclaim the throne from which he was driven by the Italians in 1936 and his subjects began celebrations.

Thousands flocked to St. George's Cathedral for a double celebration—the imminent return of the Emperor and to observe St. George's Day, the Ethiopian national saint.

MUST WRITE OR GO HUNGRY

Fort Ontario, N.Y., May 5 (AP)—Soldiers of the 368th Coast Artillery Regiment must either write their mothers in observance of Mother's Day, May 11, or go hungry. Col. Chauncey M. Hooper has ordered that a soldier must give his Sergeant a card or letter written to his mother to gain entrance to the mess hall May 8.

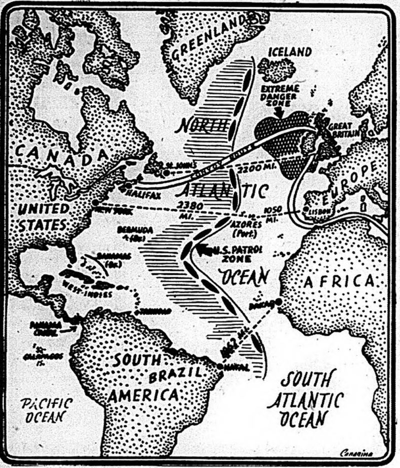
NAZI PILOTS TAKEN FROM U.S. SHIP BY CANADIAN TARS

A Canadian auxiliary cruiser stopped the American liner S.S. President Garfield in the Pacific and removed four German aviators who are shown here. The men, former operators of planes in commercial air service in South America, had been detained by the United States immigration service since last August. Released by order of the state department, they were put aboard the liner at San Francisco and are pictured as they appeared in San Francisco before sailing. LEFT to RIGHT, Pilots Naumann, Flesch, Sandakamn and Katzne.

UNCLE SAM TO PATROL THE SEAS



Revelation by Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of American naval operations, that U.S. neutrality patrols are operating as far as 2,000 miles offshore means U.S. warships are on lookout for Nazi raiders as far out as the east coast of Greenland and within a short distance of the Azores. Even further extension of naval activities was hinted in a statement by President Roosevelt that the U.S. navy could enter the combat areas surrounding the British Isles "in defence of the American hemisphere."

Livestock

Toronto, May 5 (CP)— Trade in steers and heifers was very dull up to mid-season on livestock market here today and fairly active on cows, bulls and stockers with prices steady.

No price was established for hogs withindications it would be higher.

Veal calves were strong.

There were no early sales of lambs and sheep were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 3,200, calves 1,200, hogs 1,540, sheep and lambs 1,460.

Butcher cows and bulls sold at $5-$7, stockers at $7-$8.25 and a few lots of butcher steers and heifers at $8-$8.50.

Veal calves sold at $10.50 to $11 for choice with tops at $11.50 and common lights selling downward to $6.

Sheep sold at $3-$6.

Hogs closed previously at $11.40-$11.50 dressedweight, off-truck, at yards and plant. There were no live sales.

Montreal, May 5—(CP)—Cattle, 736, calves 1,102, hogs 590, sheep and lambs 122.

Good steers $8.75 to $9, medium $7.50 to $8.50 and common $6 to $7.25. Heifers $4.50 to $8.50 and fed calves $8 to $9. Good calves $6.50 to $7, medium $5.75 to $6.25 and common $5 to $5.50. Canners and cutters $4 to $4.50. Bulls $4.50 to $7 with the bulk $6.50 up.

Good quality calves $8 to $8.50; mediums $7.25 to $7.50 and very common veals and drinkers $5 to $5.75, with the bulk of the sales $5.75 to $7.

Hogs $12.25 for B-1 dressed and $9.25 for B-1 alive, fed and watered. Grade A drew $1 premium with discounts on off grades. Sows $5.75 to $7 liveweight.

Spring lambs $6 and $7 each. Yearlings $7 to $8.50 per hundredweight and sheep $4.50 to $6.50 but mostly $5.50 to $6.50.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—Gold shares weakened moderately on Toronto Exchange today. Base metals were soft and industrials higher. Trading was quiet with 67,000 shares traded.

Bell Telephone slumped more than 2 to 140 1-2 and Consumers Gas was down 1 to a new low for the year at 120. Senior oils were strongest, all leaders showing gains.

Nickel and Smelters were weaker and in golds losses of 3 to 5 were showing for San Antonio, Pickle Crow, Kerr-Addison, Preston and Howey.

WALL STREET

New York, May 5 (AP)—Stocks developed irregular tendencies in today's market after an early forward thrust by the rails had put a number of this group into new high territory for the year.

Gains at the start ranged from fractions to a point or so but selling of motors soon halted the rise and trends were indefinite near the fourth hour. Dealings were moderate.

Further upward inclinations were displayed by secondary carrier bonds and commodities continued to lean forward.

Stocks posting new tops—some failed to hold—included Santa Fe, Pere Marquette Preferred, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line and Nickel Plate Pfd. Bethlehem Steel, Douglas Aircraft and Texas Corp. were resistant.

General Motors and General Electric dipped to new 1941 lows. Lacking support also were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, American Telephone, U. S. Rubber and Johns-Manville.

Canadian issues were mixed with McIntyre losing 3-4 while Canadian Pacific and Walkers were the gainers up 1-8. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unquoted.

Hardly calculated to bolster market sentiment was the sale of another stock exchange seat for $30,000, duplicating the recent 43-year low for memberships.

Produce Unchanged

Toronto — The whole of the Toronto open produce market was steady on Saturday and prices held at previous levels.

Buyers were cautious on the butter market owing to the uncertainty over the question of minimum prices. Trading was therefore just fair with offerings on the light side. It was reported that the odd sale was made at a slightly higher quotation, but the general price remained at 29½c a pound for the No. 1 Ontario product.

The egg market remained steady and quotations unchanged from the previous close.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, May 5 —(CP)— Produce market prices here Saturday, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter, first grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 31c; first grade solids, jobbing price 30½c.

Eggs—Graded shipments in used free cases, selling at: A-large, 21½c-22c; A-medium, 20½c-21c; B grade, 20½c-21c; C Grade 18c-18½c. Receipts last week, 38,819 cases. Last year, 21,653 cases.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 5 —(CP)— Dressedweight were up 60 cents at Brantford, up 60 cents at Peterborough, up 50 cents at Kitchener and down 50 cents at London in bacon-hog markets reporting today.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.25 plus transportation, Chatham $10.95, Kitchener $11 plus transportation, London $11.35 delivered, Peterborough $11.25 plus transportation.

Liveweight: Chatham $8.

NAZI ENDEAVORS TO EXPLAIN AWAY HITLER'S WORDS

German Leader's Reference 'Next Year' Pondered Over by Germans

PREVIOUS REFERENCES

Berlin, May 5 (CP)—A Nazi spokesman today sought to explain away Hitler's reference to "next year" in his Reichstag address.

"The main thing is that the German people are convinced German victory is coming."

The spokesman said Hitler's reference to "next year" was made in answer to "English and American propaganda that Germany would collapse if the war was not ended this year" and should not be taken as implying any prediction as to when the war would be over.

This source said Hitler had never set a date for the end of the war, although he asserted and reasserted last night that 1941 would be a "historic year" of the Nazi revolution.

(Hitler said in a New Year's message to his troops: "The year 1941 will bring completion of the greatest victory of our history.")

The Nazi commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland, which has foreign office connections, conceded in a roundabout way that war may extend into 1942.

"Involved in the assumption of such a possibility," it said, "lies undoubtedly calculation on the possibility of American intervention.

"Such intervention is appraised by Germans as an influence which could prolong the war but under no circumstances alter the ultimate result."

NO SENTIMENT FOR PEACE AMONG BRITISH

Upon arriving back in the United States after visiting England Major-General H. H. Arnold, chief of the U.S. Army Air Corps, declared there is no sentiment for peace among the English people. After seeing how the Royal Air Force operated, General Arnold highly praised Britain's armed forces and the "high morale" of the people.

HITLER'S SPEECH

many's future course of action. The intent was made clear, however, to woo the Turks, to try to wean the Greeks from loyalty to Great Britain, and to give "eternal peace" to the Balkans by incorporating southeast Europe into the Third Reich's economic and political system.

Also missing was any direct reference to the United States, the greatest uncertainty in the path of Nazi world domination through the significance of the boast that the Axis possessed power "superior to any conceivable coalition" seems unmistakable.

Of his axis collaborators Hitler had little to say except to put in a word for Mussolini.

The smashing campaign by land and air left little basis to quibble with the main facts of the Nazi Balkan victory as stated by the dictator. His figures as to German losses and the force employed however, and his shouted contention that Britain's intercention was "the greatest strategical error of this war" will prompt rebuttal.

First-hand reports from American observers as well as British reports conflict with Hitler's claim that the German army lost only a few more than 1,000 officers and men killed, and that plane losses were negligible. Neutral authorities have estimated further that some 40 Nazi divisions were employed in the Balkan campaign, out of 260 or so under arms, rather than the equivalent of only 21.

Altogether, Hitler's latest speech was calculated to impress nations that still stand in the path of Axis world domination by helping to foster the feeling of Nazi invincibility.

That Der Fuehrer saw fit to boast at all to Germany and the world just now of the latest Nazi triumphs is a pertinent comment on his prefatory declaration that "deeds are all, words nothing."

CIVILIAN PLANES SOUGHT BY GOV'T

Request Linked Directly With the War in the Mediterranean

Washington, May 5 —(AP)— A hurried roundup of transport-type civilian aircraft at President Roosevelt's request was reported in aeronautical quarters today to be directly linked with the war in the Mediterranean.

Airmen familiar with the negotiations by which Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones already has acquired a substantial number of civilian planes for transfer to Great Britain predicted that those considered suitable would be dispatched immediately to the Middle East.

All aircraft capable of emergency use in moving troops and weapons quickly to danger points were said to be sought by the British Command to counter Nazi threats to Iraq oil fields, Egypt and other key areas in the Mediterranean theatre of war.

Jones wrote the President last Wednesday that a "substantial number" of planes would be collected by the weekend, and aides reported today that the first roundup produced between 20 and 30 craft.

Whether some will be delivered to British forces by being flown from here to Brazil and across the South Atlantic to Africa was a matter of conjecture. Airmen said late model two-motor planes were capable of such a trip if all surplus weight was sacrificed for extra fuel.

Ex-Convict Charged With Shooting Man

New York, May 5 (AP)—Less than 24 hours after advertising executive Harry V. Maxwell was slain as he sat in a parked car with a pretty blonde dress model, a young ex-convict with a record of five arrests, was charged with the crime.

Booked as Morris Mardavich, 23, he described himself as a plumber's helper, but Assistant District Attorney Jacob Rosenblum said he was one of two men who shot and killed Maxwell in "a holdup pure and simple."

The slaying occurred just before dawn yesterday outside the Upper East Side home of Mary Jane Cassidy, 24, where she and Maxwell, 41-year-old son of R. C. Maxwell, head of the Outdoor Advertising Agency of that name, had parked after visiting a night club.

After shooting Maxwell, the bandits fled in a car parked down the block, neglecting to take her purse or Maxwell's wallet, which contained $106.

ANALYSIS OF WAR SITUATION SHOWS ALLIES HAVE EDGE

17 Students of Naval and Military Affairs Say "There is No Warrant for Presupposing a German Victory

DETAILS GIVEN

New York, May 5 (AP)—An analysis of the war situation by 17 "students of naval and military affairs and world politics," made public Sunday, said factors of fundamental importance still operate in favor of the Allies and "there is no warrant for presupposing a German victory."

Signers included four retired Admirals of the United States Navy, Admirals William V. Pratt and William H. Standley, formerly chiefs of naval operations; Vice Admiral William L. Rodgers, formerly President of the Naval War College, and Rear Admrial Harry E. Yarnell, formerly Commander-in-Chief of the Asiatic fleet.

The analysis summarized in a broadcast by Major George Fielding Eliot, military analyist for the New York Herald-Tribune and one of the signers, included the "following facts":—

"1. By reason of British sea power, Germany is denied access to the essential resources of the non-European world, both in industrial production and in raw materials....

"2. The industrial plants of Germany are within reach of the Royal Air Force, whereas Britain...can draw upon the enormous industrial plants of the United States and the Dominions, which are safe from air attack....

"3. If the war becomes one of attrition and exhaustion, the Axis powers will be at a serious disadvantage as compared with the British Empire and the United States....

"4. The essential element of British survival and ultimate victory, therefore, is the maintenance of a sufficient flow of shipping across the Atlantic....

Possess Striking Force

5. American naval and air forces now possess the necessary striking force, as in 1917, to equalize and perhaps turn to our definite advantage the struggle now waging along the convoy routes. We...realize that, in the event of American intervention for this purpose, a major effect would be required...

"6. Adequate American production of aircraft and their safe delivery to Britain would alter this situation (possible serious impairment of British ability and will to fight on because of German bombardments) in at least two fundamental respects:—It would make possible effective countermeasures and it would raise British morale....

"7. If we so will, we can produce for Britain and for ourselves motorized and armored equipment which will be superior to any thus far utilized in the war....

"8. It is imperative that we take account of moral factors as being an inherent part of the military potential.... (A consideration of "imponderables" and a non-defeatist attitude.)

Others joining in the analysis were: James P. Baxter, III., President of Williams College; Cy Caldwell, Editor, Aero Digest, First Great War Commander of the 165th United States Infantry; Dr. Edward Meade Earle, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, N.J.; Livingston Hartley author of "Our Maginot Line."

War Savings Receipts $7,185,388 In April

Ottawa, May 5—Sales of War Savings Certificates in April totalled $7,185,388 in cash receipts from 947,871 applications it was announced here today at the National Headquarters. Sales from January 1 to April 30 total $30,440,076.

Of the April sales, $3,590,008 were subscribed through the Payroll Savings Plan; $2,770,800 from individual applications and $824,580 through the medium of the Bank Pledge Plan.

Ontario held the lead in the largest per capita subscriptions for the month with a figure of 96 cents, as well as the largest dollar total of subscriptions which was $3,598,120. British Columbia was second with per capita subscriptions of 73 cents while Manitoba and Nova Scotia were tied for third place, each with 62 cents.

MEAT SUPPLY SCARCE

Vichy, France, May 5 (AP)—Supply Minister Jean Achard told an audience yesterday at Clermont-Ferrand that France lost a quarter of her livestock during the winter and called the meat prospects for May and June "tragic."

Loss of livestock, he added, is increasing due to lack of fodder. He estimated that only 800,000 tons of meat are left in France, compared with a normal annual consumption of 1,800,000 tons.

HITLER PREDICTS

Superior to Any Coalition

"The Reich and its allies represent in military, economic and, above all, moral aspects, a force which is superior to any possible coalition in the world."

(Hitler did not name Germany's allies, but he presumably referred to Italy, the intimidated Rumanians and Bulgarians and the recalcitrant conquered countries like Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugoslavia, Greece and France.)

Observers who sought a hint in Hitler's address as to Germany's next military move were disappointed. He appeared satisfied with the military achievements of his armies and spoke much of them.

The Fuehrer, looking fit but coughing a little as he spoke, railed at Mr. Churchill, making the war a personal issue as never before. He called the Prime Minister "the most bloodthirsty amateur strategist history has ever known," "a madman," and "a hopeless dabbler in strategy."

"If another man had experienced as many defeats as a politician, as many catastrophes as a soldier, he would not have remained in office six months," Hitler screamed, "unless he also possessed the sole gift which Mr. Churchill possesses, namely the gift of lying with a pious expression on his face, and of distorting the truth until finally glorious victories are made out of the most terrible defeats."

He accused Mr. Churchill of spurning German peace offers and of involving innocent nations in war and asserted that British intervention in Greece constituted not only "the greatest strategical error of this war" but a "betrayal of the Greek people."

Lost 1,100 Men in Balkans

Reviewing the Balkan campaign, Hitler made a special point to declaring that "Mussolini never asked me for a single division."

He said 20 German divisions and two half-divisions participated in the fighting in Yugoslavia and Greece and listed Naxi army and air force losses, "the smallest we have had so far," as follows:

Killed—67 officers and 1,064 men.

Wounded—181 officers and 3,571 men.

Missing—43 officers and 476 men.

Against these figures, he placed the number of captives taken by the Germans at 9,000 British, Australian and New Zealand troops; 8,000 Greek officers and 210,000 soldiers; 6,298 Serb officers and 337,864 soldiers. The Greeks, he said, were released immediately.

(Hitler's figures contradicted the stories of numerous neutral observers who saw Germans falling like 10-pins before the fire of the defenders of Greece.

(His assertion that Mussolini had not asked him for help in the disastrous Greek and African campaign was either a lie or an admission that the Duce and his country were so leaderless that Germany had to step in and force assistance on them. Hitler did not say help had not been sent.)

Hitler predicted increasingly powerful air raids on Britain and commented that democratic leaders on both sides of the Atlantic, "supported by international jewry, preferred war to any program which might restore peace."

"The year 1941," he cried, "will be inscribed in history as the greatest year of the rise of our nation." He closed with a declaration that Germany would not only survive this war but also the next millenium.

BRITISH BOMBERS

Fifteenth Raid On Battleships.

A well-informed source said that last night's was the fifteenth raid on the Gneisenau and Scharnhorst since the first assault, the night of March 30-31.

It was explained this was the first air communique officially claiming hits on the ships, although a hit was mentioned recently in the citation of an R.A.F. man for the Distinguished Flying Cross.

The well-inforced source expressed opinion that even before direct hits were claimed the vessels undoubtedly had been knocked about by heavy explosions which smashed concrete wharves and a drydock nearby.

He said that had the Germans been able to do so they certainly would have moved their prized Atlantic raiders when it became apparent the R.A.F. knew where they lay.

Moonlight Helps.

Later, the Air Ministry News Service reported that moonlight last night enabled Coastal Command planes "to harry enemy shipping from Norway to the coast of Brittany".

A German supply ship of 3,000 tons, anchoring in the Skagerrak in convoy, was hit by a Blenheim, whose pilot made three runs over the target. Clouds of smoke belched from the ship's bows.

Other Blenheims straddled a second supply ship with bombs and attacked the docks at Egersund in southern Norway. A gunner shot out three "troublesome" searchlights at Stavanger.

At St. Nazaire on the Breton coast there was a "great rectangle of fire in the naval base." A series of explosions also was set off.

IRAQ INSURGENTS

Reports from Cairo indicated British troops still were holding out last night at their besieged air base at Lake Habbaniyah, 60 miles west of Baghdad, and that Royal Air Force bombers had taken the offensive—striking to cripple Iraq's small air force.

The pro-German government which Premier Raschid Ali Al Gailani set up in a coup April 4 was attacked verbally, meanwhile, by Eh Emir Abdul Iah, deposed regent. He declared in Palestine that he would return to restore "lawfully constituted government." The Emir urged Iraq troops to return peacefully to their posts.

The stoppage of Iraq oil, pumped through a pipeline to Haifa, in British-mandated Palestine, was said by Reuters News Agency to have been accomplished by the Iraq insurgents.

Britain's eastern Mediterranean fleet has received its principal oil supply from that line since the fall of France last June when a second line from the Mosul fields to Tripoli, in French-mandated Lebanon, was closed.

British authorities said, however, they have built up "numerous and adequate" fuel reserves in the eastern Mediterranean to continue fleet operations.

May Try in Iran

British spokesmen who predicted Axis influences might try next to tie up the oilfields of Iran, to the east, estimated Iran's army at 750,000 to 1,000,000 men but said it was poorly equipped. The country has a German colony of approximately 25,000 persons, and recently 2,000 German engineers and technicians have been reported sent there to build highways. The government nominally is neutral.

Fighting in scattered sections of Iraq showed no signs of abating since its flare-up last Friday.

It was reported officially yesterday that the dock area, power station and airport at Basra, Baghdad's port at the head of the Persian Gulf, also were held by British forces who drove out Iraq troops Friday by air and artillery attacks.

R.A.F. Middle East communiques yesterday from Cairo said gasoline dumps and magazines at Moreat Airdrome, outside Baghdad, had been bombed and that 23 Iraq planes were destroyed and others possibly damaged in two air raids on the Moascar Rashic Airdrome. The Iraq fighters which attempted to intercept the bombers were shot down.

Papers Condemn Iraq Gov't.

Reuters dispatches from Bombay said the Indian press was condemning the Iraq government and declaring the outcome of developments there of grave importance to India.

"No Moslem country can have any sympathy with Germany," Reuters quoted the newspaper Ehsan of Lahore as saying, "and we should like to warn the people of Iraq against the grave consequences of the Germans setting foot on their soil.

"With the pretext of helping Iraq, Germany can create a situation fraught with the gravest possibilities for the Moslem countries and India."

Expanding last night's communique by the R.A.F. Middle East command, the Air Ministry news service said today that many tons of bombs were dropped yesterday on hangars, workshops, offices, officers' mess sheds, buildings and aircraft at Moascar Raschid Airport.

Before returning to their bases the British fliers scattered 24,000 leaflets in Arabic over Baghdad, the news service added.

Number Of Frenchmen Lose Their Citizenship

Vichy, May 5 (AP)—Twenty-nine Frenchmen and women—among them Eve Curie, whose parents discovered radium; dramatist Henri Bernstein and Engineer Eugene Houdry—lost their Vichy citizenship under a decree promulgated yesterday.

All are abroad and are not refugees but are considered opponents of the Petain regime.

Bernstein has been in the United States since last summer. Mlle. Curie arrived recently after a stay in England.

Houdry, who is President of "France Forever", the American-French movement which is supporting Gen. Charles De Gaulle, has been in the United States for some years exploiting the various processes he invented for obtaining high-grade fuel for aviation.

24 NAZI RAIDERS

Britain's defences were active, however, and the government said 24 raiders had been brought down during the weekend—16 Saturday night, a fighter before dusk yesterday and seven bombers last night. Of this total, it was said, 19 could be credited to night fighters.

The R.A.F.., meanwhile, sent war planes across the channel to strike again at Brest, where the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau have been a British target for weeks.

"Considerable damage was done to industrial and residential property" in Belfast, a communique said, and "a number of fires were started." The first heavy raid on Belfast April 15 caused 500 deaths.

High-flying planes apparently en route to Liverpool and the Merseyside caused an alert in London at midnight, which lasted until 5:30 a.m., but there was little activity in the capital. The attack on Liverpool, while heavy, was not so severe as the one the night before, when hundreds of Nazi raiders blasted the big port.

The same night, British raiders showered Cologne with Britain's new high-powered bombs and the Air Ministry said they "must have done immense damage" in the great Rhineland industrial centre.

The Air Ministry News Service, reviewing the work of the R.A.F. in its six-months service in Greece, said British planes destroyed about 300 axis aircraft in the air, "as well as a huge total of aircraft damaged both in the air and on the ground."

One squadron alone, this report said, accounted for 100 axis planes. The story of the R.A.F. in Greece was described as a "thrilling tale" of achievement against the great odds of inadequate bases, the worst winter flying weather in Europe and numerical superiority of the foe.

DEFIED NAZI THREATS

Belfast, May 5 (CP)—Eire firefighters defied Nazi threats to aid Ulstermen in combatting fires started in last night's German raid.

After Dublin firemen went to Belfast-aid last month the Nazis dropped leaflets in Eire warning that future aid to Northern Ireland might have unpleasant consequences.

Last night fire-fighters from Eire were early on the job and ambulances from Dublin were on duty throughout the raid.

NINE FATALITIES IN THE PROVINCE DURING WEEKEND

Double Drowning Near Sebright Takes Lives of Two Toronto Men

ONE DIES FROM KICK

(By the Canadian Press)

Nine fatalities were reported in Ontario during the week-end, with a doubledrowning near Sebright taking the lives of two Toronto men. Seven other persons met death from the following causes: Automobile accidents, a mine rockfall, a runaway team of horses, a kick from a horse and a leap from a train.

The Toronto men drowned were Gordon Searle, 31, and Albert Trudelle, 28. The accident occurred Sunday when a canoe in which they were riding capsized in an attempt to shoot twin rapids on the Head River in Victoria County, north of Orillia. Two other Toronto men reached shore safely.

William Kemp, 65-year-old Toronto school teacher, was injured fatally Sunday night when his automobile went out of control and crashed into a pole.

Four-year-old Douglas Swan of the Watford district was injured fatally Saturday when thrown from a wagon when a team of horses ran away.

Kicked by a Horse

George Guthrie, farm-hand in the Stratford district, died Saturday night from injuries received when he was kicked by a horse last Tuesday.

Jethro Spicer died in Chatham Saturday from injuries received a few hours before when an automobile he was driving crashed into a Hydro pole. Mr. Spicer was the Harwich Township tax collector.

Mrs. May Wilkey of London died in St. Thomas Saturday from injuries received Thursday when she fell from a train. Officials said no inquest would be held.

Leo Roy, 22, died Saturday before he could be brought to the surface of Macassa mines near Kirkland Lake after being caught in a rock fall.

At St. Catharines George A. Awde, 28, was killed Saturday when his automobile crashed into the rear of a heavy transport truck.

DESPITE BOMB

A radio message cracked through the air. Soon a British warship hove in sight, threw out a line and took the Ulysseus in tow.

Some of the crew remained aboard, though the risk of death was great. No one knew when the crippled ship might vanish below the dark waters. The rest of the crew went aboard the warship.

Save Damaged Vessel

It was now a race to save 9,000 tons of British shipping. The warship clipped along at 9 knots—amazing speed for a towing job. During the foggy night the tow line parted and the Ulysseus skeleton crew saw sure death looming up for them as the warship sped away. But she came back and by dawn they were approaching a friendly shore. Then came another SOS from near the Greek mainland.

The warship located a little Greek schooner which agreed to take the Ulysseus in tow and then raced away on a second errand of mercy.

For days the Ulysseus was pulled slowly through Mediterranean waters without convoy, a perfect target for attacking planes. But I saw her arrive at her destination.

I heard a cheer suddenly go up from the little group of men in the bow of my own evacuation ship.

Tribute to Bravery

It came from men who had left the Ulysseus.

It was their tribute to their shipmates who had stayed behind to help guide the crippled merchantman into port.

It was a tribute to bravery of Britons at sea.

It was a tribute to the British navy, which had saved 9,000 tons and several hundred men from a watery grave.

There was a story of another British merchantman which was struck squarely on the bow by a German bomb. Damage was slight but a serious fire broke out. Then another German plane roared out of the clouds and dropped four more bombs.

They landed all around the bow and sent up mountains of water, which swept over the ship and extinguished the flames.

The story of an unimportant small British merchant craft which ran aground during the evacuation is ironical. The salvaging operation was considered too risky. The value of the ship too slight to make it worth while.

During the night the entire crew was taken off with every piece of equipment of the slightest value. Then depth bombs were placed in the hull set to go off in four days—after the evacuation operation was completed.

Spotted by Nazi Planes

At dawn the next morning a formation of Nazi planes spotted the derelict and spent more than an hour dive-bombing her. Finally they sank the small craft, which, had they left her alone, would have blown to bits anyway in 82 hours.

I was brought to safe shores on a ship with a group of navy officers who conceived and supervised the Greek evacuation. They would not listen to compliments about their strategy, but they did like to tell how they hid during daylight hours for more than a week in a Greek graveyard dressed in khaki army desert uniforms and draped with olive leaves while low-flying Nazi reconnaissance planes tried in vain to hunt out the "brain centre" of the evacuation operations.

Get Little Rest

They got little rest for German planes roared up and down, machine-gunning roads, bombing any town or port which they thought might be on the evacuation route.

The instant dusk descended these naval experts shed their khaki and put on blue to go into action. By radio, by flashlight signals and by barked orders they guided British and Allied craft of every conceivable description into hidden coves, into tiny harbors and into obscure fishing ports where between dusk and dawn tens of thousands of soldiers were being saved for Britain.

I stood on the dock one night as the evacuation was nearing its end. Now it was time for these weary men to be evacuated themselves. They had nother job to do somewhere else. A small warship was supposed to be on the way to rescue them.

German forces were close by. With daylight they might be where we stood. The warship was due on the stroke of midnight.

"And if it doesn't come?" I asked.

"Then, it's up to our ingenuity to try and circumvent enemy troops and beat our way to some other port still open," they said.

"I paced the jetty nervously.

If it didn't come I, too, had to use some ingenuity. But these men, who would be in much more danger than I would be, smoked and calmly talked of distant things.

"We will wait until half an hour after midnight," they said finally.

"If it doesn't come then, it will mean our message wasn't received or the ship has more important business."

Five minutes before midnight, a large grey shape loomed through the mist. On the stroke of midnight tiny lights began to blink across the water.

"PSR" (please send boat) flashed back one of the officers with his pocket flashlight.

In a few minutes we were aboard the warship.

The Royal Navy was operating on clock-like schedule.

GENERAL BORROWS A BOOK

Lieut. General A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of the Canadian Corps, is shown as he selects a book from the Canadian Legion's library van in England.

FOUR-WEEK

After a night of slow progress along a treacherous course, we lay hidden for a day in a little Dalmatian port, which the Italians had already occupied. We were protected by native fishermen, who resented they were already being forced to take Italian lira for anything the occupying force wanted.

As we continued our flight, we took aboard a 60-year-old, weather-beaten fisherman to help guide our tiny craft, but he was killed and Atherton was wounded when dive bombers screamed down from the clouds in a combination bomb and machine-gun attack.

We lay on our stomachs on a three-foot square deck through two nights, peering over black waters for floating mines as we sailed with full canvas through extensive mine fields in the narrow Straits of Otranto.

We wiggled our boat through much of the Italian fleet, hiding away near Durazzo, Albania.

We were hailed by two armed Italian mine layers whose crews manned their machine guns as we passed close under their bows but held their fire when we spread a blood-stained American flag on the deck.

We were nearly shipwrecked in a storm on the rocky island of Sassenso, the Gibraltar of the Adriatic.

We had to row, soaked to the skin, all one stormy night through mountainous waves when our two-cylinder outboard engine went dead and high winds made it impossible to hoist a sail.

Finally, we put in at Corfu—just in time for the first aerial bombardment the island had had in a month.

We persuaded Greek authorities to allow us to set out on the Ionian Sea aboard a Greek food ship. We left just after an air attack wrecked a destroyer lying in the port and made a shambles of the Port Authority offices and a nearby hotel.

For three nights we dodged through mine fields, circled around islands and pushed toward the Greek mainland under the cover of darkness. For three days we hid in woods while our 200-ton schooner was anchored out of the way in a cove.

One day we spent hiding on the island of Leukas, watching Italian bombers circling over nearby Ithaca —birthplace of Ulysses. Another day we hid on top of an island occupied by the Germans, in an ancient monastery where the monks fed us goat cheese, raisins, almonds and honey, then hid us until dusk.

Hospital Ship Bombed

The moment our schooner touched her nose to the wharf at Patras, air raid sirens began to scream. We scrambled over the side of the vessel and made for shelter beneath 12-foot blocks of concrete. Stukas roared into sight and bombed a hospital ship loaded with 5,000 wounded Greek soldiers.

From our hideout we could see destruction wrought by the raid of the night before. Dive bombers had attacked the waterfront while 700 refugees were attempting to disembark from flat-bottomed boats. Seventy had been killed and their mattresses and bedding still lay scattered on the quay, blood soaked and torn to shreds by bullets.

Later, while 100 to 200 dead were being taken from the hospital ship, we hid from another raid in a shelter dug out of a mountain side.

We fled from Patras toward Athens in a Greek troop train along a high cliff overhanging the sea. Suddenly a Messerschmitt roared alongside the train with its two machine guns roaring. Men riding on the top of the train tumbled to the ground. Those of us inside sprawled on the floor. I got one bullet in the leg and White got two serious wounds in the thigh. The train stopped.

As hundreds of soldiers scrambled up the mountainside, Hill and I struggled to get White to safety under the train while the plane roared back and forth spraying cars with bullets.

What possessions we had saved from Belgrade we lost when the train's engineer suddenly put on steam and left the dead and wounded behind. We carried White to a road and hailed an R.A.F. truck, loaded in the wounded and sped to Corinth.

But while we sped, so did the German air force. As we pulled into town, Stukas dive-bombed a 30-car hospital train, setting fire to many coaches which soon were a flaming pyre.

Greek Nurses on The Job

All afternoon gritty volunteers carried stretchers loaded with horrible mangled men through the streets to the little dressing station where plucky Greek girls tried to do the work of doctors — for there were no doctors here and no time to dress mere machine gun bullet wounds when men were dying by the dozens.

The parade of wounded men on stretchers went in one hospital door, a parade of dead men on stretchers came out through another.

We persuaded the R.A.F. to lend us a truck and pressed on. At Argos all seemed calm at last. The little city had never been bombed, but before White's serious and my minor wounds could be dressed, the bombers came. They came in waves, with bombs of every conceivable type and rained them down indiscriminately.

Most of the deadly missiles landed on or near the little hospital filled with wounded British soldiers. We spent nearly 24 hours hauling cots of men who could not move by themselves in and out of the hospital.

Atherton and I, during one attack, were in a trench outside the hospital when bombs landed 10 feet away, burying both of us under rubble. Then a truck loaded with oxygen tanks exploded, shoting flames over the hospital. Wounded men had to be hauled to safety again.

At last, we helped establish an emergency dressing station in a cellar concrete shelter and became patients ourselves. We lay there while men, women and children with pieces of their bodies blown away were carried in—some dead already, some dying and only a few with more than a spark of life.

We finally got White into a private clinic with doctors promising to operate immediately.

Parachute Troops Landed

Before pressing on we climbed to the top of a mountain at the edge of the town for two hours of rest in safety while we lay watching a colony of ants engaging in constructive labor, oblivious to the death and destruction around them, a squadron of Nazi troop carriers began unloading parachutists in the deserted valley on the other side of the town.

We knew there was no more time to pause now.

That night, we plodded on foot down a highway teeming with British lories heading for evacuation ports. We were arrested frequently by British patrols seeking to round up the same parachutists we had seen drop — at least those not already shot by the Greeks.

We turned occasionally to watch flashes of fire as bombs burst for three hours on the town we had just left. Probably our work of moving wounded men in and out of danger zones had all been futile.

We were heading for a fishing village in the hope of buying, renting or stealing some kind of small craft to make our way to Turkish shores, but when we got there we found the harbor full of huge British craft and embarkation about to take place. We soon gave up the small boat plan, and before dawn we had been taken in charge by the Royal Navy and were en route to safety.

Details of that last phase of our journey still cannot be entirely disclosed. It is the story of the British navy's almost superhuman accomplishment in defying combined air and sea power of the Axis to save the British Expeditionary Force so it could fight again.

The danger of death on the water was double the dangers we had gone through on land, but we survived them—becoming as far as we are able to learn the only three of 14 Anglo-American newspapermen to get out of Axis controlled territory from Yugoslavia.

In these four weeks we never had our clothes off. We have had only two or three regular meals. We have been able to throw ourselves down on beds a few hours at a stretch only a few times. The rest of the time we were either driving a battered automobile along winding roads of Serbia, Bosnia or Montenegro, or keeping watch over dark waters of the Adriatic or Ionian Seas, or hiding in dugouts from bombs.

Everywhere we went the story seemed to follow us — a story of death and destruction — while any chance of communicating that story of our home offices seemed to vanish as we approached.

Having found communications at last, we now crave only rest.

DISMISSED WITH SHRUG

Berlin, May 5 (AP). — A Nazi spokesman asserted today that President Roosevelt's speech yesterday contained "nothing new for us and doesn't disturb us; it can have no influence in Europe".

The spokesman added he "couldn't say how it would affect hundreds of thousands of American mothers whose sons lie is France."

Filet de Sole Not a Rarity In Soho Cafes

By LOUIS V. HUNTER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—Soho is bravely fulfilling its mission in the face of a crisis that has been threatening its status as the gourmet's paradise where London escapes from English cooking.

Food rationing and shortage of ingredients essential to continental and foreign dishes that made Soho THE place to eat have played havoc with some of the tastier plates. A few of the Chinese and Indian favorites have disappeared altogether.

In an Indian restaurant—suffering from the reduced number of both "Anglo-Indians" and Indian students in London—the waiter said he was unable to serve mango chutney with the curry.

"Just can't get it, sir," he said. "It's terrible.'

The blackout, too, has brought its worries. Some Soho restaurants are "open for lunch only," and others remain open a little later. Only a couple serve dinner after blackout. There is the danger of air attack and on top of that Londoners aren't as anxious to escape from English cooking as they are to escape death in the greater security of their shelters.

Sprouts Plentiful

However, in good old Soho, a "filet de sole" is not a rarity yet, nor a "navarin d'agneau," and French chefs have always been noted for their ingenuity in making potatoes interesting. And even if the rarer French vegetables are lacking, potatoes and carrots and sprouts (particularly sprouts) are always plentiful, and cooked in the French way.

There is at least one French restaurant which continues to specialize in oysters, including the small plebeian French "portugaises" which the proprietor claims to get from somewhere in Suffolk.

The food problem confronting the more exotic restaurants—Spanish, Hungarian and, above all, Chinese and Indian—are acute. A shortage of pimento must greatly baffle a Spanish cook as a shortage of paprika must puzzle an Hungarian. However, there are several Spanish restaurants in and around Soho, and even without pimento, they continue to be among the best patronized.

Rice Helps Some

Perhaps the secret of their success is—rice. There is something satisfyingly filling about an "arroz" —those generous Spanish rice dishes containing minced meat, or a couple of eggs, and fried bananas. Even without the banana, which vanished a month or two ago, much is still to be said for the Spanish "arroz."

The Chinese and Indians are perhaps facing their most serious crisis. In a famous Chinese place in Gerrard street the proprietor explained he had been getting next to nothing from China for months and that Chinese ingredients would become very scarce indeed in two months.

How could he, he asked, cook Chinese food without Chinese ingredients. He has had to remove from his menu all chop sueys with onions as an ingredient—onions are unobtainable. Lee chee, one of the most delicious fruits in the world, has disappeared. For a while tinned lee chee was available, but that's all gone, too.

D. S. T. In Winter Saves Huge Power Output For War Industries

Ottawa, May 5.—Daylight saving time in Quebec and Ontario during the past winter made available in four months 150,000 h.p. more electric power for war industries than would have been the case if the usual custom of standard time had been reverted to in the fall, it was estimated over the week-end by H. J. Symington, power controller of Canada.

"Well worth while," was the way Mr. Symington described the special wartime action of keeping the clocks in these two provinces ahead one hour, and he indicated that because of such good results the public can expect to have daylight saving time in effect again next winter if the war is still on then, as appears likely.

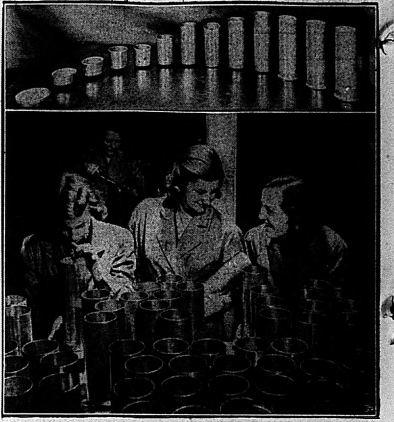
More power was particularly made available to such important war industries in the province as aluminum, where every pound of the sharply increased output of Aluminum Company of Canada has been contracted for by the government, and has expanded substantially.

Mr. Symington's estimate of 150,000 h.p. covered a period of four months during the past winter, and over the longer period of several months that daylight saving time remained in effect, naturally the saving would have been that much greater.

It was pointed out by the power controller that it would have taken $20,000,000 to provide a plant to produce that much power, apart from the question of immediate need and the impossibility of building a plant that would produce the power at once.

Haiti will have a cotton crop of approximately 3,500,000 kilograms this year, much larger than last year's crop.

CANADA TURNS OUT CARTRIDGE CASES BY THOUSANDS



Among the many tools of war now being turned out in Canada are cartridge cases. Some idea of what is implied by the term "drawing a cartridge case" may be gained from the photo at top. This disk of brass at the left is gradually drawn out until it becomes a case such as the one shown at extreme right. In the lower photo women workers in a Canadian munitions plant are shown as they inspect completed cases.—Photos—Director of Public Information.

Stirling and District

Stirling I. O. O. F. And Rebekahs Attend Service

Stirling, May 5 (Special)—The auditorium of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, was filled to capacity on Sunday morning. Officers and members of the Stirling I.O.O.F. Stirling Encampment No. 80 and Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 along with visiting brethren from neighbouring communities and regular members and adherents of St. Paul's made up the largest congregation gathered in the church for several months. The members and officers of the three lodges gathered at the lodge hall and proceeded in colourful procession to the church, where they occupied more than half of the seats in the auditorium. Special music was offered by the large choir under the direction of Mr. G. L. Clute organist and choirleader who presided at the organ. Mr. Tompkins soprano soloist was responsible for the solo portions of the splendid anthem.

Stirring Message by Rev. Laverty

Basing his thoughts on the text, "He Trusteth in God." Rev. Laverty emphasized the need of staunch faith in these difficult days. Makeshift beliefs in things Christian are sufficient for many in days of smooth unruffled sailing, but in the time of storm and chaos only true faith will sustain us. In the midnight hour of remorse only unshatterable faith in God's forgiveness can restore the happiness of normal life. In the midnight of sickness, pain and suffering our need is unconquerable faith in God can fortify us to meet the challenge. The midnight of chaos war and destruction, bereavement and disappointment can only be surmounted by Christian faith standing firm in the ruins. Dark days that test the fibre of our faith are these and out of the midnight of this world conflict Christianity will triumph because of its faith in God.

Choir Presents Sacred Oratorio

Stirling, May 5 (Special) — A large gathering of music lovers from all parts of the Stirling district were thrilled by a fine performance given by the members of Christ Church male choir Belleville as they presented in its entirety the sacred Oratorio. "The Saviour of the World" from the works of Sir Sydney Nicholson. The entire proceeds of the evening which were about $22.50 will be turned over to the British War Victims' Fund.

This splendid work was created by one ranking high in the world of music, Sir Sydney Nicholson is a former organist of Westminster Abbey where he presided successfully for about thirteen years. He resigned to become head of the Church of England School of Music. Thirty voices formed the well balanced choir which was directed by Mr. George N. Maybee organist and choirmaster of Christ Church, Belleville. In their fine performance the singers gave prominence to the brilliance of this modern composer who toured Canadian cities about three years ago.

The tenor solo portions of the work were ably sung by Mr. A. Simpson. Messrs. B. J. Theobald and T. Hyland excelled themselves in performance as they sang the baritone solo portions. Possessing silver tenor male soprano voices of remarkable range and sweetness the boy soloists were Jack Shadock, Gordon Watkins and Bruce Wood.

At the completion of the performance Rev. Leslie Harding, Rector of St. John's Church, Stirling, expressed gratitude of those present for the fine work well given by those in the visiting choir.

The proceeds of the evening will be sent forth to the Toronto Telegram as a donation to the British War Victims' Fund.

Huns Flood Air Waves Of Continent

From the London News Chronicle.

Seven o'clock in the morning. Big Ben strikes the hour bidding good morning to the world. Then the English announcer begins to read the news.

It is a busy time all over the world. From all stations in all languages news is trumpeted into the ears of the people who are getting ready to go to their daily work dressing, having their breakfast.

Of course, Germany is the busiest, the loudest of them all. She now has nearly all the stations of the Continent at her disposal, from Oslo down to Bucharest and Sofia.

Her own stations, Deutschlandsender, Bremen, Hamburg, Berlin, are leading the aerial war against Great Britain: five, six, seven times a day you hear her war-cry: Germany calling; Germany calling. And then Englishmen and Englishwomen in excellent, cultured English begin to tell the English public how rotten their Government is, how desperate the position of their country.

News in English, French, Dutch, Spanish, Turkish, Russian—incessantly the flood of polyglot propaganda rolls on, every piece wonderfully tuned to the mentality of the foreign listener. Always with the same leitmotiv: Germany is fighting for the new order in the world. Great Britain, driven by the capitalist masters, has no other war aim than to maintain the old order.

Tune in to whichever station you like in Europe, with a few exceptions you will hear German propaganda: from Oslo down to Bucharest and Belgrade the wireless is controlled by Dr. Goebbels.

On the dial of the radio set the next door neighbor of Budapest is Berne. This station is one of the few which are trying hard to be neutral. But what can little Switzerland do? Her stations, Beromunster in German and Sottens in French, regularly give the German and Italian war communiques first and complete from the first letter to the last dot. The British communiques are more cautiously treated, but at least they are not distorted.

There is another wireless station in Central Europe which does not make itself a tool of German propaganda — Radio Vichy, the broadcast of the French Government. It is not friendly to Great Britain, but it is honest. Besides that quality, it always gives one of the most interesting broadcasts in the whole crazy orchestra.

If you listen to the Paris radio you will think that these men of Vichy are nothing but crooks and traitors. "Marshall Petain is for some of them a fire-screen, for others an alibi." That is what one of the Paris radio men told his French listeners a few days ago.

Astonishing? Not if you know that Radio Vichy is pure French and Radio Paris is pure German in French lingo. Its broadcasts are controlled by the Germans, and its broadcasters are paid by the Germans.

They are always on the air — in the morning, at noon and at six o'clock in the evening. At the same time English news is broadcast Germany is calling. Very often the waves mix together, then a real babel sets in — with all of them speaking and shouting, French, English, German, even Welsh.

Perhaps it would be funny. But the themes of all of them are war, killing, sinking of ships, destroying of homes, burning of factories. "Damage was done to houses; there were a few casualties." "Great fires were started...." No Beethoven, no Mozart, no Strauss.

It is a crazy world you are listening to.

BLOCKED BY SNOW FALL

Enumclaw, Wash., May 5 (AP)—Two State Highway Department snowplows late last night rescued between 25 and 30 automobiles blocked for several hours in Naches Pass, 80 miles east of here on the state's east-west highway, by an unseasonal blizzard.

Roland Young, Ray Milland and Anna Neagle in a scene from gay musical laugh hit "Irene," now showing at the McCarthy Theatre, May Robson, Billie Burke and Alan Marshal head the excellent supporting cast.

Probabilities

Lower Lake Region — Mostly cloudy tonight and Wednesday with occasional showers and continuing warm; probably some fog tonight; moderate to fresh southeast to southwest winds.

BRITISH PLANES BOMB IRAQI POSITIONS

Fighting In Iraq Has Spread, Says RAF Communique

British Planes Attack Military Positions At Diwaniya, Motor Transport At Al Falluluja

BASRA AREA 'QUIET'

Cairo May 6 (AP)—Fighting in Iraq has spread, with British planes bombing Iraqi military positions at Diwaniya and motor transport at Al Falluja, the Royal Air Force Middle East command announced today.

The war bulletin said that the four-day Iraq shelling of British-held Habbaniyah airdrome, 60 miles west of Baghdad, had produced only "negligible" results.

Diwaniya is on the Euphrates River, about 130 miles below Baghdad, and Al Falluja is some 30 miles west of Baghdad, just below the British-Held airdrome at Dhibban.

British Aircraft Active

Cairo, May 6 (AP)—Iraqi shelling of British forces in the Habbaniyah area yesterday was "intermittent and inaccurate" while British aircraft were "again active," the Middle East command announced today.

The situation in the Basra area at the head of the Persian Gulf, where there are British troops, "remains quiet," the war bulletin said. Habbaniyah airdrome, 60 miles west of Baghdad has been under fire of Iraq artillery since last Thursday.

London, May 6 (AP)—Turkey's offer to mediate the British-Iraq fight and Egypt's appeal to the Iraquis to seek terms peaceably were sidetracked today in favor of a hard-hitting military campaign in the oil-rich Middle East kingdom.

As Britain's land and air forces stepped up their efforts to subdue what the government termed the "illegal" regime of Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani, some sections of the London press called for results and took a critical view of the government's handling of Iraq relations.

The Daily Herald described the diplomatic prelude to the out-break of fighting last Friday in Iraq as "the latest example of inedaquate British methods" and said there had been "either complacency or incompetence somewhere."

The Daily Mail asked if Britain's diplomatic representatives in Iraq had been "taken by surprise" and said members of parliament would "demand a prosecution of the Iraq operation with the utmost vigor — something stronger than leaflets on Baghdad."

The Royal Air Force Middle East Command had announced yesterday that 24,000 leaflets written in Arabic had been showered on Baghdad by British bombers.

EDEN EXPRESSES FAITH TURKEY WILL AID BRITAIN

Tells Arab Peoples, Including the Iraqis, to Beware of Axis Victory

LENGTHY DISCUSSION

London, May 6 (CP). — Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons today that the sooner United States war materials reach the battlefields of Asia, Africa and Europe the sooner the war will end.

He expressed faith that Turkey would stand by Britain and he told Arab peoples, including the Iraqis, to beware of an axis victory.

During his review, which opened for the government in the full dress debate on the conduct of the war, a member interrupted Mr. Eden's reference to United States aid with: "Let us do a bit ourselves".

Mr. Eden retorted he was "presupposing maximum effort of ourselves and the United States of America."

After Mr. Eden sat down at the conclusion of his long speech, Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, declared "now that events are going against us, I trust temporarily, there is a tendency to minimize their importance, to distinguish them from what is happening in the Atlantic."

Smaller Margin of Time.

H. B. Lees-Smith, Labor, speaking from the front Opposition bench, warned that in the battle of Suez Britain had a smaller margin of time than in the battle of the Atlantic.

Sen. Pepper Says U.S. Should Occupy Iceland, Azores, Canary Is., Dakar

Washington, May 6 (AP)—Declaring that "it is time for the United States to get tough," Senator Claude Pepper (Dem-Florida) urged today that the nation, in co-operation with Britain, occupy Greenland, Iceland, the Azores, the Cape Verde and Canary Islands, Singapore and Dakar, West Africa.

Pepper's "get tough" program also carried these recommendations:—

That the United States and British Navies "join openly" in the Pacific "to shut up the Japanest fleet in its lair," and

That long-range bombers, manned by American pilots enlisting voluntarily, be made available to China.

"A few bombers flown by American pilots wouldn't leave enough of Tokyo to build a bonfire," he commented.

The Florida Senator, consistent administration supporter and early advocate of aid to Britain, said in a speech prepared for Senate delivery:—

"We must stifle threats against us near their source. We have already waited too long. If we continue a pussy-footing policy the foe will not fear us and our friends will not respect us."

Speaking of lease-lend cargoes, Pepper asserted that the United States "should resolve that no power will keep us from getting the goods to Britain, and getting them there now."

Should Treat Hitler as Gangster

It was up to military and naval experts, he added, to decide on the best method for guaranteeing safe delivery.

As far as Hitler was concerned, Pepper said, the United States should react to him as it had to the Barbary Coast pirates in the early years of the last century, and to the gangsters of the Dillinger days.

The suggestion of bombers and "volunteer" fliers for China was prefaced by the assertion that the time had come 'to give some plain talk and if necessary some plain action to Japan."

'We know that the little yellow men are waiting behind the door with a drawn dagger to stab us when we become involved with another foe," Pepper said.

"We should take the initiative. I believe a few American pilots in first class bombing planes could make a shambles out of Tokyo.

"If the Japanese get a sample in their capital of what they did to China . . . they may lose some of their blood-thirstiness."

Declaring he stood for "a policy of realism," the Florida Senator asserted that 'we have been paralyzed for a month because of administration and the Congress have not dared to face issues squarely and decide them.

"The government has ceased to lead the people of America, and where there is no leadership the people perish."

CLYDESIDE AREA HEAVILY RAIDED FOR MANY HOURS

Eight German Planes Downed During Night By R. A. F. Fighters

BELFAST AGAIN BOMBED

London, May 6 — (CP) — The teeming banks of the Clyde River, lined with great shipyards from Glasgow to the sea, took a fierce pounding last night and early today as German air raiders scattered bombs over a wide area of England, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

The government announced "much damage" was done in the Clydeside area, which the Nazis attacked in relays for several hours, and indicated that the toll of dead and wounded might be heavy.

NAZI TARGETS ATTACKED BY RAF

'Great Weight of Bombs' Dumped on Manufacturing Areas in Germany and in Occupied France

London, May 6 (CP)—"A great weight" of incendiary and high explosive bombs—possibly including the new super-bombs—were dumped on the German industrial city of Mannheim last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Frankfurt-am-Main, various manufacturing centres in the Middle Rhine area and Boulogne, Cherbourg, St. Nazaire, on the French coast, and Stavanger, Norway, were other targets of the Royal Air Force.

Informed sources said that while the Mannheim attack was on a large scale, it was below the proportions of raids made heretofore on such objectives at Kiel and other German cities.

Although a large force of bomber participated in these operations, all returned safely to base.

Aircraft of the coastal command blasted objectives at the German-held French port of St. Nazaire and Nazi airdromes near Stavanger, Norway, starting large fires.

American Firm Leases Robb Wave Organ Buildings To Manufacture Veneer Plastic Parts For Planes

Newly Formed Canadian Subsidiary of Bristol Aircraft Corp. of Bristol, Va., Will Give Employment to About Fifty People When it Goes Into Production in June

PRODUCT SUITABLE FOR BOAT CONSTRUCTION

The only plant of its kind in Canada at present to use the new process of manufacturing airplane parts and fuselages from moulded veneer with plastic resin as a bonding agent, the newly formed Bristol Aircraft Products Limited, Canadian subsidiary of the Bristol Aircraft Corporation of Bristol, Virginia, is expected to go into production here in early June.

Negotiations for the lease of the former Robb Wave Organ Company buildings situated in the northeast part of the city were completed this week, and work on alterations and equipping the buildings for the new industry will start immediately. E. P. Rutherford, local contractor, has been given the contract for the work.

C. C. Lincoln, Jr., president of the Bristol Aircraft Corporation, in an exclusive interview stated that the new industry is not a war venture, but will be of a permanent nature. "While the primary reason is to assist Britain to win the war," he said, "my company foresees a tremendous influx of European peoples and industry to Canada after the war. Canada will be the post-war country and aviation will be the outstanding post-war industry. We shall not confine our work to the manufacture of plane parts and fuselages alone, but will branch out in boat-building and other manufactures which the new process of plastic veneer is opening up. These operations of course will not be undertaken until after the war. Right now our object is to manufacture parts for planes, with the strong probability that we shall manufacture the entire plane with the exception of motors and instruments."

Italians In Ethiojan Stronghold Of Amba Alagi Hemmed In By British

London, May 6 (CP)—Axis planes have resumed dive-bombing attacks on the British garrison at the Libyan port of Tobruk, but no major land fighting is in progress there, an authoritative source said today.

Fighting in Ethiopia was said to be continuing around Amba Alagi, one of the Italians' last Ethiopian strongholds northeast of Addis Ababa.

The Italians were reported hemmed in on a stretch of from 30 to 40 miles of road, cut off by British forces north and south.

Italian strongholds at Gondar and Jima were said to be holding out.

MACHINE EXPORTS TO RUSSIA BY U.S. REPORTED BANNED

Policy Adopted Despite Strenuous Soviet Diplomatic Efforts

REASONS OUTLINED

Washington, May 6 (AP) — The United States, it was learned authoritatively today, has halted all exports to Russia of machinery or equipment which can be utilized in defence production.

The policy was adopted, it was said, despite strenuous Soviet diplomatic efforts to obtain the necessary export permits and despite the fact that some of the machines involved had been ordered and paid for by the Russians months ago.

UPLANDS AIRPORT SCENE OF CRASH

FO. B. L. Duffey, Toronto, and LAC. D. N. Lord of Australia, Victims

Ottawa, May 6—(CP) — Royal Canadian Air Force Headquarters announced today the death of two men in a crash at Uplands Airport while engaged in night flying operations last night.

The dead: FO. B. L. Duffey of Toronto and LAC. D. N. Lord of Melbourne, Australia.

The next of kin already have been notified, the Air Force said.

There were no witnesses to the accident.

The machine was located in a field about two miles south of the flying school by searching aircraft this morning.

A court of inquiry has been convened.

FO. Duffey, 34, is survived by his widow and two children. He was born at Seaforth, Ont. He began private flying in 1936 and at the time of his enlistment in September, 1940, held a commercial flying licence. He was commissioned last January.

ROYAL AIR FORCE BOMBS HEAVILY LIBYAN TARGETS

Bengasi Harbor, Airdrome at Benina and 3 Nazi Landing Fields Attacked

5 AS PLANES LOST

Cairo, May 6 (AP)—Bengasi harbor and the airdrome at nearby Benina as well as German-Italian landing fields at Barce, Derna and Gazala, in Libya, were the targets of very heavy bombing attack" by the Royal Air Force, it was announced today.

At least five axis planes, including one more large troop carriers, were destroyed at Benina, said the Royal Air Force communique, apparently covering operations yesterday.

Nazi Apologists Change Views

Berlin, May 6 (AP)—Hitler's hint in his Reichstag address Sunday that the war might run into 1942 probably is based on "the calculated effect of American intervention," the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland said tonight.

Earlier Nazi spokesmen saw in Hitler's mention of arms for "next year" only an answer to "English and American propaganda" that Britain but to hold out this year to the war.

The commentary, which has close Foreign Office connections, contended prolongation of the war could not affect the final outcome of German victory.

Hitler's emphasis on Germany's determination to hold the lead in "history's greatest armament race" induced by German leaders to consider the prospect of a prolonged conflict with more enemies.

Thus Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, commenting on Hitler's Reichstag address Sunday, referred to a statement attributed to American generals and admirals that German armament production was at its maximum while the United States is "a nation on wheels."

BELLEVILLE GIRL SUFFERS BULLET WOUND, DIES

Thelma Argent, 16, Shot In Head, In Home Of Her Employer

YOUTH CHARGED

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—Sixteen-year-old Thelma Argent of Belleville, shot in the head last night at the home where she worked in suburban Birch Cliff, died in hospital early today.

The girl was wounded by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of Ralph Darlington, 16, in whose home the shooting took place while they were in an upstairs room with Ralph's 15-year-old brother, Kenneth.

Held Without Bail

Ralph Darlington was held without bail on a charge of attempted murder, laid by Chief Constable Thomas Draycott of Birch Cliff on instructions of crown officials. The charge was not changed immediately after the girl's death.

She had been given little chance to survive the wound. The bullet entered between her eyes and shattered, spreading to all parts of her head.

Darlington was scheduled to appear in court later today with his father, who was charged with being in possession of an unregistered rifle.

British Destroyer Again Back At Sea After Battle With Nazi Dive Bombers

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 6 (CP)— Though struck by three bombs the destroyer Atherstone beat off German planes which thought they had an easy task to "finish her off" and safely reached port.

Repairs completed, the Atherstone is at sea again, engaged as before in shepherding convoys through the dangerous approaches to Britain. The Admiralty has now released the story of her encounter with dive-bombers some months ago.

H.M.S. Atherstone, under Cmdr. H. W. S. Browning, was defending a convoy against a large force of German planes .Three Messerschmitt 109 fighter-bombers came over first, trying to shoot down the convoy's protective balloon barrage.

Escort ships and convoy craft all opened fire and the Nazis, in the captain's words, "retired with more haste than dignity."

Then a large force of hostile airplanes was sighted ahead, coming in to attack. Half the force dived on the Atherstone which engaged them with every gun she could bring to bear. About 30 bombs were aimed at the ship.

It seemed as if all of them must register hits but only three struck the Atherstone. One passed between the legs of the leading signalman on the bridge. The First Lieutenant, who was aft, had to duck to avoid being hit by one bomb which just missed the warship. Meantime fighters machine-gunned the destroyer.

Believing the Atherstone helpless, more Junkers began their dive on the convoy. To their surprise the damaged destroyer opened fire on them. Another escorting destroyer, which they apparently had failed to notice, also engaged them. The Junkers broke off the attack and vanished.

The convoy proceeded without casualties or damage. The Atherstone began the slow and anxious job of shoring up the bulkheads and preparing to be taken in tow. It was slow because the proper gear had been blown overboard, anxious because the crippled craft lay directly in the German bomber route area. Two hours of daylight remained with a night of full moon to follow.

Her captain told officers and crew of their dangerous situation and warned them a further attack was probable. Gun crews prepared for the anticipated encounter. Stokers, signalmen, cooks and supply parties got the ship ready for towing.

But there was no further excitement. Within 24 hours the Atherstone was safely docked. Within a few days her captain and crew took over a new destroyer and shortly the reconditioned Atherstone was again protecting British convoys.

H.M.S. Atherstone, a destroyer of the Hunt class, was laid down in 1939. Her displacement is 904 tons and her armament includes four four-inch anti-aircraft guns. Her speed is 32.5 knots.

75 Of Canadian Military Forces Included In List

Navy Men, RAF Men Norwegian Air Force, Ferry Pilots Aboard Ship Sunk

NO DETAILS GIVEN

Ottawa, May 5 (CP)—A list of 122 persons, missing and believed lost at sea due to enemy action, was issued today by the Defence Department.

There was no announcement given out with the list but it followed by some hours a statement to the House of Commons by Navy Minister Macdonald that 75 military personnel were feared lost at sea.

Today's list included men from various branches of the army, some civilians, navy men, Royal Air Force men, members of the Royal Norwegian Air Force, ferry pilots and members of the United Kingdom and Canada Inspection Board.

The list of navy men, compiled by the navy and issued by the Defence Department was headed "missing, believed lost on war service." The balance of the list, compiled by defence headquarters, was headed merely "unreported."

Included in the list of missing was Sam Robertson, of Ottawa, superintendent of The London Bureau of The Canadian Press, previously officially reported as believed missing as the result of enemy action during a sea voyage.

Inclusion of 11 ferry pilots, all of whose next of kin live in the United States, raised speculation the list might concern more than one boat. It was thought improbable that ferry pilots would be travelling by boat to the United Kingdom and Robertson was known to have been returning to Britain after a vacation in Canada.

Military Staff Suffers.

Of the various army formations, the corps of military staff clerks suffered the greatest loss, 33.

Other branches of the services which suffered losses were: Royal Canadian Navy, 10; Royal Canadian Artillery, 6; Infantry, 2; New Brunswick Regiment, 4; Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, 8; Royal Canadian Army Pay Corps, 3; Royal Canadian Engineers, 3; Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, 3; Manitoba Regiment, 2; Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, 3; Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps, 5; Canadian Provost Corps, 1; Royal Air Force, 8; Royal Norwegian Air Force, 3.

Five members of the Lomas family were included in the list, J. E. Lomas of the United Kingdom and Canada Inspection Board, apparently having been travelling with his wife, two daughters and a son though the list gave no next of kin and no relationship in this case.

The navy had made plain that today's list did not concern the armed merchant cruiser Voltaire, previously announced by the British Admiralty as considered lost. The navy last night announced that Surgeon Lieut. Charles M. Fisher, of Kitchener, Ont., Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, reported missing previously, was the only Canadian casualty on the Voltaire.

Guelph Council Removes Lindbergh's Books From Library

Guelph, Ont., May 6 — (CP) — City Council decided last night to ask the Library Board to destroy all books and writings of Charles Lindbergh in the Guelph Free Library "in order to protect our Canadian youth." The decision was reached in approving a resolution introduced by Alderman Frank Howard and Gordon Rife.

When the people of England "refused to fall on his (Lindbergh's) neck and worship him as a hero, he moved to Germany and learned some things he is making use of today," Alderman Howard said. "Our children have no business reading his writings and transactions."

On April 28, Brantford City Council took similar action.

Millions Longing To Help British Says Anthony Eden

London, May 6 (C.P. Cable) — In Nazi-dominated Europe "there are millions of people longing for an opportunity to help British victory," Foreign Secretary Eden told the House of Commons today.

He made the remark in relating the escape through central Europe of two British prisoners who, he implied, were aided by civilian sympathizers.

Breaking out of an East Prussian camp, they travelled through Poland Hungary and Greece, eventually making their way to Africa where it is believed they rejoined their units on the western desert.

The men spoke English only.

FIFTEEN INITIATED INTO KINSMEN CLUB

With the conventional ceremony fifteen members of the local Kinsmen Club "rode the proverbial goat" during the spring club initiation held at Quinte Inn last evening. With Kin. Jim Fraser as chairman of the initiation, the period of ceremony lasted well into the night and culminated with a social evening and entertainment.

Those assisting in the night's frivolity were Tommy Mason, Bob Turney and Bruce Sills, who provided musical entertainment and George Cornish with his inimitable impersonations and readings.

CYCLISTS WARNED BY CITY OFFICIALS

Cyclists, who persist in riding their bicycles upon city sidewalks and the foot bridge, are receiving little warning and are being summoned into court for such breaches of the city bylaws, it was announced at the police station today.

"With our present paved streets there is no excuse for riding bicycles upon the sidewalks. Insofar as riding bicycles on the footbridge, this practice is becoming a menace and hazardous to pedestrians and those found in violation of this practice will be immediately hailed into court and severely dealt with if convicted," Chief Kidd added as a word of warning this morning.

NAMES OMITTED INADVERTENTLY

In the report of the Sunday night concert at the McCarthy Theatre which was sponsored by the Belleville Fire Department in aid of the British Fire Fighters' Relief Fund, the names of Barbara and Ronald Donovan were inadvertently omitted. The song and dance number rendered by Barbara and Ronald were much appreciated and brought forth much well-merited applause.

DAUGHTER CARRIES ON TRADITION

Tingham, Mass., May 6 (AP) — Lieut. George D. Samonski, U.S.N., retired, despaired of seeing the navy tradition carried on in his family. He had four daughters and no son. But today he is beaming with pride. His daughter, Helen, 29, a hospital supervisor, has been called for service in the navy, as a member of the medical corps.

Casual Jobs Are Going Begging For Lack Of Workers

Casual jobs such as mowing lawns and other jobs around the home or garden requiring from a few hours to a day's work are going begging in the city, according to Employment Service Superintendent W. D. Ross. Every day several calls are received for laborers to do such work, but in many cases the calls must go unanswered owing to lack of workers to send to the job.

Calls from farmers asking for help are also being received quite frequently, but here again laborers are scarce, and the farmer has to leave without obtaining the needed assistance. The domestic situation likewise continues to be quite a problem for many housewives seeking help to do their spring cleaning, it being almost impossible to obtain workers of this nature.

Administrator of Belleville Hospital Will Report to School of Administration at Trenton Airbase on Wednesday

Gordon A. Friesen, administrator of the Belleville General Hospital for the past three-and-one-half years, has received leave of absence from the Board of Governors of the institution for the duration of the war, and will report to the School of Administration of the Trenton base of the Royal Canadian Air Force, on Wednesday.

Mr. Gordon Barclay, chemist in charge of the drug department of the hospital, has been named acting administrator, during Mr. Friesen's absence. Archie Boyd, Foster Avenue, has been named to succeed Mr. Barclay.

Said to be one of the ablest hospital administrators in this part of Canada, Mr. Friesen has been responsible for many improvements in the institution since he took over the reins of administration in November, 1937. Under his capable jurisdiction, many up-to-date medical and other appliances have been installed; the new $200,000 wing erected and equipped besides a complete reorganization of the staff and Administrative system, with the result that last year the hospital was approved by the American Hospital Association and is now regarded as one of the most modern institutions of its size in Ontario.

Came From Saskatoon.

Mr. Friesen came here from the Saskatoon City Hospital peculiarly well equipped for his position. He studied hospital administration under the late Mr. Shaw, one of the ablest men of his kind in America in this particular phase of hospital operation. He attended various hospitals and institutions in order to further his education along these lines, and his ability has been exemplified many times in the results seen in the hospital here.

Mr. Friesen enjoys a well-deserved popularity with his staff, the board of governors and others with whom his work brought him in contact.

Mr. Barclay, who succeeds Mr. Friesen in an acting capacity has been associated with the hospital as pharmacist since May, 1938. He is a native of Sydenham, Ont., and a graduate of the University of Toronto. His work has been one of the contributing factors to the modernization of the hospital, and this in conjunction with other abilities, has well qualified him for the position of acting administrator.

Native of Belleville.

A graduate of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, Toronto, Mr. Boyd, son of the late John Boyd and Mrs. Boyd, Foster avenue, is a native son of Belleville. He received his public school and high school education here, graduating from the School of Pharmacy in 1936. He served his apprenticeship in McKeown's drug store here, and since graduation has been associated with Geen's drug store.

Both Mr. Barclay and Mr. Boyd will assume their new positions on Monday, May 12.

SON OF SOLDIER DROWNED

Kingston Ont., May 6 (CP)—Five-year-old Jimmie Hanson, whose father is serving overseas with the Canadian forces, was drowned today when he fell off a dock at the city's waterfront. He was playing with other children at the time.

The body was recovered about half an hour later.

Development of Industry

The new company will primarily employ about fifty people, Mr. Lincoln said, but as the industry develops, this number will be increased. If possible, with the exception of two or three key-men and instructors, one hundred per cent. local labor will be used. It is the intention of the company to secure men here in Canada who are capable of assuming responsible positions. These men will be taken to the large plant of the parent company in Bristol, Virginia, where they will undergo a course of instruction. Later they will be sent to the Bristol Aircraft Products Company here where they will be placed in charge of the various departments.

Canadian Charter

The company has secured a Canadian charter, Mr. Lincoln pointed out, and has been given contracts by the Canadian Government. "We are accepting payment in Canadian funds," he said.

Complete equipment will be installed in the new plant with the special high pressure cookers in which the products are baked, coming from the United States.

An employment office will be opened in the plant within the next two weeks, while application forms for potential employees will be placed with the Ontario Employment Bureau superintendent here.

Rigid tests of the new process and its products were undertaken and approved by the Royal Canadian Air Force, Mr. Lincoln said. "It is the answer to volume production of aircraft, as planes can be manufactured from veneer plastic on a ratio of seven to one.

Choice of Belleville Location

Decision to locate the new industry in Belleville followed a survey of several other cities in Ontario and Quebec. "The locale here is just what we wanted," Mr. Lincoln said. "It is well situated as we shall ship our parts to plants in Montreal and Toronto. It means economic distribution for us inasmuch as we are located about midway between the two cities."

The new process of moulded veneer plastic fabricated by cooking in high pressure tanks, is the result of intensive study and research by scientists and chemists over a period of years. These men worked quietly for avoiding all mention of their work until they had amassed sufficient data to make a large scale use possible. As a result, when a United States' Government department requested manufacturers to make special efforts to investigate the possibility of using plastic parts to save supplies of metals, they were ready with a process for mass production.

Tests in United States

Two plastic planes built in a laboratory, in a certain American city, entirely by the cooking process are now flying and have passed all material and load tests of the Civil Aeronautics Board of the U. S. Government. A bombing plane has passed exhaustive loading tests and is now ready for mass production by the Canadian Government. It is the largest aircraft structure ever moulded. It differs from most so-called plastic planes in that not only its outside skin, but all the inside ribs, bracings and "stringers" giving it structural strength are moulded in one operation.

The moulding process appears almost magical. Thin sheets and strips of tough aircraft wood, impregnated with a resinous substance that sets when subject to heat and pressure into an infusible mass, are placed criss-cross and in various patterns on master-moulds.

Often appearing to be crinkled and warped, the sheets and the molds are placed inside the cooking tank. There they are subjected to live steam at a high pressure, after which the sheets come out pressed together, fitting stretched and taut, over the master-moulds.

Moulded Structures

The moulded structures, which can vary from simple air ducts for superchargers to complicated wing sections, peel easily off the moulds. When dry, the moulded structure is more rigid than metal and will take a sprayed on coat of plastic paint to resemble metal in its shiny finish. The plastics permeate the wood itself and provide a lasting fire and water resisting bond.

Tests have proved conclusively that planes made of veneer plastic, while weighing from ten to fifteen per cent less than metal machines can take much heavier loads than the orthodox models.

Charles C. Lincoln, Jr.

The President of the Bristol Aircraft Production Company is a young man 39 years of age, and has a wealth of executive ability. He is the owner of a chain of department stores, a chain of theatres and the largest hotel in Bristol, Virginia, as well as being connected with other business enterprises. He is the President of the Virginia-Lincoln Furniture Company, one of the largest furniture manufacturing companies in the United States.

With him are associated the Pew Bros., oil magnates of Philadelphia, Pa., and the owners of the largest office building in that city. Mr. Lincoln is a keen business man, one accustomed to dealing with business problems of a large nature.

He is an ardent fisherman and is looking forward to indulging in his favorite sport in and around the Bay of Quinte. He stated yesterday that while he will likely spend a great deal of time here the new plant will be under the active management of one of his executives.

The Bay of Quinte district, however is not strange to him. When a boy of seventeen years of age, he ran away from home and joined the Royal Flying Corps at Camp Mohawk, Deseronto. After receiving instructions, he was sent back to the United States, but failed in his attempts to get overseas. He is married but has no children.

Months of Negotiation

Decision on the part of the Bristol Aircraft Products to locate here followed two months' secret negotiations between the parent company and Mr. J. O Herity, Industrial Commissioner for the City of Belleville and Secretary - Manager of the Chamber of Commerce, and Alderman Robert Pringle, Chairman of Industries of the City Council.

During his several visits here prior to deciding to locate on the new site, Mr. Lincoln was conducted on tours of the district and its advantages pointed out by these officials.

Predicts Future

During the course of the interview, Mr. Lincoln explained the possibilities for construction of many articles by veneer plastic.

"Post-war activities," he said, "will see the manufacture of boats, canoes, power-cruisers by the hundred. Boats can be built with a moulded seamless veneer eliminating caulking and other laborious methods used in present-day construction."

He predicted a future for the new process that would see a new field in volume production in practically half the time.

Obituary

LATE MARY H. HOSKIN (Thurlow Township)

The funeral of Mary Helen Hoskin took place Monday afternoon, May 5th., from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hoskin, in the 6th. concession of Thurlow Township. The service in the home and at the graveside in Victoria cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. S. McKenzie.

During the service in the home Mrs. Harry Harrison, accompanied by Mrs. A. Hall, sang a solo, "When He Cometh."

The bearers were Clare Wood, James Wood, James Hoskins, James Stapley, Roy Stapley and Ralph Collins.

GILBERT SEELEY (Foxboro)

After an illness of one month's duration Gilbert Seeley, residence Foxboro died in the Belleville General Hospital this Tuesday morning.

The late Mr. Seeley, who was in his 63rd year, was born at Ivanhoe being a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Seeley. After living for some years in the district where he was born, he went to Western Canada and settled at Elrose, Sask., where he lived for seventeen years. In the year 1932 he returned to this district and made his home in Foxboro. In the community he was held in high esteem and his death has brought regret to many friends. In religion he was a member of Foxboro United Church and when health permitted he took an active part in church work. Fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order at Elrose, Sask.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Mary J. Burrell; five sons, Mr. Robert E. Seeley, of Elrose, Sask.; Mr. Francis W. Seeley of Quill Lake, Sask.; Mr. Orrie T. Seeley of Foxboro; Mr. Charles G. Seeley of Humboldt, Sask., and Mr. Albert Seeley of Sidney Township; two brothers, Mr. Wilson Seeley, Ivanhoe and Mr. Levi Seeley, Weyburn, Sask. two sisters, Mrs. Edgar Burrell, Stirling and Mrs. Christina Kussi of Rochester, N.Y.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE SIMON HENRY DeLONG (Toronto)

The death occurred in Toronto on May 3rd of Simon Henry DeLong, a former resident of this district, who passed away at the home of his daughter Mrs. J. W. Noseworthy. The last of his family, the late Mr. DeLong was eighty years of age at the time of his death. He was a member of the United Church. One daughter, Mrs. Noseworthy, survives.

Following funeral service in Toronto yesterday the body was brought by C.N.R. for burial in Mountain View Cemetery. Rev. G. A. Adamson, pastor of Ameliasburg United Church, officiated at the committal service. The pall bearers were Messrs. Roy Snider, Wilfrid Snider, Edwin Adams, Simon Caughey, Lorne Caughey and Norris Whitney.

MRS. ALICE A. BUSH (Ameliasburg Township)

Mrs. Alice Adelia Bush, widow of Samuel Wesley Bush, died this Tuesday morning at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Ray Fox, with whom she made her home in the 1st Concession of Ameliasburg Township, Prince Edward County. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Bush who was in her 75th year, was born in Ameliasburg Township, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David DeLong. For some years she lived at Wellington and for the past five years she made her home with her daughter Mrs. Ray Fox in Ameliasburg Township. In religion she was a member of the United Church and highly esteemed.

Surviving her are three daughters, Mrs. Cleveland Blakley of Wellington; Mrs. Ray Fox, Ameliasburg Township and Mrs. Reg Gilmore of Meaford. Another daughter, Mrs. George McCurdy, died some time ago. Six grandchildren and five great grandchildren also survive her.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

42 Students Of War Emergency Classes Hold Banquet

Graduating machinists and welders of the War Emergency Classes being held at the Belleville Collegiate, staged an impromptu banquet and informal get-together at the Tabernacle Church rooms on Monday evening when approximately fifty students of the courses together with their instructors, sat down to a delicious supper catered by the ladies of Tabernacle church.

During the course of the evening forty-two machinists and welders were awarded their certificates as a reward of successfully completing their three-month course at the Collegiate. Certificates were awarded by Mr. George Ferguson, chief instructor, and Mr. Harold Howard, welding instructor. Timely remarks regarding the students entering industry were given by Mr. H. W. Hamilton, Assistant Superintendent of Canada Cement at Point Anne and by Mr. Frank Maracle, both of whom are instructors at the Collegiate.

Of the forty-two students receiving their certificates at last evening's get-together, approximately one-half have already been accepted into industry, either in Belleville or at distant industrial plants, and are doing their bit for the furtherance of Canada's war effort. The balance of the graduates who received their certificates are assured of openings, it was stated by Mr. Ferguson.

Adding to the enjoyment of the impromptu supper was a program of community singing into which all present entered with spirit. Mr. Howard also favoured with vocal selections. Mr. Phil Huddleston acted as piano accompanist for the evening.

AUXILIARY SHIPS OF GREEK NAVY SAVAGELY BOMBED

Greek Gov't., Relating Last Days of Nazi Drive Through Greece Tells of Fate of Ships

Canea, Crete, May 6 (AP)—The Greek government, recapitulating the fate of its navy in the last days of the German drive through Greece said today that all its auxiliary vessels—more than 30—had been "savagely bombed and machine-gunned, sinking with the crews."

These ships included minelayers, patrol and escort vessels.

Greece's submarines have reached Alexandria, Egypt, where they joined the British fleet.

Of the destroyers, three were sunk, firing to the last against dozens of German bombers," the statement said.

Two of Greece's torpedo boats have reached Alexandria.

The hospital ships Hesperos, Policos, Attiki, Socrates and Hellenis were sunk, the statement said, "although they were unarmed and were carrying full lights and bearing signs stipulated by the International Red Cross.

"Survivors struggling in the sea were pitilessly machine-guned. The case of one was particularly flagrant as it carried women and children.

TRIBUTE PAID SAM ROBERTSON

Correspondent for PM and E.P.U. Council Voices Regret at Loss of Friend

London, May 6 —(CP Cable)— Sorrow at the report of the loss of Sam Robertson, London superintendent of The Canadian Press as a result of enemy action at sea was expressed today by Maj. J. J. Astor, president of The Empire Press Union.

Mr. Robertson was a member of the council of the E.P.U. "....All his colleagues on this council will, I know, share my deep regret and feel that they have lost a helpful colleague who was also a personal friend," Maj. Astor said.

"We feel, too, that the press of Canada has lost one of its most able journalists."

In forwarding this tribute to the London office of The Canadian Press, Maj. Astor added: "Will you be so kind as to convey to your head office and relatives the deep sympathy of all members of the E.P.U.'s council."

Death National in War Time

New York, May 6 (CP)— Tribute was paid to Sam Robertson, London superintendent of The Canadian Press who is reported missing at sea, in a dispatch appearing today in the New York newspaper PM from its London correspondent, Sam Robertson.

"You find you do not grieve about your friends dying in war time as you did in time of peace," the PM correspondent wrote. "Still we do grieve for Sam. All Fleet Street received the news with deep sorrow.

Death is not personal in war time, it is national—you die for the community, not for yourself. Sam believed in fighting this war and he believed in Canada and for what Canada was fighting. We know he did not mind dying since he had to. He was one of Canada's best reporters and from now on Canada will owe part of its freedom to Sam."

Massey Issues Statement

London, May 6 (CP Cable)—Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom, issued the following statement today:

"Journalism in London, as well as the Canadian community here, has sustained a very great loss in the death of Mr. S. S. Robertson, London superintendent of The Canadian Press.

"In the short time during which Mr. Robertson was in charge of the Canadian Press in London his sound judgment and balanced comment did much to promote mutual understanding between Canada and Britain, and by his great ability he has made a marked contribution to the common war effort.

"Mr. Robertson's place will indeed be hard to fill."

CONDITION UNCHANGED

St. Catharines, Ont., May 6 — (CP)— Condition of seven-year-old Paul Cooper of Thorold, wounded in the abdomen Saturday evening by a bullet from an army rifle, is unchanged, hospital attendants reported today.

The lad was struck by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of Pte. Reg Kerr of Brantford, Ont., a member of a Western Ontario regiment stationed here, who was remanded for one week when he appeared in court yesterday on a charge of wounding unlawfully.

Sales Organization For 1941 Loan Largest Ever To Be Set Up In Canada

The sales organization for the 1941 Victory Loan, which is to be launched on June 2, will be the largest ever brought together in Canada.

Representatives of the Department of Finance, Bank of Canada, chartered banks, insurance companies and investment dealers have been busy for some months now laying the ground-work for the forthcoming loan and the organization is now virtually complete.

Thousands of key executives in financial and business circles and citizens from all walks of life have been drafted to give leadesrhip to the campaign.

Two former ministers of finance are joint honorary chairmen of the National Committee, Rt. Hon. Sir Thomas White, Toronto, and Hon. C. A. Dunning, Ottawa. Chairman of this committee is Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance.

G. W. Spinney, joint general manager of the Bank of Montreal is vice-chairman of the National Committee and chairman of the National Executive. G. E. Phipps, Toronto, is secretary.

The provincial premiers are honorary chairmen of the various provincial committees.

Similar to First Great War Organization

The organization for launching of the loan has been set up along the lines of the Victory Loan Organizations of the First Great War. Considerable importance is being attached to local committees on which success of the loan will depend to a vey large extent. Each province is divided into a number of divisions and these in turn are sub-divided into units, each with its own committees.

Much of the actual organizing work is being done by investment dealers. In fact, most of the key men in the various bond firms throughout the Dominion are now devoting all their time to the interests of the loan.

One of the most important subcommittees is the Dominion Publicity Committee headed by D. I. McLeod of Toronto and for which Vernon Knowles of the Canadian Bankers' Association is the general consultant.

The objective of the publicity committee is to make every Canadian Victory Loan conscious. Plans have been made for press publicity, newspaper and magazine advertising, billboard advertisements, posters, pamphlets, use of the radio, movies, parades and many other types of publicity.

Belleville Rotary Club Plays Prominent Part At Opening Day Luncheon Of Annual Convention

The stars and bars of the Star-Spangled Banner floated with the bright colors of the Union Jack in the Royal York Hotel Monday when eighteen hundred Rotarians from the United States and Canada mingled for the annual Inter-District convention which lasts for three days.

The Belleville Rotary Club some forty-five members strong, under its president Percy McGuire held the convention spotlight at the opening day luncheon. Living up to its reputation of being the best "singing club" in the far-flung district to which it belongs, the local clubmen received a fine ovation from their fellow American and Canadian Rotarians at the conclusion of the noon-day luncheon at which they were the host club.

Introduced Guest Speaker

Further honors were brought to the Belleville Club when President-elect W. J. Morrison, principal of the Ontario School for the Deaf here was given the privilege of introducing Canada's Minister of Finance the Hon. J. L. Ralston, C.M.G., D.S.O., P.C., whose ringing challenge to Canadians and the civilized world was included in his address that was broadcast to the nation later.

President-elect Morrison, did a splendid job in his introductory capacity and was heard by many residents of this city who were listening to the address broadcast over a Canadian radio network.

A significant feature of the luncheon, and one that was taken by many present as a good omen for the future relations of Canada and the United States. occurred when the entire company rose to sing the National anthems. As a soldier held the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes aloft, a tell-tale breeze swept through the banquet hall, mingling and intermingling the colors of the flags.

Fine tribute was paid to the splendid voice of Jack Deacon, Belleville's popular tenor, whose vocal efforts during the luncheon brought the assembled clubmen to their collective feet in a wave of vociferous acclaim. Mr. Deacon sang two numbers, and later was brought back with the special request to sing "Rule Britannia." Americans and Canadians alike rose to their feet and lustily sang the chorus.

Several Members at Head Table

Besides President McGuire and President-elect Morrison, Past District Governor Owen J. Herity, John Deacon and other well-known Belleville Rotarians were seated at the head table with the distinguished guest of honor.

A number of "Rotary Anns" from the city attended the convention with their husbands and were entertained royally by the Toronto Rotary Club. In the morning they were taken by motor to the Royal Scarborough Golf Club and lunched at the club-house. Later they returned to the Arcadian Court of the Robert Simpson Company where they were guests at a fashion show and afternoon tea. Last night they attended the Governor's dinner and ball in the Royal York Hotel. Today they went on shopping tours and lunched with their husbands in the Concert Hall of the hotel.

The Royal Canadian Air Force Band of Toronto entertained the Rotarians upon their arrival yesterday morning, while the convention was officially opened by Stanley G. Reid, chairman of the conference. Official welcome was extended by His Worship Mayor F. J. Conboy of Toronto.

Uniformed members of the Women's Auxiliary Services, were in charge of information desks, while a completely equipped Red Cross ambulance, "manned" entirely by young ladies in khaki uniform stood outside one of the hotel entrances.

Display of Military Equipment

A feature that proved of exceptional interest to the visiting clubmen especially those from south of the border was a display of Canada's fighting services situated on the convention floor of the hotel. Sailors, soldiers and airmen, fully equipped stood guard over the many exhibits and explained them to curious visitors.

Bren guns, machine guns of all types and calibres, naval guns, a trench gun emplacement the various parts of Canada's fighting planes and bombers, gun-turrets, engines of all descriptions, artillery, wax models of the nursing services, were on display.

A feature was a perfect working model in wood of one of the German pocket battleships carved, according to an inscription on its base, by a "prisoner of war, 1941." Nelson's famous "Victory" was also present in a large model.

We wanted to know why measures were not taken to keep German armored divisions out of Libya and asked if the government is satisfied that Vichy is maintaining strict neutrality.

Mr. Eden, retracing gorund Prime Minister Churchill covered last week declared Greece had been informed beforehand just how much aid she could expect from Britain.

Diplomatic Efforts.

Telling of the diplomatic efforts in the Middle East preceding the Nazi invasion of Yugoslavia and Greece, the foreign secretary declared he was impressed by the loyal friendship and determination of the Turks to "stand firm against any menace to their sovereignty."

"I am sure that olyalty to their alliance with this country will be the basis of the Turkish government's policy," he added.

Mr. Eden said the trouble in Iraq is of great concern to both Turkey and Britain.

He declared Britain has nothing to be ashamed of in her dealings with the Arab peoples, most of all Iraq, "whose independence we assured: it is we who have assisted them and in every respect have kept our word."

SANDSTORM ENFORCES LULL

Inactivity Reported in Salum Sector, Situation at Tobruk Unchanged

Cairo, May 6 (AP)—A heavy sandstorm has forced a lull in fighting between British and axis forces on the Libyan-Egyptian frontier in the Salum sector, the Middle East Command announced today.

At Tobruk, 80 miles west of the frontier, where the Germans and Italians have been besieging encircled British defenders, the daily war bulletin said "there is no change in the situation."

Further progress was reported by imperial columns marching northward from Dessie, on the East African front, toward the rear of Italian positions at Amba Alaji, 280 miles northaest of Addis Ababa, Ethiopian capital.

British troops advancing from Neghelli ejected and inflicted heavy losses on Italians holding covering positions at Adola. The communique said. In other sectors, it added the British advance is continuing.

WILSON AND ROOSEVELT

President Roosevelt dedicating on Sunday the birthplace of Woodrow Wilson as a shrine of freedom spoke of his "simple faith in the freedom of democracy of the world. It is the kind of faith for which we have fought before, for the existence of which we are ever ready to fight again." These words are freighted with importance. They describe the work of Mr. Roosevelt himself who has been a brave champion of the rights of the free nations and the unyielding foe of aggression.

The President spoke of so many things in the life of the former President, which are treasured by the people of the democracy, life "dedicated to the cause of freedom, to the conquest of fear and to the liberation of the eternal spirit of man from every thraldom imposed by force." He spoke of plain living and high thinking and spiritual values above material conception. Mr. Roosevelt stressed the importance of spirit values in progress and drew a picture of "unhappy nations which have placed their sole reliance on the sword as destined to perish inevitably by the sword." He declared that physical strength can never permanently withstand the impact of spiritual force.

In the address Mr. Roosevelt was thinking of the present day with its giant tasks. He remembered that Mr. Wilson "taught that democracy cannot survive in isolation. We applaud his judgment and his faith," said the President.

And the democratic world thanks President Roosevelt for all that he has done and is doing for the cause of free men.

HITLER'S SPEECH

Hitler as well as Mussolini can boast. Hitler was at his worst in this regard on Sunday when he hastily brought together the Reichstag members to tell them all that he had done in the Balkans. He spoke with the violence and the fanaticism of the despotic figure who is gloating in his own power after straddling the German nation and Central Europe. He boasted of the small numbers of the German dead as a result of the Balkan campaign, figures so foolish that they are not worth considering, but intended for the German people so that they may not lose their morale. That has been his story all along that the Germans have suffered little. But no one outside Germany doubts the Germans suffered tremendous losses in the Balkan mountains. So great was the total of wounded that these were sent to other hospitals than those in Germany.

His whole speech was one of violence, lies and lust for power. In praising the German military machine he meant to exalt himself, even to minimizing the losses. Actually he admitted only 57 officers and 1,042 men of the army killed and only 10 officers and 42 men killed in the air force, besides the missing in both services. He tried to minimize the numbers of the German army and magnify the total of the Allied armies.

His vicious attacks on Mr. Churchill were the worst in his series of speeches and the silly envious utterance of a cheap mountebank, or quack who finds himself overshadowed by the towering greatness of a man like Mr. Churchill, great in so many walks of life and a man of honor and integrity. No wonder Hitler is envious of the great British leader!

Hitler's speech displays no sign of any quality but that of the gangster. What he says and does is all trickery, lies, violence, hatred and envy. He is the very incarnation of these evils. That is his claim to notoriety and infamy. He has no other call upon fame. He repeated the old lies again and again. Carried away by his uncontrolled spirit and evil passions he goes on from untruth to untruth, his only field.

A most ridiculous statement was that Mussolini had never cried to him for help.

Every speech of his shows this fanatic clearly in his true outline—an enemy of humanity and decency among nations, the man who has exalted self, envy and brutality to the extremity. Every time he speaks he shows most clearly that he is the evil force that must be crushed for he is the very core of evil.

SCIENCE, YOU'RE ALL RIGHT

(Dr. Harry E. Barnard, director of research in the National Farm Chemurgic Council, says that 50 percent of Italian soldiers' uniforms are made of artifical wool derived from skimmed milk.)

The newscast tolls the knell of parting day,
The tractor rumbles swiftly o'er the lea,
The farmer homeward sings his merry way,
Producing plastic things for you and me.

The milk that's skimmed of all its richest part
Has so departed from its proper norm
That now, as chemists demonstrate their art,
Presto! It is a Fascist uniform.

The lowly apple, nemesis of Eve,
For only certain uses once was fit,
But pectin now is precious, they perceive,
And so a lot of starch is made of it.

Ah, science, how you lift the secret latch
To wonderland! How thrilling past compare
It is to look upon a soy bean patch
And see a coffee table growing there!

ANOTHER STREET SCENE:—The old gentleman had gazed upon the "suds" when they were too foamy. He had exhausted all his finances and the demon thirst was dusting his throat. He poured out his woes to a friend, telling him that his favorite hotel had cut off his credit, and that is all there was too it.

But the friend was more optimistic. The old fellow was possessed of a fine singing voice, so the pal decided it could be put to good use. As a result, a few minutes later, residents of the vicinity were amazed to see a figure striding down the street, a military cap on his head, singing lustily "Roll Out the Barrel." Within a few minutes he had a larger following than the Pied Piper of Hamelin. Down the street went the strange cavalcade.

Outside a hotel it halted. The old gentleman entered and again the strains of the song rag out. "There you are," he grined, "I've sang for you. How about some credit till Saturday?"

"Nothin' doin' buddy, you know what we told you," replied a hotel attendant.

Nothing daunted the old fellow rocked back on his heels and again the melody of the song pealed forth. Customers were amused. The crowd outside grew larger. As quickly as his request for credit was refused the singer obliged with an encore.

Finally the hotel management became exasperated and ordered an employee to give the singer fifteen cents with instructions to take himself, his song, and his thirst to another hostelry. Once again all was peaceful on Front Street.

ALAS! WAS ONLY A DREAM

(Opening-day fisherman falls asleep alongside a stream.)

(with apologies)

Tell me not in mournful numbers
That things are not what they seem
To the fisherman who slumbers
Bait a-dangle in the stream.
Home he went and told in earnest
Twenty trout had been his goal,
Others to the stream returnest
Hope and faith bright in their soul.
Ten long hours they lay in waiting
Ten long hours they fished in vain,
Then with darkening faces, homeward
Turned they, in the quickening rain.
Faith lay dormant in their bosoms,
Hope's bright ray had lost its gleam
Faithless, hopeless, fishless victims
Of a sleepy angler's dream.

RIGHT

If the greatest guns be right,
Then this dreadful fact is plain:
Every man is slave to might;
All our dreams of peace are vain.

If to force men must submit,
And if power makes evil good;
Vain are prayer and holy writ,
Vain the dream of brotherhood.

If to numbers truth belongs,
And the stronger side is right;
Men must suffer cruel wrongs
For the lack of dynamite.

But all tyranny must wane,
Soon or late all tyrants die;
And the truth will rise again,
Howsoever crushed it lie.

Washington.—Alice Paul is campaigning for a satisfactory post-war "new world order" from the Washington headquarters of the American National Woman's Party, with which she has long been affiliated. Her interest now, however, is a lot more than merely national. It's International. She's chairman of the World Woman's Party for Equal Rights for Women. Or, rather, she's chairwoman of it. As her sex began to break into public life and a woman occasionally was placed at the head of a committee or other group of some sort, it generally was argued that she was that outfit's chairman, despite the fact that she wasn't a man. Calling her "madam chairman" was a kind of a compromise. But Miss Paul's a 100 per-center. Chairwoman is the term that she likes best.

She even pre-visions a time when the U.S. will have a woman president, or presidentess.

I once asked her how she thought women will make their White House start. "Well," she said, "I presume we'll have to be satisfied at first with a woman vice-president, and work up." She failed to employ the term "vice-presidentess" but that was on oversight, no doubt.

Miss Paul's recently back from two years in Geneva, which she'd picked as a good point from which to develop her world organization. Due to war conditions, though it's an inconvenient place from which to operate today, so she returned to the united States, but there's to be no let-up in her crusade. She assesses it as more important than ever, in anticipation of globe-wide readjustments after the war.

At Next Peace Table?

Women are to sit at the next peace conference table, if she has her way. There's to be feminine representation, as she expresses it, but my impression is that she contemplates 50-50 representation, at least.

Having studied Geneva's record at short range, she states frankly that anybody might have expected the League of Nations to fizzle, because the men who were trying to run it "couldn't get it through their heads that there are women as well as men an earth.

Men, she adds, were the guys who bungled the Versailles treaty. "It mustn't ever happen again."

So far as legislation goes, Miss Paul is pretty well suited with the status of women's rights in the U. S., but she thinks there ought to be, in actual practice, a great many more gals in high government offices. Maybe, she admits, they've been a trifle derelict in asserting themselves — in getting themselves nominated and elected. They've got to be educated up to that.

It appears that, considering handicaps, the international women's rights movement has been plugging along pretty well in Europe. That is to say, there are organizations in most European countries. The growth of totalitarianism has been a drag on 'em, and naturally: the war is raising hades with 'em, as with everything else civilized and enlightened. Still, the spark's alive. What it needs at present is all-out aid from here to keep it fanned up. Then, when peace begins to be negotiated, Miss Paul's depending on the spark to burst into a regular blaze. Otherwise, no "new world order" that'll be worth living in.

Next thing on the program is intensive missionary work throughout Latin America and in Asia, Africa and the Anzac commonwealths.

Other Bright Spots

The Australians and New Zealanders aren't considered unsympathetic. There also is a good bit of women's rights sentiment in several of the South American republics — notably Brazil, where President Vargas, dictator as he is, is said to be an exceptionally enthusiastic ladies' man. Women's rightsers there speak extremely well of him. And, oddly enough, China isn't so backward. Madame Chiang Kai-Shek outstandingly is a booster for her sex's political equality with everybody else. And she's a potent influence—about as much so as Generalissimo Chiang himself. They say he eats out of her hand.

The rest of Asia isn't likely to be so plastic. Japan's fairly sure to be outright recalcitrant. India and Malaya will have to be cultivated from zero on up.

As for native Africa? That should be less than a kindergarten for the idea.

Alice Paul's going after the whole line-up, nevertheless.

In the long run, it's a universal women's rights crusade. But, for immediate purposes, a first class post-war "new world order" is what Alice has in sight.

And, as she says, she can't make a worse job of it than the Versailles treaty framers and the League of Nations management did.

Metallic Torch Will Symbolize Canadians' Determination to Stand With Britain Until Victory Is Won

Ottawa, May 6 —(CP)— Finance Minister Ilsley announced today a metallic torch three feet high will be flown from Victoria to Halifax and then across the Atlantic to Prime Minister Churchill as a symbol of the determination of Canadians to back Britain to the limit of their resources.

He said the torch will be dedicated at a ceremony in the Parliament Buildings in Victoria May 24 —Empire Day—and will be the basis of "Torch Day" programs in 27 other cities during its progress to the Atlantic coast.

Inscribed on the torch will be these words: "Part of the tools—Canada's victory loan 1941." The loan opens June 2.

Mr. Ilsley said the theme of the plan is that "Canada carries the torch to Mr. Churchill, lighting the path to freedom." The torch would be sent to Mr. Churchill as a heartening message to him and to the British people that Canada will stay with Britain to the end, "and that end, so far as Canadians are concerned, shall be victory."

At the semi-patriotic, semi-religious "Torch Day" ceremonies, Canadians will be asked to place their right hands over their hearts and repeat the pledge:—

"I hereby declare my belief in Almighty God and reaffirm my loyalty and allegiance to His Majesty, the King, and further declare my support for British institutions.

"I pledge myself and my all to hold the torch on high and to march shoulder to shoulder with the Mother Land and the Empire in our righteous cause to victory and enduring peace."

Bomber Will Carry Torch

The torch will be carried across Canada in a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber. A formal escort of three men—one each from the Navy, Army and Air Force—will be provided. Itinerary of the trans-Canada flight will be governed largely by available landing facilities. The bomber will visit Belleville and Trenton (Airport) on June 9.

A scroll will accompany the torch and will be signed in provincial capitals by the Lieutenant-Governor, Premier and Mayor; and in other places where the torch actually is paraded by the mayor and other civic officials.

In cities where the bomber does not land miniature scrolls will be provided for official signatures. They will be presented to Mr. Churchill with the torch and master scroll.

It is planned that representatives of churches, schools, veterans' organizations, governing bodies, civic oragnizations and military forces will take leading roles in the outdoor "torch day" proceedings, mainly in front of Parliament Buildings and City Halls.

Organization of the project is under a Dominion Torch Committee set up by the Victory Loan organization. The committee is headed by W. J. Stewart, member of the Ontario Legislature for Toronto Parkdale, and Luther P. Winchell of Toronto as joint chairmen.

U. S. COMMITTEE GIVES BRITAIN HEALTH REPORT

Survey Finds Drainage and Water Systems of Bombed Cities Carrying on Well Under Difficulties

New York (CP)—The manner in which Britain keeps her public services in order during the air war and some of the lessons learned from such efforts are detailed in a publication now made available by the National Technological Civil Protection Committee.

The committee's report is based on observations made in London by its agents, all of whom are anonymous. The report was made public by Walter D. Binger of New York, committee chairman.

It shows despite the extreme vulnerability of London's drainage system and extensive damage it has suffered there has been no flooding of the streets and therefore no appreciable menace to health from that direction. So far, the report says, the city's great water supply system has been successfully protected against contamination, although fear exists in some quarters that saboteurs may seek to dump typhoid bacteria into it.

Water In Emergencies

The report said that about half London's water supply is gravity fed, the rest pumped. When air raid damage occurs to mains the affected districts are valved off and served by tank wagons each carrying 500 gallons.

In a section on sanitation the pamphlet said that in one town where a bomb shattered a viaduct carrying five sewers handling 780,000,000 gallons a day, authorities diverted the flow into the river from which the town's water supply was obtained, but downstream from the water intakes. The result, they said, as "unpleasant" but no menace to health. The procedure will be repeated is necessary.

The American investigators found garbage collection functioning well and yielding a tremendous source of wealth in salvage of usable pig feed. In the first year of the war, they reported, garbage salvage yielded roughly $10,000,000, enough, they estimated, to buy 1,000 25-ton tanks, 20,000,000 shells and 10 ships of 5,000 gross tons each.

One thing the Americans found worrying health authorities was the effect of morale of dwelling in deep shelters. Some sensitive persons, so living, develop neuroses which make them dread even normal exposure on the surface.

Construction Lessons

The committee's workers found in the examination of bombed buildings that the most vulnerable were those with load-bearing walls. They collapsed more easily than wooden frame buildings. Earthquake-proof construction, they concluded, was the best defence against explosives.

The report said London's gas companies had pooled their resources and habitually loaned each other supplies and repair crews in case of damage. The city had found its gas main system lacked sufficient valves for wartime, it added. However, taking the specific day, Feb. 8, it declared only 80 gas subscribers in the whole of London were without fuel.

THE GATLING GUN

We often hear a revolver or an automatic pistol referred to as a "gat."

"Gat" in this connection is merely a shortened form of "Gatling gun."

The Gatling gun was the first machine gun used by the United States army and was one of the most famous firearms ever known.

It was invented and named after Richard Jordan Gatling, who was born in 1818 on a North Carolina plantation.

Gatling invented and patented a rice-sowing machine, a wheat drill, a hemp-breaker, a steam plow, and other farm implements which he was manufacturing in factories at St. Louis, Springfield, Ohio, and Indianapolis when the outbreak of the Civil War turned his attention to rapid-fire guns.

In 1862 he patented the first Gatling gun, which was made in his Indianapolis factory.

Crude as this first Gatling was, it would fire 250 shots a minute.

The inventor continued to perfect this deadly weapon until 1865, when he had 12 of these guns made at the Cooper Fire Arms Manufacturing Co., in Philadelphia, for submission to the War Department for tests.

In 1866 the War Department officially adopted Gatling's machine gun and placed with the inventor an order for 100, which were made by the Colt Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co., at Hartford.

It is said that some of the first 12 test Gatlings were used effectively in repelling a Confederate attack on the Federals under General B. F. Butler near Richmond.

Gatling spent the next 30 years improving, testing and demonstrating his machine gun.

When he got the gun so it would shoot 1,200 bullets a minute he sold his patents to the Colt Fire Arms Company.

The Gatling gun consisted of ten rifled barrels arranged lengthwise around a central shaft and the whole was revolved on gears by a hand crank.

In the winter of 1844 Gatling went by steamboat on business from Cincinnati to Pittsburgh. The inventor contracted smallpox and was unable to obtain medical attention for two weeks while the steamboat was held fast by ice. After his recovery he studied medicine at the Ohio Medical College, at Cincinnati, simply to be able to care for himself and his family. He never practiced medicine but was addressed as "Dr. Gatling" thereafter.

PULITZER AWARDS GIVEN AUTHOR AND COLUMNIST

Robert E. Sherwood and Westbrook Pegler Honored Also St. Louis Post-Dispatch

THIRD FOR SHERWOOD

New York, May 6 (AP) — The St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Robert E. Sherwood's war drama "There Shall be No Night," and Westbrook Pegler, columnist, received Pulitzer awards yesterday for excellence in American journalism and letters.

The trustees of Columbia University, acting upon the recommendation of the Advisory Board of the Graduate School of Journalism, decided against an individual award for distinguished service as a foreign or Washington correspondent, but instead acted to honor recommended American reporters abroad.

For the first time since 1920 the usual $1,000 award for the most distinguished novel of the year by an American author was not made.

The Post-Dispatch's citation was for meritorious public service, its second in the history of the awards established in the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer. It was in recognition of the paper's campaign against St. Louis' smoke "blackouts."

Pegler, of the New York World-Telegram was granted a $1,000 award for a distinguished example of a reporter's work in his articles on scandals in organized labor. The exposure ultimately led to the conviction of George Scalise, New York Building Service Employees Union Chief, on larceny charges.

Sherwood's $1,000 prize was his third Pulitzer drama award. His "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" won in 1939 and "Idiot's Delight" in 1936.

Reuben Maury of the New York Daily News received the $500 award for distinguished editorial writing during 1940, the test of excellence being clearness of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning and power to influence public opinion in what the writer conceives to be the right direction.

Cartoonist Given $500

Cartoonist Jacob Burck of the Chicago Times was awarded the $500 prize for distinguished service for his "If I should Die Before I Wake," a drawing of a child praying in her bomb-wrecked home as planes roared overhead.

The New York Times received a special citation for the public educational value of its foreign news report. Since a "supreme journalistic achievement of this kind" did not fall within the present categories of awards, the committee took this means of recognizing the Times.

In the field of foreign correspondence, it was directed that a suitable plaque or scrool be inscribed with the names of American reporters serving in the present war as recommended by a special advisory committee.

The Dean of the Graduate School of Journalism was directed by the Board of Trustees to communicate with all daily newspapers, press association, and syndicates having reporters assigned to the war zone and request that they certify the names of their representatives for inscription on the Pulitzer Plaque which will be executed in praise of the foreign correspondents.

The Trustees further directed that the plaque be placed in or on the journalism building of Columbia University, and that a reproduction of the plaque be engraved on a certificate, to be presented each individual reporter, or in case of death, to his family.

A committee composed of Sevellon Brown of the Providence R. I. Journal; Kent Cooper, General Manager of The Associated Press; and Arthur Krock, New York Times Washington correspondent, was authorized to co-operate with the Dean of the Graduate School of Journalism in selecting the names to appear in the plaque.

Dr. E. A. Carleton Heads Lawn Bowlers Of Stirling Club

Stirling — The annual meeting of the Stirling Lawn Bowling Club was held last week under the direction of Mr. H. R. Tompkins, retiring president. Mr. C. F. Linn, treasurer of the organization, gave a fine report that was exceedingly satisfactory. Following a general discussion and review of last year's activity the election of officers took place with the following being selected to direct the club's activity for the coming year:

President, Dr. E. A. Carleton; Vice president, H. L. Fair; Secretary, W. J. Whitty; Treasurer, C. F. Linn; Games committee, Messrs. S. L. Lucas, T. W. Solmes, and R. A. Patterson; Grounds committee, C. F. Linn, J. E. O'Donnell, E. G. Bailey, and R. E. Fox; Membership committee, S. L. Lucas, R. A. Patterson, H. L. Fair, J. S. Morton.

An open discussion on future activity resulted in plans for a membership drive to get underway in the near future with the membership committee directing it.

A fine entertainment was presented to a large gathering at St. Ola United Church on Friday evening with the proceeds being turned over to war efforts. St. Ola United Church W. A. was responsible for the function and Mr. Boyd Beckel, presiding minister of the charge, acted as chairman.

During the evening brief patriotic addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Flower of Bancroft United Church, Rev. Mr. Baugh of Coe Hill and Rev. James E. Beckel, Stirling.

Arthur Duncan was in charge of the entertainment portion of the program and those assisting included: Miss Gertrude Poynter, Miss Dorothy Francis, Jimmy Armstrong and Jack McCaughan. The program included musical numbers and recitations that were greatly enjoyed. Later the visiting artists were entertained at luncheon served by the ladies of the church at the parsonage. The proceeds of the event amounted to $25.00.

M. J. COLDWELL APPEALS FOR POSTWAR PLAN

Speakers Endorse Spending Whatever Needed to Bring Victory to Allies

DEBT INCREASES

By C. R. BLACKBURN

Ottawa, May 6 (CP)—A call for immediate planning by Parliament to ensure that Canadians who fight for the democratic cause may not suffer another after-war depression, came from M. J. Coldwell, acting C. C. F. House leader, in the House of Commons Budget Debate yesterday.

Mr. Coldwell, following Conservative House Leader Hanson who initiated the Debate, said those who would return after winning the war—and he was confident of British victory—should be assured of a fuller and richer life.

A spokesman for the new democracy group, Victor Quelch (Acadia), moved the only amendment to the Budget resolution so far produced.

Same Theory Advanced

This substitutes for the motion to go into committee of ways and means a resolution regretting the Government's "failure to establish effective control over the issue of credit by chartered banks" to the end that war needs might be financed largely by the Bank of Canada "without fear of inflation."

This advances a monetary theory of the new democracy group which has been advanced repeatedly since Alberta Social Credit members first came to the House in 1935.

The amendment is an expression of want of confidence in the Government which, if it carried, would mean automatic resignation of the administration.

With all parties pledged to the policy of complete mobilization for war the old-time political fireworks usually associated with a Budget Debate were lacking and there was an indication that the discussion would end this week, possibly next Thursday.

Speakers Endorse Spending

All speakers endorsed a policy of spending whatever was needed to meet the costs of a maximum war effort but there was criticism of some of the methods of taxation proposed in the budget Finance Minister Ilsley brought down last Tuesday.

Mr. Hanson had little criticism and some praise for the Minister responsible for the budget but he declared the people, while willing to share to the limit of their resources, would demand that the government set a good example by reducing non-war expenditures.

Mr. Coldwell reiterated the C.C.F. platform that much of the money to be raised by borrowing should be obtained by a levy upon "accumulated wealth," to be taken by the government without interest for the duration of the war.

He said the gasoline tax should not apply to gasoline used by farmers and fishermen in the pursuance of their calling, and that the heavy increases in taxation would lower the standard of living of the masses.

Mr. Coldwell pictured the situation when Canadian soldiers would be home from the war and the great numbers now engaged on war industries would be out of work.

Warns Against 'Lost Generation'

"We don't want another 'lost generation,'" he said. There had been two "lost generations" in the memory of most members, that lost in the first great war and another in the depression of the '30's.

"The aim of this (C.C.F.) group is to replace the present capitalistic system, with its inherent unjustices, inhumanity and anarchy by a social order in which economic planning will supersede unregulated private enterprise and competition, and in which genuine democratic self-government will be possible," Mr. Coldwell said.

"We should be able to organize our efforts on a realistic basis and say: So many units of labor, equipment and materials shall be used for organization, and so many for the production of those things necessary for the welfare of the people.

"We would then proceed to produce without profit to monopolies, without interest ot bondholders without mortgaging our country and its future.

"What we seek is a proper collective organization of our economic resources so that, during this war, we may use them to defeat aggression and afterwards continue to use them to enrich the individual life of every citizen."

Gordon Fraser, Conservative-Peterborough West, said the sales tax on building materials should be lifted at least as far as materials used in houses costing less than $4,000 built under the National Housing Act were concerned. More low-cost houses were badly needed and persons building them should not be taxed an additional $250 or more.

Too many imported magazines were exempt from payment of the foreign exchange tax, Mr. Fraser said. The exemptions should be cancelled.

The government should impose a tax on all meals served in hotels and restaurants costing more than $1. It would hurt no one and produce considerable revenue. The tax on railway fares and movie tickets should be collected on passes as well as tickets.

G. R. Boucher (Cons. Carleton), said middle class wage earners were being called upon to bear too large a share of the taxation burden. The budget should provide more consideration for the smaller salaried people, particularly those who were sheltering relatives or friends from Great Britain and could get no financial aid for their maintenance. He asked the Minister to consider giving income tax exemption for such dependents.

He urged exemption for agriculturists from the three cents a gallon tax on gasoline.

Mr. Norman Lake of the Ontario Hydro showed a motion picture, "The Miracle of Electricity" at Tweed High School last week.

Mr. Geo. Elwood has been notified of his acceptance in the R.C.A.F. For several years, Mr. Elwood has been accountant at The Bank of Montreal. He has made a host of friends among those with whom he has came into contact, both among his business associates and those met socially. Mr. Elwood has identified himself with many activities of the community. He has been treasurer of Tweed Red Cross Branch since its organization in September, 1939. As teacher of a class of teen-age boys in Tweed United Church Sunday School, he has been very popular with the boys who will regret to see him leave. Mr. Elwood is also a member of the Board of Stewards of the United Church. In the realm of sport he has taken an active part, especially in tennis, where he has acted in an official capacity, as a member of the Executive.

When the N.P.A.M. was organized last fall, Mr. Elwood immediately joined up. He took the Officers' Training Course, successfully passing the necessary tests to qualify as an officer. This was followed by his application to enter the R.C.A.F. in which he has been accepted. He will have the best wishes of his wide circle of friends as he leaves soon to serve his country.

HIGHLIGHTS IN YOUR LIFE LINE

Whenever something unusual happens in your life, almost automatically you reach for your telephone to tell friends about it. Graduations, engagements, weddings, promotions, birthdays, anniversaries — at all such happy times your telephone helps spread the good news!

You find people turning to the telephone with confidence, because year after year it has become more unfailing, more dependable. Cables have replaced open wires! Repeater stations have supplanted earlier devices, enabling one to hear as distinctly across the continent as across the street. That is why in war time the telephone plays so vital a part in the national effort.

Annual Music Festival At King George School

In the presence of a large audience of parents, the annual School Music program of King George School took place on Monday afternoon. All children of the school took part and the well arranged program demonstrated the progress of the boys and girls from the lowest to the most advanced grades. Miss Phyllis May, director of music in the public schools, and the teachers who assisted her were warmly commended for the high standard attained by the singers.

In addition to class choruses, trios, duets and solos were heard, the sweet voices of the children in the appealing songs chosen for the occasion delighted the audience.

Mr. L. A. Kells, principal, expressed the pleasure of the staff and pupils at the keen interest taken in the work by the parents as evidenced by their presence at the program. Singing had been assigned an important place in the new school course, the aim being not to make great musicians but to develop the tastes of the boys and girls and their appreciation of music, so that through their years of training at school they will be able to gain more enjoyment of music in later life. The program was designed, not as a musical competition, but as a demonstration of what is being carried on day by day in the school.

Praises Efforts of Miss May

He praised the efforts of Miss May, supervisor of music for the past two years, to whom great credit is due for the success of the singing. He also thanked the other teachers who had carried on the work in the classrooms and the boys and girls for their co-operation. Miss May received an ovation from the audience as she came to the platform for a brief address in which she conveyed her sincere thanks to the mothers and fathers whose presence had been a source of inspiration to the pupils, to all the teachers who helped and to the boys and girls whose interest had made her work so pleasant.

Weddings

WEST—WIGGINS

The wedding took place at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, on Saturday, April 26th, of Alice May Wiggins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Wiggins of Cherry Valley to Charles Philip West of Queensboro, the Rev. J. B. Creeggan officiating.

The bride wore a gown of dusky rose with matching hat and blue accessories.

Miss Ruby Wiggins was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing a gown of the same shade with wine accessories. The groomsman was Mr. Peter Wiggins.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. West left for a short honeymoon and will reside in Belleville.

CLUGSTON—HANSEY

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday evening at Christ Church when Elsie May, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hansey, Canniffton, became the bride of LAC Edward Clugston, R.C.A.F., Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Clugston of London. Rev. G. G. Wright performed the ceremony.

Miss Bernice Saunders presided at the organ for wedding music and during the signing of the register played "O Perfect Love."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was charming in turquoise blue with white flower hat and turquoise veil and accessories. She wore a corsage of red roses.

Miss Dorothy Hansey was her sister's bridesmaid and wore navy sheer with navy and white accessories and a corsage of sweetheart roses. AC1 Harold Clugston, R.C.A.F., Jarvis, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the bride, Dundas Street. Mrs. Hansey in wine crepe with beige hat and accessories and Mrs. Clugston in printed crepe with black and white accessories received. Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to eastern cities, the bride travelling in a rust ensemble. Upon their return they will reside on Dundas St.

Among the out-of-town guests were AC1 Harold Clugston, his wife and little daughter of London, Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Bibbings, also of London.

WANNAMAKER—MAY

A very pretty wedding took place on Saturday afternoon at four o'clock at the home of the bride's parents when Vera Emmaline, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. May, Trent Road, became the bride of Carl Kenneth Wannamaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Wannamaker of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mansell Smith, Baltimore, Ont., and took place beneath an arch of roses and evergreen. Wedding music was played by Miss Evelyn Mann, Cobourg.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor length gown of blue net over taffeta, with finger tip veil of blue net. She carried pink roses and baby's breath and wore the gift of the groom, a gold locket. Mrs. Jack Ball, sister of the bride, Baltimore, was matron of honor and wore rose sheer with matching turban and carried white carnations and hyacinths. Mr. Percy Wannamaker, Belleville, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mrs. May, mother of the bride, in white and navy with navy redingote and corsage of roses and sweet peas and Mrs. Wannamaker, mother of the groom, attired in dusky rose sheer with corsage of roses and sweet peas, received.

Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker left on a wedding trip, the bride travelling in navy blue and white with navy accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How Must a Girl Act on Visit to Prospective In-Laws?

Perhaps one of the most difficult of social ventures occurs when the newly engaged girl is invited to visit her fiance's home. She dreads it as she would an earthquake.

How will her fiance react to his family's impressions? Will the visit be the beginning of a family feud? She has probably heard of long-drawn-out in-law unpleasantness having its roots in that first visit to his family.

The first thing for a girl to do in this situation is to cast out fear. She should sell herself in advance to the idea that the prospective in-laws are going to like her and she is going to like them. She should not go to her fiance's home with a chip on her shoulder.

Innumerable letters coming to this column on the question of "this sampling," as one girl called it, had to do with whether to smoke or not. Don't whip out your cigarette case until you see if the ladies of his family are smokers or not. Some people still regard cigarette smoke as the advance announcement of sulphur and brimstone. Again, I've known estimable grandmothers who could outdo their grandsons in smoking.

And for mercy's sake, if you do smoke, use ash trays! Don't flick your ashes on the floor. Don't leave half-burned cigarettes around on furniture or tablecloths. Show these in-laws that you're housebroken.

It's about the same with drinks. If the family is in the habit of taking sherry or other "halteners" before dinner, you're at liberty to do the same. If you're a teetotaler by conviction you can get out of taking a drink, tactfully. Lots of nice people do. Never act as if you were in a drinking contest, whether you enjoy the stuff or not. I have known of clever old dowagers who did not want their sons to marry certain girls. They had much more alcohol on hand than usual, and the poor little flies walked right into the net.

Never put down a wet glass on any piece of furniture. If no coasters or naphins are served with the drinks, it's permissible to dry the bottom of the glass with your handkerchief. If you ruin your prospective mother-in-law's ancestral table, she may smile sweetly, but mark my words, she'll have it in for you.

Going to church is another question which agitates the young girl on approbation. If they're a church-going family, go, and act reverently.

Here's a word of warning that may save your future: No matter how besottedly in love "Sonny-Boy" may be with you, don't let him wait on you while he neglects little courtesies to his mother. For instance, don't let him drag a chair for you all over the room, porch, garden if any, and then callously let his mother lug her own.

Don't be finicky about your food, or confess to disliking certain dishes on the table, even though you hate them. Take a little, you needn't eat it. Don't gush; a gusher in a family is more of a nuisance than a leaky roof.

If his family is human, they'll realize that a first visit to prospective in-laws is not the easiest of human experiences, and they'll be tactful with you. When you leave, don't let more than a few days go by before writing what is known as a "bread-and-butter" letter, saying what a nice time you've had. Heaven is merciful to that sort of fib.

How to Select Formal Wedding Invitations

For a large formal wedding the bride's parents or her nearest relative send out formal invitations. The paper is a folded white or off-white sheet, of fine quality. There are a variety of correct sizes; most popular at present is the small size, which fits unfolded into its envelope. The paper may or may not have a panel. The size of the enclosed cards must correspond to the size of the sheet.

Two envelopes are usually used for wedding invitations (or announcements). The outer envelope bears the name and address. The inner envelope, which has no gum on the flap contains the invitation and accompanying cards. On this inner envelope is written only the name: Mr. and Mrs. Edward Evans or Miss Dorothy Allen.

A conservative style of engraving should be chosen. Script is always correct, and is somewhat less expensive than shaded letters. At present the style of engraving most popular is Shaded Antique Roman.

The following is a typical invitation form:

Mr. and Mrs. George Graham request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Mary
to
Mr. Alexander Underwood
Tuesday the tenth of June
at half after four o'clock
Center Church
Ottawa, Ont.

The reception card enclosed with this invitation may read:

Mr. and Mrs. George Graham request the pleasure of your company
Tuesday, the tenth of June
at five o'clock
Seven Home Place

The favour of a reply is requested.

Another form of reception card (but not in such good form as the preceding is:

Reception
immediately following the ceremony
Seven Home Place
R.S.V.P.

Sometimes (especially for a country wedding), when all guests are to be invited to both the ceremony and reception, the usual form of church invitation wording is used, and added are the words:

and afterwards at the reception
Seven Home Place

When only members of the family are to be at the ceremony, but there is to be a large reception, the invitations to the ceremony are given verbally and the invitations to the reception are engraved on sheets of paper like those used for church invitations. On these invitations "the pleasure of your company" is used, and "and," instead of "to" is used between the names of the bride and bridegroom. Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Atwater
request the pleasure of your company at the marriage reception of their daughter Dorothy and
Mr. Frederick Wells Brown
Tuesday, the tenth of June
at four oclock)
(name of room: name of hotel)
Ottawa

If At Home cards are enclosed with the invitation, they do not carry the name, since the bride-elect has not yet acquired her married name. Usually they read:

At Home
after the first of October
Two Park Street
Ottawa, Ont.

Tweed Girl Goes To Washington Post In Canadian Legation

Tweed (Special)—Miss Marion Nicholson, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. R. Nicholson of Kemptville, formerly of Tweed, who for some time has been engaged in the Intelligence Department of the Dominion Government at Ottawa, has been appointed to a secretarial post in the Canadian legation at Washington, D.C. DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Environment Shewn Again To Be More Influential Than Heredity

Old ideas die hard, and perhaps her new findings will not shake the beliefs of the hereditarians, but there is more evidence of the soundness of the position of the environmentalists, in the studies of Dr. Ida L. Wellman of Iowa University, concerning the question of which is the most influential factor in shaping human character and intelligence, heredity or environment.

The hereditarians hold, of course, that your character is as good as determined the moment you are born and that very little change can be wrought in it by the circumstances of your life. The environmentalists believe, on the other hand that the child of any parents can be made the equal of or superior of the offspring of any other mother and father if only the proper influences are present in its upbringing.

Personally, I favor the environmentalists. The hereditarians are too pessimistic in their view of life, it seems to me. I have always urged on young men and young women the necessity of mating well if they wished to be assured of healthy, normal children, but I am so sure that environment decides what course the child's development takes that I always urge parents to study how they can insure that their children have the advantage of the best influences in their formative years.

The most that some of the hereditarians have been willing to concede is that good environment might make a difference of a few points, less than ten, in the I. Q. of a child. But Dr. Wellman's tests now indicate I.Q. can be changed as much as forty points by environment.

Considering that the I.Q. rating of a normal average intellect is from 90 to 110 points, while those from 90 to 80 points are considered dull normals, 80 to 70 are borderline, and 70 and below are rated feeble-minded, the significance of Dr. Wellman's observations can be seen. They are not isolated evidence, either, for they are supported by previous findings in the long series of studies at the Child Welfare Research Station at University of Iowa. However, previous findings were that I.Qs could be changed about 20 points by environment. Now it appears environment can change a feeble-minded child into a bright intellect, or vice versa.

It must be kept in mind that environment works both ways. By neglect, a normally intelligent child can be reduced to the feeble-minded class. At Iowa, the bright child, placed among dull children in an orphanage, showed losses in intelligence; while the dull child moved upward in I.Q. to the average level of the same group.

This fact is one explanation of why some children who show exceptional intelligence for their age in their earlier years become duller as they grow up.

These findings should have the greatest interest to parents and educators.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y. P. U. was held on Wednesday, April 23rd. The meeting was opened by Mrs. Percy Reynolds, leader of Christian Missions. The theme of the Worship Service was "Consecration to Christian Service". Scripture was read by Miss Ruth Brintnell. Hymn 91 was sung. Mrs. Carl Thompson led in prayer. The story "Surgeon of the Skeena" was given by Mrs. Percy Reynolds. Hymn 225 was sung, closing with the Mizpah Benediction. Recreation was given by Mrs. Carl Thompson.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XI

Devona would have fled immediately to the safety of her own room. But, as Vara closed the door behind her again, Dale caught her hand.

"It may be an uncivilized hour to be up hunting burglars, but it's a swell hour for a ride out on the desert to watch a sunrise," he whispered. "Game?"

Perfectly aware that Vara probably stood just inside that closed door waiting to be obeyed, Devona hesitated.

"Please. You've no idea how lovely it is." The blue eyes pleaded.

And only when she nodded her acceptance did he release her, stand grinning as she raced down the hall, closed her own door with a smart little click.

Ready for a Ride

Half an hour later, Dale was waiting for her at the stables. The eastern sky was just beginning to blush a lovely pink and except for the occasional chomp of a horse's hoof in the stalls, the world seemed wrapped in a blanket of deep silence.

Devona felt almost as if she should whisper her greeting in the eerie half-light of morning.

"Did I keep you waiting?"

Dale swung down off the corral fence where he'd been perched, shook his head. "Not long. And —" his grin teased again "— it was worth it."

"Maybe we'd better leave a note," she suggested.

"I did." Dale held out his hand. "Up you go."

Dawn on the Mesa

Dawn broke just as they rode out of the canyon, came onto a level mesa. The unbelievably blue sky broke into a brilliant prism spreading fingers of green and soft purple and orange across the sky like giant searchlights.

For a moment they just watched the lovely miracle, feasting their eyes, breathing deep of the crisp, dry air. Even their sleek, well-groomed mounts stood quietly for a moment. And Devona had the strange sensation of their being alone in some infinite, remote world — just she and Dale together. If only it could always be like this.

Then the rim of the sun pushed over the horizon and it was morning.

"Glorious, wasn't it?" she murmured.

Dale didn't answer and when she looked to see why, she found his eyes on her, grave, almost tender. And for a fleeting second she felt that he, too, must have shared her emotion of the moment before. Because something had drawn them closer. She felt it even as her nervous mount jerked her away from him, down the trail at a smart gallop.

When Dale caught up with her, the gravity was gone, replaced by that precious, crinkly-eyed smile she'd come to adore.

"You ride like a born circus performer," he said as they cantered along. "Done lots of it?"

She nodded. "Yes. Some for pleasure. A lot for necessity. You see, many of the camps Dad had to live in were miles from transportation. It was go with him by horse or mule back, or stay behind in some God-forsaken little village by myself. So, of course, I usually went along."

"Pretty dangerous, wasn't it?"

"Sometimes. But it was fun, too. And, of course, Dad never let me go if the danger was too great."

"I think I'd have liked that Dad of yours," Dale said suddenly.

She smiled, nodded. "I know you would." And Dad, she added silently, would have liked this tall, square-shouldered young man, too.

Then, as the trail narrowed, curved up onto a rocky plateau Devona rode ahead. Responding to the free rein, her horse plunged faster. Even as the dry air whipped her face, Devona fell easily into the rhythm of the horse's step, gloried in this head-long rush across the open desert.

A Wild Ride

Suddenly, as she took a little gully at a flying gallop, the fleet-footed mare shied violently, reared snorting, until she almost unseated her rider. In the same instant Devona saw why. A huge snake — slipping across the hot, sandy trail, coiling rapidly now, in angry, hissing menace to both horse and rider. The deadly rattlesnake!

Cold with horror, Devona felt the frightened mare jerk the reins out of her hands, take the bit in her teeth as she whirled. Devona clung to the saddle as the horse dashed headlong down a steep canyon, terrifying leap, scrambled single, terrifying leap, scrambled up to the hard flat mesa beyond.

Behind her, she heard the pounding hooves of Dale's horse in pursuit. Her own horse, terrified and challenged now by the steady thunder of those hoof-beats behind, raced on faster. Surely she'd exhaust herself soon. Devona prayed and clung frantically to the saddle horn.

The wind whipped tears into her eyes blindingly, sent strands of the mare's flying mane to smack smartly against her cheeks. Her aching hands threatened to loose their hold any moment.

Nearing the Rim

Then, horrified, she saw that only a few hundred yards ahead, the mesa dropped off again, precipitately! Probably, her imagination pictured horribly, into a hot, rocky canyon where at this breakneck speed, even a sure-footed thoroughbred like this one would crash to certain death.

As in some horrible nightmare, she watched the mesa's rim draw closer—closer! — Twice she tried to reach the reins flying wildly under the mare's foam-flecked head. And twice nearly slipped from the saddle.

"Don't try it." Faintly, from behind, she heard Dale's shouted command. "Just hang on."

For seconds that might better have been measured by eternities, they pounded on, pursuer and pursued. Until the rim of the canyon seemed only another stop, a chasm yawning right at her feet.

Devona shut her eyes, steeled herself for the shattering fall, felt her horse rear, plunge to one side, gather speed as if for a mighty leap. Faint, her breath forced back into her throat by the force of the wind, she clung more through reflex action than conscious direction of her aching muscles.

Then, suddenly, the horse was slowing its terrific speed. Rocking in the big Western saddle, she felt herself slipping dangerously, tried to regain her balance. But this time, too-tense muscles refused to obey. Another moment and she'd have fallen under those sharp, murderous hooves. The same moment that she felt a strong arm around her, a quick sharp pain in her side as she was jerked bodily out of the saddle.

She looked up into Dale's white face, tried to speak. Instead, she slipped off into a black cloud of unconsciousness.

Words of Love

When she opened her eyes again she saw that the tenderness in his voice was matched by that in his eyes. She stared into their blue depths, hypnotized by the emotion she saw unmasking there, not daring to breathe, to break the spell of —

"I love you, Devona. Love you. Love you, darling"—he was saying now, holding her so close she felt his heart beating a tom-tom against her own breast. "I don't want to lose you—ever".

For an instant, their eyes met, clung hungrily. Then Devona heard her own voice answering. "And I love you, too, Dale."

With that he swept her close, his lips crushing hers in a kiss that grew quickly from a tender caress to stormy passionate embrace. Her arms, as if of their own accord, slipped around his neck with answering pressure.

"That's pretty — wonderful," Dale murmured a moment later, his voice tones deeper with this new emotion. "I'd never dreamed it could be—like this."

Devona ran the tip of her finger, slowly, caressingly, down the bridge of his fine, straight nose. "I did. I've been dreaming about it always — ever since I saw you. I knew it had to be—love".

He kissed her again. "You sweetheart. I guess women do know more about love. I'd begun to think there was no such thing, really."

"And — now?"

"Now I know it's" — he grinned, hugged her close, "it's what makes the world go round! I've been wondering why the old place seemed different lately. Now, I know it's because of a little black-haired girl I found sitting on a trunk down at the San Pedro wharf. Funny that one small package like this could make so much difference."

Under a Magic Spell

Smiling, Devona, teased him. — "And wasn't it only last night you said love only happened in story-books?"

"Did I?" He kissed the tip of her nose. "What a sap. Or else this is just a fairy tale and pretty soon somebody will come along and break the spell."

Quickly, Devona shook her head. "Oh, no."

With sudden seriousness he searched her face, almost anxiously. "Darling, don't let anything, any one ever break this spell, will you?"

"Of course not, darling."

"You do love me. You're sure?"

"Terribly, wonderfully sure, Dale."

"And nothing will ever change your mind?"

She smiled, drew his face down close to hers. "Of course not, darling." And sealed that with her kiss.

But even as she tried to reassure his strange anxiety, a premonition stalked into her own mind, trailing tatters of old fears. Something so perfect as this — so precious, so flawless. They had to keep it lovely as it was this moment between them forever. Nothing, nothing must ever break the spell of their happiness. If only she could be sure.

CHAPTER XII

The sun was already high, a scalding light set directly overhead, when Dovona and Dale rode back across the mesa on mounts weary and docile enough now.

"Darling, let's not go right back to the house," Dale suggested as they came over a canyon's rim where they could see the green-flowering oasis that was Palm springs spilled into the little valley below. "I don't want to share you with anyone—not yet. Can't we have this day just to ourselves?"

"Yes—let's." Devona smiled happily, still scarcely aware that there was a real world to go back to, everyday problems to solve.

Dale sent their tired horses back to the stables by means of a smiling Mexican lad and a silver coin. Then, aimlessly, hand-in-hand, they wandered through Palm Springs' little curio shops where dark-eyed Mexican girls tried to sell them everything from serapes to hammered silver souvenirs.

"The Senora will like this, Senor," one sly, dark-eyed girl insisted, holding an exquisitely intricate silver locket in the palm of her hand.

Happy Playtime

Dale grinned, turned to her. "How about it—Senora?" he teased.

Flushing, Devona tried to pretend unconcern. "It's very lovely." But not half so lovely as this playing at being Dale's—wife. Just make-believe now, for fun, of course. But some day—

Her heart beat so hard it made her hands tremble as she picked up the lovely locket, pretended to examine it closely.

"Put it on, darling," Dale insisted, snapped the fastener around her neck himself when she demurred. "Like it?"

She nodded. "But Dale, please —I didn't mean——"

"I like it, too," and calmly laid green bills on the counter.

"Dale — please. You musn't——" Her fingers fumbled with the slender clasp.

"And why not?" He caught her hands, held them prisoner. "If I want to buy you something to—remember this day by, why shouldn't I?"

As if she'd need anything to make her remember this day, Devona thought, smiling. But she didn't have a chance to tell him that. The Mexican shopkeeper was back now with the change.

"Thank you, Senor. I'm sure Senora will always like the locket."

Dale grinned, nodded. "Sure she will. Come on—Senora,". he said and laughed aloud when she flushed again, rosily.

A Mexican Dinner

They had dinner in an hilarious little Mexican restaurant on the edge of the palm-green oasis. A crowded, noisy, little place where they were alone. Gloriously alone, worlds away from the laughing Mexicans, the noisy tourists that elbowed them.

Devona had no idea what they were eating. She was only aware of the tenderness in Dale's blue eyes meeting her again and again across the little table, of the touch of Dale's hand on hers when from time to time, he reached for it, held it tight a moment. And the dainty, filagreed locket lay cool and tangible against the pulse that throbbed in the soft billow of her throat.

"Happy?" Dale asked her once.

She nodded, blinded a little by sudden tears. "Too happy to be true."

Of course, she smiled, but again that funny little feeling of apprehension. It grew stronger as the evening slipped away and it was finally time to return to the hacienda.

"I'm afraid they'll have a posse out after us if we don't show up pretty soon," Dale said as they walked through the cool, moon-splashed shadows up to the big white hacienda.

They stood a long moment in the tiled hallway trying to say good night.

"Love me, darling?" Dale whispered, held her close.

"Love you, darling."

He kissed her then, lingeringly, as if he coudn't stop. Then, "Good night, sweet. You'll be up before I leave in the morning?"

"Of course. Good night" and pressing her own kiss against the warmth of his mouth, she smiled, slipped out of his arms and ran quickly up the tiled stairway.

Facing Her Mother

It was past midnight and most of the rooms were dark now, Devona noticed as she sped silently along the wide hallway. Still from under her mother's door a shaft of yellow light crossed the polished floor. Vara was still awake. Devona hesitated. Why not tell her now? She might be anxious about Devona's long absence. She would surely be relieved to know Devona's future was all solved.

On impulse, Devona knocked softly.

"Come in."

Heart pounding, she pushed open the door. Vara, like some mid-Summer night's queen, lay against her mound of frothy pillows, a manuscript in one hand, a cool smile curving her lips.

"Well—it's you! We've wondered where you were."

"I went for a ride——"

Vara's eyebrows lifted. "From dawn until midnight? Hardly."

"No—Dale sent the horses back about noon and we had dinner in——"

"Dale?" Vara looked at her steadily. "I see."

"Mother—Vara, I mean—I came to tell you—something—I——" Her tongue tripped awkwardly over the thrilling news.

"Tell me first why you insist on tagging Dale around all day."

"I wasn't. I mean—we rode out on the mesa and then I—we——"

Raising Doubts

In the face of her mother's cool little smile, Devona felt enthusiasm and confidence ebbing swiftly.

"Well——?"

"You needn't bother about me any more, Vara. About my career or anything, I mean. You see, I'm going to marry Dale," she blurted finally.

For an instant Vara just looked at her. Then, with ominous quiet, "You are going to marry whom?"

"Dale. We found it out today. That we love each other, I mean."

Trembling, she sat down on the edge of a chair, torturing her riding gloves as she waited for Vara's approval. Naturally her mother would be glad to have everything solved this easily.

"Are you sure?" The question came cool and sharp as a stiletto thrust.

"But—of course. He loves me. We——"

Vara's Plans

Vara calmly lit a cigarette. "Did he set the date for the wedding?"

"Oh, no. Not yet. We just——"

"Did he ask you—in so many words—to be his wife?" Vara's gray eyes were leveled at her, her insinuation only too clear.

"Why——" Devona hesitated. He hadn't actually said—but, of course—he'd meant——

"I thought so," Vara went on smoothly.

"But — he said he loved me, wanted never to lose me——" Desperately she thought back through the long, glorious day, remembering his exact words, his——

"Believe me, dear, when I tell you to put Dale Brasher out of your mind," she went on quietly. "I'm only sparing you suffering. And now—" with sudden bright cheerfulness "—I have really good news for you."

Devona just looked at her, mute, stricken.

"I had an answer to my wire to that college I spoke to you about. For a small additional registration fee, you can enter late. And with your background of travel, languages, and all that—" Vara bundled Devona's 19 years into a pretty gesture—"you can easily make up any requirements you don't have for a degree."

Devona nodded, scarcely listening.

"George is making all the arrangements for you. You can take the evening train from Los Angeles tomorrow. We'll run into town and do a little shopping in the morning."

"All right," Devona agreed dully It didn't matter now. Nothing mattered. If what Vara said was true—

With a sudden sweeping gesture like some lovely bird coming to rest on the arm of Devona's chair. Vara flung her arms around her daughter's neck, kissed her tenderly. "Believe me, dear, this will be best. You are young. Young hearts ache—but they don't break. You'll get over this soon and learn to love—someone else."

Devona met her mother's eyes steadily. "No. There will never be anyone else."

"Don't be silly, child," she contradicted brightly. "Of course there will. Now you run along to bed like a good girl."

Alone With Her Emotion

For an hour, Devona paced her pretty room, trying desperately to find an answer to the awful question in her heart. Dale had said he loved her. But—and the cold fact loomed larger every moment —he hadn't once mentioned marriage. Not once during their whole long day together. And what if that hadn't been—just accidental! What if he hadn't intended she take that for granted! What if even now he was laughing at her for taking his flirting so seriously!

Heart-sick, she felt the weight of the pretty silver locket at her throat. Buying her baubles as he would a child, her pride tormented her. Pretty silver locket instead of an ice cream cone. Just a little adventure token. Just playing at love.

Flinging the necklace onto the dressing table, she turned, buried her sobs in a pillow. Something to forget this day, she wept stormily. Something to forget—everything. Except that Dale wasn't the marrying kind!

(To be continued)

Vara stood in the door watching Devona in Dale's arms. Devona realized her mother would put a wrong interpretation upon her actions

SEWING FOR WAR RELIEF

By ANNE ADAMS

The recent day I spent visiting the quarters of the various organizations interested in war-relief sewing was heart-warming. From groups of women from individuals, a constant stream of warm, colorful clothes is pouring in. Everywhere women are turning left-over lengths of material and the most useless-looking scraps into gay and useful articles for shipment overseas.

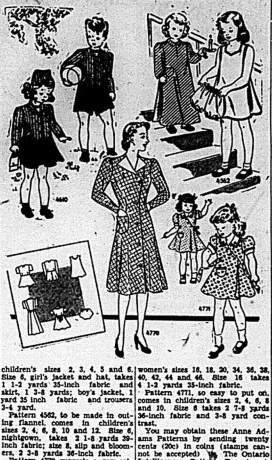
Some Practical Hints

Children's garments, I was told, should be of the self-service kind so that they can be put on without adult assistance. Dresses for girls are urgently needed, and so are night clothes and underwear, especially slips and bloomers of outing flannel. (These latter, due to the colder climate, are worn all summer long.)

Little boys of all ages need wool shorts, and mannish little jackets and sleeveless vests that are snug and warm. Housedresses with long sleeves are in demand for women, as are undergarments and nightwear. Long sleeves are requested on children's garments also, as are deep hems to make adjustments easy. Buttons should be sewed on firmly, and scraps of material for mending purposes are thoughtful things to include.

Finished garments, whether one or a whole bundle, will be warmly welcomed at the local branches of the various organizations interested in war relief work, such as the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and similar organizations. You may deliver them in person, or mail them in, knowing that everything will be thankfully received and sent off on the first possible boat.

Clothes for civilian relief may be made in any size or color or material, although the sturdier the fabric, and the brighter the color, the better. For readers who wish to do their bit, the Anne Adams patterns sketched are offered as suggestions of practical styles in needed garments.



Pattern 4610, a simple-to-make outfit for boy or girl, comes in children's sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6. Size 6, girl's jacket and hat, takes 1 1-2 yards 35-inch fabric and skirt, 1 3-8 yards; boy's jacket, 1 yard 35 inch fabric and trousers 3-4 yard.

Pattern 4562, to be made in outing flannel, comes in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6, nightgown, takes 2 1-8 yards 39-inch fabric; size 8, slip and bloomers, 2 3-8 yards 36-inch fabric.

Pattern 4770 suggests a gay cotton print. It comes in misses' and women's sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 takes 4 1-2 yards 35-inch fabric.

Pattern 4771, so easy to put on, comes in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 takes 2 7-8 yards 36-inch fabric and 3-8 yard contrast.

You may obtain these Anne Adams Patterns by sending twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) to The Ontario Intelligencer Pattern Department, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont.

Where It Hurts—

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

There is a favorite trick of sick people which is to point to a spot where it hurts and ask—"What is under there?" As if whatever is under there must necessarily be the sole and only cause of the trouble. Experienced physicians have too often seen someone operated on for appendicitis when in truth the trouble was pneumonia away up in the chest.

But even the most intelligent patients give up the idea only under duress. In fact we have a painting made by Albrecht Durer, who must be considered intelligent, which he sent to his doctor showing himself pointing to the exact spot where he had the pain.

Weakness a Symptom

Weakness, which is next to pain the commonest symptom of the human race, is usually localized by the patient in the nervous system. But this is a very incomplete concept of so complex a symptom.

There is a growing tendency among medical scientists to regard the body as a unit, as a whole rather than a collection of parts. We used to think of heart disease as a disease of the heart, and kidney disease as a disease of the kidney, and goitre as a disease of the thyroid gland. But more and more we have come to see that in most diseases the whole body is sick, and it must be regarded and treated as a whole. Thus the reaction of the body which typifies this best is that general bodily feeling of weakness.

Whole Organism Affected

It is, for instance, a typical symptom of heart disease. It originates in this case in the muscles because they do not get enough blood—because the circulation is deficient. We learn then that heart disease is of no consequence so long as it is local (such as a valvular defect only), that it only becomes of moment when the heart muscle is diseased and all the blood vessels are also affected. Then the circulation is deficient in the muscles and oxygen exchange in the lungs is lowered and the entire organism is out of kilter.

In my youth we used to hear of Bright's disease, and everybody knew it was due to disease in the kidneys and in the kidneys alone. But the present conception of kidney disease, of nephritis, is that the kidneys are diseased only as part of a general process—the eyes are usually quite as much involved as the kidneys, every group of little capillary blood vessels being involved just as much as the capillaries in the kidney.

Even cancer, which is so often regarded as a purely local disease, may really originate from a general bodily derangement which manifests itself only at the site where the cancer begins to grow. In fact, certain cancers of the bone have proved to be due to disturbances of one group of the ductless glands, the parathyroids.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

U.G.W.: — "I have a discharge in my ear and it runs over once in a while. It seems to be wax. I have tried sweet oil and other remedies. It gives me a great deal of bother. What should I do?"

Answer—Wax in the ear may be a very simple problem, but it also may be very complicated and dangerous. In the early stages, your treatment is quite logical, but when the wax gets hard, it may become almost like stone and the use of sweet oil will not move it. I really think you need a doctor who can take an ear speculum and look in and detach the hard wax.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of the Carmel Y. P. U. was held on Wednesday evening, April 30th. The meeting was in charge of Miss Mildred Jones, Christian Culture. Mr. Glen Ross opened the meeting by reading the Scripture. Explanation of the Scripture reading was given by Miss Mildred Jones. Miss Hazel Hicks led in prayer. Hymn 235 was sung. A reading was given by Miss Hilda Howes. Miss Evelyn and Miss Ethel Fox sang a duet. Topic "Canada Through the Eyes of her Poets" was given by Miss Mildred Jones. Poems that different poets wrote were read by Mr. Earle Dafoe, Miss Marron Waddell, Miss Luella Homan and Mr. James Fox. A discussion on poetry was given by Rev. Mr. Davis. Hymn 263 was sung, closing with the Mizpah Benediction.

Indians Win Eleventh Straight And St. Louis Cards Ten In Row With No Signs Of Stopping

Feller Scores Fifth Victory Allowing Senators but Three Hits

ROOKIE SCORES WIN

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

The flowers that bloom in the spring are as common in baseball as dandelions in your front lawn—and they usually wither faster.

That's why few people get excited at spectacular showings in the early season.

But a sneaking suspicion is getting around that St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Indians, the two hottest numbers in the big leagues, are riding in their right grooves at the head of the pack.

The Indians won their 11th consecutive game yesterday 2-1 from Washington Senators with rapid Robert Feller pitching three hit ball, striking out a dozen batters and walking seven.

The Cardinals notched their 10th in a row at Boston with a 5-1 sheillacking of the Braves behind the five-hit hurling of Ernie White, the 24-year-old southpaw from Pacolet Hills, S.C.

Feller's victory yesterday was his fifth since losing to Chicago White Sox on opening day. Facing an array of seven left-handed batters, Feller proceeded as calmly as if he were shooting marbles and the only run scored against him came on an error by Ken Keltner after Doc Cramer doubled in the third.

Cards Coast to Victory

The Cardinals coasted to their triumph as White held the Braves scoreless until Maxie West delivered a pinch homer in the eighth while his teammates banged three Boston pitchers for 11 safeties, including a two-run homer by Enos (Country) Slaughter.

New York Yankees, who were a hot team as long as they were in the east, lost their fourth game out of seven western engagements by a 7-3 tune at Detroit. Two veterans, Tommy Bridges and Lefty Gomez, took the mound opposite each other and Bridges walked off last—a six-hitter to his credit.

Lester McCrabb, a "control" pitcher who had an unimpressive record of 10 victories and 11 losses at Toronto in the International League last season, scored his second success in three decisions for the Philadelphia Athletics by means of scattering Chicago's 12 hits over 11 innings and batting in the winning run for a 5-4 victory over the White Sox.

Rain washed out all the other scheduled games.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 6—(AP) — Bob Pastor will be ready to go next month and a coast shot with Turkey Thompson is in the making. . . . Larry MacPhail is a cutie in more ways than one. He called Gallahadion in last year's Derby and had a century note riding on Whirlaway Saturday. . . . Ken Overlin has taken $500 worth of those 8-5 odds on Billy Soose Friday night.

Derby aftermath:

First reservations for the 1943 Kentucky Derby have been made by a Louisville business man whose daughter will be debutanting about that time and will rate a party.

Denver, getting back into organized baseball in the class D Western League, has a larger population than four cities in the American Association, five in the Coast League and seven in the Texas loop. How does that add up, Watson? . . . Teddy Williams of the Red Sox has a namesake on the Boston College grid squad which is causing Boston headline writers no end of grief.

Add Derby dope:

Tom O'Reilly of New York's p.m. is pleased with his Derby picking record. . . . He said Porter's Cap would win by 10 lengths. . . . The hoss was fourth by 10 lengths, giving Tom a batting average of .500.

Omigosh:

Twice during his baseball career, Jimmy Gleeson of the Reds wound up with a .313 batting average. . . And each time he figured in a trade shortly afterwards.

HANK GREENBERG PLAYS LAST GAME FOR THE TIGERS

Outfielder Leaves to Join Military Unit in Selected Draft

GIVEN A WATCH

Detroit, May 6 (AP)—Hammerin' Hank Greenberg, the big Detroit outfielder, swings his Major League war club for the Detroit Tigers the last time today—for at least a year.

Tomorrow the tall Brooklyn Jewish boy, whose hard-earned career won the hearts of Detroit baseball fans, will exchange a $50,000 annual salary for a $21-per-month stipend that Selective Service recruits receive. His bat will be replaced by a rifle.

No special ceremony was planned today as Hank prepared to step to the plate, but a larger-than-usual weekday crowd was expected to watch the Tigers against the New York Yankees.

Greenberg's team mates said their goodbyes at a country club party last night. They presented him with a gold watch on which their names were inscribed. The "going away" party was attended by the Yankees.

Big Hank, ranked as Detroit's most glamorous performer since Ty Cobb, experienced a lack-luster start 11 years ago in the minors and gained his place in the big time by sheer perseverence.

In 1933 he caught on with the Tigers and during the intervening years as compiled a .32€ lifetime Major League batting average, a total of 183 runs battled in during 1937 and a collection of 58 home runs in 1938—two short of Babe Ruth's all-time mark.

NORTHERN TEAMS FARING BADLY IN HOME STANDS

Collectively [illegible]our Teams Win Eight [illegible]ames and Lose Six

LEAFS RAINED OUT

(By the Associated Press)

Home for nearly a week now, for the first time since the start of the International League campaign, the four "northern" clubs haven't found the pickings too easy in their familiar surroundings. Collectively, Rochester, Montreal, Toronto and Buffalo have won eight games and lost six.

Only Montreal Royals and Buffalo Bisons have won more games than they have lost in the home stand that began May 1. The Royals have won three and lost two and the Bisons have a 2-1 record. They all were stopped yesterday when the Newark-Rochester and Syracuse-Toronto games, the only ones scheduled were rained out but they'll resume their intersectional warfare on all sides today if the weather permits.

The theoretical advantage that goes with being on their own ball park hasn't helped Toronto Maple Leafs so far. They slipped from sixth place into the cellar since returning home.

The somewhat surprising Montreal Royals handed Newark's League leaders two defeats in three games last week, but the teams still are as far apart as when they started, 2 1-2 games. For the Bears bounced back to take a doubleheader from Toronto Sunday and regain the game they had as the Royals broke even with Jersey City.

The Royals still have a fight on their hands for second place, as Jersey City Giants, only another half game behind, play at Montreal today and tomorrow. The Canadian Club has taken four out on six encounters from the Little Giants so far this spring.

Vogel Brothers Win The Bunting In 5-Man Event

St. Paul, Minn., May 6 (CP)—The 41st renewal of the American Bowling Congress will end today after 55 days of pin tumbling.

The Vogel brothers of Forest Park, Ill., a Chicago suburb, won the bunting in the five-man event when their 3,065 total, scored on March 30, stood up. The Vogels will pull down $1,500; a sponsor's trophy valued at $500 and five diamond studded medals.

A total of $31,651 will go to 850 and under booster teams while $62,553 will be split up in 933 regular prizes.

Chicago predominated in the final high 10 standings with three other Windy City lineups bagging second, third and fourth places. Rheingolds, finishing second with a 3,054 total worth $1,200; Joe Gills, third with 3,034, good for $1000 and the Chapin and Gore fourth with 3,033. One pin meant $125 to the C. & G. lineup.

Hermann Undertakers, St. Louis, National match champions, finished tenth with 3,019 and had high game of 1,131. The score is worth $590 and an additional $75 for their high game.

SECOND BASEMAN GOES TO DODGERS

Billy Herman Traded for Charley Gilbert and Bundle of Cash

New York, May 6—(AP) — The Chicago Cubs announced early today they had traded second baseman Billy Herman to the Brooklyn Dodgers for Outfielder Charley Gilbert and an undisclosed sum of cash.

The Cubs also announced they had purchased Infielder Johnny Hudson from the Montreal Royals of the International League for $25,000.

Gilbert started the season with the Dodgers but was sent to Montreal, a Dodger farm, two weeks ago.

Announcement of the deal was made by James Gallagher, general manager of the Cubs.

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Monday's local police court news item regarding several local youths being apprehended on charges of gambling with dice, brought out some controversy into this department as to the originality of gambling with dice. From the best authority we could find, the oldest form of gambling in the world is with dice and the oldest game is dominoes. Dice throwing is purely a game of chance, while dominoes involve chance, as well as skill from the player. Actually it is not known whether dice was evolved from dominoes—or vice versa. Dice, as played today on the North American continent, is commonly known as "craps." This name was originated, we believe, in New Orleans, when a French Count, who was known as "Johnny Crapaud," introduced a game played with two dice he called Hazard. Townsfolk later tabbed the game "Crapaud's Game" and finally it was abbreviated to the present "craps," which came north on the famous Mississippi River boats in the early 19th century.

For the general edification of those adapted to dice shooting, we give some startling odds figures. For instance the average craps shooter will tell you there are 21 combinations, that is technically correct, but actually there are 36 combinations, simply because there are two 2's, 4's, etc., on a pair of dice and they can be rolled in reverse on successive throws. For instance to make a five a player may roll a combination of 4 and 1 on his first roll and have the dice reverse the matter with a 1-4 on the next roll. The smallest odds are on the good old seven, these odds being quoted at 5 to 1, the largest odds are on two and 12, which are 35 to 1 you don't. It's 31 to 1 you don't six or eight and 17 to one the player can't three or 11 to 1 against either four or ten and 8 to 1 against either five or nine. When commencing the game of craps there are 8 chances in 36 that the cast will be naturals, that is either "seven or eleven," for the baby's shoes. And the chances are four that the result will be 2, 3 or 13 (craps). However, that doesn't mean odds of 2 to 1 that the shooter will win or lose on each cast, because the naturals (8) and the craps (4) total only 12 of the 36 possible results of a throw.

The game of Hazard is even mentioned in Shakespeare's plays and dice have been excavated in Mesopotamia at least 50 centuries old, proving that the game of dice is the oldest form of gambling known to man. Originally it was played with the main idea to toss highest numbers, a game, that was first introduced in the new world by the Spanish along about 1560. Mark Antony was an inveterate dice-thrower devoting his leisure time, when he wasn't playing at love with Cleopatra, at tossing square cubes about with all and sundry and for large stakes. However, Mark Antony proved the old adage—"lucky at love, unlucky at dice," because he was a consistant loser, as his loses are historical facts. It is estimated that over two billion dollar is won and lost in the U.S.A. at gambling of all kinds in one year. But speaking of general gambling—well pupils, that comes in a later lesson when the odds on card games will show some startling figures.

Emphasizing the evils of spring training to major league baseball clubs, Jack Miley in the New York Post, wonders why the big league magnates continue exhibition games. "The spring training and barnstorming episodes are a sham, a hollow fraud and a mockery," Miley maintains. "They do not pay their own freight, players are constantly getting injured, pennant races are affected and why they carry on these travesties nobody knows, except it is apparently an age-old custom, dating back to the early days of John McGraw.

"The baseball clubs, if they are lucky, gross $25,000 apiece on their exhibition tours. This is approximately what it costs them to take 50 players, including the rookies and regulars, down south for six weeks. But there have been more players hurt in spring training than you could shake a stick at.

"But I still say the baseball pumpkins would be better off in their local Y.M.C.A.'s. On their backwoods tours they get poisoned by bum food, made ill by daily climatic changes, bruise themselves or break bones on cow pasture diamonds and wind up with what?"

With the opening of the Senior Softball loop a little more than a week off, the local softball executive should begin to think of grooming the Coleman Flats diamond. It's in a deplorable condition and with the enlargement of the infield the entire diamond should be reconditioned. The clubs in the league will get down to some earnest spring training this week, which will include an exhibition game between Corby A.C. and the Juniors Thursday.

Do you remember when Harry Steele, old-timer of Ontario baseball, died at Winnipeg four years ago today, at the age of 91. Steele was a member of the Guelph Maple Leafs who won a world championship in the 60's. Steele's death left only one surviving member of the team, Rev. Ephriam Stevenson of Guelph.

HAROLD WHITE

White is one of the smallest pitchers in the majors. He stands hardly five feet 10 inches tall.

DOVER'S BALLOON BARRAGE RAIDED

Three of the Large Bags Shot Down in Flames

Dover, England, May 6 (CP).—A formation of Messerschmitt planes swooped out of the clo 's today and attacked Dover's balloon barrage, sending three of the big bags down in flames.

Anti-aircraft artillery put up a heavy barrage immediately and the German raiders turned back across Dover strait, pursued by British fighting planes. It was believed one of the Nazi planes crashed in midchanel.

Townspeople on their way to work took shelter when four diving Messerschmitts screamed down so low that their yellow noses and black cross insignia could be seen plainly. Machine-gun bullets spattered in the streets.

Balloon ground crews blazed away with rifles and machine-guns as the Nazi squadron leader dived low over the centre of the town. A shell was seen to burst near the tail of the plane and, as it rocketed skyward, smoke poured from the tail.

A flight of Spitfire fighters engaged the other three Germans as they sped back to the French coast. Dover Strait was calm. In intervals of bright sunshine the French coast stood out clearly.

A second attack on the balloons was delivered later by three Messerschmitt fighters, which came out of steep dives from the clouds and raced low across the breakwater.

Anti-aircraft shells burst all around the craft and one was spouting smoke when it headed back into the clouds.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself with a satisfied expression and ma said, Really, Willyum, I mean really, dont you think it's time we got rid of Dr. Rorer and found some younger modern man more in tune with the times and in touch with modern developments?

Well I dont know, the old akes and panes were good enough for my parents and grand parents and they're good enough for me, that's a way I feel, pop said, and ma said Now Willyum that's perposterous, I'm sure there are any number of germs and simptims that are perfect strangers to Dr. Rorer.

I'd just as soon not be too friendly with them myself, pop said, and ma said, Maybe you'll come around to the other side of the fence when you hear the rediculous statement he made to me today, Not that there's anything definitely wrong with me in a radical way, but I dont altogether approve of the tired feeling that's been coming over me lately, so I just stepped around to Dr. Rorer's office on the theory that an ounce of prevention is the safest word to the wise, she said.

What did he do, give you a couple of aspirins and send you on your way? pop said, and ma said, Not at all, I wouldn't of minded that a bit, in fact a little expert reassurance was just what I was hoping for. He insisted on knowing everything I've been doing lately, so I told him right out that he might as well ask an electric fan to tell him the details of its revolutions, because that's just how busy I've been the passed week or so, with a thousand things to do and no time to do them, and he said, Well, Mrs. Potts, he said, you'll have to slow up a little, you must remember you're not a girl of 20 any longer. Can you imagine, Willyum, with all the modern discoveries in the field of vitamins and duckless glands, he sits there in his musty old antidated office and delibritly insults me above my age, and if you think it's funny you're as bad as he is, she said.

Pop claiming he was just coughing and not laughing and quick getting in back of the sporting page so he wouldn't have to prove it.

AT THE BELLE

"That Hamilton Woman"

During production of Alexander Korda's "That Hamilton Woman!" stirring romance now on view at the Belle theatre, co-stars Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier went about their jobs in a strictly professional manner. They drove to the studio each morning, with Olivier at the wheel and with Vivien's hair blowing in the breezes. Jupiter, their sheep dog, always accompanied them in the back seat, with the family cook following later on with the luncheon he prepared at home. Neither picture-making nor love have impaired the appetites of this glamorous couple.

On the lot, they had adjoining bungalow dressing rooms, Vivien's hair was dressed by Hazel Rogers, who worked with her on "Gone With the Wind." Vivien puts on her own make-up—she always has. While the wardrobe women completed the job of transforming her into an even more beautiful lady Hamilton than the original. Olivier, as Lord Nelson, was undergoing character changes next door.

Olivier himself put on the false nose he wore in "That Hamilton Woman!" The nose constituted the principal change in features. His mouth was also widened, with a lower hairline added. Later on, the hero of Trafalgar lost an eye and an arm. This required more startling changes. Olivier had to don a false eyelid with a glass eye, fitted over his own eyeball.

When Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton emerged to drive to the set together, they were as authentic portraits of the characters as make-up magic and their own artistry could make them.

CAN THE DEAFENED HEAR AGAIN?

Medical authorities say yes—in many cases. Aurine Ear Balsam, a prescription, has proved a blessing to many deafened people. Used since 1895 by those who are deafened and bothered by ringing, buzzing head noises due to hardened or coagulated wax (cerumen). Over a million packages sold. Make a no-risk test. Must satisfy or money refunded. Ask today for Aurine Ear Balsam at Doyle's Drug Store or other leading druggists.

Find Part of Body in Metal Box

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 6 — (CP)—Dismembered parts of a woman's body were found yesterday in a small metal box in the scrap-metal yards of the Traders Metal Company here, police reported today.

Workmen in the yards were about to cut up the box when the top slid open and revealed a woman's arm and leg and part of a jaw and skull.

AT THE CAPITOL

"BUCK PRIVATES"

Crowds jammed the doors of the Capitol last night to see Abbott and Costello in "Buck Privates". The picture is best classified as an American version of a George Formby picture with a pair of comics instead of a solo one. Belleville will join the rest of the continent in howling with glee at a couple of ex-burlesque comedians, but it is not so much what they do as how they do it.

Abbott and Costello are a couple of side-show grafters who get into the army, and aside from some minor romantic stuff among the young people, and time out for songs by the Andrews Sisters, the picture is devoted to the predicaments into which the two comics get themselves. There is of course the ruff-tuff sergeant ably played by Nat Pendleton.

The biggest howls are a rifle drill sequence which is milked for every snicker in the book, and a dice game which runs it a close second. These are but two of many hilarious episodes so you will just have to see "Buck Privates" or you won't know what people are laughing at for the next few weeks.

In the musical line the Andrews Sisters sing a number of hot tunes and the popular old favorite, "I'll be with you in apple blossom time".

The whole programme is one long loud laugh from start to finish including a colored cartoon and an amusing travelogue and another hilarious short subject starring Elsa Maxwell and Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom: "The Lady and the Lug".

A special Wednesday matinee will be held for this attraction.

Driver Arrested For Leaving Scene Of Accident At Trenton

Trenton, May 6—Fred Higgins of Trenton was placed under arrest last evening on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident and will appear in police court this afternoon.

Higgins is alleged to have crashed into the rear of a car driven by George Smith, R.C.A.F., Trenton, at the traffic light on the corner of Dundas and Front Streets. It is alleged that Smith stopped for the light and Higgins failed to do so. Following the crash Higgins is alleged to have pulled around the other automobile and left the scene. Damage amounting to $40 was done to the Smith car.

The accused driver was arrested in half an hour.

E. F. Sills, Dies

Following a week's illness, Edward Finley Sills, Trenton R.R. 4, Murray Township, died at his residence yesterday. He was in his 63rd year.

A lifelong resident of the district the late Mr. Sills was well-known and respected in the township. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Sills.

Surviving him are his wife the former Ida V. Flindall and one daughter Mrs. Arthur Dopking.

Late Mrs. N. Genereaux

Following an illness of two weeks, Mrs. N. Genereaux died at her home this morning. She was in her 82nd year.

She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Duyea, of Queensboro. The late Mrs. Genereaux had lived in this town for a number of years and was well-known.

German Communique

Berlin, May 6 (AP)—The German High Command claimed today that German raiders over Glasgow and the Clydeside shipping area last night caused "heavy destruction in shipyards and armament factories."

In English waters, the war bulletin claimed German airmen sank a large patrol boat and a small merchantman and damaged two other ships.

At Suda Bay, British base in the Mediterranean island of Crete, it was claimed that German raiders scored hits on a 10,000-ton cruiser, sank one tanker and damaged another.

(These claims lack confirmation from Allied sources.)

The Day in Parliament

By The Canadian Press

Today:

The House will discuss employment relief grants and continue the budget debate.

The Senate stands adjourned to May 13.

Yesterday:

The House heard Conservative House Leader Hanson initiate the budget debate with a speech urging more drastic economies on non-war governmental expenditures; Victor Quelch (N. D. Acadia) make a want of confidence motion regretting failure of the government to establish effective control over issue of credit by chartered banks; M. J. Coldwell, acting C.C.F. House Leader, criticize some of Finance Minister Ilsley's budget proposals; Navy Minister Macdonald announce that 75 "military personnel" are believed to have lost their lives in a ship sinking.

The Senate did not sit.

WALL STREET

New York, May 6 —(AP)— Led by Steels, Rails, Oils and Specialties, stocks rallied with vigor in today's market.

Scattered favorites stepped into new high ground for the year and gains of fractions to a point or so were well maintained near the fourth hour.

A fresh burst of strength in Commodities served as a prop for sentiment. Railway bonds continued to climb.

Best prices for 1941 were posted for such stocks as Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Standard Oils of N.J., Indiania and California, and Preferreds of Nickle Plate, Pere Marquette and American Car and Foundry.

Well in front most of the time were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Union Pacific, Great Northern, N.Y. Central, Sears Roebuck, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Du Pont and Allied Chemical.

Among the Canadian issues Distillers Seagram lost 5-8 and Canadian Pacific Gained 1-4. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unquoted.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 6 (CP)— Prices improved all around in the stock market but volume remained small at 63,000 shares for the first three hours.

The possibility of the British losing Iraq oil field stimulated interest in the oil listings and gains of 1-2-1 were showing for International Pete, Imperial Oil and British American. The western oils tightened in sympathy and higher prices were posted by Home Oil, Royalite, Calgary-Edmonton and South East Pete.

Golds were strong with gains showing for Macassa, Pickle Crow, Kerr Addison, Upper Canada, Preston and San Antonio against narrow losses for Wright Hargreaves, MacLeod Cockshutt and McIntyre.

International Nickel firmed a point to 30 3-4 and Chromium advanced 7 cents to a new high for the year at 30. Steep Rock added 4.

Aside from the big oils, industrial groups were steady. Bell Telephone was also an exception, weakening 3-4 to 140.

Livestock

Montreal, May 6—(CP)—The Department of Agriculture reported today prices on calves were 25 cents higher and other kinds of livestock were firm on Montreal Livestock Markets.

Receipts: Cattle 106, sheep and lambs 29, calves 1,489, hogs 825.

Cattle were mostly cows and bulls. Good cows were $6.50 to $7 with medium kinds from $5.50 to $6.25. Common bulls were $5 to $6.25.

Calves ranged from $5.50 to $8.50. There were no tops. Good veals made $8.25 to $8.50 with medium kinds from $7.50 to $8. Bulk of the calves sold in mixed lots around $7.

A few spring lambs were sold at $6 to $8 each. Sheep were $4.50 to $6.

Hogs were $12.25 for B-1 dressed and $9.35 for B-1 off trucks delivered. Grade A drew $1 premium with discounts on off grades. Sows were $5.50 to $6.50. A few young sows sold up to $7 live weight.

Toronto, May 6—(CP) — Cattle trade was steady on the Livestock Market up to mid-session today on all grades but weighty steers which were 25 cents lower. Veal calves, local feed lot and good spring lambs and sheep were steady. No price was established for hogs. One carload of western lambs were unsold. The cattle holdover from Monday was 900 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Market Service were cattle, 960, calves 800, hogs 1,020, sheep and lambs 260.

Weighty steers sold at $8 to $8.75, butcher steers and heifers mostly at $8 to $8.50, with a few at $8.75, butcher cows $5 to $7, canners and cutters $3.25 to $4.50, bulls $5.50 to $6.60. Fed calves $8.60 to $9.50 and a few stockers at $7 to $8.

Veal calves sold at $10.50 to $11 for choice with a few tops at $11.50 and common lights selling downward to $6.

A few local feed lot lambs sold steady at $10. Spring lambs sold at $11 for good.

Sheep sold at $3 to $6.

Hogs closed previously at $11.75 to $11.90 dressedweight at yards and plants and $8.90 liveweight.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 6—(CP)—Bacon-Hog prices showed a general increase in markets reporting today. Dressedweight at Toronto closed yesterday at $11.75 to $11.90 after no price had been established late in the day with bids at $11.65 and higher prices asked. Stratford reported dressedweight up 50 cents, Hull dressedweight up 30 cents, while Brantford held a 60 cent increase reported yesterday.

Dressedweight: Brantford $11.25 plus transportation, Hull $11.30 plus transportation, Stratford $11 plus transportation.

London retained a 50-cent increase reported yesterday with dressedweight at $11.35 delivered and prices were unchanged at Chatham at dressedweight $10.95 and liveweight $8.

Egg Prices Steady Despite Huge Order

Toronto — Remarkable response was obtained from the Canadian egg trade to the call for 180,000 cases of eggs for shipment to the United Kingdom, reports the Dominion Department of Agriculture, and the quantity asked was substantially oversubscribed. This was accounted for by the enthusiasm on the part of every one to fill this order and by the control of quantities going into storage, the department said.

Principal eastern markets last week showed a slight downward reaction as a result of the storage order. Careful consideration, however, is being given so that the price situation will not be adversely affected, it was reported.

Egg prices held unchanged on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, as did butter.

Demand improved slightly in the morning session of the egg market here, only to slacken in later dealings. Receipts, which arrived in ample volume to satisfy local needs, moved quietly at steady prices.

Caution remained the keynote on the butter market, with the minimum price question apparently uppermost in the minds of the general trade. Buyers merely nibbled at offerings, but prices held up as current arrivals were not burdensome. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids changed hands in odd small lots at the previous level of 29½ cents a pound.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, May 6 —(CP)— Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 31; first grade solids, jobbing price, 30½.

Secret Organization Helps Fugitives Escape

(By J. P. McKnight.)

Lisbon, May 6 (AP).—A smooth-working secret organization, active along the entire border between the German-occupied and unoccupied zones of France, smuggling out persons unable to get permits to leave, is described by refugees reaching Portugal.

The Germans, unable to spare the men necessary to patrol every foot of the boundary recently have started firing upon persons sighted escaping, the refugees said and four or five are reported killed every week.

Fees paid for escape range from nothing — some Englishmen and women have been slipped across the line free—to many thousands of francs.

The refugees estimated there are twenty to thirty "guides" devoting their entire time to arranging escapes. But this number is swelled by uncounted hundreds of French peasants who lend a hand either from patriotism or for financial gain.

Stories are told of how even some Germans help the refugees. Here are typical accounts:

An English nurse had the good fortune to be brought before a German with whom she had been associated before the war. He tipped her off to the best way to flee and seh escaped five minutes before she was due to be sent to an internmetn camp well away from the border.

One of the villages bisected by the dividing line has its cemetery in the free zone. That fact enabled many to escape—until the Germans caught on. Sentries for months carelessly wave funeral processions across the line without noting that fewer vehicles returned than went out.

In other villages similarly situated fugitives arriving are hidden until nightfall, then conducted across fences and backyards to the other side of the line.

Many farmers whose lands lie half in, half out of the occupied zone have a chance to boost their income by making use of that situation. A carload of hay or farm produce looks innocent enough, but may conceal an English soldier or civilian.

Occasionally fugitives really crash their way through. One carload cracked a barrier at high speed. A surprised sentry opened fire, then hopped on his bicycle in pursuit but was quickly outdistanced.

President States Big Increase In Production Urgent

Command Of Air By Democracies Must And Can Be Achieved Says Roosevelt

NEED HEAVY BOMBERS

By J. F. SANDERSON

Washington, May 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt called in top flight men from his cabinet and the army and navy today to discuss stepping up the production of big bombers.

He also designated Maj.-Gen. James H. Burns as an assistant to Harry L. Hopkins to handle much of the detailed work under the British-aid bill and in another step directed the Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard, to set up a special division to handle work previously assigned to the agricultural division of the defence commission.

Mr. Roosevelt, who asked War Secretary Stimson last night to obtain a "substantial increase in heavy bomber production," followed that up today by calling in to conference along with Stimson, State Secretary Hull, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Navy Secretary Knox; Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Army; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Hopkins, supervisor of the lease-lend program and Maj.-Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the army air corps.

Gives Full Report

Arnold has just returned from Britain and has made a preliminary, oral report to Hopkins. Today's conference was to provide an opportunity, White House officials said, for Arnold to give a "full and complete report" to all members of what in some quarters has been called the "war cabinet."

The White House said a major purpose would be to consider the needs as outlined by Mr. Roosevelt in his letter to Stimson, on increasing the output of big bombers with "all possible speed."

Hopkins, it was said, has been virtually a clearing house on the lease-lend program, with representatives of governments seeking assistance coming to him with their requests. Gen. Burns will go into the office of emergency management, in the executive office of the President, as executive officer of a new division of defence aid reports.

Gives Military Order

It was the President's belief, said Stephen Early, a secretary, that the job could be done better by a military man, with an understanding of the whole picture, than by a civilian.

It took a military order by Mr. Roosevelt as commander-in-chief of the armed forces to give Gen. Burns the new job.

The Division of Defence Air Reports was created by a Presidential executive order, which said it was to "provide a central channel for the clearance of transactions and reports, and co-ordinate the processing of requests for aid under the (lease-lend) act."

Mr. Roosevelt accepted the resignation of Chester C. Davis as agricultural member of the Defence Commission in ordering the change affecting work Davis has been doing. Davis had remained on the commission at the request of the President, after his recent appointment to the presidency of the Federal Reserve Bank at St. Louis.

Then in a letter to Wickard, he directed the creation of an "Office for Agricultural Defence Relations," leaving its organization to the secretary.

"As emergency defence activities continue to develop and expand," Mr. Roosevelt wrote; "I am deeply concerned that adequate provision be made for the correlation of agricultural operations with other elements of the national defence program.

Must Supply Food

"With the aim of further strengthening the emergency organization for defence, I believe it now desirable to place these special defence activities directly in the Department of Agriculture where they will be brought closer to the established agricultural programs of the government."

Mr. Roosevelt said the most vital operating functions of agriculture in the defence program were:-

"First, the guarantee of an adequate supply of food for the needs of this nation and supplemental needs of those nations whose defence is essential to the defence of this country; and second, the provision of sufficient agricultural raw materials for expanded defence production.

"In the accomplishment of these major purposes it will be necessary to assure that the agricultural balance is not destroyed and that the consequent ability of the agricultural population to fulfill its contribution to the defence effort is not impaired."

In regard to the President's bomber objective, some sources said the President had in mind production of huge four-engined bombers at the rate of 500 a month and that at least half would be made available to Britain.

This output would be at least 10 times greater than at present. Heavy bombers in such quantities, airmen said, would be an offensive weapon which the Axis could not meet.

The President wrote Stimson: "Command of the air by the democracies must and can be achieved. Every month the democracies are gaining in the relative strength of the air forces. We must see to it that process is hastened and that the democratic superiority in the air be made absolute."

Heavy Bombers Needed

Mr. Roosevelt said that more heavy bombers were needed both for the defence of the United States and for "the vital defence of other democratic nations."

The President's instructions recalled the recent appraisal which William S. Knudsen made of the value of heavy bombers.

"If we had 2,000 of that type now," the office of production management chief said of one four-motor bomber, "we could fix things up over there."

Stimson's roll-out-the-bombers assignment would probably require more than a year, airmen said, before the 500-a-month production peak could be reached. However, it was noted that steps to expand bomber production capacity already were well under way.

At the moment only two heavy bomber plants are actually in production, and their combined output has been reported to be less than 50 planes a month.

Two New Plants Planned

Two new assembly plants for heavy bombers however, already are under construction at Tulsa, Okla., and Fort Worth, Texas, which will turn out 50 apiece each month beginning some time this fall. The automobile industry is working on manufacture of the parts these plants will assemble.

The War Department is undertaking to set up three or four more plants. A contract for one was given this spring to Glenn L. Martin Company at Baltimore, and officials said that the other plants were provided for in the $1,500,000,000 available for additional munitions facilities under the lease-lend bill and a supplemental defence appropriation.

Enlarge Big Plant

Plans likewise were in the discussion stage for enlarging an $11,000,000 plant at Ypsilanti, Mich., so that it can turn out completed 21-ton bombers instead of merely air frames. The plant is being built by Henry Ford.

The President's call for more bombers followed closely on his order that a pool of 2,000,000 tons of shipping be established to help Britain in the battle of the Atlantic, carrying essential supplies to the British Isles or wherever else they may be needed.

Some observers suggested the announcement of the aircraft plan might be an indication that Britain and her Allies were in a position to intensify their air offensive against the Axis, possibly as a result of growth in trained personnel through operation of the commonwealth air training plan in Canada.

TIME FOR ACTION SAYS BISHOP

Time for Criticism and Talking is Past But Action Required

Toronto, May 6 (CP)—Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Primate of all Canada and Anglican Archbishop of Toronto, said in his charge to the Synod of the Diocese of Toronto here today that "one of the things for which we fight democracy, and one of the essential elements of democracy is free criticism, but the time for criticism is past."

"One of the rights of democracy is free speech," the Arhbishop continued. "But the time for talking is past. This is the time for action, for prayer...."

Archbishop Owen said consideration should be given now to "what is to happen after the war."

"No one can be satisfied with the state of things in the social and economic spheres which has prevailed in the world for the last 20 years. There are manifest signs of a deep discontent in these things."

He spoke of the church's task in raising money to replace grants previously made by organizations in England, but said there would be "no special appeal for our church work in Canada this year."

One of the duties of church people should be to take interest in public affairs, he said. A supreme effort should be made to support Britain in the present conflict, giving her "the help she needs, in money and in public service."

"To the people of Britain, and to the soldiers, sailors and airmen of our King, we in the Synod of Toronto pay our gratitude and admiration," he said. ". . . I would add a word of thankfulness for the friendship and practical co-operation of our great neighbor, the United States of America."

BELLEVILLE GIRL

Remanded Without Bail

Ralph Darlington was remanded without bail until May 13 when he appeared in York County Police Court on a charge of attempted murder and his father was remanded to the same day on bail of $200 on a charge of being in possession of an unregistered rifle.

Assistant Crown Attorney MacTavish of York County said there would be no change in the charge against the Darlington boy.

The father said today the shooting was "purely accidental."

"The three children were reading the comics in the bedroom when Ralph showed the gun to the other two," Mr. Darlington said. "Thelma was sitting on the bed reading and when the gun accidentally went off she was in the line of fire."

Mr. and Mrs. F. Argent, parents of the girl, arrived in Toronto from their Belleville home and visited their daughter in hospital before her death.

CLYDESIDE AREA

Considerable damage also was reported in the Mersey River shipping centre of Liverpool, attacked for the fifth consecutive night.

Royal Air Force fighters, however, downed eight German planes during the night.

Belfast, subjected Sunday night to a heavy attack, was one of the objectives on which the Germans loosed bombs in Northern Ireland during the dark hours before dawn today.

The Ministies of Air and Home security used the term "large scale" in referring to Nazi aerial operations during the night.

Bombs were reported to have fallen at many places in England, particularly in the northeast, east and southwest, but the government said "there was no concentrated attack in these areas and damage done was not extensive."

The Belfast raid Sunday brought fire fighting assistance from neighboring neutral Eire, despite previous reports from the British Broadcasting Corporation that the last time such assistance was rendered German aircraft dropped leaflets over Dublin threatening that in the event of a repetition "Eire will have some fires of its own to put out."

Casualties in the Clydeside area included a number of doctors, first aid workers, wardens and volunteers who were in a street shelter which received a direct hit.

An entire family was wiped out in one town by bombs hitting a tenement. The building collapsed on a shelter containing 50 men, women and children and many of them were killed.

In one tenement district, buildings which had just been repaired from previous raids again were heavily damaged.

British Position In Iraq, Egypt Seriously Threatened Says Acting Minister

Sydney, Australia, May 6 (CP Cable)—Arthur Fadden, Acting Prime Minister, declared in a statement today that the British position in Egypt and Iraq is seriously threatened.

"We are faced with an attempt to cut a gulf across the centre of the Empire," Mr. Fadden said. "I would not seek to minimize the danger. While attempting to guard Iraq we must be prepared for a large-scale attack on Egypt and Libya."

Two Belleville Anglers Land 25-lb. Lake Trout At Opeongo L.

Those two ardent fishermen, Mr. Roy Stafford, and Dr. George H. Stobie, are wearing broad smiles these days. And if they gaze upon their less fortunate brothers of the rod and reel fraternity, with looks that smack a bit of pity, well—they can scarcely be blamed.

For behind the broad smiles is a story of fishing achievement. They arrived in the city on Sunday evening after a three-day sojourn in the haunts of the elusive trout and other piscatorial beauties, laden with the spoils of the chase.

'Twas on arrival at the shores of Lake Opeongo in the Algonquin Park, that they decided to toss their chances of success in the laps of the gods that control the destinies of fish and fishermen.

And it was only a few minutes later that the Staffordian and Stobian profiles were illuminated with the smiles of victory, for the finny beauties it appeared had developed an appetite that for voracity equalled the famed Nubian lions that appeared in battle with the early Christians at the midnight shows of Nero.

The broader they smiled, the more fish offered themselves for sacrifice in the frying pans of the Stobie-Stafford kitchens. Within a short time the anglers had their quota of grey trout while flopping in its death agonies lay a specimen of brook trout that tipped the scales at 1½ pounds.

But that is not all. Blushing a delicate pink, when the lens of a movie-camera caught it as it was lifted out of the water, a twenty-five pound lake trout hooked by Mr. Stafford took to the smiling doctor with such gusto that it promptly flipped itself in his lap. The "doc" apparently has a way with fish, for it was afterwards learned that the big trout flopped his way there more through affection, than in an effort to get away.

Serbs Vow To Fight Until No Nazi Or Italian Is Left

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

Cairo, May 6 (AP)—Vowing never to lay down their arms as long as there is a German or an Italian enemy to shoot at, tens of thousands of well equipped Yugoslav warriors who escaped the Axis invasion are continuing the fight on the sands of Egypt and in the wild mountains of their native Serbia and Bosnia.

Before I escaped from Yugoslavia with a machine-gun bullet in one leg, I saw whole regiments of those hot-blooded fighting men take their whispered pledges never to give up and then melt into the mountain fastnesses to harass the invaders.

And now, here, in camps scattered over the desert sands, the Yugoslav flag flies beside the Union Jack. Hundreds of army and air Slav officers are re-forming their ranks to continue the fight beside the British.

(Hitler, in his Reichstag address Sunday, said that 344,162 Yugoslav officers and men had been captured in the Balkan campaign. Military authorities, prior to the start of hostilities, estimated that Yugoslavia would put at least 1,000,000 men into the field.)

I have talked with one of these Yugoslav pilots at various stops along the route of escape from Belgrade to Cairo. First I met him at Sarajevo. He just had learned his mother and sister were killed in the Belgrade bombing. He went off that night in a bomber to attack German military train concentrations at Sofia.

"Not Through Yet."

I saw him when he returned. His face was grim, his jaw set.

"They all landed where I wanted them to land," he said. "But I am not through yet."

I saw him next in Greece. He had flown his plane that far. Nothing had weakened his determination to fight on.

Now he is here: I listened again today to his story of how his sister was blown to bits that gruesome Sunday morning when Belgrade was awakened by bombs instead of by church bells.

He and hundreds of his countrymen here talk a lot these days about history's parallel — how defeated Serb troops in the last war reformed their broken ranks and eventually smashed their way home to victory on the Salonika front.

Technically, Yugoslavia's war against the Axis may be over, but not in the minds of those guerilla warriors in the mountains, those peasants who vowed vengeance in dimly lit cafes and crowded market places, or those refugee soldiers who got away to fight another day.

For ten days as I fled down through the hill country of Yugoslavia to the Dalmatian coast I tried to file despatches telling of the sullen retreat of these patriots into the mountains and of the oaths they swore never to surrender.

Took Guns Into Hills

But the German onslaught was so swift and the confusion so great that I never had an opportunity to communicate with the outside world.

When news of the armistice came many of the Yugoslav soldiers simply gathered their guns, ammunition and equipment and began the trek into the mountains. Their officers made no effort to stop them. That would have been useless.

Now word has reached here by a devious way that these desperate, determined men are causing the German and Italian occupation forces extreme difficulties.

In a Dalmatian seaport I sat at a restaurant eating fish and black bread one night when a dark-skinned young Montenegrin soldier was ushered in. He was in his 20's; his eyes were alive.

"You are going to leave my country if you can, they tell me," he said, "you must take me with you. I have a gun. I want to go somewhere, anywhere, but I must fight

"I refuse to lay down my gun now. Take me where I can fight the Germans and the Italians. I don't care where it is."

I don't know what he finally did but his was the spirit that sent the unorganized armies of guerilla warriors into the hills.

FIGHTING IN IRAQ

Attack Iraq Artillery

A communique last night, however, told of raids elsewhere with blazing machine-guns and the thunder of bombs, reported heavy attacks on Iraq artillery which had been shelling the British air base at Lake Habbaniyah, and said the R.A.F., largely through attacks on air fields, had put out of action "the greater part of the Iraq operational aircraft."

Turkey's offer to mediate in the war at her backdoor, disclosed yesterday, came to naught—for the time being at least. An authorized British statement said the "friendly motives" of the Turkish government were appreciated by the withdrawal of Rashid Ali's troops from the siege of the Lake Habbaniyah Base was 'an essential prerequisite" to any negotiations.

Just Propaganda

The French news agency, which is operated under German influence, claimed in dispatches from Baghdad that the Iraq government had decided to resume diplomatic relations with Germany. The old Iraq government had severed these relations at the start of the war.

Meanwhile, British quarters in Cairo said that so far, despite two appeals by Rashid Ali's government, the Germans had given Iraq no aid other than moral support and money furnished before the outbreak of fighting.

MACHINE EXPORTS

During the past several months Russia has been successful in securing licences for the export of machine tools and some other manufacturing equipment previously ordered here. This was the result of negotiations between Constantin Oumansky, the Soviet Ambassador, and State Undersecretary Sumner Welles.

Recent developments, however, were said to have made it inadvisable for the United States to permit the export of any machinery which can be used here in defence or British aid production.

As evidence of that, informed quarters reported, the United States government recently took over a considerable quantity of machinery—some of which had been paid for by Russia and was awaiting shipment—for use in construction of new air and naval bases in Panama, Puerto Rico, and elsewhere in the Caribbean.

Major Reasons for Scarcity

Major reasons for the scarcity of export licences for Soviet Russia were said to be:

1. President Roosevelt's instructions to the office of production management that "every single critical-machine in the United States be used the maximum number of hours each week;" that every effort be made to round-up and utilize all machine tools and other vital machinery; and that the machine tool industry be expanded far beyond previous production estimates.

2. The signing of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact, which "Pravda," official mouthpiece of the Communist Party, described as a blow at American and British interests.

3. Russia's anomalous position in the war and her conflicting swings of policy between cooperation and non-cooperation with Germany. This has created a desire for clarification of the Soviet's further attitude before the United States releases any shipments which might be beneficial, directly or indirectly, to the Nazis.

LORD BEAVERBROOK APPOINTED MINISTER OF STATE

In a major shuffling of the British cabinet, Canadian-born Lord Beaverbrook, RIGHT, was named minister of state in complete control of all British war production. Lieut.-Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, LEFT, first man to fly a British made plane over England in 1910, succeeds Lord Beaverbrook as minister of aircraft production. Ronald H. Cross, CENTRE, shipping minister, was appointed high commissioner to Australia.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR LIVER

Buck it up right now and feel like a million!

Your liver is the largest organ in your body and most important to your health. It pours out bile to digest food, gets rid of waste, supplies new energy, allows proper nourishment to reach your blood. When your liver gets out of order food decomposes in your intestines. You become constipated, stomach and kidneys can't work properly. You feel "rotten"—headachy, backachy, dizzy, dragged out all the time.

For over 35 years thousands have won prompt relief from these miseries—with Fruit-a-tives. So can you now. Try Fruit-a-tives—you'll be simply delighted how quickly you'll feel like a new person, happy and well again. 25c, 50c.

WOULD INCREASE EXEMPTION AGE

Ottawa, May 6 (CP)— Income tax payers should be allowed to claim exemption for daughters over 16 and under 21 who are attending schools and colleges, G. K. Fraser, (Con. Peterborough West) contended in the House of Commons yesterday.

His reason: "During this period parents frequently had to spend more on their daughters than at any other time.

"I say girls only and not boys," he said. "because a boy can get out during the summer and earn an extra dollar.

"I had to do it and many other members and we are the better for it."

WHERE ANCESTRY GOES IN MOTHER

Census-Takers in North Country Have Special Rules on Eskimos and Indians

Ottawa (CP)—The Smiths and Joneses of the Canadian Arctic races will be recorded in the books of census enumerators this year.

Instructions to northern enumerators, available here, made clear that in the case of Eskimos and Indians the family origin is traced through the mother. The names of tribes will be given as Agamint, Sinimuit, Kidnelik, Unnuit, Slaves, Rabbit Skins, Crees, Saulteaux and so forth.

Enumerators' instructions reminded them that in other races the origin is usually traced through the father, but the tribal method of tracing ancestry through the mother must be observed.

Apart from the northland, the census starts June 2 and completion is expected within a few weeks. But in the north the enumerator is given until Oct. 31, and if he cannot forward his books to be received in Ottawa by that time he is required to transmit the totals of population by wireless. This will facilitate early statement on the total number of Canadians.

A special provision in instructions to northern enumerators was that they must enumerate every person found in the areas assigned to them irrespective of place of residence.

"This is necessary owing to the nomadic habits of the inhabitants of these regions, so that if persons be not enumerated where they are met they may be omitted altogether from the census," instructions said.

"If, however, any white person states that he or she has already been enumerated in another locality a statement to this effect with the name of the locality where enumerated should be made on the line of the schedule upon which the person's name appears; in every such case the enumerator will obtain complete data as indicated by the headings of the schedule regarding such person or persons."

The census book to be carried in the north, in contrast to the lengthy forms for use in other regions, is a compact volume with a stout cardboard cover. The enumerator is supplied with a waterproof cover for the book and has instructiions that it must always be carried therein.

THE WAR TODAY

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

President Roosevelt's call for greatly augmented bomber production, designed to give the democracies command of the air, was interpreted in some quarters today as an indication that a new phase in the war may be approaching.

It was suggested that the output of heavy bombers, most of which probably will go to Britain, may mean an imminent speed up of allied offensive action against the axis, action in which they will seek to paste Germany and Italy with ever-increasing violence.

The President called for more heavy bombers, giant craft powered by four engines, capable of carrying bigger bomb loads greater distances than most of the aircraft now in use by the Royal Air Force and its allies.

There were some who suggested also that the President's call was a reflection of the progress of the Empire Air Training Scheme and an indication that from now on skilled personnel will be available to man the new craft.

He asked War Secretary Henry Stimson to take steps to make the new production effective as soon as possible. He did not publicly disclose the amount of new production required, reserving that information for a private memorandum to Stimson, but it was reported in some quarters that the figure would be 500 heavy bombers a month.

The demand for bombers followed closely the President's orders for a pool of 2,000,000 tons of shipping to be used in helping Britain and the other democracies fight the battle of the Atlantic.

Mr. Roosevelt's announcement was followed closely by plea from Senator Claude Pepper that the United States show itself tough, convoy its shipping, call for volunteers to bomb Tokyo, occupy the outposts of Europe and possible points nearer the Western Hemisphere which might be used as axis jumping off points for raids on North Africa, and establish an indemnity fund of axis money in the United States now to be used later to help pay for the war.

While the industrial forces of the United States were mustered for a furious new effort the situation in the Middle East improved somewhat for Britain and it was expected that dissident Iraqis would not long be able to harass British forces within their land.

Germany, the undoubted instigator of Iraq action against Britain, appeared to have left the country's pro-axis government holding the bag through inability to get military help for it.

It was assumed, however, that Germany would seek to help the Iraqi "cause" by attempting to stir up trouble among other Mohammedan countries of the Middle East.

House Republicans Balked In Anti-Convoy Amendment To Bill

Washington, May 6 (AP).—House of Representatives Republicans sought and failed today to force an immediate vote on the question of whether the United States should convoy shipments of supplies to Great Britain.

Representative Fred Bradley (Rep. Michigan) said that he and others had planned to offer an "anti-convoy" amendment to a pending bill which would authorize President Roosevelt to take over idle foreign-flag tonnage for national defence but had been informed that a parliamentary technicality blocked their attempt.

Nevertheless, the convoy question remained uppermost in debate on the bill to permit diversion to commerce and defence purposes of 83 foreign ships, including two German and 26 Italian vessels. Republicans contended that the possible transfer of the axis vessels to Great Britain would constitute "a clear act of war".

To avoid such a step, they decided to sponsor a provision which said that such flagships "shall not be turned over to any nation now at war or used for the purpose of promoting their objectives."

Democratic leaders, publicly asserting that disposition of any ship that might be taken over should be left to the discretion of the President, predicted that the amendment would be defeated and that by nightfall the measure would be sped to the senate—where another fight was brewing.

Three Democrats spoke out forthrightly on the convoy question during yesterday's debate as Representative Hamilton Fish (Rep.-New York) attributed to the President the statement that convoys would mean shooting and shooting would mean war.

Representative E. E. Cox (Dem.-Georgia) told the House: "Of course we're going to convoy, and convoy right away."

"We have voted billions of credit for Great Britain," Cox said. "We have promised support to the limit of our capacity. If it happens that we can't fulfill our promises short of convoys what are you going to do?

"Are you going to stop because convoys might get us into war? Of course you're not."

Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.-Georgia) of the Naval Committee said that "if convoys are needed, let's have convoys"; Representative Luther Patrick (Dem.-Alabama) remarked: "I think we should begin immediately to convoy."

Estimate 79 Belfast Residents Die In Raid

Belfast, Northern Ireland, May 6 (AP)—Twelve persons were killed when a heavy bomb scored a direct hit on a shelter during a German air attack last night on this Ulster capital.

Unofficial sources, meanwhile, estimated at 79 the deaths from a heavy assault on the city Sunday night.

A Detective Sergeant and six young constables just reporting for active duty from a training depot were killed when a bomb squarely hit their station.

Many volunteers from Eire travelled north to help in the bombed capital of Northern Ireland. Among these was Dr. James S. Ashe, Dublin physician.

A subscription of 5,000 pounds ($22,250) was received from the War Relief Society of America for the Belfast air raid fund.

CONFESSES BOMBING

Mysterious automobile dynamiting at Scranton, Pa., last November in which the son and daughter of the Scranton director of public health were killed was believed solved with the signed confession of Dwight O. Thorne, 32, that he had placed the dynamite in the automobile. County Attorney M. J. See, of Louisa, Ky., said that Thorne walked into the sheriff's office at Louisa and said he hadn't slept for three months and wished to confess to a murder.

BISHOP LYONS SPEAKS TO SYNOD

Tells Meeting the Church Must Advance or Lose Ground

Kingston, Ont., May 6 (CP) — Bishop John Lyons said in his charge to the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Kingston today that "the Empire is faced with a challenge such as we have never experienced before in our history."

"More people," he went on, "are given to serious thought and preparation than ever before, that the foundations of the post-war period may be well and wisely laid. This is an encouraging sign.

"On the whole we are blessed with strong leadership. His gracious Majesty King George VI, with a confessed faith and trust in God, penetrates to the very roots of the present conflict. President Franklin Roosevelt and England's great Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, with the courage of their convictions, by speech and action leave no doubt the world over."

Bishop Lyons said that the church must advance or lose ground. "There is no doubt in our minds as to the outcome of the struggle. We know the Empire and her allies are fighting against a ruthless foe for the things we hold sacred in human life—justice, freedom, the dignity of personality and Christianity itself."

Prospects Bright For Balking Axis Drive In Africa

(By KIRKE L. SIMPSON.)

Washington, May 6 (AP). — The latest war reports appear to have made Britons somewhat more optimistic over the prospects of balking military and political thrusts by the Axis in North Africa and Iraq.

Of the two, the successful stand at Tobruk in Libya against a sustained German-Italian attack is the most significant. Surrounded on three sides, but with the sea and the British Fleet at its back, the Tobruk garrison has held out four weeks.

That alone indicates that the Axis drive, harassed all along its hundreds of miles of communication lines with its Tripoli base, has lost its punch. It also indicates that the Axis forces in the area have not been substantially reinforced. Presumably, with the evacuation of Greece completed, British naval and air forces have been able to tighten the blockade against Axis reinforcements across the Sicilian Straits.

Cairo bulletins also show that the sandstorm season has begun in the coastal area of Libya and Egypt. An Axis offensive that could overwhelm the main British defense line, still 130 miles east of the farthest advance of the Axis drive, appears all but impossible for the time being.

Time Fights for Britain.

Weather conditions would as seriously hamper the British command in attempting any large-scale counter offensive, it is true; but its mission is primarily defensive at this stage of the North African conflict.

Time is fighting for Britain there. With rail connections from Matruh eastward available and not subject to serious interruptions due to sand storms or high temperatures, every hour gained by the British stands at Tobruk and Salum must see the Matruh defense system strengthneed and more heavily manned. Veterans of the flight from Greece, burning to avenge themselves on their Nazi foe, are increasingly available to General Wavell on that critical front. So, also, are troops hurried northwestward from East Africa in unknown, but certainly substantial, numbers.

Just what is happening in Iraq is not as obvious. With the small but important Iraq air force reported out of action, however, the British forces both at the Habbaniyah base near Baghdad and at Basra unshaken by a four-day attack, there seem good chances that the conflict can be localized. A reported Turkish mediation offer strikes the same note. It tends to relieve the worst British fear, which was that the Nazi-minded Iraq leader, Gailani, aided and abetted by German and Italian agents throughout the Moslem world would succeed in inciting a "holy war" against Britain.

May Yet Save Oil.

Failing that or effective German intervention in the struggle, Britons evidently entertain the hope that fighting in Iraq will be of brief duration and that interruption of British oil supplies from that source will be temporary. While the flow through the pipeline to Haifa in Palestine has been cut off, apparently, there is no authentic evidence that the line itself or its pumping relay stations have been damaged.

The interruption apparently took place at the source and by order of Gailani. Indicated British success in smashing up the Iraq Air Force and progressively silencing batteries firing at Habbaniyah exposes the Iraq Army to further quick reverses since its every movement in desert terrain must be exposed to air scouts and bombardment. And just how devoted to Gailani much of that army may be is open to doubt.

Had Sore, Stiff Joints, Stomach Gas and Acidity -- Now He Endorses Syntona

Describes How it Gave Him Pleasant Relief After Many Years of Suffering with Indigestion, Constipation, Skin Eruptions and Rheumatic Pains.

All who suffer from conditions that are caused or aggravated by faulty assimilation and elimination, disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys or bowels; toxic poisons and irritating waste mater in the system, should be interested in the splendid results that other grateful men and women are receiving by taking a treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound. Here, for example, is the interesting experience of Mr. Wellington Ward, 169 Main St., Hamilton, according to his recent report:

"Five years ago my stomach started to give me trouble and everything I ate just seemed to ferment and cause gas, bloating and constipation. My tongue was coated and sour, burning acids would rise up into my throat. I was always having periodical attacks of boils and skin eruptions. This trouble began many years ago and no matter what I used I couldn't get any lasting relief. After I went to bed at night I would suffer with gas pains and my head would swim so I couldn't sleep. Then, lately, rheumatic pains set into my knees and the joints got so sore and stiff I could hardly get around.

"It was only a few weeks ago that I decided to try Syntona, and I am happy to say the first bottle helped my stomach and bowels. Then my skin began to heal and the rheumatic pains began to clear up. I sleep better now, I enjoy my meals and I feel more healthy and happy than I did in years previously. I would surely say that any person who suffers like I did should get Syntona and take it."

Go to Dolan's Drug Store, Belleville, and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

19 NAZI PLANES SHOT DOWN IN BITTER BATTLE

British Defences Repel Nazi Thrusts In Past 24 Hours

Clydeside, Liverpool And Northern Ireland Paid Return Visits By Nazis

R. A. F. RAIDS GERMANY

London, May 7 —(CP)— The Air Ministry announced today that 19 German planes had been shot down in 24 hours of bitter air fighting over the western European front.

Seven British fighter planes were lost.

"Since dawn today," an authoritative statement said, "there has been continuous enemy activity by fighter aircraft near the southeast coast and the Thames Estuary."

One British fighter fell into the sea in the clash of channel patrols.

Armed Reconnaissance Flights

Informed sources attributed the unusually large daylight toll to increasing armed reconnaissance flights by the Germans now that spring has brought good weather back to the channel area.

Also, they said, the Germans may have intensified their daylight patrols in the hope of intercepting R. A. F. coastal bombers which have claimed a heavy toll on German coastal shipping in the past week.

Hamburg, which a communique said was attacked by a large British force, was the centre of the R. A. F.'s attention overnight while strong flights of German bombers concentrated on Glasgow's Clydeside shipyards and revisited Liverpool and Northern Ireland.

WARSHIP PATIA BOMBED, SUNK BY NAZI PLANE

Enemy Aircraft Shot Down by Gunners on Ship Before Going Down

AUXILIARY VESSEL

London, May 7 CP)—The Admiralty announced today that the auxiliary warship Patia had been bombed and sunk by a German plane.

Further description of the ship and its tonnage were withheld.

The Patia is not listed in naval reference books, and it was said she was not the 5,355-ton freighter Patia listed in Lloyds.

The Admiralty announcement said the Patia shot down the attacking bomber before sinking.

"The Board of Admiralty" a communique said, "regrets to announce that H.M.S. Patia, an auxiliary vessel of the Royal Navy (Commander D. M. Baker) has been sunk. The next of kin of casualties have been informed.

"H.M.S. Patia was attacked by a German aircraft with bombs and machine gun fire. The enemy aircraft was shot down by H.M.S. Patia but the ship was hit and sunk."

GERMAN SEAMEN IN UNITED STATES TO BE INTERNED

100 Rounded Up and Charged With Overstaying Their Leave

TAKEN TO ISLAND

New York, May 7 (AP)—Squads of detectives and immigration inspectors rounded up more than 100 German seamen today, planning to send them to an internment camp in a western city.

Armed with warrants charging the sailors with overstaying their leave here, the officers began invading hotel rooms, furnished rooms and taverns at 4 a.m. (EDT).

Two hours later, the seamen — formerly employed on Standard Oil Company tankers—were herded into the United States customs barge office, with Ellis Island their next stop before being sent west.

The move came a day after the transfer of 125 Italian seamen from the island to an internment camp in an unnamed western city. The Italians had been interned since the United States took over 69 axis and Danish ships six weeks ago in American ports.

Police Captain Conrad Rothengast said 125 of 150 German seamen were to be taken into custody here.

14-Year-Old Boy Shoots Large Bear

North Bay, Ont., May 7 (CP).—The big black bear which has been terrifying cattle in the farming district a few miles west of here for several weeks is dead—shot twice through the neck at 300 feet by 14-year-old Norman Schubert, who sat perched in a poplar tree while he did the shooting.

Norman and his 13-year old brother, Clifford, went hunting the bear yesterday with a 30-30 carbine. They found him and the boys climbed the nearest tree. With the animal poised on his hind legs, Norman fired true twice.

MORE BERLIN LIES

Ottawa, May 7 (CP).—The Berlin radio took off on another flight of fancy last night and in a broadcast to South America, picked up by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation listening post here, claimed that 60 government leaders in Canada had been arrested and put in concentration camp. The Nazi propagandists mentioned no names.

(All government officials were present and accounted for in Ottawa this morning.)

MOTHER DENIES THROWING BABY TO SIDEWALK

Arrested on Charge of Murder Woman Tells Police Baby Fell From Arms

SKULL FRACTURED

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—Police said today that 22-year-old Mrs. Robert Burnett told them in a statement that her 10-months old son fell from her arms as she was walking along Seaton Street in downtown Toronto with her husband, and denied throwing the baby on the sidewalk.

The baby died in hospital for Sick Children a few hours after his skull was fractured last night. Arrested early today on a charge of murder, Mrs. Burnett was remanded until May 14 and a mental examination was ordered when she appeared in court.

Mrs. Burnett's statement to the police said she took the baby from her husband to put him in the carriage but the child fell out of her arms.

Mrs. Burnett gazed vacantly about the courtroom and was silent during the brief proceedings.

Onlookers told police that the mother snatched the baby from her husband's arms while walking home and dashed the child to the pavement. Police said the couple had visited a beverage room earlier in the evening. They said the mother and father alternated in going inside and caring for the child outside.

11 FERRY PILOTS BELIEVED LOST

Going to England to Work From Inspection Bases

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)— Eleven ferry pilots from the United States were feared today to be among a group of military and civilian personnel lost at sea as a result of enemy action, according to a casualty list issued by the Department of National Defence here. The list contained the names of 122 persons reported as missing.

Naval sources here expressed the belief a torpedo attack by a German U-boat had caused the losses.

The American pilots, a source here explained, were not employed at ferrying bombers across the ocean but were understood to be en route to Britain to ferry planes from inspection bases to air force bases of operation in the United Kingdom.

STRIKE CONTINUES

Hamilton, May 7 (CP)— The strike of about 60 riggers in the employ of the Hamilton Bridge Company continued this morning and work on the great new blast furnaces at the Steel Company of Canada was held up. Some men continued with their duties, but a majority were still absent today, it was learned.

Bombing Seems To Improve Morale Rather Than Weaken It Says Menzies

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—Australia, which has never made a complete motor car, now is producing two types of airplanes complete with engines and will shortly go into production on a third engine type, Prime Minister R. G. Menzies told interviewers here today.

A few minutes after his arrival here from New York by plane Mr. Menzies, who left England Sunday, received reporters at the Australian High Commissioner's Office and outlined war conditions overseas as well as details of Australia's war effort.

"We are tremendously proud of our war effort to date." he said, "but of course we are never completely satisfied and always try to improve it."

No British authorities were prepared to discount the importance and dangers of the battle of the Atlantic, Mr. Menzies said, but steps were being taken to cope with the menace to shipping.

He emphasized the importance of United States aid. The speed with which the United States reaches peak production and the speed with which part of that production gets to where it is needed may be the deciding influence on the outcome of the war, he said.

He told of visiting English industrial cities which had been heavily bombed during the night and finding attendance at munitions factories next monring 100 per cent.

A Petition That Merits Careful Consideration

Students of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School, through its Student Council, vigorously protested the action of the Board of Education in relieving Mr. P. C. MacLaurin of his duties as principal of the school, at a public meeting held in the school auditorium last night. Reticence of public men and others to act as chairmen for the meeting did not daunt the students..... They stepped into the breach in a well-conducted orderly manner and the result was a meeting that was a distinct credit to the school and the students. There was no vindictiveness. No statements of bitterness or direct personalities against members of the Board. The student speakers struck right from the shoulder in their demands for a clear-cut statement from the Board regarding the principal's removal from his position.

A crowded auditorium sat in a tense silence as the speakers stated their views and gave its unanimous endorsement of the Student Council's suggestion that the Board be petitioned for retainment of the principal. That Mr. MacLaurin holds a place high in the esteem of all walks of life in this city has been evidenced in public opinion since the regrettable controversy began.

Twenty-nine years of service in the educational life of the city, as well as in other phases of community work, should not be passed over lightly. Principal MacLaurin has carved a place for himself in the hearts of the thousands of pupils who have passed through his hands, as well as in the majority of residents of this city, by his sheer ability and willingness to serve in any capacity. His influence, perhaps was never better exemplified than it was last night when his students, conducted the meeting in a manner that was not only dignified but reflected a commendable restraint that is sometimes lacking in gatherings conducted by adults with years of experience.

We feel that it is unfortunate that such a situation has arisen at a time when summer examinations are near at hand; when students need all the help and advice possible without any unnecessary distraction which might affect their ability to concentrate on their work.

Comments of many residents of the city have convinced us that ninety per cent. of the citizens who may be directly or indirectly concerned regarding the best interests of the Collegiate Institute, are very definitely opposed to the dispensing with the services of Mr. MacLaurin as principal.

We have sufficient confidence in the Board of Education to feel that they have no desire to be unfair or unduly critical of a school principal of the ability and reputation of Mr. MacLaurin.

It is very easy for misunderstandings to occur in what may be termed debatable subjects. Such misunderstandings can be, at times responsible for actions, and we believe in all sincerity that such is the case in this instance.

In view of these facts, we are of the opinion that members of the Board are men of sufficiently high calibre to reconsider any former decisions, and to conduct any further negotiations on a common ground which, we believe, should be to the betterment and understanding of all concerned.

United States Navy 'Readier Now Than Ever' To Deliver War Supplies

—KNOX

Washington, May 7—(AP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox said today that the United States navy is "readier now than ever," to undertake the job of assuring delivery of war supplies to Britain—and if and when it is assigned to such duty.

The Navy Department chief made the statement at a press conference in commenting on a speech last night by War Secretary Stimson in which Stimson advocated use of the United States navy to assure a victory for Britain in the Battle of the Atlantic.

At the same time, Knox disclosed that the navy was taking over "the seagoing activities" of the coast guard. The process, he said, amounts to a "transfer bodily of the coast guard ships and their crews."

Praises Stimson's Address

Knox was asked by reporters for comment on Stimson's plea for naval action 'right now" and he added, "I thought it a forthright, courageous and very enlightening talk animated by a high spirit of patriotism."

Shortly before Knox's press conference Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep. Michigan) announced that Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission had informed him that 'only eight out of 205 ships that left our ports with supplies for England were sunk in the first three months of this year."

A reporter asked Knox whether the Stimson speech was designed to pave the way for action by the administration toward the objectives which Stimson sponsored and Knox replied "no comment."

"Is the navy ready to do the job Stimson suggested?" the secretary was asked.

"The navy is always ready—readier now than ever," was the reply.

TOO MANY BURGLARIES

Los Angeles, May 7 (AP)— After 17 burglaries, R. R. Trumbower is "going to sell out and stay out." He moved his sporting goods store after the 12th burglary, but it was pillaged five more times. Not only that, he was held up in his home a few days ago and robbed of $65 cash and a $600 diamond. Asked why he didn't hire a watchman, Trumbower said "I did but I caught him stealing and fired him."

SHERIFF'S PRESENCE CLOSES NIGHT SPOTS

Meridan, Miss., May 7 (CP) — Chief Deputy Sheriff M. H. Yarbrough today revealed his new technique of closing night clubs. Last Saturday night he casually entered a spot at a time, just 'drew up a chair" and sat. Soon the patrons began to leave and business got so bad that each place closed up.

BRITISH FORCES RETAKE CONTROL OF OIL PIPE LINE

Iraqis Signify Intention They Wish To Surrender By Waving White Flag

HABBANIYAH FREED

Cairo, May 7 (AP)— British Imperial forces yesterday "ejected the enemy" from positions overlooking the British-occupied airdrome at Habbaniyah, Iraq, Middle East general quarters communique said today.

Besides breaking the Iraquis' encircling front at Habbaniyah on the fifth day of siege, the British command reported its forces had wrested control of the vital Mosul-Haifa oil pipeline from the troops of Rashid Ali Al Gailani.

The general headquarters communique reported that Iraq troops under the British colors helped in the assault on a plateau from which anti-British Iraquis had been lobbing shells into the British base.

Enemy Suffered Losses

"In this successful action the enemy suffered heavy losses, whereas our casualties were slight," it said.

Headquarters said the Royal Air Force bombed and machine-gunned the Iraq troops, "keeping them on the move" in their withdrawal toward Falluja.

BOMBER CLEARED FROM NASHVILLE

Tennessee City Chosen as Port of Exit for Fast Delivery to Britain

Nashville, Tenn., May 7 (AP) — Nashville has become the first interior port of exit in the transfer of warplanes from American factories to Great Britain, Harvey Douglas, United States Deputy Collector of Customs, said today.

A Lockheed reconnaissance bomber cleared customs here yesterday for an unannounced destination en route to the British Isles. Harry H. Chitwood, attorney for Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif., said other Britain-bound planes would be cleared as soon as "special equipment" is installed in them.

Nearly 30 of the twin-motored craft were awaiting installation of the "special equipment" at municipal airport for the trip to Britain.

Chitwood said Nashville was established as a port of exit because the planes can be delivered to Great Britain quicker by clearing them here." He estimated that about 100 Lockheed planes would be cleared here within the next few days.

Effective Damage Not Heavy

There was no doubt prolonged bombing meant that people became tired and jaded, Mr. Menzies said. But the effective damage to munitions plants had not been great.

Asked of the possibility of a national government being formed in Australia, Mr. Menzies replied, "that's a question to which I cannot give the answer. I have already said I wanted one."

U.S. FLIER KILLED IN BRITAIN

London, May 7 (CP)—Pilot Officer James McGinnis of Hollywood, a member of the American Eagle Squadron, has been killed in the crash of a Royal Air Force plane in Britain, it was disclosed today.

Results In Anti-U-Boat Campaign Most Encouraging To Great Britain

London, May 7 —(CP)— Capt. Austin Hudson, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today "We have every reason to be encouraged by recent results achieved in the anti-U-boat campaign."

He added that U-boats claimed as sunk could not be announced without assisting the Axis.

Britain Intends To Defend To Death Crete And Tobruk

Churchill Receives Overwhelming Vote Of Confidence 447 To 3—Wavell Has Nearly 500,000 Men On Guard

LLOYD GEORGE SPEAKS

London, May 7 (CP). — The House of Commons gave Prime Minister Churchill an overwhelming vote of confidence today after he had disclosed that nearly 500,000 Imperial soldiers stand guard against the Axis in the Middle East and that Britain expects enough new American merchant ships to see her through 1942 in the battle of the Atlantic.

The prime minister proclaimed a halt to the British retreat in the Mediterranean basin with the flat declaration:

"We intend to defend to the death and without thought of retimerent Crete and Tobruk."

It is on Crete, big island, that south of the Greek mainland, that the British and Greeks stand together as Allies; it is in Tobruk, Libya, 80 miles from the Egyptian border, that a British garrison is holding out behind the Axis lines.

The vote was 447 to 3, and thus ended a two-day debate on Britain's grave reverses on both shores of the Mediterranean.

It was climaxed by a sharp duel of words between Mr. Churchill and David Lloyd George, prime minister during the first Great War.

Confidently, Mr. Churchill debelieve we shall be successful in believe we shall be successful" in holding the Valley of the Nile, Suez and the mid-Mediterranean island bastion of Malta."

Mr. Lloyd George was not among the trio who voted "no" on the confidence test. They were Communist William Gallacher, Socialist Dennis Pritt and Dr. Arthur Salter, Labor.

As the prime minister made his way out of the crowded chamber after the vote, groups of members collected around him and cheered him enthusiastically. He paused and bowed.

Without Gesture.

Beginning his speech in a breezy manner, he gradually moved into more solemn tones. Never did he make a marked gesture and not once did he raise his voice unduly.

The prime minister spoke after an hour's speech by David Lloyd George, who demanded a "real war cabinet" and better organization of manpower.

With a touch of acrimony, Mr. Churchill retorted that the speech was not "particularly helpful at this period and not the speech one would have expected from a Great War leader."

General Wavell's Command.

The prime minister disclosed that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, Middle East commander "has under his orders at the present nearly half a million men."

Mr. Churchill said he has "received assurances of the construction of merchant ships by the United States which, added to our own large program of new building and repair, should see us through 1942."

After Mr. Lloyd George criticized Foreign Secretary Eden for withholding the fact "that Turkey allowed German ships pass through Bosphorus into the Dardanelles" to seize Greek islands, Mr. Churchill said "Turkey not being a belliger-

GERMAN TROOPS BEING PULLED OUT OF THE BALKANS

Columns of Returning Troops Seen Every Day Moving Northward

FOOD FROM GERMANY

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the German Balkan Army, May 7 (AP)—German troops are being pulled northward out of the Balkans as soon as they can be spared.

On highways of Hungary, Yugoclavia and Bulgaria we saw column upon column of returning troops and their equipment.

Only small garrisons are needed with a few machine-guns, to keep populations in check, and if necessary motorized reinforcements can arrive quickly anywhere trouble breaks out.

There are moving days in what was once Yugoslavia.

Serbs are moving out of many sections. Hungarians, Bulgarians and Germans are moving in — with Rumanians and Italians probably following.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

KI-Y SOFTBALL ENTRIES RECEIVED

Secretary Joe Shortt of the Y.M.C.A. reports today that there are a fair number of entries on hand for the Ki-Y Softball for this spring. The three groups are lining up nicely, but there is still room for a few more teams, providing they get their entries in by this Saturday, says Mr. Shortt. The leagues are Juvenile 17 and under, Midget 14 and under, Bantam 11 and under, all ages taken as at May 1st.

Any boys wanting forms to complete may get them at the Y.M.C.A., but they are reminded to get them returned before Saturday, for only teams registered by them will be in the schedules, which will be drawn early next week.

DISTRICT VISITED BY THUNDER STORM

Belleville and district was visited by the first thunder storm of the season early on Wednesday morning when for the second night in succession this area received the benefits of brief but welcome showers of rain. Shortly after midnight, residents who happened to be awake at the time heard several clashes of thunder which were accompanied by vivid lightning flashes.

Farmers will especially welcome the rain which descended during the past two nights, as the current spring season has been marked by an almost total absence of rain with pasture fields needing the moisture to encourage growth of grass and sown grain needing rain to assure sprouting.

TWENTY-TWO MAKERS CONVENE IN CITY

Approximately twenty-two cheesemakers of the Stirling district convened at the office of Mr. J. L. Irwin, District Cheese Grader, in Belleville on Tuesday evening at a meeting staged to acquaint makers of the revised regulations regarding the manufacture of cheese for the current season. The meeting was well representative of the makers in the Stirling area and cheesemakers received first hand information as to manufacture regulations in effect this year.

MEDICAL ASSOC. HOLDS SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING

Members of District No. 6 of the Ontario Medical Association held their semi-annual district meeting in Belleville General Hospital today, the sessions beginning at ten-thirty. This district comprises the counties of Victoria, Peterborough, Durham, Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings and Haliburton. Dr. H. E. Logan, Lindsay is councillor and the vice councillors are Dr. R. M. Anderson, Belleville, Dr. H. V. Dobson of Peterborough. Following the morning meeting the visitors were entertained at luncheon by the hospital board.

SWITCHMAN INJURED

While in the performance of his duties in the Canadian National Railways yards north of the city, Stanley Amo, switchman, of 22 Bettes Street, suffered slight injury to his head and face on Tuesday night. The injured man was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where an X-ray was taken, it being intimated by Dr. Blakslee this morning that injuries were not serious.

$90,000 CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT AT MT. VIEW

Among the nine construction contracts, totalling $1,439,000, announced by the Department of Munitions and Supplies, is one for wood construction at the Bombing and Gunnery School at Mountain View at a cost of $90,000. The contract calling for completion in June was awarded to the Ontario Construction Company, St. Catharines.

DAIRY PRODUCTS MUST CONFORM TO GOV'T. STANDARDS

Department of Agriculture inspectors issued a warning today stressing the point that dairy products must conform to governmental standards or court action will follow. The warning followed the fine and costs of $22.50 imposed on a Cannington, Ont. creamery owner who pleaded guilty to a charge of selling second grade butter wrapped in first-grade wrappers. The charge was laid by Inspector of Dairy Products C. R. Kennedy, under the Farm Products Grades and Sales Act.

The conviction followed investigation over a period of time which resulted in several warnings being served to the creamery owner. Failure to co-operate resulted in the charge being preferred.

MAJ. J. M. HOWARD GIVEN HIGH POST

Major James M. Howard of Ottawa formerly of this city, has been appointed Deputy Assistant Adjutant General in the Directorate of Organization Branch of the Adjutant-General at National Defence Headquarters, Ottawa, according to a National Defence announcement today.

Major Howard is well-known in this city, and prior to his joining the army was a member of the teaching staff of the Belleville Collegiate Institute for a number of years. He was associated with the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) R. F. here for a number of years as a commissioned officer. He was also officer commanding the Cadet Corps of the Collegiate Institute.

O. W. Munnings, Reported Lost Formerly Of City

Oliver W. Munnings, civilian employed in the stores' audit department, Ordnance Branch, reported missing in the sinking of a ship at sea, is believed to be formerly of this city, although Mrs. Munnings, now residing at 224 Front St., has had no official word from Ottawa.

Mr. Munnings was for fifteen years a clerk in the operating department of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, Pinnacle St., and resided at 175 Moira Street west. For the past two years he has been in the audit department of the Army Ordnance Branch at Ottawa. Trenton and District

Many Traffic Cases In Trenton Court

Trenton, May 7 (Special)—Twenty cases were paraded before Magistrate E. J. Butler here yesterday in the semi-weekly police court, with a large number of traffic offenders being assessed small fines.

Chief William Bain stated this morning that all traffic offenders in the town would be hailed into court. The motorists must be educated as to the right way to park, and it seems that one of the most impressive methods is to give them traffic tickets.

Ross LaMorre was fined $10.00 and costs on a charge of reckless driving, on Dundas Street. It was alleged that LaMorre was driving at a speed of 65 to 70 miles per hour.

Pleading guilty to a charge of careless driving James E. Coe was fined $5.00 and $2.50 costs, when he appeared in court. The charge arose out of an accident on the corner of Dundas Street and Front Street, last Saturday, when the Coe car collided with Neil Haffey, age 13, who was riding a bicycle. The boy escaped with only minor injury but his bicycle was badly damaged.

Two charges were laid against Fred Higgins and he was fined a total of $56.00 including fines and costs. Mr. Higgins pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving and a charge of leaving the scene.

The charges were laid following an accident on Dundas Street when a truck driven by Mr. Higgins collided with the rear of a motor car driven by a member of the Airforce. According to Constable Loso the Airforce car was stopped at the traffic light when the accident occurred. The accused man left the scene without stopping to leave his name and address.

Other offenders who paid small fines for minor traffic violations were George Foster, John Schick, William Gallagher, G. Cleridge, T. A. Turner, Thomas Hutchinson, Fred Geitleman, W. J. Rayback, Clayton Gould, Adrien Strimers, Jack Goyer.

Bowlers Hold Smoker

Five-pin bowlers held their annual smoker and election of officers last night at the C.P.R. clubhouse. A number of trophies and prizes were awarded to the winners of the various tournaments.

Charles L. Allore was elected President of the Trenton Bowling League, while Robert LaMorre was elected as Vice-President. Other officers elected were W. H. Taylor, Secretary; Charles Stain, Treasurer, and the executive committee of Horace Ormshaw, E. H. Behan and E. H. Hicks.

The Trenton Bowling League trophy was presented to the Allore Timber Toppers who were the champions of the season. Individual prizes were awarded to Clarence Neddery, for high average and high three-string and to Douglas Kinney, winner of the high single.

HELD IN SLAYING

Morris Mardavich is shown after being arrested in the New York slaying of Harry B. Maxwell, heir to an enormous billboard advertising fortune. According to police, Mardavich is alleged to have confessed the shooting because Maxwell "put up a fight" during a holdup. Mary Jane Cassidy, a beautiful hat model, was with Maxwell when he was slain by a stick-up pair.

Library Bd. Bans Lindbergh Books

Corby Public Library Board members, at the regular meeting, unanimously decided to have the books by Charles Lindbergh withdrawn from circulation, and the librarian was instructed to see that this action was taken. Numerous other Ontario public libraries have withdrawn such volumes from their shelves.

Put U.S. On Total War Footing Says Miss Thompson

New York, May 7 (CP)—Columnist Dorothy Thompson advocates that the United States be put at once on a total war footing, "for our ability to avoid war and resist capitulation will be exactly commensurate to our strength, as will be our ability to win the war if it should come."

Speaking at a dinner in her honor here last night, Miss Thompson said that the people should "demand for the President the power and authority completely to mobilize and organize the economic and moral strength of this country."

The dinner was tendered by friends "in recognition of her great services to our democracy and her valiant battle against Nazism." Telegrams praising her came from President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada, Thomas Mann and many others. A bust of herself was presented to the noted writer by Mrs. Jamest Roosevel, mother of the President. It was done by Jo Davidson.

Miss Thompson called upon Americans to create a movement in the United States for "defence and reconstruction—not another committee, nor another party, but a brotherhood of educated beings."

She gave 10 "articles of faith" for the proposed movement including:

"I believe in the basic equality of all persons, nations and races . .

". . . All ownership . . . in wealth in trust for the people as a whole . .

"Democracy means the sovereignty of humanity, through co-operative action, freely discussed and freely executed . . .

"All creative functions in society are of equal value . . . Compensation for various activities should not vary so greatly that vastly differing social classes are created . ."

Few Colored Cheese Being Produced Now

As a result of Canada's agreement to supply Great Britain with a quota of at least 112,000,000 pounds of cheese during the present cheesemaking season, colored cheese is disappearing almost entirely from the Ontario cheese markets, it was stated by Mr. J. L. Irwin, Chief Dairy Grader for the Quinte district, this morning. Every cheese factory now in operation in this district is making white cheese such as is demanded by the British trade, something unusual as ordinarily most factories make colored cheese during the early weeks of operation.

The change to the manufacture of white cheese has definitely been prompted by the desire of the Federal authorities to fulfill the demands of the increased quota of cheese for the British Isles this season, as factories wishing to continue the manufacture of colored cheese this season will have to obtain a government permit. Unless this has been secured, regulations passed several months ago require that all cheese made after May 1st be uncolored. "Practically one hundred per cent white cheese are made this year," stated Mr. Irwin, "and they all appear to be of good quality."

Reports coming in from factories now in operation indicate the encouraging fact that from 50 to 100 per cent more milk is being received at cheese factories now than at a comparable date in other years. "This increase has been noted quite generally throughout the Belleville district and in factories selling on the Madoc and Campbellford cheese boards," said Mr. Irwin.

The earliness of the season is in some measure responsible "for the additional milk being received cheese factories. In isolated cases, cows are already out on pasture, this being easily two weeks earlier than usual.

The passing of colored cheese from the Canadian dairy industry would, everything considered, be a good thing for the industry, concluded Mr. Irwin. Uncolored cheese has much better keeping qualities than the colored variety and cheesemakers will dispense with the coloring was Mr. Irwin's opinion.

Obituary

MRS. MILDRED M. VASIL

Mrs. Mildred May Vasil, wife of A.C.I. William J. Vasil, residence 27 Isabel Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday evening, May 6th, after an illness of six days' duration.

The late Mrs. Vasil, who was in her 28th year, was born in Toronto, being a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Madill. For the past two years she resided in Belleville. In religion she was a member of the Baptist Church and was well esteemed.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. William J. Vasil; two daughters, Shirley, age 6 years, and Arlene, age 3 years; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Madill, Toronto, and one brother, Norman Madill, Toronto.

The body will be forwarded to Toronto from the Martin Funeral Home this Wednesday evening where the funeral will take place.

MRS. ORPAK STORINGS

After being in failing health for some time, Mrs. Orpak Storings, former resident of Marmora district and widow of the late Mr. Isaac Storings, passed away at the Hastings County Home. She was in her 73rd year.

In religion Mrs. Storings was a member of the United Church and had lived in Belleville since 1933. Her husband predeceased her some years ago. She is survived by several nieces and nephews.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

DEAN CLARKE
(Northbrook)

Dean Clarke, the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Clarke, Northbrook, Ontario, died in the Belleville General Hospital Tuesday afternoon May 6th, after a brief illness.

LATE MARTHA MERLE GROVES

The funeral of the late Martha Merle Groves took place on Tuesday afternoon from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Groves, Madoc, to Queensboro Anglican Church, where the funeral service was conducted by Rev. A. Pepper. The service was under the auspices of the L.O.B.A., Queensboro Lodge No. 465, with the last rites of the order being given by Sister Frances Cassidy, Worthy Mistress Sister Marjory Diamond, Acting Deputy Mistress and Chaplain, Sister Sarah Delyea.

The bearers were Messrs. Roy Rollins, Harold Tokley, Kenneth Cassidy, Allan Sager, Gordon Sager and Allan Thompson.

Interment was made in Queensboro cemetery.

THELMA ARGENT

Miss Thelma Argent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Argent, 64 St. Paul Street, Belleville, passed away suddenly in Toronto on Tuesday, May 6th.

The late Miss Argent was a native of this city, being born here 16 years ago, but for the past year had resided in Toronto. In religion she was a member of the Anglican Church.

Surviving to mourn her passing beside her parents, are five sisters, Mrs. George Crocker, Belleville; Mrs. Phil Loft, Point Anne; Pearl, Doreen and Bertha, at home, and two brothers, Albert and William, also at home.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

JOHN OCKERMAN

Madoc (Special)—Mr. John Ockerman a former citizen of Madoc passed away suddenly on Monday at his home in Campbellford, Ont. Mr. Ockerman conducted a restaurant and ice cream business in Campbellford for the past fourteen years, prior to that time he had made his home in Madoc. He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Mildred Noakes of Madoc and two daughters, Gertie (Mrs. Percy McCoy) and Oral (Mrs. O'Connor) both of Campbellford. The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at his home and interment in Campbellford. The brethren of Madoc Lodge I.O.O.F. will attend, the late Mr. Ockerman being one of the oldest members of Madoc Lodge.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police are checking the owners of bicycles that have not as yet been equipped with bicycle licences as provided by city bylaw.

"The bylaw is effective as of Jan. 1st of each year and we have allowed ample time to all to procure these licences," police authorities revealed today as it was announced that some 22 names of those delinquent in this matter had been recorded at the police station.

Articles Stolen

Don Servis complained to police that a pair of gloves and a hat had been stolen from his parked automobile on the market square last night.

The address of the place raided during the progress of a dice game in Belleville over the last week-end should have read 364 Front St., instead of 356 as reported Monday.

Verdun Whitmarsh, 60 Moira St., reported the theft of a Cleveland bicycle to the authorities yesterday. Otherwise activities were normal in city police circles.

SPEAKER PRAISES WORK OF CLUB

LAC 2, E. N. Morrison, Former Minister, Believes Right and Justice Will Prevail

Speaking before the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their regular luncheon meeting held in the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday, Lac 2, E. N. Morrison, of R.C.A.F. stationed at Mountain View Airport and former minister in the United Church at Saskatoon, Sask., likened the democracies of today as climbing up a mountain side with the dark clouds casting a shadow ahead, through which the everlasting purpose of God, and the promise of peace on earth shone as a beckoning rainbow. Throughout his short address, the subject of which was "From Pulpit to Airport", Mr. Morrison prophesied that from the present conflict between the democracies and the dictatorships would evolve peace on earth and goodwill among men.

At the outset of his address, Mr. Morrison spoke highly of the welcome, which local residents afford members of the R. C. A. F. stating that the boys in uniform greatly appreciate all that was being done for them. Himself a native of Western Canada, the speaker stated, that he had "thoroughly enjoyed his stay in this city, that he was extremely gratified by the spirit of welcome, which had been afforded to him and his family and for which he was deeply appreciative".

Given Life to Service

When he had first entered the ministry he had given his life "to the service of the Master, the greatest Man, who ever lived." He had given everything in an endeavour to perpetuate peace in the world. He had appealed, that men and women learn and equip themselves for peace, he said.

And now with the Air Force he "still retains the idea of peace and goodwill toward men", and although his present occupation is to learn of the intricacies of machinery, which science has produced for the destruction of men, it was still his dearest hope, that when we have won this war there will be "peace and goodwill among men. That the mental attitude of mankind will make peace possible and that it will be a better world in which to live".

Praises Work of Club

The speaker referred to the splendid work which Kiwanians the world over are doing for the betterment of world conditions and which was exemplified to the carrying out of their "We Serve" motto, and urged for greater efforts along this line to assist the younger people of today to develop personalities and capabilities which would warrant their taking their place as leaders.

In closing Mr. Morrison likened democracy's present struggle to that of a mountain climber's, who, as he breaks over the summit, sees a dark cloud casting a shadow ahead and beyond which is a rainbow promising the everlasting purpose of God, and peace on earth.

The speaker was introduced by Mr. Fred Lewis, while Kiwanian appreciation to Mr. Morrison for his uplifting address was expressed by Mr. George Lee. The report of Charlie Tripp, Agriculture Committee Chairman and that of Mr. Jack Trudeau who reported developments regarding the club as a whole visiting Oshawa in the near future, comprised the business transacted.

GUILTY OF SABOTAGE

Kitchener, Ont., May 7 —(CP)—Jacob Schmidt, Waterloo, found guilty under the sabotage section of the Defence of Canada Act, was given one year in prison in police court here today by Magistrate J. R. Blake.

Schmidt was the operator of a machine at the Waterloo Sunshine Plant which was wrecked when he was operating it.

The firm is engaged in war work.

H. J. PARLIAMENT 97 YEARS OLD

Veteran Churchman of Prince Edward County in Good Health

Hale and hearty and taking his daily walks with the same vigor he did ten years ago, Mr. H. J. Parliament, highly respected resident of Centre, near Ameliasburg, Prince Edward County is today celebrating his 97th birthday.

A veteran churchman, Mr. Parliament inaugurated the Sunday School of Victoria United Church seventy-seven years ago and has been active in its functions since. He has lived the greater part of his life in Prince Edward County, interspersing it with brief residences in other parts of the province.

Regarded as an authority on apples during his younger days, Mr. Parliament spent many years in the apple-buying business. His activities took him far afield and he crossed the Atlantic many times in the interests of his business. Today he is receiving the felicitations of a large number of local and district friends on the attainment of a grand old age.

Mr. Henry Hubbs, of Belleville is a grandson.

B. C. I. Students Will Petition Bd. Of Education To Retain P. C. MacLaurin As Principal

Parents And Students Attend Orderly Protest Meeting Conducted By Students' Council

UNANIMOUS SUPPORT

Students of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School through its Students' Council will petition the Board of Education for the retainment of Principal P. C. MacLaurin as head of the school following a well-conducted protest meeting held in the school auditorium last night.

According to a statement issued recently to the press by members of the Board, Principal MacLaurin has been offered a position as a teacher on the school staff at the same salary as heretofore, following the conclusion of the present school term.

Eight hundred residents of the city, representative of all walks of life, and students of the school, gave unanimous approval of the suggestion that a delegation of the Student Council wait on the Board with a request for the principal's retainment.

The auditorium rocked with applause when Miss Lois Bankier, dynamic eighteen-year-old member of the Council, and who practically "stole the show" with a brilliant address, asked the audience to signify by its action, its approval of the suggestion.

"You, the taxpayers, are the judges" Miss Bankier said, following addresses by members of the council and several private citizens. "You have heard our side of the story, also that of several taxpayers of the city. We invited the Board of Education to be present to state its case, but none of its members are here, or have come forward at our invitation."

Members of the Student Council, and private citizens among whom were included Mrs. Joseph Imlah, Miss Iria Richards of Queen's University and Messrs James Fraser and Louis Yanover, spoke strongly against the action of the Board in discharging Principal MacLaurin, and in eulogy to the head of the school.

Difficulty in Securing Chairman

Difficulty in securing a neutral chairman from the business, professional and other ranks of the city, was encountered by the Students Council, sponsors of the meeting, and the eleventh-hour change of mind on the part of a resident who assented to act in this capacity earlier yesterday did not daunt the student body. An appeal to members of the audience to act in this capacity was fruitless. Names of prominent residents were called but many were not present and others expressed the opinion that they could not act.

Jack Stock, Student Council member, in opening the meeting, declared that "many men of the community have not seen fit to act as chairman of this meeting for private reasons. Its object is," he said, "to bring the facts of the regrettable discharge of Principal MacLaurin before the public. We want to see justice done." His appeal to the audience for a chairman, failing, Jack Howe, also a member of the Student Council, was appointed to act in this capacity.

"All I can do," Chairman Howe said, "is to call upon the Student Council and taxpayers that are here. You are the taxpayers, and as such you put in the Board of Education. Your decision at this meeting will be final."

President of Student Body Heard

"The purpose of the Student Council", President Ron Warren of that body said in his opening remarks, "is not to pass judgment on the Board of Education or Mr. MacLaurin. It is our purpose to get the facts to the public. Through Mr. MacLaurin, the finding of facts has built a feeling of understanding so that pupils leaving this school can look back on their school days as one of the best periods in their lives."

"What are the facts?" he demanded. "That is what we are trying to find out. If the Board of Education has any just reason for their dismissal of Mr. MacLaurin why doesn't its members give out these facts to the public? In the interest of British justice, we demand to know the answer to this question."

For the past 29 years, President Warren pointed out, Mr. MacLaurin has been principal of the school, and during all that time there has been no mention of anything except good work on his part. In fact, he said, the Department of Education Inspectors stated in their last report that B.C.I. was one of the best organized schools in the province. (Applause). The report commented favorably on the friendly co-operation, that existed between the principal, masters and students of the school.

"We feel," President Warren continued, "that this spirit has been largely responsible for the winning of 17 Carter Scholarships in the last 21 years. (Applause). People outside of eduactional circles have recognized Mr. MacLaurin's outstanding powers of leadership. As chairman of the War Savings Committee, he played a large part in helping our community go "over the top."

Inspired The School is Claim

"In this connection," the speaker pointed out, "he has inspired the school to the point that they have sold during this year War Savings Stamps to the amount of $20,000. The Board of Education has seen fit to dispense with the services of one of Belleville's outstanding citizens in an underhand manner."

At this point Chairman Howe produced letters from the Department of Education, and other educational sources, which spoke in the highest terms of the organization and other characteristics of the Belleville School. The letters were read by James Fraser, a member of the audience, who answered an appeal of the chairman for a neutral person to officiate in this capacity.

Miss Lois Bankier, member of the Student Council at this point addressed the audience. The clever young orator received a tremendous ovation at the conclusion of her address which follows:

"In connection with Mr. MacLaurin's forced resignation, there are several facts which I feel should be brought to the attention of the general public—facts which have been either misleadingly represented by the School Board, or totally ignored. To begin with, if you will recall, an article appeared in last Saturday night's Intelligencer to the effect that the Board had been, and was willing to retain Mr. MacLaurin as a chemistry teacher at his former principal's salary. Doubtless to most of you, that appeared to be a very reasonable and generous offer, but that same offer was absolutely impossible for two reasons. First, as to the financial end of it, the Board members were offering to pay out in school salaries, at your expense, approximately $4,000 more a year than before due to the fact that the new principal they were going to engage would have to be paid at least as much as Mr. MacLaurin, who hitherto had been saving the taxpayers this same amount of money by both teaching and administrating for the one salary, for the Board members admitted when they said they would keep Mr. MacLaurin on as teacher at his former principal's salary, that for years he had been giving both them and the public his services as a teacher for absolutely nothing. They were not allowing Mr. MacLaurin to remain on with a principal's salary, while at the same time deducting from his previous salary the amount he had been receiving for his teaching, for there was no such amount to deduct. This proves that the Board did not make this offer to our principal with any thought that it would be accepted, unless, of course, they hoped by some miracle to be able to present to the taxpayers, not only as taxpayers but as parents of the students, a new principal of such calibre, and with such an utter lack of qualifications, that he would accept a teacher's salary, which hardly sounds plausible. Does such an arrangement sound sensible to you, or do you think the School Board actually made such an offer in all sincerity and good faith, especially in view of the added burden the taxpayers of this city are now carrying in the present war? Do you think the School Board would have dared tax you, at a time when every dollar and cent you can spare should be going into war funds, for the additional $4,000 required to meet the promise they made in our newspaper?"

"Secondly, even if such a plan had been agreeable to you, it never would have met with success when put into practice in our collegiate. How could you expect a man who has been 29 years a principal to suddenly step down and take his orders from a new and inexperienced administrator? And how could the students be expected to realize that they had a new principal with Mr. MacLaurin in the school? As long as he was walking the corridors, it would be a mental impossibility for the students not to visualize and look up to him as principal. In other words, ladies and gentlemen, the School Board made an offer that it knew would not and could not be accepted, made it purely for your benefit and your support."

"Before going any further, I will bring up the point of why Mr. MacLaurin was dismissed. We, as a student council, approached various members of the Board and asked them why they were dismissing our principal—and this was their sole reason. Prior to Easter, the Board had become convinced that the task of both teaching and administrating was too heavy a burden for any one man to carry. Therefore, it gave Mr. MacLaurin his choice of continuing on after Easter as either a teacher or principal, but not both. Mr. MacLaurin told the members who called on him that he would prefer to remain on as principal. After Easter, the Board had not fulfilled their responsibility in the matter. There was no new chemistry teacher. None had been advertised for, so naturally there was no such teacher in evidence. Mr. MacLaurin, remembering his agreement with the Board not to teach, did not do so, but simply went over the Easter examination papers with his classes. He acted only as any other capable and efficient teacher would have done in his position—finished the job and left his affairs in good order for his as yet non-existent successor. The Board seized upon this action of his and dismissed him for—and note this—for not obeying their orders. Now as I understand the school laws, no School Board has any right to interfere with a principal in his management of a school, and under no condition can they dictate to him. Our Board overstepped its authority twice on this same point—first, when it ordered Mr. MacLaurin to either give up teaching or the principalship, and second, when it pressed this supposed authority still further and dismissed him for disobeying this same order which it had no right to give."

"Another thing I would like to bring to your attention is the matter of discipline in our school. One of the charges made by the Board was that our principal has no control over us. That charge was flatly disproved last Friday, when rumors were prevalent concerning an intended strike on our part, as well as parades with banners and all the trimmings. Such an idea was being considered by some of the students. Our principal, to forestall such unwise action, simply asked us not to do anything rash, such as striking or parading, as he had been informed by one of the Board we intended to do. You will note that I said "asked," not "ordered" for our principal never has had to order us to do anything in the past, he has not ordered us to do anything in the present and he never will have to order us to obey his wishes in the future, for the respect, love and admiration which the entire student body holds for Mr. MacLaurin is such that orders do not need to be a part of our school life. Contrary to one of the School Board members, who suggested that he would get better results if he instilled a little fear into the minds of the students, Mr. MacLaurin does not believe in strong arm methods. He does not believe in turning up outside of classrooms and listening for any chance disturbances, in spying on teachers and students alike, and thus managing to get the maximum effort from them. He believes in teaching the students to think and act for themselves, to walk from one class to another feeling as free from the whiphand as they do in their own homes. If there was iron discipline and enforced obedience in our school, instead of the wise justice and human understanding that now prevails, you would find the students graduating with a surprising and disastrous lack of initiative. These strong arm methods are in force today in the dictatorships of Europe, the dictatorships we are fighting to destroy—yet one of the members of our School Board here in Belleville actually suggested to Mr. MacLaurin that they be adopted in our school. This battle that we students are putting up today is more than a battle for a wise and capable principal—it is actually democracy battling against dictatorship. The School Board this past while has been holding its meetings behind locked doors, excluding the press and refusing to disclose to the public the nature of these meetings. If everything it has been doing is for the benefit of the school, and if it had nothing to conceal, why weren't the meetings conducted openly and above board? When I put this up to one member of the Board, he said, quote "The Board doesn't want to and will not, wash it's dirty linen in public." Well, I contend the Board shouldn't have any dirty linen to wash, but if it has it should most definitely be done in public. After all the Board members are but servants of the public—they're no special board of governors who can dictate to the students and parents alike, and not answer to either. And that's exactly what they have tried to do. Whether they realize it or not, if they had been allowed to carry this plan of theirs through, with no interference from any source whatsoever, they would have been a virtual dictatorship, and any man appointed in Mr. MacLaurin's place but a puppet or fool to go where he was ordered—when he was ordered—under threat of losing his position. And this was taking place in a democratic country, in a democratic community, under our very eyes. There is no doubt in my mind, nor in the minds of any of the other students, what the issue is in this question. In trying to force Mr. MacLaurin from his position, the Board is trying to take away from us a living example of democracy at its best, a man whose sense of fair play and justice is boundless, who has many years of valuable service to our school and community still ahead of him. We say this thing can not and will not be!"

Call For Opinions

Prior to calling on members of the audience to express their opinions on the question, Chairman Howe told the gathering that the student council was not present merely to express their side of the question. "We believe in British justice, and would like to hear the other side of the story. In order to do this, we sent members of the Board of Education through its secretary J. B. Findlay, an invitation to be present."

At this point the chairman read a copy of the letter of invitation sent to the Board, and requested any members present to come forward and state their views. Necks of the audience craned as the request was made. In the balcony of the auditorium, the student body of the school, seated en masse, rose as one person in order to satisfy its curiosity.

No reply forthcoming, Chairman Howe stated "There you have your answer. We maintain that if the Board of Education had a stand to make to the taxpayers of this city, it is their duty to be here tonight and give their version of it."

Given Their Side of Story

"We, the student council of this school do not intend to tell the taxpayers what to do," he said, "we have given you our side of the story, and the Board refuses to give you their's."

He extended an invitation to members of the audience to express their views upon the question.

Louis Yanover, the first to mount the stage told the audience that he had been a pupil of Mr. MacLaurin some 8 or 10 years ago. "I know," he said, "that if discipline was enforced in the school, there was a good reason for it."

He expected to join the R.C.A.F. within a few days, he said, and with this in mind some time ago he had approached Mr. MacLaurin in order to get a recommendation." I was one of thousands of students who passed through his hands, yet he remembered me, and how he had been forced to oust me on some occasions. Is there a principal with such memory and understanding in any High School in Ontario who would do a thing like that?" he asked.

"Public opinion," he said, "was one of the strongest things in the world, and because of it, Britain is fighting today. I feel the wrong thing is being done in this matter and public opinion should demand that it be righted."

"I have got to get this off my chest," Mrs. Joseph Imlah stated in a brief address. "The student body has been a jury to say whether Mr. MacLaurin has been just and good. He has been a splendid citizen and we should repay him for the many thankless jobs he has done for this city in years past. He cheerfully accepted the chairmanship of many meetings held for just causes. He never refused.

"Why should we slap a good citizen in the face for doing the things we could not do ourselves. P. C. MacLaurin should get a just trial."

Miss Iria Richards, of Queen's University stated that Mr. MacLaurin has always "done his best to encourage us, and has made his former pupils, now students at Queen's University, feel a great respect for him. I can see no reason why he should be dismissed," she said.

Tribute Paid to Principal

James Fraser paid tribute to the principal for the fine work done in the War Savings Campaign. "I was associated with him in the campaign and I found him to be a man of untiring ability. I am not trying to convince you that P. C. MacLaurin is the whole thing," he said, "but I will say that he is an invaluable asset to any community in which he may live."

In closing the meeting Miss Bankier stated that "At first I thought I had said too much, but now I think I said too little. The Board gave us permission to hold this meeting providing we had a competent chairman," she said. "We had tremendous difficulty in securing one, and he dropped at the last minute. The Board of Education did not turn up here tonight," she charged, "because they know they are wrong, and would be made to look ridiculous."

Miss Bankier further charged that classes in the school were being neglected by the Board. "Don't blame Mr. MacLaurin if the school falls down this term. He has been forbidden to teach, and you can't expect pupils to teach themselves. If this were the case, teachers would not be necessary," she concluded.

The Collegiate Band was in attendance and entertained the audience with sprightly melodies prior to and during the meeting.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c

Berlin's Use Of Aegean Islands Threatens Turks

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 7 (AP)—British confidence that Turkey will not permit the Axis powers to use her territory to press the war on Britain appeared due for a new test even as War Secretary Anthony Eden was voicing that prediction in Parliament.

As Mr. Eden spoke, Berlin was claiming occupation of Aegean islands within a stone's throw of Turkey's upper Aegean coast. Rome followed with seizure of the scattered Cyclades group, which link up with the Italian Dodecanese Islands across the Southern Aegean.

Turkey thus is menaced by the possibility of air bombardment or invasion from her Black Sea front to her southern coastline in the Eastern Mediterranean if she resists mounting Nazi pressure to abandon her British alignment. Her eastern frontiers and contacts with her British allies are menaced by the Anglo-Iraq conflict, and she is reported also hastily reinforcing her defenses on the Turkish-Iran border in fear that the war in Iraq may spread in that direction.

Stepping Stones to Suez

It may be that Axis completion of a chain of Aegean island stepping-stones is preliminary to setting up a route for a frontal attack on the Suez Canal that would by-pass Turkey. There has been much conjecture that Berlin strategy would take that turn to avoid risk of war with either Turkey or Russia.

The Aegean islands, however, are probably of dubious value to Germany and Italy except for intensifying the air attack on Alexandria, the Suez Canal, Libya and Egypt. They might possibly be used as bases from which to send planes and plane-ferried troops to aid the Iraqi if Britain fails to suppress the pro-German regime there quickly.

Whatever the Axis strategy may be in pre-empting Greek islands in the Aegean, Britain and her Greek allies still hold a powerful triangular defensive position in the Eastern Mediterranean. The corners of the triangle are at the big Greek island of Crete—now under a unified Anglo-Greek command—at the British island of Cyprus—300 miles due east of Crete between the Turkish and Palestine-Syrian coasts — and at Alexandria, Britain's great naval base in Egypt. These bastions afford a formidable barrier to effective Axis use of the Aegean route for important troop movements across the Eastern Mediterranean.

Tough Nut to Crack

Anglo-Greek determination to hold Crete as a vitally important strategic corner of that triangle is now clearly demonstrated. Selection of Maj.-Gen. B. C. Freyberg, a New Zealander and first Great War hero, to direct the allied defense of Crete, indicates this.

German and Italian forces bound for Egypt or Iraq must pass through the 300-mile sea gap between Crete and Cyprus. Alexandria, about the same distance due south of the centre of the Crete-Cyprus line, and equidistant from both, completes the triangle. Planes or light naval units based at either Crete or Cyprus could be brought into action quickly anywhere within that three-corner sea area. Behind them would be the main air and sea strength of the British Fleet based at Alexandria.

With the fall of Greece, Berlin claimed that capture of Crete would be the next Axis objective. The German Air Force has been blasting tentatively at the island. Yet Malta's experience indicates that Crete would be a tough nut to crack. Malta has held out against hundreds of Italian and German bombings from Axis bases in Sicily, only thirty miles away, and still is used by British planes and naval craft.

NEWFOUNDLAND SUGGESTED AS TENTH PROVINCE

J. R. MacNicol Advances Suggestion During the Budget Debate

DISCUSS RELIEF

By C. R. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 7—(CP)—Assurance of Labor Minister McLarty that the provinces and municipalities will not have to carry an added burden because of the Dominion's decision to stop making grants-in-aid for direct relief was given the House of Commons yesterday.

The Minister was replying to members who had protested the 40 per cent Federal contribution to relief costs had been cut off while an acute unemployment situation remained.

He said the stoppage of relief grants as from last March 31 had brought no complaints from provinces or municipalities. Expenditures on relief had decreased from last year to the full extent of last year's Federal grants of $13,250,000.

The relief discussion and another on labor problems were sandwiched in with debate on the budget which Finance Minister Ilsley presented April 29.

Feature of the budget debate was a suggestion from John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) for the addition of Newfoundland to Canada as a 10th province.

Mr. MacNicol stressed the strategic importance of Newfoundland from a defence angle, and the practical desirability of rounding out the Dominion by inclusion of the old colony.

There was no government comment on the proposal. Mr. MacNicol's observations were based upon a recent personal survey of Newfoundland during which he questioned many Newfoundland citizens on their attitude toward joining Canada.

Some Hostility

There was some hostility to the proposal, he said, but most of it was based upon an erroneous conception of the circumstances. He felt the government should approach Newfoundland and attempt to convince the responsible authorities of the value of joining the confederation.

Mr. MacNicol referred to an article on Newfoundland in a United States magazine (Colliers) which said Newfoundlanders were ready to join the United States and said he had not found this the case. If there was any change they would want to come with Canada.

He said he found sentiment of the business and financial people in St. Johns, Nfld., generally favorable to union with Canada but the sentiments of other classes less favorable. He was told sentiment of the "outports," the smaller communities, was very much against union and went to see for himself.

"I engaged every man I could in conversation," he said. One man told him: "If anyone advocated confederation around here I would throw him into the bay."

"As the bay was not far away and was about 50 feet deep I didn't press the argument," said Mr. MacNicol, "but I did ask him why he was against it."

"He said: 'You see my house there. I can go lock the door and go away for 30 years and come back and open it again. Nobody would take it. We have no taxes!'"

This idea, he believed, was the basis for most of the fear of union with Canada in the smaller communities in which municipal life, as understood in Canada, was wholly unknown.

Private Members Speak

All yesterday's speakers in the budget debate were private members. The discussion on relief and labor problems arose on a motion to go into supply committee, a formality by which the government placed several departmental estimates before the committee for later consideration. The motion was carried early in the sitting and the way cleared for the budget debate.

The course of debate yesterday gave rise to speculation on the possibility of an early adoption of the budget and adjournment or prorogation of the House before the end of May.

Two Quebec Liberals protested at published articles questioning the loyalty of French-speaking residents of Quebec.

R. Ryan (Lib. Three Rivers), English-speaking Quebec resident, said a recent article in Life magazine, referring to the "pro-Axis French Canadian minority," was "slanderous" and an unjustified attack upon a loyal people.

Dr. Pierre Gauthier (Lib. Portneuf) said publications accusing Quebec French-speaking residents as "fifth column" were actually doing the work of fifth columnists by trying to divide Canada.

Claimed to be Enemies of State

F. D. MacKenzie, (Lib. Neepawa) speaking in the budget debate, said neither capital nor labor is entitled to receive more in wartime than men of corresponding categories in the armed forces.

Those who clogged the wheels of wartime industry were enemies of the state and friends of Hitler said Mr. MacKenzie, and should be dealt with sternly.

As a veteran of the First Great War who served in Africa he expressed resentment at suggestions the Canadian troops should have been in the fighting there. One reason against such a move, he said, was the danger of sickness in moving forces from cool climates to hot. Another was that Great Britain was the key position and the sons of Canadians who held the gate to the channel ports in the last war were needed to protect that position.

"Is it not proper and a source of pride that they are in Britain on the main job, rather than in any sideshow?" he said.

Mr. MacKenzie concluded his short speech with this sentence: "The cause of most democratic sickness, the cause of weakness in this parliament, the cause of most of the confusion and noise, is that too many people are saying too much about things of which they know too little."

Appeal For Higher Rates

An appeal for higher rates of Old Age Pension payments and lower age limits for those entitled to the pension was made by F. D. Shaw (N.D. Red Deer). He contended this could be done even in wartime and should be considered at once by the government. He compared Old Age Pensions with pensions to Judges, saying that many Judges receive more in one month than the Old Age Pensioners receive in a year.

Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel) confined his budget speech to one subject. He urged the government to exempt men in the forces from the tax on travel tickets. It was bad enough to make the soldiers pay any fares but was "rank injustice" to make them pay the tax as well, he said.

Argument Supported

This argument was supported by Lt.-Col. J. A. Ross (Con. Souris) who also made a plea for exemption of farmers from the new Federal tax on gasoline.

J. E. Matthews (Lib. Brandon) criticized the opposition for what he said was wasting the time of parliament by repetitive speeches and unnecessary questioning of the government.

Development of oil resources in Gaspe Peninsula and of the port of Gaspe as a possible naval base, was advocated by J. S. Roy (Con. Gaspe). He announced he would vote for the budget, hoping Gaspe's needs would soon be recognized.

T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) said too much was being spent on defence of Canada rather than overseas where the battle was being fought. He feared the budget would hit the average man too hard and said more of the war cost should be raised by low interest loans.

EMPIRE IN ARMS IS CO-ORDINATED IN ARMS-MAKING

All Dominions and Arsenal in United Effort and India Making Vital Contribution to War Equipment

By HAROLD FAIR

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 7 — (CP) — Drums of war calling the Empire to arms produced a response ever more far-reaching than the steady flow of men. The call generated in the Dominions and India a tremendous drive to arm those men. It accelerated the industrialization of far-flung lands.

The drive has become more empire-wide than in the First Great War, when, except for Canada's supreme effort, the other Dominions had to depend on Britain for the major share of their equipment. Now, however, industrially-expanded Canada, Australia, South Africa and India help Britain give the Empire forces the tools for victory.

Antipodes' Effort

Australia's arms industry employs 150,000 workers — 70 times the number in the last war — and they turn out a flood of supplies ranging from airplanes to heavy tanks. Two Tiger moth training planes, one Wirraway and one single-wasp engine roll off assembly lines daily. The first Australian-made Bristol Beaufort bomber has just completed successful tests.

Pastoral New Zealand, always a food source, responded to war's demands by making bren gun carriers, trench mortars, bombs, steel helmets and minesweepers. Authorities expect the dominion's small arms output to be doubled soon. New Zealand makes the airframes for Tiger Moths but imports engines, tires and instruments.

Industry at Cape

South Africa's industrial spurt came when France collapsed and all Britain's supplies were needed at home. The union still must import small arms and airplanes but makes or assembles most of the other equipment necessary in modern war.

The production record is regarded as particularly impressive in that country with a white population of only 2,000,000, of whom 120,000 are in the armed forces. South Africa produces more than enough ammunition for her own forces, trench mortars and howitzers.

India provides about 90 per cent of her war requirements and has exported supplies to Kenya, Uganda and the Middle East. Rifles machine-guns, small-arms ammunition, blankets and uniforms pour from Indian factories while others make 125,000 pairs of army boots daily for export to Britain.

To coordinate the work of these "arsenals of empire" Lord Linlithgow, the viceroy, organized the Eastern Group Conference last October. Its long-range task was to ensure that all the empire countries in the eastern hemisphere should be as self-supporting as possible. This involved a system of exchange to ensure that whatever supplies one country lacked could be furnished by another group member.

MOTORING STILL OUTDOOR SPORT IN OLD ENGLAND

Costs a Lot of Money in Wartime but Gives a Thrill Under Bombing and Respite on Country Roads

By PAT USSHER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 7 — (CP)—Hazards and handicaps of motoring in wartime Britain have chased less than a quarter of the country's drivers off the roads.

Despite difficulties you can still ride the broad highways and winding lanes of Britain, provided you can afford steeply mounting running costs and as long as your gasoline ration lasts.

Costs are the most serious deterrent. Before the war annual car licences cost 15 shillings per horsepower. In 1939 the rate went up to 25 shillings. (British horsepower rating is computed on a different basis from that in Canada. Small cars rate only eight h. p. and the biggest between 30 and 40 h. p.)

The driver of an eight h. p. automobile pays $45 yearly now compared with $27 before the war. The 30 h. p. car owner pays $168.75 against $101.25. In addition there is compulsory insurance costing up to $45 yearly.

Gas Prices

Price of gasoline has increased since war began from about 33 cents to about 45 cents a gallon. Rationing is worked out on the basis of horse-power to allow approximately 200 miles motoring monthly. But there's no extra allowance for cars of more than 20 h. p.

Repairs take longer than in peacetime. It is difficult, sometimes impossible, to obtain spare parts. Motorists whose cars get in bad shape usually lay them up for the duration.

The average citizen cannot buy a new car in Britain today. He must get authorization from the ministry of supply to do so. The few cars manufactured in the country are solely for export.

Driving in the blackout is a strain on eyes and nerves except when a full moon provides good visibility. Canadians who have groped at night along country roads through sleet or rain storms will have some idea what it's like.

Alert Driving

Headlights are dimmed so they cast only a glimmer of light. "Starlight" street lighting on main thoroughfares scarcely helps at all. Chief guides in London and big cities are traffic lights. Though reduced to cross-shaped slits, they act like beacons to "chart" the motorist's course through darkened streets. Warning lights on pedestrian islands and white-painted corner curbs also help. In the country drivers on main roads are guided by white lines dividing traffic lanes.

Driving through a night air raid is the most unpleasant experience. A friend of mine who has driven through London during heavy attacks said: "You've got to listen with one ear for bombs, with the other for guns keep one eye alert for pedestrians walking in the road, the other for bomb craters or debris."

He called one evening when a heavy air raid developed after dark. It had slackened in intensity, though the "raiders passed" had not sounded, when he left. On the way home he drove through glass-littered streets in a bombed area but managed to avoid a puncture.

Even with such handicaps the British motorist can still occasionally "joy-ride" in intervals between working hours, fire-watching or other civil defence duties, can still enjoy the beauty of England's country roads.

HITLER'S ANXIETY

The United States was referred to but not by name by Adolf Hitler who on Sunday said that it was an absurd lie to say that the German people intended to do harm to the people of a country which he said they had never harmed. This was followed up by the threat or boast that "the German people will profess more fanatically than ever the axiom that neither force or time will make us yield, let alone break us." He boasted of the superiority of Nazi armament, their lead in which he said Germany would never allow to be reduced. That was meant as threat, of course, despite his reference to the peaceful claims made of Germany's relations with the country to which he was referring. To add to the threat he declared no coalition could defeat Germany.

The reference shows that he fears the power of the great democracies, the United States and Britain, and the increasing armament of Britain and therefore he defied any "coalition." The fact that he said no coalition could be equal to his strength is proof that he dreads American co-operation with Britain.

It has been noted by observers that Hitler on this occasion did not make any reference to the length of the war and to when he thought it would end. He knows it cannot be short as he hoped and he knows that in a "long war" he will be the vanquished.

THE SALVAGE OF WASTE

Some lessons in saving of waste are given by the Brockville Recorder and Times. "Consider household bones. They are turned into glue for aeroplanes and into glycerine for explosives. If every household gave two ounces a week, the country could salvage 10,000 pounds of bones a year for war purposes."

"Do you know that we were compelled to import rags to the value of $3,800,00 last year?" the Recorder and Times asks and notes that rags, old clothing, sweaters, woollen socks provide rugs, blankets and great coats. Clean woollen waste, when graded is very valuable. Wiping rags are in great demand for munitions production.

On the point of metals it is shown "metals will give the country airplanes, tanks, guns and shells. One ton of metal make 150 shell cases for 18-pounder guns.

Paper and cardboard cartons will provide food containers for the troops, rifle cases, cases for shells. One old envelope will make a cartridge wad.

Canadians who know what plenty is are naturally less careful of these things which they call waste and yet in an age of plastic they should know how much of what is waste can be utilized. Clothes, because they are old and worn threadbare or torn and full of holes, have not necessarily lost all the qualities that go into them. The same is true of everything else that is worn out. It has some value for those who can make use of it. War is such a time when so much that is waste can be utilized.

IN GUERRILLA WAR

All is not going to be well for the Hun invaders in Yugoslavia, says Robert St. John, an Associated Press writer who escaped with a machine gun bullet in one leg. He has heard Yugoslavs vow that they will never lay down their arms while there is a German or Italian enemy to shoot at. In their old wild mountains of Bosnia and Serbia they carry on the war against the aggressors, and they are also ready on the sands of Africa to meet the Hun if he should attempt to move eastward.

The Serbians and other races of Yugoslavia it is expected will exact a heavy toll upon the enemy whose mechanized power made it impossible for the Balkan armies to hold him back because of lack of similar equipment to that of the Germans. But in their guerrilla way, man against man, the Yugoslavs will tell a story unpleasant to the sensibilities of a Hitler or a Mussolini and their henchmen.

The boastful Hitler the other day spoke of the few Germans losses, thereby making himself ridiculous by the figures he gave. But the Serbs and other guerrilla fighters and the British know better, they know what the Huns paid and the Huns have not ceased to pay and must continue to pay, according to the opinion and evidence of the correspondent.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

TORONTO, MAY 5th—Here on the Convention Floor of the Royal York Hotel, as this is being written, there is a strange paradox. Overhead, intermingling the Red, White and Blue, float the Star-Spangled Banner and the Union Jack. Cleverly secreted fans waft a gentle breeze toward the colored bunting, causing them to ripple gently, intermingling their colors. It is a colorful significance of the closeness of the friendship between the United States and Canada.

Below the flags more substantial proof of this friendship is seen. Americans from all corners of the Union meet, greet and shake hands with their Canadian brothers. It is a fine tribute to the ideals of Rotary International, for 1,800 Rotarians of Districts 168 and 169 are gathered here in convention.

The quaint drawl of Texas mixes with the clipped speech of Northern Ontario. New York, Michigan, and other states are represented. Rotarians from all parts of the province and the Union are bound more closely by this meeting.

Yet behind it all is the grim reminder that Canada is at war. Uniformed sailors, airmen and soldiers, with rifles and fixed bayonets parade smartly in front of an exhibit that is called "Canada at War." Herein are displays of Canada's fighting "tools." Everything from a small revolver to a quick-firing gun is included. The exhibit is thronged with the curious, especially the Americans.

In the morning, the Rotarians heard outstanding addresses by governors of the various districts. In the large convention hall, a huge picture of President Roosevelt, with his famous smile, beamed down from the wall. Ont its left, His Majesty, the King, smiled from a similar position. And in the centre, with the now famous cigar at the familiar angle, Winston Churchill, Britain's dynamic premier, and the man of the hour, looked down at the assembled clubmen.

Later, glass in hand, 1,800 Rotarian voices rang out in the strains of the national anthems of the two countries. It was an inspiring sight, and one could not help but feel a thrill when a nearby voice in a marked southern drawl, sang lustily the words of "God Save the King."

Later when Canada's Minister of National Defence, the Hon. J. L. Ralston, entered the banquet hall, the gathering rose as one man in a tribute to the minister. Husky Americans stood shoulder to shoulder with their Canadian cousins as the distinguished guest entered and their applause was as spontaneous as that of the Canadians present. It was a fine example of international unity and bespoke the ideals Rotary International stands for.

The story told by the National Defence Minister about the rooster on a South African farm whose domain adjoined that of an ostrich colony. One day he found a hole in the fence and crawled through to investigate. He came upon a huge ostrich egg lying in the sand and decided upon action. He pushed and rolled the egg to the hole in the fence, managed to get it in his own backyard and immediately called a muster parade of his flock. As the biddies gathered around him he said: "Listen, gals, I'm not complaining, but do you see this egg. It just goes to show you what they are doing in other communities."

The capable and efficient manner in which President Percy McGuire of the Belleville Club, host at the noonday luncheon on Monday, handled a difficult job. President McGuire received the congratulations of not only his fellow members of the Belleville Club but those of others as well.

Orchids to President-elect of the Belleville Club, W. J. Morrison, who so splendidly introduced the Minister of National Defence. "Bill" was on the air for a minute or two, but conducted his introductory speech like a veteran announcer. More orchids to Jack Deacon, who appears to be as much at home in a metropolitan banquet hall as he is in his native city. Jack's fine voice never sounded better and his contribution in assisting to put Belleville on the Rotary map was no small one.

Youth Dives 365 Feet In South Africa And Lives

A most extraordinary feat is reported from South Africa—at least if a dive of 365 feet can be so regarded. The Durban Natal Mercury pictures the scene of this exploit as at Howick Falls, near Pietermaritzburg.

The Mercury names the hero of the occasion as Keith Greene, a 19-year-old Durban boy who is now a soldier. He and a couple of comrades were amusing themselves in the Howick vicinity wearing bathing suits under their uniforms, intending to have a swim in the pool under the falls. As Keith had done a good deal of high diving he accepted a wager from a companion that he could not make the 365-foot plunge. First he threw a boulder over, watching where it fell to get his distance. Finding it dropped too near the falling water, he made an extra spring of a jump at the same time fixing his eyes on a landmark on the far side, as a necessity in high diving, else he might turn over in mid-air. The dive gave him an unprecedented sensation, but fortunately he hit the pool straight. He said he must have gone down fully 30 feet in the pool, as he came up absolutely gasping for breath. He had to swim hard then against a powerful undercurrent to get clear. Greene was said to have been a pupil at a school where the boys could swim like water-rats.

That this particular dive was very dangerous was proved by the fatal result of another young man's dive at the same spot, as also told by the Mercury, a young Martizburg boy of 16, named C. M. S. Booker, having lost his life in trying to emulate Greene's feat. He was with four companions who tried to dissuade him from the attempt, but he persisted. One of the boys stationed at the foot of the falls reported that Booker kept his balance until about 20 feet from the pool, when his body twisted and he struck the water on his back, his body not being recovered for some hours.

These twin incidents go to show that skill and experience are required in high diving. They are narrated as probably interesting to local athletes some of whom may have records of high diving, but lacking evidence of such, we assume that Keith Greene's exploit is the record in that type of athletics. Howick Falls in more than twice the height of Niagara Falls, which has a drop of 167 feet.

U. S. Short-Wave Broadcasting

New York, May 7 — Something has got to be done about American short-wave broadcasting. At present five or six stations, two connected with the leading networks of the country, conduct daily broadcasts to foreign countries in all languages. These programs include news, interpretations of news and comment. They are directed to South America and to Europe. They are bound to represent, in the minds of the listeners, whether the listeners are in England, France, Brazil or Norway, the American foreign policy and the official opinion.

They are also the most effective means of having America heard abroad. They are a powerful weapon for influencing the course of events; they are a powerful instrument in the psychological warfare which is going on between democracy and its enemies.

Yet, these broadcasts are conducted by private networks. They are conducted without any defined policy, or without any common pressure of private commercial interests. Being without an official policy, and not subject to any public direction or control, the policies are actually made from program to program by the section chiefs of the networks — by the men in charge of the divisions concerned with shortwave broadcasting, who thus determine what the rest of the world hears on the air from the United States. These section chiefs are, I am sure, able and conscientious men nor have I the slightest doubt that the networks are vividly anxious to further American interests and to use the short-wave facilities in the most constructive possible way. Nevertheless, the situation is preposterous. It is unfair to the networks, unfair to the men who, without official guidance, are called upon to make extremely important political decisions, and unfair to the foreign listeners and to the American public.

Day in and day out the United States is being attacked by the short-wave broadcasts from Berlin, Rome and other points, in a determined effort to influence opinion here and throughout the world. The German and Italian broadcasts are constantly heard, here and in South America. Are these propaganda broadcasts answered by us? How? Are the networks and the individual section chiefs in charge of short-wave programs empowered to answer this propaganda with a counter-propaganda? The official network policy is not to answer them—to ignore them—but this is a policy adopted by the networks themselves.

And, in the nature of things, this policy cannot be wholly adhered to even if it were desirable to do so. For the mere selection of news, let alone the interpretation constitutes an indirect propaganda. All scripts have to be submitted to the blue pencil of the networks—and a blue pencil wielded by the section chiefs —and thus the private networks become the promoters and censors of what does or does not go out over the ether from these shores.

There is, inevitably some conflict between the business mind and any larger political policy. Short-wave programs have been, and as far as I know still are, sponsored by American corporations, so that news and comment on them is heard in South America through the courtesy of fruit or oil, or fountain pens, or what not. The sponsor inevitably has his own interests to preserve, and our South American friends must inevitably obtain the impression that commercial pressures and political analyses go close together. In a world where the Axis powers continually attack us as "money-loving commercialists," this is deplorable.

* * *

One network that makes a speciality of short-wave broadcasts—it is not one of the major American systems, but has a powerful transmitter and specializes in short waves—puts speakers on the air in all languages to expound American ideals and general policies. Who selects these speakers? Are they subject to any official check? The answer is they are not. The network selected them. The men in charge have the best intentions in the world, but they are not men in close touch with the State Department. They must find persons who speak foreign languages, and who possibly have names known abroad. This is all right, but it is unfortunate that men are sometimes selected to speak who are wholly discredited in the nations whose language they command, and others present themselves to speak who have personal foreign political interests at stake.

Both the Government and the networks wish, apparently, to avoid an airing of this question—the Government because it fears it will be accused of trying to "take over" the broadcasting companies; and the broadcasting companies because they fear an "entering wedge."

But the problem needs thinking through. What is at stake is a good deal more than the private interests of the broadcasting companies. They ought, if they are wise, to ask the Government to relieve them of this responsibility. The Government ought to set up an organization under the State Department, with proper safeguards against partisan politics, and take over short-wave, establish the policy, and take the responsibility for it.

* * *

There is a different problem involved in programs designed for internal listeners and programs designed for people abroad. We are in a war of nerves, and a war of ideas, and we are in it under the most adverse possible conditions. It is neither the business of private companies to decide what goes out nor their responsibility to pay for what goes out. Short-wave broadcasting is an integral part of American diplomacy, and its conduct by private companies is illogical. (Released by The Bell Syndicate, Int.)

AUSSIE FLIERS GRADUATE

$1,056,000 Of Red Cross Supplies Lost By Enemy Action

Washington, May 7 (AP)—Norman H. Davis reported yesterday that $1,056,000 worth of Red Cross supplies, of the $14,000,000 total consigned to Great Britain, had been lost at sea.

The Red Cross chairman said that the cargoes were aboard 11 British and Allied ships that were sunk.

"The largest shipment to Greece valued at approximately $1,000,000" —aboard the Greek ship Kassandra Louloudis—"is now safe in a Mediterranean port."

The Day in Parliament

By The Canadian Press

Today:

The House will continue the budget debate with G. S. White (Con. Peterborough-Hastings) the first speaker.

Yesterday:

The House heard Labor Minister McLarty reply to members who claimed federal relief grants-in-aid had been cut off while an acute unemployment situation still existed; a suggestion from John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) that Newfoundland be incorporated in the Dominion as a 10th province; Angus MacInnis (C.C.F. Vancouver East) discuss the labor situation; Robert Ryan (Lib. Three Rivers) protest against an article in Life magazine which referred to French Canadians as a "pro-axis" minority; Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel and Lt.-Col. J. A. Ross (Con. Souris) urge exemption for members of the armed forces from the new 10 per cent tax on railway, steamship and airline fares.

$10,000 TO AID REFUGEES

New York, May 7 (CP)—Bundles for Britain today cabled $10,000 to Cairo to aid evacuated British and American refugees from Greece and other Middle East centres hit by war. An appeal for the funds said thousands of refugees are arriving in Egypt.

GOLFING PARSON'S DISCOVERY

Said the golfing parson sadly as he stood upon the tee:
"There's a grand, old, rousing motto that has long appealed to me.
I have used it in my sermons; have it framed upon my wall,
But for golfers, I've discovered, it's the worst advice of all.
'Look up! Lift up!' 'twas our fathers who passed down that counsel true,
But in golf it leads to madness, as I've learned, and so have you.

"'Look up! Lift up!' 'tis a motto for the Christian heart and mind,
Meaning: see life's nobler purpose and be helpful and be kind.
Oh, I've taught it to the children and I've preached it to the old,
And I've given it out as prizes, done in letters, red and gold;
But I find I must discard it when at golf I come to play.
'Look up! Lift up!' Even bishops couldn't hit a ball that way!

"'Look up! Lift up!' down the ages as a challenge it has rung.
It has called to higher service, by the millions, old and young.
'Look up! Lift up!' 'tis a saying meant the hearts of all to reach,
But in golf I've learned in anguish 'tis a way I wouldn't teach.
For of golfers' evil habits, it's the very worst of all.
'Look up! Lift up!' If you do so you will never hit the ball."

DOMESTIC WINE

Ordinarily we do not think of the United States as a great wine-producing country.

The war has produced a boom in the American wine industry; but even before imports of wine were largely cut off by the war the United States ranked ninth among the wine-producing countries of the world.

Only France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Argentina, Yugoslavia, Russia and Greece normally exceed the United States in the quantity of wine produced.

Wine is produced in 32 of the 48 states of the Union.

California produces about 90 per cent of the wine produced in the United States.

New York comes second as a wine-producer, while Washington, Ohio and New Jersey follow, in that order.

The investment in American wineries and vinyards exceeds half a billion dollars.

About $22,000,000 is collected in direct federal and state taxes on wine a year.

Wineries, wine bottlers and wine wholesalers buy $25,000,000 worth of supplies annually.

More than 200,000 acres of vineyards in the United States are devoted almost exclusively to growing grapes for wine-making.

Some 15,000 American farmers raise two billion pounds of wine grapes a year, for which they receive about $18,000,000.

About 6,000 American workers in wineries receive $6,000,000 annually in salaries and wages.

Wholesaling and retailing of wine provides employment for 50,000 American workers, who receive over $50,000,000 a year in wages and salaries.

Champagne, one of the lightest wines in alcoholic content, is taxed higher than other wines.

Ninety percent of all domestic champagne is produced in the Finger Lakes region of New York State.

Use of the term "champagne" in France is restricted by law to a white sparkling wine produced in the old province of Champagne, especially around Rheims and Espernay, in the department of Marne.

In the United States "champagne" is a generic name for any similar effervescent wine.

Because the native grapevines are attacked and destroyed by certain native plant diseases, most grapes in France and southern Germany are grown on American grapevine roots, which are immune to these diseases.

The words wine, vine, vintage, vinous and vinegar are all directly or indirectly derived from Latin "vinum," meaning grapes or wine.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XIII

Devona wept until exhaustion brought a kind of calm. Without wanting to remember them, pictures of the day's happiness came back to haunt her. That moment when dawn burst over the horizon. The look in Dale's eyes when she'd told of the shock of her father's death. The touch of his arms that awul moment she'd thought she would fall to her death. That glimpse of paradise when he'd whispered:

"Darling, I love you. I don't ever want to lose you."

Suddenly she sat bolt upright. He'd said that, hadn't he? She hadn't taken that for granted! Or had she dreamed it? Tortured she sprang off the bed, crossed swifty to the door. There was one way to find out! She'd ask him—demand the truth, and end this horrible nightmare. If her mother had been right, then everything was over that much sooner. If she had been wrong——

Hope leaped like a new flame in her heart. But, hand on the door-knob, she hesitated. She couldn't go to his room at this hour. But—she must talk to him. If she wakened him, asked him to meet her downstairs——

In the Hallway

Turning back to the pretty carved desk, she pulled out a sheet of notepaper, wrote rapidly——

"Darling,

"Something has happened. I must talk to you at once. Meet me in the library right now?

"Yours, DEVONA."

Folding the heavy white paper into a square, she turned back to the door, opened it softly her heart beating a frenzied flourish against her ribs. Silently she stepped into the deep-carpeted hall, started toward Dale's room.

But—she stopped short. Some one else slipped silently along that hallway. A tall, fair-haired some one in a trailing white lace negligee. A some one who stood, even now, her hand on the door knob of Dale's room.

Vara.

Mute with horror, Devona saw her mother hesitate, then turn the knob quickly, silently, step forward.

Some one moaned—a stricken little half-sob. Afterward, Devona realized it must have been herself. Anyway, the sound ratcheted down the silent hall like a clanging cymbal. Vara stiffened, turned, closed the door again quickly behind her.

Face to Face

For a moment the two women faced each other, silent, staring. It was Vara who recovered first. With a little shrug, and a smile that held quiet mockery, she led the way across the hall back to her own room, beckoned Devona to follow.

When, once again, the door closed them into that elaborate boudoir alone, Vara crossed to the window, stood looking out into the darkness for several long moments.

Devona, dazed and still not believing what her eyes wanted her to, waited, immobile. It was just a play. A gripping, tragic play she was watching.

The curtain would fall and she'd realize none of this had been real. It couldn't be real!

But it was real.

Vara, with just the right shade of concern in her voice, spoke finally. "I'm more sorry than I can say, my dear, that it must always be my place to disillusion you."

Hand high against the window ledge, her beauty framed by the soft blue draperies, Vara watched her daughter with gray eyes that revealed nothing of her real thoughts. "Innocent that you are, I suppose it had to come sometime."

Devona waited, unanswering. This wasn't her cue yet. Dully she realized that Vara was only timing the action before the climax.

The Climax

"You see" — with a lovely rhythmic shrug — "I know Dale cannot be faithful in love because he has been my lover—for years. Now do you understand?"

There it was—the climax — in simple, awful words. Now let the curtain go down. Now let the house lights come up to remind you this was all just make-believe.

Nothing happened. Just Vara's words still clanging through the room. Her lover—for years — not faithful in love because——

Devona's mind simply refused to function. This couldn't be. This was—sordid awful. One's own mother didn't — the man you loved——

Stiffly, her body moving without conscious direction. Devona went back to her room.

Planning Flight

It was long after midnight when she finished packing — the lovely wine-red dress, even the boots that had carried her to the pinnacles of hapiness and then to despair's depths — all within the space between two dawns!

Hands steady now, she took her father's picture from the dressing table, packed it into the big, bulging suitcase. Then her toilet articles — everything she'd brought into this room that she'd entered so happily and would leave so gladly. Because, of course, she would not stay. She'd been mad to come into Vara's life. The only thing left now was to get out of it as quickly as possible.

First the note to Vara. Simple, she made it, and direct. She'd made a mistake in coming. This was no mistake now. She wanted only to be completely forgotten. And good-bye.

Then, slowly she picked up the silver locket from where it lay shining against the polished surface of the dressing table. Souvenir of a never-to-be-forgotten day! She smiled wryly while sudden tears slipped down her cheeks. Then, in clear, unhesitating black strokes, she wrote:

I find this isn't what I wanted —after all. Forgive my having been so slow to see what it was all about. Good-bye.

DEVONA RAEBOURNE.

With a little sigh, she slipped the note and the locket into an envelope. She'd have Margarita deliver it to him after she was safely gone. And thus close—her heart limped painfully — another amusing incident!

In Flight

At 7, when she heard the servants stiring below, she rang for Wong, ordered a car, sent her luggage down to be stowed in the trunk carrier. Then, with one last lingering glance around the pretty bedroom, she drew a long breath, closed the door—and that chapter of her life—behind her. No use looking back. She had only what was ahead to think about now.

It was easy to slip out of the house, across the patio to the drive where Wong waited. Vara and her guests wouldn't be astir for hours yet. She'd be safely lost in big, sprawling Los Angeles before Vara was through her breakfast coffee. And that was as she wanted it. There'd been enough of dramatic scenes. And heartbreak was too recent to risk seeing Dale.

Facing the Future

The tiny bus station in Palm Springs was deserted. Wong, his face impassive as a heathen idol, piled her luggage into a porter's truck, accepted the green bill she pressed into his hand.

But it wasn't borrowing trouble to wonder what she'd do once she did arrive in the big Western city. Untrained, unacquainted, almost un-American in her experience, what could she do to wrest a living from this great, strange city! Where could she go? What could she do?

In a Maze

She hadn't answered that question when at last the big gray bus rolled into the giant honey comb that was Los Angeles station. For a moment Devona stood bewildered, clutching her small handbag, trying to guess which way to turn.

"Carry you' bags, ma'am?" A grinning dark porter hesitated at her elbow.

Devona nodded, fished in her purse for a coin.

"Where you wanta go, ma'am?"

That was just it. Where was she going? "To—a hotel, I guess. Some place—inexpensive——"

"Ah know jes the one fo' you, ma'am." The old darky nodded, gathered up her baggage, led a zigzag trail through the crowd to a taxi outside.

"Boss, take this lady to the Brownstone," he told the driver.

The driver touched his cap, swung open the cab door with a flourish.

The Brownstone Hotel was obscure, but clean and cheap and within walking distance of the main business section. A few moments later when Devona dismissed the bellhop, she took stock of the tiny room. Brown steel imitation walnut bed and dresser, a single window, a worn nondescript carpet, an austere desk with some hotel stationery in the pigeonholes.

No Turning Back

She smiled wryly. Not much like the room she'd just left behind! But—again her chin notched high—at least it was temporary haven. As soon as she found work she could move to something more attractive. A tiny apartment, perhaps, where she could add a comfortable chair and a few lamps—something more homelike than this stark barrenness.

But her first concern was to find that work. Clutching her alarmingly thin purse with chilled fingers, she mentally recounted her resources. Three 10-dollar bills, two fives, less than 10 dollars in silver. A working knowledge of French and Spanish and Italian. A smattering of Indian dialects. And what else to offer any prospective employer?

Grimly she faced the problem. There must be some one, somewhere who needed her help. There had to be. Because now, there was no turning back!

CHAPTER XIV

Devona launched her job-hunt that very morning. Clipping the "Help Wanted — Female" column from the big daily paper she'd bought at the station she borrowed a street map from the desk clerk and planned a campaign.

Naturally, the first day she didn't find anything. Achingly tired, she forced down a bowl of soup and a sandwich at a corner drug store and plodded back to the hotel to crawl gratefully into the hard, narrow bed. It had been terribly hard work—walking the long blocks between addresses to save the carfare, waiting in crowded offices, steeling herself for every interview.

But she wasn't really discouraged, she assured herself before she fell asleep of sheer exhaustion. She couldn't expect to find a job the very first time she tried.

Resources Gone

Not even the second or third day. Nor, probably, the first week. And by having a "merchant's lunch" at the Owl every noon, she could substitute fruit and milk in her room for dinners. She lost a little weight, of course, but that was to be expected. More alarmingly her slim resources fast grew slimmer. That was to be expected, too, she realized with threads of panic fraying her courage. She'd have to find something soon!

At the end of the third week Devona took stock again. This time with desperation gnawing at her. Everywhere, she'd met the same answer. "Sorry, we want experienced help."

Lips trembling with embarrassment—and sudden terror—Devona didn't try to answer, walked blindly out of the shabby foyer into the street.

Into the street! That's where she'd be after 3:30 this afternoon if she didn't find something.

At noon Devona pawned the pretty gold wristwatch her father had given her on her 16th birthday and the first real bitterness seeped like acid into her head. When this money was gone it meant—the end. Another 24 hours and she was beaten.

Out of the Rain

It had begun to rain as she came out of the hotel. A fine, drenching rain that would ruin her coat and put the finishing touches on her once-smart shoes. Tears much larger than the raindrops pressed at the corners of her eyes. A shabby appearance wouldn't help her cause any.

She ran half a block to the canopied entrance of a night club, huddled, gasping for breath, trembling with fatigue under the gawdy striped awning.

It began to rain now in earnest. A driving, pelting deluge as the sky grew darker. She couldn't go out in that, she thought wearily and sagged against the building. In another moment it might let up.

But in another moment a uniformed doorman stopped watching her covertly and stepped toward her.

"Waiting for some one, miss?" he asked, courteous, but his attitude indicated very pointedly that the management didn't encourage loitering in the doorway.

Devona mustered her last scraps of dignity. "Yes—a friend," and hoped it sounded as cool as she intended. It was hard to be dignified with rain dripping from the soggy brim of her hat, seeping into her thin-soled shoes.

Into the Club

"Won't you step inside, then miss?" he persisted.

Devona hesitated, noticed the insignia on his visored cap, El Mexicano in curving gold braid. Where had she seen that before?

The foyer was deserted. Past the luncheon hour now, it was still too early for the cocktail crowd.

"Who was it you said you wanted to see?" The doorman, still at her elbow, watched her suspiciously.

Devona hadn't said she wanted to see any one and he knew it. But she had to say something. Anything to give her an excuse to sit down and rest a while in one of those deep-cushioned maroon velvet chairs.

"Mr.——" A name leaped to her tongue out of some subconcious recess of her distracted mind, "Mr. Macias. Mr. Jose Macias, please."

"Certainly, miss." The doorman's attitude changed instantly. "I'll see if he's in."

Drawing a deep breath, Devona wilted into a chair, prayed that Mr. Macias would not be in or would be busy, or something.

But, no luck. He was in and he would be delighted to see her immediately.

Dully she followed the doorman across the foyer to the gray-panelled door marked "Manager." Now for the showdown and then back out into the streets again. If only she didn't feel so terribly hollow inside, so light-headed .

For a moment, Mr. Macias, alone in his elaborate maroon-draped office, studied her coldly from behind his broad gray and chromium desk. Then, his smile breaking suddenly into recognition, he rose, came to meet her, hands outstretched.

"But buenos dios Senorita! This is an unexpected pleasure," and pulling a silver-velvet chair closer, "Please sit down. I am so happy to see you again. You are in town on a little pleasure trip?"

"Not—exactly." Devona smiled wryly, sank into the chair wearily.

Being Quizzed

"Shopping, then, perhaps. And look, you will stay for the cocktail hour. I promised you some excitement, I remember." He pulled his own chair closer, his handsome dark eyes quick in their appraisal of her.

"No, thank you." Devona shook her head, anticipated the faint surprise in his face when she saw those sharp, black eyes discover her threadbare, rain-soaked shoes, the neatly darned place in her stocking the hole in her glove. "You see, I'm hunting a job."

He stared at her incredulously. "You—hunting a job."

"Yes"—a gay little smile. "And so far I haven't been too successful." She tried to laugh lightly, but the effort fell thudding against her mushrooming discourage ment, nearly ended in a sob.

"But — you are just fooling," Macias scowled, his handsome face breaking almost immediately into another smile. "You want the career. Is not that it, Senorita? Something to play with just to amuse yourself——?"

Devona shook her head grimly. "No. Something to work at so I can eat!"

For a moment Macias only stared at her. "But—you are serious?"

She's Hungry

"Of course. Terribly serious." She laughed a little. "You see I'm —hungry!"

"But surely your friend Mr. Brasher——"

Devona interrupted that quickly. "Mr. Brasher and I are no longer—friends." She swallowed hard. "I'm —absolutely on my own. No one even knows where I am. I left home for—personal reasons."

"Come, come. That's too bad. But maybe just a quarrel? You could forgive and——"

"No. I'm never going back," she said quietly. Not even if it meant an overdose of sleeping powders instead. "That's behind me forever. Now, I have my own way to make."

"But you are very young—and very beautiful—to face the world alone."

Devona shrugged. "Nevertheless, I have to get a job. You don't, by any chance, know of any one who needs an untrained, inexperienced girl who speaks three languages, do you?"

He shook his head slowly. "No, I'm sorry. If I did, I would like to help you. I would like to help the—friend of Mr. Brasher."

"But I'm not a friend of Mr. Brasher—not any more," Devona insisted doggedly. She wouldn't fly under false colors. "But——" and this time she succeeded in making her smile real, "I do need a job—desperately."

Macias Has a Plan

Her eyes met Macias' bold scrutiny pleadingly and for an instant her breath stopped as she saw the sly change in his expression. His teeth, even and hard and white in his swarthy face, his smile a bold challenge now. She found herself remembering Dale's wry, "Any pretty new face, and with Macias it's off with the old and on with the new."

"I see," he was saying, his eyes smiling while he toyed with some idea.

An idea, Devona sensed instinctively, that would be more dangerous, probably, than starving. So, rising suddenly, she smiled again.

"Well, it's been nice of you to see me," she said, just as if she noticed nothing of his changed manner. "And if you do hear of a job, let me know."

Macias rose, too. "You must leave me your address, Miss Raebourne. I will — be getting in touch with you."

Even the pseudo-Mexican accent had disappeared from his speech. Not the bowing, anxious innkeeper now! But still—and more dangerously now — the bold, dark-eyed gallant.

She Doesn't Leave

Panicked a little, Devona tried to direct her numbed feet to the door. But the long, wearing hours of walking and waiting, the lack of food, the discouragement — all took sudden toll of her flagging strength.

For a moment, the door she faced wavered crazily, then slipped farther and farther out of reach. She was fainting! Terrified she clutched at a chair back, missed it, felt herself falling, falling—falling —into a soft, black cloud.

But she musn't faint! Not here —not now. Desperately she tried to fight her way back. She must keep her wits. She must!

It was no use. Even the floor was giving way under her now. And—somehow—it just didn't — matter.

Age-Old 'Pacifiers' Absolute Essentials To Baby's Life

Richmond, Va., May 7 (AP)—The rocking chair, the rubber nipple and above all a mother's fondling are absolute essentials in the nursery in spite of modern baby specialists' advice to the contrary, the American Psychiatric Association was told yesterday.

These age-old "pacifiers" that have but a small place in the current baby culture are much more than means of merely quieting Junior, said Dr. Margareth a A. Ribble, New York psychiatrist, and are rooted firmly to the child's future well-being.

In the psychologic link between mother and child, she said, the mothering has a part in the diet comparable to the milk itself, satisfying the baby's hunger for nervous stimulation. The relation between mother and child is a sort of self-starter to bring the infant's sensory nervous system into activity.

The practice of rocking and crooning to a complaining infant was described as important reassurance to the child's natural fear of falling. This fear is brought on in the child by moving him suddenly or improperly wrapping or covering him.

The soothing effect of a mother's singing, she reported, tends to have a particularly soothing effect upon the child in the first few weeks of life when it exhibits sudden and often violent reactions to sudden noises.

Busy Days Don't Worry Me!

I take no chances with Internal Sluggishness

IF YOU find no pleasure in the day's work—feel disinclined to make an effort—the cause may be internal sluggishness. This handicap is very common. Often it's due to a lack of bulk in the diet.

A Pleasant Precaution that Can Help Prevent Trouble

Constipation due to lack of bulk should yield to Post's Bran Flakes, eaten regularly. They provide enough natural bulk in the form of bran to keep food wastes moving promptly.

It's both wise and pleasant to eat Post's Bran Flakes as an aid to fitness. They have a crisp, nut-like flavour which really is delicious. If they do not readily relieve internal sluggishness, see your doctor.

Florists To Hold National Rose Week

May 19 to May 24th has been set aside by the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association as National Rose Week. During this week F.T.D. florists throughout the United States will collect funds for Canadian war relief. A poster displayed in their shop windows will invite passerby and customers to come in and "take a rose and drop a coin in the bank". The funds collected will be distributed through the Maple Leaf Fund Inc.

The project besides giving tangible aid in their relief efforts to our good neighbours to the north, is certain to build up much additional good will for F.T.D. members and to secure national recognition of the charitable contributions that florists are called upon to make almost every day.

Max Schling is Chairman

Max Schling of New York has been appointed chairman of National Rose Week by W. E. Joy, President of F.T.D.A., and Willard E. Crain of Cincinnati has been selected as co-chairman. Plans have already been perfected to introduce National Rose Week to the American public through the air waves, newspaper columns, news reels and other available media. During that week it is hoped that the Canada Rose, which has been selected as the symbol for National Rose Week, will be worn by the hundreds of thousands by the men and women of America as a tribute to Canada. —The F.T.D. Tubbing Time For All Gloves

THIS is a glove season—it always is when suits are very much in the mode. Immaculate gloves offer the finishing touch to any costume, but it isn't necessary to have a big glove wardrobe. Most gloves today, even the fine leather ones, are washable, and it is easy to give them a tubbing. Do not attempt to wash gloves that have already been to the dry-cleaner or that have been treated at home with cleaning fluid or powder. Don't wait until gloves look dirty before washing them. If they have been worn a few times, they are dirty, whether they appear to be or not. Repeated tubbings won't hurt the leather, but rubbing away at accumulated grime will cause holes or will injure finish and dye.

Washing Leather Gloves

Use mild, pure soap flakes or powder, and lukewarm but never hot water. Wash dark leather gloves quickly, light ones may be safely soaked, if so desired. Use a very soft brush and rich suds on any badly soiled or grimy spots. When finished with sudsing, roll gloves from wrist. Never strain seams by pulling finger tips. Wash inside to remove hand soil. Rinse in clear lukewarm water. Vinegar or lemon juice in the rinse water will help to overcome fading and streaking of color. Squeeze as dry as possible, but do not wring. Remove excess moisture by rolling in towel. Blow into gloves to puff them into shape. Lay flat to dry, away from radiators and all excessive heat, but in an air current. If cuffs or stitching or trimming is of contrasting color, place tissue paper inside gloves. Best thing, though, is to invest in a glove frame. When nearly dry, work gloves with fingers to soften. This will make them easy to manipulate when putting them on again.

Gloves made of fabric wash clean in a twinkling provided that the washing is done as soon as they look wilted. Lukewarm soapsuds for the washing and clear, lukewarm water for the rinsing, are all that they need to look like new. Pat the moisture out with a towel to make them dry more quickly, then stretch the gloves lengthwise and hang them over a towel bar in the bathroom or dry flat on a clean turkish towel. If a glove frame is used, one with a terry toweling cover is the best for fabric gloves. Rips and tears and missing buttons should be attended to before gloves are washed.

Red Cross Soc. To Investigate Possibilities Of Establishing Blood Donor Station In City

At the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society held on Tuesday, Dr. Caldwell of Toronto, spoke concerning voluntary blood donor groups.

He explained that the donation of blood for overseas use was already being looked after by the large cities but that many of the smaller cities were setting up volunteer blood donor groups for service in local hospitals. These are usually managed by a committee of the local Red Cross and local medical practitioners.

Dr. MacKay was questioned and spoke on the subject representing the Belleville Hospital and Dr. Anderson, representing the medical men of the city.

Mrs. Mikel was made chairman of a temporary committee to act in the matter, with power to appoint the committee from lay and medical men and to bring in a report at the next regular meeting.

Peace time and war time accounts were approved and the treasurer's report read giving the financial situation of the society to-date.

Mr. Howard Clarke was appointed convener of a Property Committee to look after matters at the Red Cross rooms.

Mrs. Lazier's report of the work room committee follows:

May 6, 1941

Mr. President, Members of the Executive of Belleville Branch of Canadian Red Cross Society:

The report of the work room and the various auxiliaries is once more highly satisfactory. Twenty-six cartons of the different types of supplies requested by headquarters have been shipped from the Belleville branch. The woollen comforts number 531 articles, many of these very large sweaters for all services. The clothing for British bombed civilians includes 909 articles, consisting of all kinds of clothing and bedding. 64 quilts and ten complete layettes are in this list. The demand for hospital supplies has not been very heavy, our branch has made 138 articles for this service.

The convener wishes to thank all those who have contributed to this splendid report. The work is now well organized and each group is prepared to carry on to the end.

Respectfully submitted,

FLORENCE M. LAZIER,
Convener.
Women's War Work Committee.

Historic Wishing Tree At W. Lake, P. E. Cty., Crumples To Ground

The historic wishing tree at West Lake, in recent years nothing more than a large stump, late last week succumbed to the ravishes of time, toppling across one section of the road which had been built around it rather than have the tree removed.

The tree, a mecca for sight-seers touring Prince Edward County, was believed to be more than 700 years old and at one time was said to be the largest specimen of the maple species in the world.

Mr. A. J. Lake, proprietor of Wishing Tree Lodge, who was born on Wishing Tree farm, remembers his grandfather telling of Indians making journeys to the tree to make a wish. They believed the tree had supernatural powers and it was through the Indians the huge maple received its name, "Wishing Tree." Many arrowheads have been found nearby.

In the early days of the country's settlement by whites, people used to drive to West Lake by horse and buggy and picnic beneath its widespread branches.

The last living branch of the tree tumbled to the ground about six years ago, leaving the solid but dead wood trunk standing. A single root had kept the 15 foot trunk, which measured 18 feet in girth, in place. A roof had been erected over the trunk to preserve it, but when the one remaining root rotted away, the whole thing collapsed.

Weddings

LE SAGE—McPHEE

Rev. J. C. Le Sage of Smiths Falls, brother of the bridegroom, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. T. Meagher at the wedding of Miss Beatrice Agnes McPhee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie McPhee of Smiths' Falls, and Mr. Joseph Leonard Le Sage, son of Mrs. P. Le Sage, Rochester, N.Y., and the late Peter Le Sage of Tweed. The ceremony was conducted in the Church of Our Lady of Good Council in Rochester, N.Y. The altar was decorated with Spring flowers.

The bride wore a two-piece dress of Romance blue crepe with jacket of eyelet embroidery and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of white roses, carnations and sweet peas. Her accessories were of navy blue. The bridesmaid, Miss Monica McPhee, sister of the bride, wore a dress of cinnamon pink with navy blue accessories and carried a nosegay of mixed Spring flowers. The groomsman was Mr. Fred Cooper.

Following the ceremony, the wedding breakfast and reception was held at the "Spring House." Mr. and Mrs. Le Sage later left on a motor trip to Washington, D.C., and New York, the bride wearing a printed silk frock with a coat of British navy and matching accessories. They will reside in Rochester, N.Y.

Laurence Olivier, hero of "Rebecca" and Vivien Leigh (Scarlet O'Hara) are co-starred in "That Hamilton Woman!" one of the greatest romances of all time, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Tabernacle W. M. S. Holds Service Of Re-Affiliation

An impressive service of re-affiliation of the C.G.I.T. with the Women's Missionary Society, took place last evening in Tabernacle Church parlors in the presence of about forty members of the W.M.S., the Evening Auxiliary and the C.G.I.T. The service in charge of Mrs. W. Harrison carried out the usual form of such an occasion. The W.M.S. was represented by Mrs. A. H. Fisher, Mrs. C. F. Lent and Mrs. M. Burgess, the Evening Branch by Miss Rachel Fox and Mrs W. Dougherty and the C.G.I.T. by Jean Poste, Ethel Arnott, Ruth Hicks, Joyce McClelland, and Betty McLeod.

Mrs. H. Froats, president of the W.M.S. told a very interesting story, and Miss Aileen Comrie sang a solo. At the conclusion of the service the members of the Evening Auxiliary served refreshments.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, May 7

A DAY of swift and breathtaking events may be looked for judging by an unusual congeries of astral forces. All departments of human life should respond to this most beneficial reign of the planetary vibrations. Business, finance, labor, industry as well as the domestic, social and romantic associations may be expected to move with unprecedented progress into a climax of fulfillment and pleasurable realization of cherished hopes and wishes. There may be some unforeseen change but the returns should be permanent and secure.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of surprising and perhaps dramatic denouements, with all things moving safely and securely toward the goal of heart's desire. This in all departments of human aspiration with business, finance, industry, labor, the arts, sciences and all creative expression moving toward enduring rewards and recognition. Romance, culture and the emotional life may prove to thrilling and gratifying realizations.

A child born on this day should have many all round abilities and traits of character fitting it for high station and responsible position in life. It will have much stability as well as exalted aspirations, with romance, nobility and generosity of purpose and spirit.

For Thursday, May 8

ALTHOUGH there may be some surprising or peculiar predicament to enoounter on this day the general trend of events may be deemed routine. There may be a tricky or perplexing development, calling for restraint and amiability lest it recoil with disagreeable and irritating reactions on the temper as well as the nerves. It would be well to remain alert, composed and ready for almost any treacherous or intriguing circumstance. With care all should be well.

Those whose birthday it is should be prepared for a curious, trying and baffling situation to arise, taxing the spirits, the nerves and having strange psychological reactions. Keep alert to fraud, tricks or strange entanglements, exercise extreme care with writings, documents and speech and all may proseed in customary grooves, without much danger. Do not take bold chances with funds, in speculation or sudden opportunities for securing fortunes.

A child born on this day while having many qualities and talents for fair success in life may be temparamental, sarcastic or erratic, although well liked and successful in public service.

Sharing In Home Tasks Helps Child

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

As I go about in our country I am inspired at the way some youth take responsibility. I see it in the high school, among the Scouts, in the Y's, K. of C., 4-H Clubs, and various other groups of youths. It is heartening to be introduced to a high school assembly as I often am, by a student; to see an assembly program conducted solely by students and to see these young folks managing many of the affairs of the school which used to be managed, often not so well, by the teachers. Moreover, it is heartening to participate in a discussion by youths themselves. They express themselves very well.

In contrast with these many splendid contributions by certain young people, the lack of readiness to share responsibilities when considerable effort and self-sacrifice are required especially when no limelight rewards them, is not so reassuring.

As any teacher knows, there are scores of times at school when the most essential duties by one or several students require effort and self-denial on their part if they are to contribute to the good of the group.

Most youths of junior and senior high school age and college plead for more freedom but not for more responsibility except where responsibility brings immediate or near-immediate satisfaction.

Responsibility Important

Then the prevailing philosophy of education in home and school assumes that practically everything must be immediately motivated. Interpreted by the average parent, it means the child should be allowed to do about as he pleases and should not be expected to do what he does not want to do. Yet you and I have to do practically every day a number of things we would rather not do. Sometimes we run away from these unpleasant things but the more we shirk responsibility, the harder we are to live with and the more burdens we shift to others.

Now I'm for more good motivation at home and school. But I am convinced it is not at all practical to assume that we can make nearly all essential duties and responsibilities pleasant. In the long run they may grow to be their own reward; yet the earlier hurdles have to be leaped with effort which is sometimes born of coercion.

In the home the well brought-up child learns to do a few definite chores at regular times. He can't escape just because he feels they are unessential. Here we are concerned with the home with no maid. Do you know that only five homes out of 100 in America has domestic help? The growing child in these other 95 homes who does not learn to share in some of the common drudgeries is missing the most precious moral education possible. Even in the 5 per cent of homes with a maid, the maid properly has a day off when the child who is old enough should, for his own character, share in the home chores.

I hear from some parents who tell how they have cultivated self-reliance and responsibility in their children. May I hear from more?

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Please suggest a way to cure the child four or five of leaving his coat, rubbers, hat, etc., on the playground.

A. For each and every offense let him sit where you can see him in a chair doing nothing for about 40 minutes.

Q. Many well-conducted nursery schools give the tots cod liver oil in orange juice. Yet you advise against giving cod liver oil in any fruit juice at home. Please explain.

A. Some children given cod liver oil or medicine in fruit juice dislike the fruit juice and avoid it all their life thereafter. A number of adults have told me this happened to them. This unfortunate association is not so likely to happen in the nursery school where all children easily do "what everybody does," and where unfortunate suggestions by adults are rarely made.

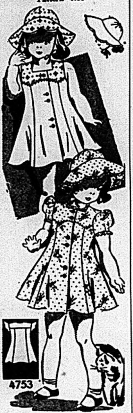
Dainty Summer Outfit For Tot

Pattern 4753



By Anne Adams

Even a big-as-a-minute girl leads a busy life during the summer months—and here's a clever style to keep pace with her activities. Pattern 4753 by Anne Adams makes a frock, a sun-dress and a bonnet. You'll like the simple panelled lines; the convenient front buttoning. The all-around yoke goes into spirited scallops in front. You might use contrast for the yoke—the puffed or flared sleeves of the frock would be gay in contrast too. The sun-dress is made by omitting the sleeves and cutting the square front neckline lower. Top off either style with a scallop-brimmed hat.

Pattern 4753 is available in children's sizes 2, 3, 4, 6 and 8. Size 6, frock and bonnet, 2 3-8 yards 35-inch fabric and 5 1-4 yards lace edging; sun-frock and bonnet, 1 3-8 yards 35-inch fabric, 7-8 yard contrast and 2 yards ric-rac.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Send your order to The Ontario Intelligencer Pattern Department, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont.

Free Mines Of Beauty Wealth

Gene Tierney has both beauty and charm.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PLAIN Jane will be happier if she realizes that she can create the illusion of beauty; it has been done by clever girls time and again. A few slick tricks and there you are, lining up with the pulchritude chorus.

If the fairy godmother has not bestowed beautifully chiseled features, ambrosial locks divinely lovely eyes and a graceful figure, one can compensate for the loss by cultivating gentle manners and a musical voice. Good taste in dress is a factor in the composition of attractive appearance. The alert mentality, combined with good nature and charming wit, will set any girl apart from the crowd; certainly these qualities make a stronger appeal for popularity than physical charm.

Importance of Vitality

Vitality and animation are beauty wealth. The woman who would create the illusion of beauty should abide by the laws of health, and keep in tip top form. She must have a balance of activity and rest, get regular hours of sleep. She must, above everything else, have perfect control over her emotional life, never let the old nervous system go whizz-bang to make other people jittery.

Her interests should be various. If she loves good books and outdoor life she will have interesting subjects for conversation.

Beauty is largely a matter of expression. Amiability shows itself in the smiling uplift of the lip corners, the jolly sparkle in the eyes, the pose of the head, the graceful movements of the body. The human face is the screen sheet for the radiation of thought. What goes on inside your tete is advertised on your countenance.

Responsiveness, friendliness, ease of manner are attributes of charm. They can all be cultivated don't cost a nickel. Within every intelligent woman's reach there are mines of beauty wealth. All she has to do is encourage them.

Usage of Long-Stemmed Goblets; How Salad Forks Are Used

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Recently I received a gift of a set of very lovely water goblets with long stems. I have been told that such goblets are for use only at formal dinners. Do you advise me to exchange them for goblets with short stems? The friend who gave them to me assures me that I may do this if I wish. Is it permissible to use the long-stemmed goblets at ordinary dinners? We do not, and probably will not, entertain at formal dinners.

2. Sometimes I see the salad fork placed next to the plate, and sometimes it is placed on the outside of the dinner fork. Please tell me which is correct.

A. R.

1. For all-around use you will undoubtedly find the short-stemmed goblets more adaptable. These you can use for your informal dining, for luncheon service, breakfast service, and for buffet service.

The use of the tall-stemmed goblets is not restricted to formal dinners; they are just as correct for informal dinners and for luncheon.

Why not keep and enjoy this set of goblets and use them at dinners of any kind? Then buy yourself some inexpensive white short-stemmed goblets (or footed tumblers) for other "utilitarian" occasions.

2. The place of the salad fork depends on when the salad is to be served. The silverpieces, as you know, should be placed in the convenient sequence of their use — that is, so that the guests may use first the piece farthest from the plate and "work toward the plate."

If the salad is to be served as the first course, as it is in some parts of the country, then the salad fork should be placed on the outside, farthest from the plate at the left. If, as is more usual, the salad is to be served as a course after the main course (or as an accompaniment of the main course) the salad fork should be next to the plate.

Daytime Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My husband and I are invited to a five o'clock church wedding with a reception immediately following. What shall I wear?

2. In answering the invitation, should I address my answer to the girl's mother and father, or just to her mother? (We do not know the girl's parents at all, but know the groom's parents very well.)

H. A.

1. To this day-time wedding and reception, wear what you would wear to a lunch or tea — a good-looking suit, or street-length dress and coat, or ensemble. Your accessories — hat, gloves, shoes, stockings — are important, so choose them carefully.

2. Address your reply to the ones who issued the invitation, the mother and father of the bride-to-be. The fact that you do not know the bride's parents makes no difference in sending your reply. You are invited in their name, and so you reply to them.

Causes Of Eyestrain Are Many

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Most laymen and some doctors believe eyestrain is a well defined condition having certain causes and showing certain characteristic symptoms, readily detectable by examination, and leading to permanent damage of the eyes if untreated. To the oculist on the other hand, eyestrain, although a convenient term, has less positive meanings. "To the patient it has a definite and satisfying meaning, but to the doctor who employs it, it is almost if not quite meaningless, and when he uses it he does not really commit himself in any way", according to an eminent oculist.

The symptoms ascribed to eyestrain are headache, sandy feeling and aching of the eyes, pulling sensation around the eyeball, unusual sleepiness, and redness of the globe and lids.

The causes are ascribed to refractive errors, muscle imbalances and faulty illumination. Any prolonged task involving the eyes and requiring concentration is potentially a source of eyestrain. Undoubtedly the mental attitude and the consciousness of the possibility of the existence of eyestrain, as well as the effort made to overcome the handicap have more to do with the symptoms than the actual visual error. People with very small refractive errors and low grade astigmatism have severe symptoms of eyestrain, whereas those with large errors have no eyestrain. In fact, the latter may have eyestrain only after wearing glasses for the first time.

Muscle Strain

Muscle strain is another subject which is not worked out entirely logically in the public mind. The fatigue of muscles from imbalance certainly feels as if it were in the orbit, but a number of observations are apparently irreconcilable with the idea of the muscular origin of discomfort from imbalance. If a person maintains an upward gaze for any length of time, he feels a discomfort about the eyes that may culminate in headache. But a patient with a paralysis of certain muscles of the eye, so that he cannot look up, may get headaches from the effort to use his paralyzed muscles. Again, the condition known as "nystagmus", in which the eyeballs are constantly moving backward and forward, or up, or down, is maintained for days without developing any discomfort or headache.

It is hard to reconcile these ideas with muscle strain. The suggestion is made by a research worker at the Harvard Medical School that these symptoms arise centrally: that is, more in the brain than in the eyeball itself.

Instead of being a simple entity, eyestrain is thus a complex process extending well into the psychological realm and is certainly not amenable to evaluation entirely by examination with lenses.

Certain it is that eyestrain itself does not result in any permanent disease of the eyes. Glasses are like crutches and important as is their service in this capacity, they have no further value so far as eyes are concerned. The common allegation that wrong glasses have ruined one's eyes, is entirely without foundation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

V. W.:—"Will you please tell in your column if toast is bad for one to eat"?

Answer—By no means. Where did that idea ever get started?

Fashion Flashes

IT'S A SEARCH but it is well-worth looking for a dinner dress that is different. A good choice might be that model made with a formal blouse of white thread lace high round neck, full sleeves gathered into wrist cuffs and lace band at the waist worn with an accordion-pleated skirt of crepe in green and white stripes.

BRIGHTEN THE SCENE with a gay hat. Shiny green leaves make a calot trimmed with a spray of palest pink camellias. Pale green lacy veiling.

FIRST CHOICE for town in summer is cool shantung. Black shantung is used for a smart frock and fitted jacket, both piped in red shantung. Dress has red zipper closing. Coat has big piped patch pockets.

BOUND FOR A GAY LIFE is a lovely white chiffon evening frock with enormous yellow polka dots, each dot edged with tiny ruffles of black lace. Made on simple shirtmaker lines.

PLEASE OBSERVE how much detail there is in some of the new daytime dresses. For instance a dress of black surah printed with red daisies has a criss-crossed bodice with collarless neckline and tiny V opening high at the throat. Short sleeves have dolman depth. Skirt is boxpleated in three wide tiers.

JUST RIGHT for town or country is a fitted coat in beige and green plaided wool. High, wide pointed revers in green wool and deep patch pockets made with plaid wool handled on the bias.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

TUBERCULOSIS STILL BIG MENACE DESPITE ADVANCES IN CURES

Seeing and hearing of fewer cases of tuberculosis these days, may cause us to fall into the error of believing that the fight against this disease is off. It isn't by far, and there is danger that some of the ground gained will be lost.

Not long ago I encountered the case of a family that had just lost its fourth child due to tb. What is still hard for the neighbors to understand was why the parents who remain in apparent normal health, had four children taken away by this disease, one after another. They had supposed that tb. is no longer a scourge, that it is always curable.

But the tubercle bacillus is as much of a menace as ever. The difference is that we now know more about how to deal with it once it is discovered.

It is still likely to be in the advance stages before it is discovered because it can exist in the body for a considerable length of time without creating any disturbance whatever or causing any symptoms. Then one day, when the victim is run down, perhaps a series of colds has sapped his resistance, the bacilli begin to work.

Tuberculosis is a very stealthy disease. It doesn't strike out in the open like measles or small pox. It creeps quietly upon the victim with little warning. The first symptoms the victim will show are usually four — he tires easily; he loses weight; he suffers from indigestion and loss of appetite; he has a cough that hangs on and on.

Sometimes the first symptom is the spitting of blood. If there is blood in the sputum and it is accompanied by loss of weight, nervousness, poor sleeping habits, take warning. The examination and advice of a good doctor is needed urgently.

Tubercle bacilli causes all the trouble; it is a very minute germ. It may enter the body on specks of dust, or on the tiny drops of moisture distributed by a sufferer when he coughs or sneezes or in many other ways. These tubercle bacilli will live for several hours if conditions are at all moist and favorable to them. They die quickly in boiling water or exposed to the sunlight and fresh air.

One contact with the infection doesn't necessarily give us tb. If the germ goes to the stomach, it will likely be killed by the hydrochloric acid there. If it gets into the blood stream, then the white blood cells may destroy the germ or germs because that is their business. The body has many defences against such invaders, but the body must be strong and vigorous if it is going to resist continued attacks successfully.

If the germs manage to pass these defences, they soon find a place to take root and grow. Usually this is in the lung where the warmth and moisture is just to their liking. When they thus take root then we have infection.

But the body doesn't give up the struggle even then. The white blood cells are still on the hunt to find these enemies and when the germ takes a hold on the lung, these cells surround them with a sort of capsule. This small mass is called a tubercle and this gave the name to the disease, because to the observers a few thousand years ago, it looked like a small bulb. Inside this tubercle, the germs grow and multiply; they set to work to destroy the part of the lung around them; sometimes they perish from the onslought of the white cells. In the majority of cases the white cells win the battle and destroy the germs.

It would seem that with all these forces within the body working against it, tuberculosis would rarely get a foothold. And, indeed, cases of it would be very rare if education concerning it had continued to a point where reasonable precautions were commonly taken and adhered to.

But they are not, so we have tragedies such as the death of four children in one family, referred to above.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Thinks Husband Too Extravagant

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married two years, and we're so happy over an expectant visit from the stork. I worked for over a year after we were married, and had hoped to save enough to make a down payment on a little home in the suburbs. But now, since our good news, we just have to save every penny we can.

However, my husband who is a traveling man, insists upon bringing me home expensive gifts every time he returns from a business trip. The last time he brought me an expensive piece of jewelry, I told him that we'd have to save our money if we're ever to get on. We'll have to be practical rather than sentimental. But he felt terribly hurt. Now I'm wondering what would be the best plan.

Happy Wife

Most of the letters which are written to this column by wives, both young and old, are so different from yours, that I find it hard to agree with you on the question of being practical. It's so delightful for a man to remember his wife as if she were his sweetheart. I hope you will not be too severe with him.

Another Girl Dates Her Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going steady with a young man. He tells me that one of the girls in his office has asked him to go to a dance with her. This affair is given by her lodge. He asked me whether I'd care if he went, and I, not wishing to appear selfish, said I wouldn't mind if he took her.

But, after thinking it over, I really don't believe it's going to look right as some of my friends will be there. What would you suggest in this matter?

W. T.

I think you were a good sport to tell the boy friend you didn't mind if he took this young lady to a dance. If she knew this young man was your special property, it would have been better taste if she had asked someone else.

Of course, a good deal depends on what is meant by going "steady." In some parts of the country, it means a positive engagement; in other parts, only a temporary arrangement — that for the time being a boy or girl has selected a special friend and intends to be loyal to him or her as the friendship lasts.

Wants to Treat Him to a Movie

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend and I are 18 years of age. We both make a little money after school, but as his family isn't very well-to-do, he turns his money over to his mother. I keep mine for spending money. He never dates any other girl, but I go out occasionally with some of the other boys at school. However, I enjoy myself only when I'm with him.

What would you think of my asking him to go to a movie with me some time, and paying the expenses myself? He seems so unhappy at times, which I believe is because they're so poor.

Hetty

Have you ever thought that by showing so much interest in him you may be adding emotional troubles to those he already has? If you just wanted to be a good pal to him, the arrangement would be fine, because boys are happier when they enjoy good, wholesome friendships with girls. But if you introduce a love element into the life of a boy who seems to have the trouble of a grown man on his hands, it is certainly questionable what effect it might have on his happiness.

Winning Streaks Over for Cards And Indians Due To Poor Play; Detroit Tigers In Second Place

Cleveland Beaten by the Senators and Cards Are Stopped by Braves

DODGERS CELEBRATE

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Indians are at the cross roads today, their winning streaks shattered and their pursuers confronting them face to face.

After winning 11 games in a row the Indians tripped over Washington Senators yesterday 5-3 and the Cardinals' 10-game string was snapped at Boston by the Braves, 5-4. In each case errors were responsible for the defeat.

The Tribe was stopped through a two-base error by Ken Keltner, the talented third baseman, who booted a run to Washington the day before and nearly ended Cleveland's chain sooner. Yesterday he made sure.

Jim Bagby and Dutch Leonard were locked in a tight pitching duel with the score tied 2-2 at the start of the eighth. With two out the Senators loaded the bases on two singles and a walk. Then Keltner let a bounder by Ben Chapman go through him for two bases and two runs.

Detroit Tigers Second

In the only other American League game Detroit Tigers nursed their incipient winning streak to five games and moved into second place with a 7-4 conquest of the Yankees as a farewell gesture to Hank Greenberg.

The highest-paid, most valuable player in the American League is to be inducted into the army today and he paid his last respects to the 1941 baseball season by belting two home runs, the first he had hit in 15 games. Bruce Campbell also got a pair of round-trippers.

The Cardinals' defeat was more heartbreaking than the Indians', if possible, because they outhit the Braves 11-6 and had a two-run lead until the bottom fell out in a five-run fifth inning.

Dodgers Celebrate

The Dodgers celebrated their acquisition of Billy Herman by pummelling Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 with Dixie Walker getting two home runs, including one with the bases loaded to break a tie in the seventh and Herman, who had been batting .194 for Chicago Cubs, treating himself to a perfect day at bat with a double and three singles.

The Phillies pasted Cincinnati Reds with their sixth setback in seven games 4-2 as the veteran Cy Blanton bested Johnny Vander Meer in a pitching duel.

The Cubs were crushed for the 10th time in 12 games as New York Giants triumphed 5-3 on the four-hit hurling of old Carl Hubbell.

FRITZIE HANSON TO PLAY AGAIN

Spearhead of Winnipeg Blue Bombers to Assist Team for Another Year

Winnipeg, May 7—(CP) — Canada's gridiron galloping ghost, Fritzie (Twinkletoes) Hanson, a spearhead in Winnipeg Blue Bombers' attack for six years, will play again next fall, Manager Joe Ryan announced last night.

Hanson ran the Bombers to the Canadian Football Championship in 1935 by ghosting through Hamilton Tigers in the dying minutes to cinch an 18-12 decision and helped his mates duplicate against Ottawa Roughriders in 1939.

After that memorable game at Ottawa Hanson announced his retirement but last fall the lure of the game brought the pint-sized halfback back into the line-up late in the season.

Hanson showed up at Bombers' first spring workout Monday night but did not line-up for equipment. Last night Ryan said the former North Dakota state flash announced his intention to don the cleats again.

ROYALS COMPLETE TRIPLE PLAY ON JERSEY GIANTS

Win Over Jersey City Places Montreal Firmer in Second Place

LEAFS LOSE IN 9TH

(By the Associated Press)

Maybe it's the influence of the daffy Dodgers making itself felt, but everything seems to happen at once to Montreal Royals.

For instance, yesterday Royals lost two outfielders, found another and completed the first triple play of the International League season.

Charley Gilbert, on option from Brooklyn, prepared to wave goodbye to his Royal mates yesterday. He's going to join Chicago Cubs to complete payment for Billy Herman.

George Staller replaced him in the Royal's line-up, making his first start of the season, and blasted out two home runs to lead his mates to a 7-5 victory over Jersey City Giants.

The triple play bobbed up in the fifth inning, when third-baseman Roy Hughes speared a liner from Tony Cuccinello stepped on third to double Herschel Martin and then pegged to first to catch Syd Gordon, who had started down to second.

Given Firmer Hold

The victory gave Royals a firmer hold on second place in the standings but couldn't gain them any ground on the first-place Newark Bears who edged out Rochester, 6-5.

Leo Nonekamp's pinch homer in the ninth gave Bruins their third straight victory.

Buffalo Bisons moved into third place with an 8-3 conquest of Baltimore Orioles, while Syracuse Chiefs shoved Toronto Leafs deeper into the cellar, defeating them 4-2.

Buffalo pounded four Oriole pitchers for 14 hits to take a 2-0 lead in the series. Catcher Dixie Parsons led the hit-parade with a home run, double and single.

Frank Secory's ninthinning single with two out and the bases loaded, broke a 2-2 tie and gave the Chiefs their victory over the Leafs.

MAJOR ROOSEVELT RESIGNS

London, May 7 (CP)—Kermit Roosevelt resigned his commission as a major in the British army last night due to ill health.

Maj. Roosevelt son of the late United States President, Theodore Roosevelt entered the army as a machine-gun expert. He became ill soon afterward, in November, 1939, and was ill again in Egypt last September.

He was reported on April 14 to be considering an assignment to Canada to enlist volunteers for the Greek campaign then in progress.

SECOND SACKER THANKS TEACHER FOR HER HELP

Benny McCoy Transformed by Changing His Batting Technique

TRYING TOO HARD

Philadelphia, May 7 (AP)—"Thanks lady, you helped a lot."

That's Benny McCoy's message to the unknown Pennsylvania school teacher whose letters helped transform him from a $65,000 flop into what appears a sound investment for the Philadelphia Athletics.

Baseball's prize lemon last year, Benny took heart from the school ma'am's encouragement, put in some straight and critical thinking during winter and changed his batting technique.

Now he's a confident second sacker sporting a .333 batting average which ranks among today's American loop leaders. That's a good piece from his .257 last season not to mention the 33 errors that brought trade talk galore.

Matter of fact, it's no longer Benny "the bust" but a determined young blond who's made a new start toward proving the $45,000 bonus Connie Mack handed him to sign wasn't money thrown away. Ditto his two-year contract at $10,000 per each.

"A year ago I was trying too hard," laments McCoy. "I wanted to make good—so badly that I was swinging at everything that came near the plate."

Just about the time his deflation hit the terrific stage came all kinds of letters from people he never heard of.

"There was one in particular I kept," said blue-eyed Benny. "That was from a school teacher. She prodded me to fight harder, to stick out my chin and prove I could play ball.

"Well, I saved that letter. I never did meet this lady. All I knew was that she taught sixth grade and that what she told me was for my own good."

If the teacher is still interested, Benny wishes she'd come out and see him play because "I'd sort of like to tell her 'Thanks lady, you helped a lot.' "

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken I. Colling

Seeking to learn why southpaw catchers are so scarce, Henry McLemore, United Press sports writer, went to Bill Dickey of the Yankees for an explanation and received a surprising answer. Bill didn't understand the reason either and, in fact, believes a lefthanded receiver would have an advantage over the righthander.

"Why aren't there any lefthanded catchers?" McLemore asks. "Answer that one and you'll solve one of baseball's queerest riddles. Too, you'll bring peace of mind to Bill Dickey, star catcher of the New York Yankees. Bill has wondered why there aren't any southpaw receivers. He wishes that he were lefthanded; says it would have made him a finer catcher.

"There is an unwritten law in baseball that a lefthanded fellow just mustn't try to catch, Bill told me. I wonder why? I asked Bill why he thought lefthanders would make better catchers, all things being equal.

"For lots of reasons," answered the big Arkansas fellow. "Take the actual catching of the ball from the pitcher. Most pitchers are righthanders, right? Okay, and what kind of ball do they throw most of the time? A curve, and how do their curves break? Over the plate to the right of the catcher. A lefthander's mitt would be right there. He could just sit down and pick 'em off all day. No awkward shift to his right. It would make him surer and save him lots of effort.

"For the handling of bunts, a lefthanded catcher would again have the advantage. Take those bunts down the third base line," Dickey said. "A lefthanded catcher would be in a position to throw to first base when he picked up the ball. No turning and getting in line to throw. The same goes for bunts in front of the plate or toward first base. The southpaw would have the advantage. I'm telling you that gives a lefthander and a righthander the same amount of skill and the lefthander will be the best catcher. I wish I were a southpaw."

For those sticklers of sport facts here are some concrete figures: Canada occupies an enviable position in the realm of sporting activities. With abundant forests and streams at the disposal of the hunter and angler it provides an inexhaustible source of recreation and pleasure. In other branches of sport also there are abundant facilities for indulgence in health exercise, both indoor and outdoor, for young and old of both sexes, all the year round. In 1939, manufacturers in Canada produced the requisite equipment, supplies and accessories to the extent of over two million dollars, in addition to which over three-quarters of a million dollars were imported.

Principal types of equipment and supplies produced in Canada in 1939 were as follows: baseball equipment and supplies, $181,781; billiard, bowling and football equipment, $288,124; golf equipment, $482,400; hockey equipment, $170,369; skiing equipment, $252,904; tennis and badminton equipment, $406,757; fishing tackle, $141,146; gymnasium apparatus, $19,656; miscellaneous equipment, including lacrosse, basketball, croquet, etc., $97,847. Bicycles, skates, firearms and ammunition are not included in this survey.

Remember when Lou Ambers, making the first defence of his world lightweight title, gave the veteran Tony Canzoneri the worst licking of his career, four years ago tonight, before a crowd of 11,000 fans in Madison Square Garden in New York.

Sport Spice — Now they suggest Los Angeles be included in the National Hockey League set-up .... Next they'll suggest "breakfast in London and lunch with Shirley Temple"....Hank Greenberg drove out two home runs as he bade farewell to the Detroit Tigers and the American League yesterday.... Hammerin' Hank is in the army now....After winning ten straight the St. Louis Cardinals ran into an abrupt snag and were beaten 5-4 by the Boston Braves.... The Tigers made a clean sweep of their series with the Yankees by winning 7-4 yesterday and now the McCarthymen move over to Cleveland for an important series.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 7—(AP)—Larry MacPhail and two Johns Hopkins doctors have applied for patents on Brooklyn's new baseball safety caps. . . . A source close to the Nova Camp says a Nova-Joe Louis fight has been signed and sealed for the Yankee Stadium Wednesday, Sept. 17 at $27.50 tops. (No comment from Mike Jacobs). . . . Don Budge's entry into the laundry business may be complicated a bit by the fact he has received his draft questionnaire. . . . White Sox now have a manager, coach and four players who received their early tutoring from Connie Mack.

Steve Webber, who popped the late Huey Long at the Sands Point Bath Club a few years back, has returned to the fight racket as manager of Hobo Williams. . . . Lots of guessing going on as to how much dough the Cubs got in the Herman deal. . . . Jimmy Wilson has rescinded the ban on poker playing among the Cubs so long as the boys stick to 10 and 25-cent limits.

Bad hand with names.

Connie Mack calls the new Yankee shortstop "Riz-i-too," and the Yankee rookie pitcher, "Boneham." . . . Some say Mr. Baseball swapped Dario Lodigiani to the White Sox because he couldn't learn to pronounce his name. . . . And to this day, Mr. Mack still calls his great ex-catcher Mickey "Cork-ran."

RESIGNS ARMY TO JOIN NAVY

Montreal, May 7 (CP)—Lt.-Col. John H. Molson, Officer Commanding the 3rd Battalion of the Black Watch (R.H.R.) of Canada has resigned his commission and has been accepted by the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve with the rank of Lieutenant, it was learned last night.

Member of a well-known Montreal family, Lt. Molson, 45, is a keen yachtsman. It is understood his knowledge of the sea brought about the decision to leave the army. He will be on loan from the R.C.N.V.R. to the Royal Navy.

He is married and has four children.

AT THE BELLE

"That Hamilton Woman"

In launching "That Hamilton Woman!" his first Hollywood production and his most ambitious picture to date, Alexander Korda selected Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier the most glamorous couple in the world to play the stellar roles in this great romance. "That Hamilton Woman!" which closes a highly successful engagement of four days at the Belle tonight, unfolds on the silver screen one of the most stirring and unforgettable love stories of all time, the romance of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson.

The Belle News of the Day and "Golden Eggs," a funny Walt Disney color cartoon precede the feature attraction.

"The Trial of Army Dugan"

A new team—one of screendom's most popular young leading men and one of its most rapidly rising young leading ladies—Robert Young and Laraine Day—is presented in the stirring courtroom drama, "The Trial of Mary Dugan," which comes next to the Belle Theatre.

Young portrays a desperate young lawyer who must depend upon his professional skill to save his sweetheart from the gallows. The actor comes to the role direct from smash hit performances in "The Mortal Storm" and "Western Union," acclaimed by fellow-workers in the motion picture industry as the outstanding young actress of 1940, Miss Day adds to such successes as "My Son My Son" and "Foreign Correspondent," in the title role of the new picture. As the bewildered little stenographer who is accused of murder, she is said to play the most dramatic role of her career.

The picture is based on Bayard Veiller's celebrated Broadway success. Heading a hand-picked supporting cast are Tom Conway, Frieda Inescourt, John Litel, Marsha Hunt, Henry O'Neill, Sara Haden, Francis Pierlot and the comic Marjorie Main.

"Ride, Kelly, Ride, Exciting Film.

The thrilling story of a boy, a girl and a thoroughbred that wouldn't be beaten is told in "Ride, Kelly Ride." And all advance reports indicate that patrons of the Belle Theatre will be cheering for them when the 20th. Century-Fox film is shown as the companion feature attraction.

With Eugene Pallette, Marvin Stephens, Rita Quigley and Mary Healy heading the featured cast, "Ride, Kelly, Ride" depicts the exciting experiences of a boy who becomes an outstanding jockey.

"Battle of Brains" is the title of the latest of the popular Canada Carries on series to be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Buck Privates"

The biggest laugh in screen history, "Buck Privates," is making history at the Capitol. Never have the citizens of Belleville laughed so long and loud, with the women outdoing the men in their hysterical delight.

No other picture that comes to memory can compare to "Buck Privates" for long and continued laughter and many are returning to the theatre to see the picture again because of the numerous parts in the dialogue they missed while laughing the first time they saw it.

The comedy and fun is carried out by Bud Abbott and Lou Costello with the able assistance of the screen veteran, Nat Pendleton. The harmony singing of the Andrews Sisters adds a novelty touch to the entertainment and other well-known Hollywood featured players are Lee Bowman, Alan Curtis and Jane Frazee.

The whole programme is one long loud laugh from start to finish including a colored cartoon and an amusing travelogue and another hilarious short subject starring Elsa Maxwell and Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom, "The Lady and the Lug."

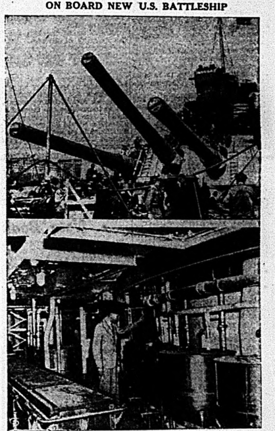
President Dedicates Wilson's Birthplace

Stating that the United States was "ever ready to fight again for the preservation of democracy," President Roosevelt dedicated as a national shrine the birthplace of World War President Woodrow Wilson at Staunton, Virginia. Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, is shown as he congratulated President Roosevelt at the conclusion of his dedication speech.

ON BOARD NEW U.S. BATTLESHIP



The 35,000-ton U.S.S. Washington, sister ship of the recently-commissioned U.S.S. North Carolina, is being rushed to completion at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, with commissioning scheduled for May 15—almost a year and six months ahead of schedule. Here are scenes on board newest U.S. fighting giant. TOP, workmen throng the after-deck, busily going about their tasks under frowning muzzles of the three 16-inch guns of the after turret. BOTTOM, food for the officers and crew will come from this gigantic galley. This sea-going kitchen has to be big, meals for 1,500 men must come from here.

Lovely Irene Dunne who is co-starred with Cary Grant in the comedy-drama you'll call your best movie entertainment treat of the year, "Penny Serenade," coming to the McCarthy Theatre screen all next week.

GERMAN AGENTS BELIEVED ACTIVE IN FR. MOROCCO

Chief Objective is to Cut Any Retreat of Vichy Gov't. to N. Africa

SPREAD PROPAGANDA

London, May 6 (CP)—Increasing activity by German agents in French Morocco was reported today in diplomatic circles, these sources declaring that they believed the chief German objective was to cut off any possible retreat of the Vichy government to French North Africa.

The possibility was cited that Marshal Petain and his following might choose to leave continental France if he rejects collaboration demands of Hitler.

Two other German objectives, it was said, were to spread axis propaganda and prepare the ground for establishment of bases to be used in case of German attack on Gibraltar.

These sources declared there has been a steady infiltartion of Nazi agents in French possessions of North and West Africa since the failure of Gen. Charles De Gaulle's Free French expedition to Dakar, Senegal, Sept. 23, 1940.

Clement Attlee Answers Question On Imperial Council

London, May 6 (C.P. Cable) — Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons today that when Prime Minister Churchill last week turned down a suggestion for an Imperial War Cabinet he was "replying to a specific question" and "did not deal with the general question for the future."

Mr. Attlee was answering Sir Hugh O'Neill, Conservative, who asked if Mr. Churchill's "emphatic 'no' was not the last word" on the question.

When Sir Hugh, recalling the visit to London of Prime Minister R. G. Menzies of Australia, asked if any other Dominion prime minister could be expected, Mr. Attlee said Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand, is expected shortly.

He did not answer a query by Edgar Granville, National Liberal, whether all the Dominion prime ministers would be invited and encouraged to visit Britain.

Injured Flier Hopes To Fly Again In Short Time

A message was received today by the Rev. Dr. J. Semple, of Bridge Street United Church, from Mrs. Joseph Cather, of this city, who recently hurried to Regina on news that her son, Leading Aircraftman Ewart Cather had been injured in a landing accident at that city. The letter says: "We arrived here late Thursday evening after making a good connection in Winnipeg and were allowed to see Ewart. We found him very cheerful and hoping to fly again in three months. He is in a huge cast which is most uncomfortable as the weather has turned very hot. There are no injuries whatever except the three broken vertebrae."

Mrs. Cather talked by telephone with the doctor who is attending her son. The young flier is receiving every possible care and Mr. and Mrs. Cather and their friends are very hopeful of his complete recovery.

A week ago last Sunday morning Rev. Dr. Semple was reading the names of the roll of honor of the church being dedicated and explained when he came to the name of Ewart Cather that the young man had been injured in an accident while flying and that Mrs. Cather was on her way to see him.

Friends of the young man wish the young flier a good recovery.

PRIVATE BILLS ON THURSDAY

Motion by Prime Minister Gives Members Chance to Introduce Bills

Ottawa, May 6—(CP) — Private bills, en masse, will enjoy their hour in the Commons on Thursday when, under a motion entered by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, they will be the order of the day.

Thirty-five bills will be up for second reading and the Prime Minister's motion suggests that the procedure required for their final adoption, when reported from the committees to which they will be referred, be complied with at a later date to be fixed on motion.

In carrying out this order of business, procedure will be given unopposed bills.

All but six of the bills are for the granting of divorces. Debate was adjourned last week on motion for second reading of an act respecting the British Columbia Telephone Company.

J. H. Blackmore, New Democracy leader, is sponsor of an act to incorporate the Alberta Provincial Bank. A Senate bill concerns an act to incorporate the General Security Insurance Company of Canada and a second bill from the Upper House is an act respecting the Ontario and Minnesota Power Company, Ltd.

The other two private bills respect the Wawanesa Mutual Insurance Company and the incorporation of the Ukrainian Catholic Mission of the Most Holy Redeemer.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and ma said to pop, Oh deer, I've got one of my headakes and it shows every simptom of getting worse. Willyum, I wish you'd stop in at the drugstore and have them send around a bottle of Frizzmoleen right away. When I get one of my headakes Fizzmoleen is absilutely the only cure-all, she said.

You shall have a bottle post haste and may your headake wish it had never been born, pop said.

And when I came home for luntch ma had her hat on going out, and I said, G, your headake looks better, ma.

Yes it is, no thanks to your father, ma said. He forgot all about that Fizzmoleen the moment he left the house but fortunately my headake just seemed to fade away under its own power. Such a man, I'm just itching to hear what he has to say for himself, she said.

Meaning pop, only he didn't have anything to say for himself except about being hungry, and ma said, Well I'm very glad to know you have a healthy stummick and I'm sure you'll be partly relieved to hear that I have a healthy head.

Was enything a matter with it, I mean oh yes, how's your headake, I mean that's fine that's great, was a little worried about that headake, so it's all better heh? pop said, and ma said, Yes, the Fizzmoleen worked wonders.

Yes, you cant beat old Frizzmoleen for a headake, it's good you had some, pop said, and ma said, Oh, I didn't even need any, the very thought of it banished my headake like the lost snows of Africa.

What the dooce is all this, are you getting psykick? pop said, and ma said, Oh, come and eat your dinner before a brick wall falls on you and lets in a faint glimmer of comprehension.

Oh, by the way, I forgot to stop and have that stuff sent around this morning, pop said, and ma said, I cant believe it, you must be exaggerating.

Being sourcastic.

Britain's Exports Scarcely Affected During Past Year

London May 7 (CP) — Great Britain's exports in 1940, the first full year of the war, scarcely were affected by German submarines, Harcourt Johnstone parliamentary Secretary for the Department of Overseas Trade, told a London audience Tuesday.

In 1940 the total of exports to help finance the nation's war effort amounted to 413,000,000 pounds ($1,837,000,000), as compared with 417,000,000 pounds ($1,855,000,000) in 1938, the last full peace year, he disclosed.

"Britain cannot go gaily on without buying goods from America," he told his audience. "After all, it is lease and lend (referring to the shipments of war material from America), not a gift."

EIRE-CANADA CANADA-EIRE

Dublin, May 7 — (CP) — Imports to Eire from Canada rose substantially in value during 1940 and the flow was fairly well maintained through the year although there was some interruption in direct shipping service, James Cormack, Canadian trade commissioner, reported. Exports to Canada also increased sharply in value, but their total value was roughly only five per cent of imports from the Dominion.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 7 —(CP)— Prices were mostly unchanged on Toronto exchange this afternoon. Turnover was up to 117,000 shares.

South East Petroleum, a penny oil, firmed slightly to 3 3-4 cents with heavy trading.

Bell Telephone weakened 1 to a new low at 139 and Consumers Gas was down 3 to a new low at 114. The market was stronger for Ford A, Walkers Common, Dominion Foundries, Industrial Alcohol and a few other Industrials.

Definite weakness was displayed by Wright-Hargreaves. It sold down 15 to 5.05, its low mark in nearly a year. Kerr-Addison, Dome, Teck Hughes and MacLeod-Cockshutt were stronger. Losses of 1-2 point were boarded by Nickel and Smelters.

WALL STREET

New York, May 7—(AP)—Traders cashed some quick profits from the stock market today, but the resultant sag in prices was only fractional and scattered.

Rising trends continued to develop here and there toward the fourth hour, with non-ferrous metals contributing firmness to the dealings.

Among the more active issues aiding steadiness were General Motors, Bethlehem, Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting, Kennecott, Woolworth, United Aircraft and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Canadian issues were mixed with Canadian Pacific up 1-8 and Distillers Seagram down 3-8. Dome was unchanged. In the Bond market Canada 4s were unquoted.

HOLDING ONE HILL COSTS ITALIANS 15,700 MEN

Monastero Key to Tepelini and Had to be Held at All Cost

REDUCED TO RUBBLE

By RICHARD G. MASSOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berat, Albania, via Rome, May 5 (Delayed)—(AP)—Countless cemeteries and gaunt broken trees standing starkly on devastated hillsides testify graphically to the bitterness with which Italian and Greek armies fought almost inch by inch for southern Albania.

During a 800-mile tour of the late battlefront, around shell-torn forests pock-marked by thousands of shell holes, I saw numerous small cemeteries of a dozen or so fairly-fresh graves each.

A total of 15,000 men and 700 officers were killed or wounded in holding one hill, known as Monastero, against the Greeks during January and February before two companies of Italians sacrificed their lives to drive a wedge that was the forerunner of a finally successful offensive (launched after Germany assaulted Greece.)

Scene of Bloody Fighting

The particular hill that was the scene of this bloody fighting is known as Monastero because at its top stood a monastery of two or three buildings and a chapel.

There now, however, is only a pile of dust and rubble to which the buildings were reduced by Greek artillery fire.

The hill lies about 40 miles south of Berat alongside a highway between two mountain ranges where Greek divisions were stopped on their drive to the north.

Because of its position, this hill was the key to Tepeleni, which, in turn, was the key to Valona and perhaps Albania's capital, Tirana.

Had the Greek army been able to drive the Italians from the hill and the nearby territory, it could have swept them to the sea. Thus, the reason for the stubborn Italian resistance and even the sacrifice of the two companies of men which turned the tide of battle is apparent.

BRITISH DEFENCES

Casualties Feared Heavy

Casualties in the attack on the Clyde area were feared to be heavy, reports from Scotland said. Business premises were described as considerably damaged and many families were left homeless.

The sixth successive night of bombing along the Mersey created another tough job for firemen, many of whom had been working under high pressure for almost a week, but they confined the fires mostly to commercial buildings.

Besides starting large fires at Hamburg, docks at Le Havre and "other objectives on the coasts of enemy-occupied territory" were bombed.

"Many Fires" Started

The Air Ministry news service said "many fires" were seen during the raid on Hamburg through openings in the clouds covering the German city. The brilliant flashes of "heavy high explosive" were reflected against the clouds, it added.

"Attacks were made on several other towns in northwest Germany," the service continued, "and in a patch of clear sky over Kiel the crew of one aircraft bombed a large industrial building on the north bank of the Kiel Canal and set it well alight."

It said the Hamburg attack was made by a large force which encountered German night fighters, resulting in several combats in bright moonlight "far above the foul weather" nearer the earth.

The service said one British bomber entered a cloud, evading three fighters. German bombers en route home from raiding Britain also were encountered and two of them were believed damaged in the ensuing shooting.

While strong flights of German bombers centred a sharp assault on the Clydeside and paid a return visit to Liverpool and Northern Ireland, Royal Air Force bombers made the north German port of Hamburg their main objective.

A communique said a large force of R.A.F. bombers participated in the attack, starting large fires. Docks at Le Havre and "other objectives on the coasts of enemy-occupied territory" also were bombed.

Supply Ship Bombed

British planes also returned to the attack by daylight. Flying abreast and escorted by fighters, the bombers were seen roaring over the Strait of Dover toward the French coast this morning at barely 1,000 feet.

The government said the Nazis' second consecutive night attack on Clydeside was on "a fairly heavy scale", causing an undisclosed number of casualties and "considerable" property damage.

The Merseyside dock area of Liverpool was blasted for the sixth straight night but the toll in lives and property was not expected to match that of the previous raids.

No Serious Casualties

Belfast authorities reported light attacks over northern Ireland in the hours before dawn but added: "So far no news of serious casualties has been received."

Smaller flights of bombers fanned out over northeast England, East Anglia, the southwest counties and elsewhere on the island, but casualties and damage was nowhere extensive, the British said.

R.A.F. night fighters were credited with shooting down eight raiders. Anti-aircraft fire accounted for a ninth.

At Belfast it was announced that Nazi airmen, on the third night raid in succession against Northern Ireland, dropped only incendiaries which did little damage.

Authorities there warned against picking up any devices resembling fountain pens, pencils or shaving cases found in the streets, saying they might contain explosives.

War Secretary Says Sub Warfare Illegal, Inhuman

Speech Interpreted As Notice To Nazis Of Limits To U. S. Tolerance

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 7 —(CP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson's radio speech calling for use of the United States navy in the battle of the Atlantic today increased belief in political circles here that some such action is receiving government consideration.

It was considered significant that Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's press secretary, told newspapermen last night it could be assumed that Stimson had discussed the address in advance with the President.

The War Secretary was the fifth cabinet member in recent weeks to urge more vigorous action to guarantee success of the aid-to-Britain plan. He was the first, however, to advocate use of the navy, or indeed any specific course.

Stimson declared that Germany had extended the zone of her unrestricted sea warfare into the western hemisphere.

He also assailed the character of German submarine warfare in the North Atlantic, calling it "illegal" and a "violation of law and humanity."

The U-boat tactics, he said, were identical with those of 1917 when they "caused the President and Congress to take up arms in defence of the freedom of the seas."

The charge that Germany had extended the unrestricted zone to western hemisphere waters and "forbidden us to enter" was the first assertion to come from a high administration official.

Parallel to 1917

Stimson's mention of the doctrine of freedom of the seas coupled with the parallel he drew between U-boat warfare in 1917 and 1941 was interpreted in some quarters as veiled notice from the administration to Germany that there were limits to what the United States would tolerate.

Senate opponents of administration foreign policy said they regarded Stimson's address and Senator Claude Pepper's speech in the Senate yesterday as trial balloons to ascertain the country's sentiment toward active involvement in the war. Pepper, Florida Democrat, urged joint action by the United States and British fleets.

"After speeches by the President and (Wendell) Willkie," Senator Gerald Nye (Rep.-North Dakota) told reporters, "now come Pepper and Stimson. Today the organized interventionists will flood Washington with messages supporting them.

Stimson, who made no mention of convoys spoke with gravity last night of Britain's imperiled lifelines and declared that Germany was making her peak efforts to sever those supply routes.

In the face of this threat, he said, the lease-lend program with all its enormous appropriations "is not sufficient." The question, as he saw it, was the delivery to Great Britain of the supplies the United States was shipping.

"If today," he continued "the navy should make secure the seas for the delivery of our munitions to Great Britain, it will render as great a service to our own country and to the preservation of American freedom as it has ever rendered in all its glorious history.

Render All Oceans Secure

"Supplementing the efforts of the British navy, it can render secure all of the oceans, north and south, west and east, which surround our continent. In that way it can help to hold in check the onward rush of the tide of Nazism until the other defence forces of all the democracies are completed...

"If we should allow the present strategic moment to pass until the power of the British navy is gone, the power of our navy would become merely a secondary power instead of the decisive and winning power in the world contest.

"After providing for billions worth of munitions to carry on the defence of our freedom, and while we hold in our hands the instrument ready and able to make all these steps effective, shall we flinch and permit these munitions to be sunk in the Atlantic ocean?"

Stimson, it was noted, made no specific suggestions as to how the navy should be used. Some informed sources considered this significant, for they believe that convoys may not be the best system under present war conditions, and that more effective tactics could be worked out if the United States fleet and the Royal Navy were operating jointly.

The proposals for naval assistance however, was interpreted in some quarters as an indication that the recent far-flung extension of United States navy patrols in the Atlantic had failed thus far to help Britain cope with the assaults on her shipping lanes. This might mean major developments have occurred in the past 10 days, it was said, for previously London officials had hailed the patrol extension as a decision of "tremendous" importance.

Attorney Gives View

Washington, May 7 —(AP)— Attorney General Robert Jackson of the United States declared today that "in the presence of threats of our national prestige and integrity our people will demand increased emphasis on the rights of the commonwealth."

When public pressure develops for priority of the "security of the state over liberty of the individual," he told the American Judicature Society in a prepared address, it is a delicate task to keep public confidence and at the same time steer a course "that will be approved by the sober second thought of the nation."

The Department of Justice, he asserted, is laboring under dual responsibilities: To protect the peace and dignity of the commonwealth, and "to protect and respect the rights of individuals to do many of the very things that may be steps in the process of undermining the stability of the commonwealth."

"It is certainly an open question," he said at one point in his address, "whether a liberty to abuse liberty does not generate a danger to liberty itself."

Urging the legal profession to help in "putting our legal defences in order," Jackson declared: "It is of utmost importance that our laws be made as effective as possible within constitutional and proper policy limitations."

Situations Cited

He cited a number of situations he said should be remedied by changes in the law.

"We have over 6,000 deportable aliens, against whom proceedings have been completed and deportation orders are outstanding," he related. "But, because of transportation break-down or because of refusal of their native countries to accept their return, they are still here. They are not only here, they are free.

"They include some bad criminals and a considerable number of Communists proven to have advocated overthrow of our government by force and violence. But we can cite to the courts no statute to authorize us to do anything whatever with them when deportation fails. Hence they are turned loose in Habeas Corpus proceedings and resume their evil ways in our society."

He called attention to the arrest of "foreign agents for doing acts detrimental to the country."

"The constitution demands bail," he said. "A little bail is fixed, put up by the help of their governments, and they walk out of the courtroom and return to their jobs of producing discord in America."

MOTHER DENIES

Clear Story of What Happened

The mother wept as she was being taken to the police station. Police said she was not informed immediately of the death of the child. Her husband appeared dazed by the affair but police said he told a clear story of what happened.

Police said that eye-witnesses told them that the baby, named Lloyd, was being wheeled along Seaton Street in a carriage. His cries caused the father to pick up the child, while the mother took over wheeling the carriage.

While they were walking, these eye-witnesses told police, an argument occurred as the father was attempting to quiet the child. It was then, police said they were told, that the mother snatched the baby from the father's arms.

The baby was unconscious when police arrived and died at the Sick Children's Hospital without regaining consciousness. Coroner Dr. W. J. O'Hara said that the child suffered a badly-fractured head and an injury to the brain. "There is no doubt the injury was caused by a violent blow", he added.

An autopsy will be performed by Dr. I. H. Erb, Provincial Pathologist.

Wholesale Price Of Pork Products Up Cent A Pound

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—Wholesale merchants here said last night a one cent a pound increase in the price of pork product became effective in Ottawa Monday.

They said the increase could be attributed to an increase of one cent a pound in the price paid packers by the Canadian Bacon Board for bacon to be shipped overseas and to a seasonal demand for cooked meats.

The increase raised wholesale prices of leading pork products in Ottawa to: Smoked ham, 25 cents a pound; cooked ham, 38; breakfast bacon, 25; dressed hogs, 14; fresh pork loins, 22; and fresh pork shoulders, 17.

BRITISH FORCES

In the Libyan fighting around beleaguered Tobruk, the British command reported a successful attack on axis posts, but said operations again were hampered by a severe sandstorm.

In the Basra area, at the head of the Persian Gulf "the situation continues quiet and unchanged," said the communique. Habbaniyah is about 60 miles west of Baghdad, the capital, north of Basra.

A Royal Air Force communique said the post which Iraq forces had taken along the oil line, cutting off the flow of fuel to Britain's Eastern Mediterranean fleet, was occupied by British ground troops after the Iraqis "signified that they wished to surrender by waving white flags" when a British scouting plane approached.

(The post probably was the station at Rutba in the wastelands of Western Iraq which the British Command announced Monday had been seized by the Iraqis soon after fighting started last Friday.

Clear of Rebels

(How British ground troops reoccupied the station was not clear but possibly they were ferried there by transport planes. Rutba, halfway along the pipeline between Mosul and Haifa, is 320 miles northeast of Jerusalem in British-mandated Palestine, and 200 miles west of the British base at Habbaniyah.)

At Habbaniyah, pounded intermittently for five days by Iraq artillery on surrounding highlands, the communique described the situation as "much easier."

It said night patrols found the Iraqi had withdrawn from at least some of the highland positions and that the plateau south of the cantonment "is clear of rebels."

Many Guns Silenced

Communiques yesterday had said repeated R.A.F. bombardments of the Iraq positions had silenced many of the guns.

At Basra, where British soldiers have landed from the Persian Gulf the situation was said to be quiet.

(In a dispatch from Vichy, France, Reuters News Agency quoted an Iraq communique reporting that a "very violent battle ensued" when Iraq forces attacked the British at Basra and that "violent bombardment" of the Habbaniyah base caused extensive damage to munitions supplies and gasoline tanks.

(The communique said British planes bombed the pipeline post at Rutba and that transport planes which tried to land British troops at Hadissa were attacked and 20 British soldiers captured.

(London sources said that although Germany was expected to send arms and planes to Iraq troops there was no indication such help had arrived. These sources reported too, that Iraq had called to arms reservists of the classes of 1916 and 1918.)

GERMAN TROOPS

With the exception of one little village which apparently had been completely evacuated, we saw no traces of fighting. In this village, bombs had fallen and fires had burned and windows had been smashed. Otherwise, there was nothing to indicate this section had been a combat area only three weeks ago.

At an internment camp in Nis, where thousands of Serbs found themselves huddled together with some 250 Australians, and a few New Zealanders and Britons caught on the Yugoslav-Greek border, one Tommy commented: "Aren't they pitiful?"

German soldiers, marines and airmen have their daily rations brought to them directly from Germany. The chances of illness in these southern countries is so great that endless columns of supply trucks keep rolling southward even though the war is over in Yugoslavia.

A Soldier's Thought

Percy R. Thorn, the writer of the following lines, is a Belleville boy, a member of a military unit now in an Eastern Canada camp He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Thorn, 79 College Street.

We soon will be ready for over there,
Where bullets and shells fly through the air.
Our time will come when we will be
Like our comrades, across the sea.
We are all so willing to fight this war,
So we all will live in peace once more.
As I sit here writing the lines of this poem
I think of my loved ones happy at home.
We fight for democracy we all do seek
So the people in England may have a peaceful night's sleep.
The time will come when there will be no war,
Those Nazi guns no longer roar.
On our return we know we'll be Victorious for all who love democracy.

Natives Throw Stones

Vichy, France, (AP)—Reports reaching here today from Beirut, Lebanon, said that a crowd of natives had stoned windows of the British Consulate at Aleppo in a demonstration of sympathy with the Iraq rebels. Similar demonstrations were said to have been held in Beirut and Damascus.

Radio Highlights For Tonight

Radio listeners tonight will hear an address by Wendell Willkie from the Freedom Rally in New York City, by tuning in at 10.15 (DST) to CFRB or WGR; H. L. Beales of London will be the speaker on "Britain Speaks" at 11.15 (DST) over CBL.

GERMAN SEAMEN

Employed on Tankers

The seamen had been employed on various oil tankers and, as the vessels arrived in port, were replaced by American sailors. The Standard Oil Companies had no way of returning them to Germany, so they were being housed here at company expense.

Seventy-five immigration inspectors took part in the roundup, their warrants charging the seamen had violated the immigration laws of 1924 in overstaying their leave without permission.

The agents said sailors from passenger vessels were permitted to remain on American soil 30 days and those from freighters or other cargo ships 60 days.

Moved to Ellis Island

The prisoners were taken to the barge office in police patrol wagons and detective squad cars. After an immigration director questioned them, they were moved to Ellis Island.

Federal agents, coast guard patrolmen and border patrolmen, the latter brought down from the Canadian border, formed a protective ring as the prisoners walked into the ferry. As the last of the group boarded the boat, the coast guard line followed the boat side to prevent any possible escape.

BRITAIN INTENDS

ent had no right to prevent merchant vessels from going through the Dardanelles."

The Prime Minister added that "Turkey had no right whatever to stop German troops from going through the Dardanelles. To do so would be to quit their neutrality."

Forewarning of Invasion in Balkans

"So far as the German invasion of the Balkans is concerned, we had long and ample forewarning of what was in prospect," Mr. Churchill told the House. "It is three months since I stated publicly on the broadcast that the Bulgarian air fields were being occupied with the knowledge of Bulgarian government by advance parties and agents of the German air force.

Defends British Diplomacy

"Talk about our diplomacy being idle! Our diplomacy has never ceased for one moment to apprise countries of their danger and of perils that were coming on them and to urge that by common action alone could security and safety be attained."

"Looking back upon the course of events I can only feel that if we had again to tread that stony path even with the knowledge we possess today I for one would do the same thing again.

"That is the view of all my colleagues in the war cabinet and on the defence committee and I believe that view is almost universally sustained by the House."

There was an outburst of cheering.

Rejects Idea

Once more Mr. Churchill rejected the idea of a smaller war cabinet, stating that the present setup "works easily and effectively at present and I do not propose to make any changes in it until further advised."

To a suggestion that he be surrounded "by people who would stand up to me and say no,no, no," Mr. Churchill answered that "the difficulty is not to have more brakes put on the wheels; it is to get more impetus and force behind it."

Mr. Churchill told the House:

"We need a great deal more help from the United States and I expect we shall get it.

"We'll Come Through"

"I cannot conceive anyone who can doubt that victory will crown the great cause we serve.

"We have no need to fear the tempest. Let it roar, let it rage.

"We shall come through."

Again he was cheered loudly.

"It might be that the Germans will arrive in Iraq before we have crushed the revolt, in which case our task would be greater," Mr. Churchill warned, "or it might be that the revolt went off at half cock in consequence of our landing troops at Basra.

Help Iraqis to Get Rid of Dictator

"We intend to assist the Iraqis to get rid of their military dictator as soon as possible."

Mr. Churchill met former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha's criticism of production with this assertion:

"We are making every month now as many heavy tanks as there existed in the British army at the time the Right Honorable gentleman left the War Office and we shall very soon, before the end of this year, be producing double that.

"This takes no account of the immense production on foot in the United States."

The Prime Minister defended Mr. Eden's reticence about British dealings with Spain and Russia, asserting:

"I am not sure how these things that could be said about Spain could be touched on in a way which would be helpful to our affairs. Much might be said about Russia but I am not quite sure that we should gain any advantage by saying it and I am not quite certain we should receive any thanks from the Russian Soviet government."

Sad, Sorry, Squalid Tale of Vichy

He declared, likewise, that he saw no possible profit in dilating "at length upon the sad, sorry squalid tale of what is going on at Vichy."

The Prime Minister appeared restive under Mr. Lloyd George's prodding. The Welsh statesman lacked his old fire and his voice sometimes became inaudible.

Lloyd George's Remarks

"I thank God for Mr. Stimson's speech," Mr. Lloyd George declared, "but it is most important not to exaggerate what you are going to get, or, rather how quickly you are going to get it.

"America can do more. If she is going to enable us to catch up and then overtake Germany she has got to do infinitely more than any indication I have heard of up to the present moment."

James Forestall United States under-secretary of the navy, listened in the distinguished strangers' gallery. Ivan Maisky, the Russian ambassador also was present.

Attacks on Shipping

"Our most serious attack is the attack upon shipping," Mr. Lloyd George went on.

"It is clear from the changed attitude of President Roosevelt and, especially, from the remarkable speech of Mr. Stimson which appears today and which—though one dislikes these phrases, might well be described as an epoch-making deliverance—it is clear that they realize how grave the position is. In the last war, gravity was not evident at this stage."

(War Secretary Henry Stimson last night advocated use of United States warships to assure delivery of cargoes sent from the United States for Britain's aid.

Diplomatic Triumph in U.S.

"Our greatest triumph has been a diplomatic triumph —that is the work of Lord Lothian in the United States," Mr. Lloyd George declared.

The House broke into cheers at the name of the late British ambassador in Washington, now succeeded by Viscount Halifax.

Mr. Lloyd George continued:

"I have had experience of American war organizations. It is full of disappointments.

"Triumph of Peace"

"You must remember the United States has never had Europe's experience of preparing for wars with millions. They have very efficient arsenals but their mechanical triumphs have been triumphs of peace — inventing, improving, multiplying the weapons of peace.

"In the last war America put their fleet in the Atlantic, every boat, while Japan was guaranteeing the Pacific. What is Japan guaranteeing now? She is guaranteeing that she will take advantage of the first opportunity to wrest dominancy of the Pacific from America . . ."

Dig-for-Victory Campaign

Turning to the Dig-for-Victory Campaign, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"Men on the land have been taken away at a time when food is vital to the life of the country. Are factories fully equipped? Is the best use being made of our vigorous young men in factories? That is not the impression I got from a great many people in contact with them. There is general dissatisfaction and doubt about it . . .

"We must really have an end of the kind of blunders which have discredited and weakened us."

BOMBING

"The bombing seems to improve morale rather than weaken it," he said. Bombs came close to him, Mr. Menzies.

"They dropped about a dozen a few yards from my hotel one night, which I think was very discourteous of them. They do bounce you about, you know."

Mr. Menzies was asked if he had any personal message for Prime Minister Mackenzie King from Prime Minister Churchill.

"I am afraid not," he replied. "I represent only myself and the Australian government. Oddly enough I have never before met Mr. King. I will have much to talk over with him."

He said he could not throw any light on the issue of an imperial war cabinet. He would get the views of Mr. King on this subject during his present visit.

"I hope my consultations in London will be of value to Australia," he said. "That was the intention." However, he did not anticipate any radical change in Australia's war effort as a result of his visit to London.

Financed in Three Ways

Australia's war costs were being financed in three ways, Mr. Menzies said. As much as possible is raised by taxation which is now very high. Then as much as possible is borrowed from the people's savings and resources.

These sources were supplemented "by using the central bank credit" with regulations, operated by the price control system set up there days after the war started, to prevent inflation.

Although Australia's war expenditures had been "terrific" interest rates on government loans had dropped from slightly over four per cent at the start of the war to slightly more than three per cent at present.

PREMIER MENZIES OF AUSTRALIA NOW IN CANADA

Will Visit Australian Pilots and Groundmen Now Training in This Country

GIVEN WELCOME

Ottawa, May 7—(CP) — Prime Minister Menzies of Australia, fresh from a visit to Britain, arrived in Ottawa from New York by special plane today at 10.43 a.m. EDT.

Mr. Menzies was greeted by Prime Minister Mackenzie King as he stepped from a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber which had been flown to New York to carry him to Canada.

During his stay here the Australian Prime Minister will confer with Mr. King and see the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in operation, particularly as it affects young Australians who are being groomed in the Dominion for war flying overseas.

Mr. Menzies was accompanied by Frederick G. Shedden, Secretary of the Australian War Cabinet and John Storey, member of the Australian Aircraft Production Commission.

Given Hearty Welcome

Others who were on hand at Uplands Airport to meet the Australian visitor were Sir Shuldham Redfern, representing the Governor General, Air Minister Power, Sir William Glasgow, Australian High Commissioner to Canada and Air Vice-Marshal L. S. Breadner, Chief of the Air Staff, Royal Canadian Air Force.

Sir William was the first to greet Mr. Menzies and he immediately introduced the Australian Prime Minister to Mr. King.

The group posed for news photographs and Sir William jokingly said "They (the photographers) are a menace."

"Terrible, aren't they?" replied Mr. Menzies, smiling.

Later, speaking to Mr. King, the Australian leader said, "Well, we had an excellent journey."

Inspects Guard

Mr. Menzies inspected a guard of honor of the Royal Canadian Air Force, drawn from men stationed at Uplands.

They were all Canadians.

Afterwards he inspected the Australian student fliers at Uplands. They form about 15 per cent of the present student class at the air school.

Following this inspection he visited Group Capt. A. W. Curtis, officer commanding the Uplands station for refreshment before proceeding by car in to Ottawa proper to the office of the Australian High Commissioner.

ORDERS INQUIRY IN TWO DEATHS

Conant Says Analysis of Ether Used Showed Negative Report

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—Five-year-old Helen Corke of Sudbury district and Mrs. Levina Hamilton, 45, of Toronto died while under anaesthetic in Toronto Western Hospital Monday and Attorney-General Conant said he has ordered an inquiry.

Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario, will conduct the inquiry. Mr. Conant said an analysis of the ether used in operations on the girl and Mrs. Hamilton showed a negative report.

Committed For Trial On Armed Robbery

Kitchener, Ont., May 7 (CP)—John Charles Parkes and Joseph Feeney of Toronto were committed for trial when they appeared today before Magistrate J. R. Blake. Charges included armed robbery of the Bank of Nova Scotia at St. Jacobs, Feb. 27; armed robbery of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at St. Clements April 4; shooting with intent and theft of a car Feb. 27 and theft of another car at Brantford March 27.

Parkes was committed on all charges, preliminary hearing being waived on the St. Clements robbery charge and on the Brantford car theft charge. Feeney was committed on three charges, remands being granted on the St. Jacobs robbery and car theft charges.

William E. Craig, also of Toronto, was remanded until next Wednesday. He is also charged with armed robbery of the St. Jacobs bank.

Churchill's Address To House of Commons

London, May 7 (AP)—The text, in part, of Prime Minister Churchill's speech in the House of Commons today follows:

This debate, as I think will be agreed by all hands, has been marked by a high sense of discretion and a high degree of responsibility in all who have taken part in it...

The Righ Honorable Member for Caernarvon (David Lloyd George) made complaints about the Foreign Secretary's speech because he did not refer to Spain, Russia, Vichy and Turkey. Well, this was not a debate on foreign policy as a whole, but I certainly do not think the speech of the Foreign Secretary was to be judged by what was said. Its merits must also be judged by what he did not say...

Mention has been made that Turkey made some agreement with the Iraq government.

I always think it was a most unfortunate thing and a most tiresome thing that both Persia and Mesopotamia changed their names about the same time to two names which were so much alike as Iran and Iraq...

Leads to Endless Anxiety

The unfortunate procedure on the part of these two states has led to endless anxiety. It appears that the arrangement is between Turkey and Persia and it relates to measures to strengthen the Turkish-Persian border, which had been prepared for some time and are now to be put into effect as from May 4.

I must say I do not think the speech of the Right Honorable gentleman (Lloyd George) was particularly helpful in a period of what he, himself, called discouragement and disheartenment. It was not the sort of speech one would have expected from a great war leader of former days who was accustomed to brush aside despondency and push onward to the distant goal...

I think the government are right to put down a vote of confidence because after our reverses and disappointments in the field they have the right to know where they stand with the House of Commons and where the House of Commons stands with the country.

Still more is it important for the same foreign nations, especially nations balancing their policy at the present time and who should be left in no doubt about the stability of this resolved and obstinate war government...

A Free Parliament

This a free parliament and a free country. We have succeeded in maintaining, under unprecedented difficulties and dangers which in some cases might well be mortal, the whole process and reality of parliamentary institution. I am proud of this. It is one of the things we are fighting for...

So far as the German invasion of the Balkans is concerned, we had long and ample forewarning of what was in prospect...

For weeks one watched remorseless movements of vast German forces through Hungary, through Rumania and into Bulgaria toward the Croatian frontier of Yugoslavia until at least no fewer than 40 German divisions, including five armored ones, were massed on the scene.

Don't Want Arguments

Hitler has told us that it was a crime in such circumstances on our part to go to the aid of the Greeks. I don't want to enter into arguments with experts but this is a kind of crime of which he is a good judge...

We cannot judge aid to Greece without the consequential effects on the position in Libya...

Looking back upon the course of events, I can only feel, as the Prime Minister of New Zealand so nobly declared, if we had again to tread that stony path, even with the knowledge we possess today, I for one would do the same thing again.

That is the view of all my colleagues in the war cabinet and on the defence committee and I believe the view almost universally sustained by the House...

Remains to be Seen

It remains to be seen whether the Italian dictator in invading Greece and the German dictator in coming to his rescue and trampling Greece and Yugoslavia into a bloody welter will, in fact, have gained an advantage or have suffered a loss when the full story of this war is complete, even from a military viewpoint...

Turning from the military to the political aspect, nothing can more surely debar the Germans from establishing and shaping a new Europe, and one will certainly emerge, than the fact that the German army and German race have become and are becoming more universally and intensely hated among peoples of all lands than an enemy or any race of which history bears record.

No Comparison

Some have compared Hitler's conquests with those of Napoleon...it must be remembered that Napoleon's armies carried with them fierce, liberating, equalitarian winds of the French revolution whereas Hitler's empire has nothing behind it but racial self-assertion, espionage, pillage, corruption and the Prussian boot...Napoleon's empire flashed away and so I derive confidence that the will-power of the British nation, expressing itself through a stern, steadfast, unyielding House of Commons, will once again perform its liberating functions and humbly execute high purposes among men...

No Violence Done

In the business of Libya and Greece, I can assure the House no violence has been done to expert military opinion either in the chiefs of staff committee at home or in the Generals commanding in field. All decisions had been taken unitedly and freely, voluntarily and in good will under the pressure of events...

I personally, as the head of the government, obviously assume that responsibility in a most direct, personal form.

I notice a tendency in some quarters, especially abroad, to talk about the Middle East as if we could afford to lose our position there and yet carry on the war to victory on the oceans and in the air...

Can't Lose Nile Valley

The loss of the Nile Valley and the Suez Canal, of our position in the Mediterranean and of Malta would be among the heaviest blows we could sustain.

We are determined to fight for them with all the resources of the British Empire and have every reason to believe that we shall be successful.

General Wavell has under his order at present nearly half a million men. A continuous flow of equipment has been in progress from this country during the last 10 months and now that Italian resistance in Abyssinia, Africa and the Somalilands is collapsing, a steady concentration northwards of all these forces is possible.

Stalin Succeeds Molotov As Soviet Premier

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, May 7 (AP)—Joseph Stalin, replacing Vyacheslav M. Molotov as Premier, has taken over open leadership of the Soviet Union which he had guided from behind the scenes as Secretary-General of the Communist Party.

Molotov, Premier, or Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars, for 11 years, continues in high position as Commissar of Foreign Affairs—the office he took over from Maxim Litvinov two years ago, only a few months before the Soviet-German Non-Aggression Pact was signed.

(A hint that Molotov's star might be descending was seen by some observers last February when his wife was dropped as a candidate for the Communist Party's central committee.

(A British Broadcasting Corporation report heard last night in New York recalled that Molotov's replacement of Litvinov preceded a sudden swing of Soviet foreign policy toward Germany, and said now: "A further change seems to be indicated."

(Other sources in London, however, commented that "there has been nothing in recent official dispatches from Russia to permit an assumption that big changes are coming.")

Asked To Be Relieved

Molotov, now 50, was relieved of the premiership at his own request, declared a communique circulated today by Tass News Agency. It explained he had said repeatedly that "It is difficult for him to fulfill the duties of Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars of the U.S.S.R. simultaneously with the duties of the People's Commissar of foreign affairs."

He became, instead, a vice-chairman of the Council and retained his membership in the political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, compact executive organization.

Stalin, Secretary-General of the Communist Party since 1922, has moved increasingly to the fore in recent months. Twice during Yosuke Matsuoka's visit here last month Stalin received the Japanese Foreign Minister, who signed for Japan a neutrality pact with Russia.

Twice, too, within the past month, Stalin has made speeches—after more than two years in which he made no published address.

In his last speech, Monday, he said the Red Army had been reorganized and re-equipped in line with modern military experience.

SYNOD PASSES RESOLUTION

Toronto, May 7 —(CP)— Toronto Synod of the Church of England passed a resolution at its meeting today condemning gambling in church halls. Speakers on the resolution spoke particularly of the use of church halls to conduct bingo games.

"I hope it will not be necessary to use any kind of compulsion, or to make an issue of this matter," Archbishop D. T. Owen said, adding that bingo-playing in church halls must be banned.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

Toronto, May 7 (CP)— Rocco Pasquale, 21, and Murray Zaidman, 25, were arrested today on charges of assault after Edith Fontaine, 21, told police that two men attempted to force her into an automobile outside the apartment where she is employed.

Jack Crawford, who lives near the apartment, saw Miss Fontaine struggling with a man and came to her aid.

PRESS OF AXIS IS CRITICAL OF STIMSON SPEECH

Berlin Comment is That Consequence of Policy Advocated is 'Clear'

Berlin, May 7 (AP)—War Secretary Stimson's suggestion that the United States fleet be employed to protect shipments to Britain prompted in Berlin today the comment: "The consequence of such a policy would be clear."

Nazi spokesmen referred again to the oft-stated German assertion that any ship sailing through the blockade "which comes within the range of our torpedo tubes will be sunk."

Gayda's Comment

Rome, May 7 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, the Fascist editor, said today that War Secretary Stimson's advocacy of United States naval protection for shipments to Britain could be considered a preliminary announcement of open United States intervention in the war.

The editor also interpreted Mr. Stimson's statement on United States-British control of the Atlantic as "evidently meaning a true and real political-military alliance to become effective in the more or less near future."

Japanese Stocks Fall

Tokyo, May 7 (AP)—A drop in iron, steel, munitions and shipping issues on the Tokyo stock exchange today was attributed to War Secretary Henry Stimson's call for convoy duty by United States warships. Cotton, wheat and rubber were not affected.

Beatty Discloses C. P. R. Has Lost Four Ships In Past Year

Montreal, May 7 (CP)—Sir Edward Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, disclosed today that two C.P.R. vessels of the Beaver class have been sunk by enemy action since the start of the year.

In his report to the company's annual meeting here, Sir Edward referred to the sinkings as follows:

"The loss by enemy action of four of your company's steamships last year has removed substantial tonnage from your fleet and diminished its net earning power. The Empress of Britain will be particularly missed.

"The Beaver boats were also outstanding in their class, and it is with regret that I have to inform you that two more of these vessels have been sunk since the close of the year."

U. S. May Close Panama Canal To Japanese Ships

Tokyo, May 7 (AP)—Several shipping concerns today advised Tokyo from San Francisco that the United States probably will close the Panama Canal to Japanese ships within ten days.

This virtually would shut off Japanese trade with the east coast of South America and force Japan to deliver such principal cargoes as silk to the west coast. As for silk, this would completely disrupt a profitable business now done by the Japanese.

The report could not be confirmed from any quotable quarter in Tokyo.

(Washington officials, shipping circles at San Francisco and informed quarters at the Panama Canal had no comment.)

V. O. N. Steadily Expands In Canada

Ottawa, May 7—(CP) — Details of the "steady expansion" of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada were embodied in the report of Maude Hall, Acting Chief Superintendent, prepared for delivery today before the Board of Governors at the 43rd annual general meeting.

Miss Hall has been in charge of the order since July last in the absence of Elizabeth Smellie who was asked by the Department of National Defence to become Matron-in-Chief of Nursing Services to the Active Forces.

Adaptation to meet new conditions and demands created by the war as well as its usual civilian services were described in the report.

"Every day, Victorian Order Nurses visit the homes of soldiers' families," Miss Hall said. "Though complete figures for 1940 are not available yet, in the first three months of 1941 some 11,013 visits were paid to families of 2,214 soldiers.

During 1940 the number of V.O.N. visits from the organization's 92 centres throughout Canada were 742,741, giving care to 87,341 patients. This was an increase of 2,092 patients over the previous year.

C.P.R. ACQUIRES MAJORITY

INTEREST 4 WEST AIRLINES

Montreal, May 7 (CP) — Canadian Pacific Railway Company has acquired a "majority interest" in four airlines operating in Western Canada, it was announced today by Sir Edward Beatty, president, at the company's annual meeting here.

The airlines are Mackenzie Air Service Limited, Yukon Southern Air Transport Limited, Starratt Airways and Transportation Limited and Ginger Coote Airways Limited.

THE WAR TODAY

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The question was raised today in international political circles if the United States Government might be evolving a scheme of naval co-operation with Britain in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Last night's speech of War Secretary Henry Stimson, calling for immediate naval action by the United States to reinforce Britain in the fight against Germany, lent color to belief in some circles that naval assistance of a type undetermined was imminent.

It was noticed also that while the War Secretary mentioned naval assistance he did not specify what form he believed it should take. This led to the suggestion that the "patrol" which the United States established over the Atlantic might not have proved as effective as was contemplated.

The original intention was that the patrol should report presence of German raiders and U-boats and enable shipping to avoid the localities in which they were prowling.

It was noted that Mr. Stimson's speech followed the Senate address of Claude Pepper, the Florida Democrat, who demanded yesterday that the United States convoy shipments of goods to Britain.

The President, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the United States, has a constitutional right to order convoys on his own initiative and without consulting Congress, if he so desires.

There are some naval observers in the United States, however, who oppose the inauguration of convoys not for political reasons but because there is at least one more effective way of insuring safety of passage for merchantmen.

These persons favor a "bridge" along the great circle route—the shortest passage over the Atlantic—of war vessels which would maintain a continuous watch if specified areas of sea and act guardian over ships passing through their particular sphere.

They claim superiority for the bridge over the convoy on two main grounds:: The bridge allows ships to proceed singly across the Atlantic, complicating the job of U-boats which are charged with hunting them; the bridge does not tie fast ships to the speed of slower ships, whereas in convoy the slowest vessel sets the pace for all the others.

Picton and District

Picton, May 7 (Special)—At the meeting of the town council Monday night, it was decided to observe the May 24th holiday on the 26th and a proclamation to this effect will be issued by Mayor N. McKibbon.

The session was a long one, lasting some time after midnight and even then the business was not completed and council adjourned until next Monday when street repairs will be discussed.

Miss Edna Moore, Chief Health Nurse for Ontario, was present and addressed Council on Health Nurses and the Home and School Club here asked the town to engage such a nurse for Picton. Miss Moore pointed out that a nurse could reduce much illness and loss of school time among pupils, help control communicable diseases and catch many of them in the earlier stage. Several members of council agreed that the work done was worthy but no action was taken as it was felt the extensive damage to streets might make it impossible to spend the money on such a venture at this time.

Take Quarter Page

It was decided to take a quarter of a page in a London, England, financial paper to advertise the town. When there was a discussion over the cost of same, Mayor McKibbon volunteered to pay half the cost and this was accepted with thanks. Cost of the adv. is $326.

Council rescinded a permit given Murney Howe to establish a junk pile on Bowery Street. Complaints had been received from residents of the neighborhood, that the place was unsightly. Since Howe had not complied with the regulation to build a fence around the lot, council decided to rescind the permit and ordered Howe to remove the junk within seven days.

The sum of $600 was granted to the Deaconess fund. $50 was given the Publicity Committee for a page advertisement in the tourist folder.

The town truck will be placed at the disposal of the salvage committee, regular collections to be made all over town. The Red Cross will receive the proceeds of sale of salvage.

There were 57 persons on relief last month, relief administrator L. R. Browne reported.

Victory Loan

Organization for the Victory Loan is proceeding here. Dr. S. H. Roblin has been named chairman, J. M. Hartwick of Wellington, vice-chairman and Judge E. H. McLean, honorary chairman. Douglas Bellinger, Toronto, is county organizer and an organization is being set up for a very thorough campaign.

While walking on the edge of the highway on the Picton-Bloomfield highway Monday afternoon, Miss Helen Yarwood was struck by a car driven by Bill Walters of Picton. She sustained a broken leg below the knee and is in the county hospital. Walters was travelling behind a truck which slowed up when another car made a right hand turn. Walters was unable to stop and to avoid hitting the truck took to the ditch, colliding with the girl whom he did not see.

Plans are under way to have the homes of the town numbered. This has been found necessary due to the fact there are many newcomers here as a result of the Airport. The clerk has been instructed to secure a supply of aluminum plates.

Charles Pyper of the Toronto Telegram addressed a large crowd at Picton United Church Tuesday night, telling of his experiences as a war correspondent in England, Spain, Norway and France. The visit was sponsored by the Tennyson Club. A feature was the presentation of $750 to Mr. Pyper representing the British War Victims Fund. Mayor N. McKibbon had charge of the presentations. Musical numbers were given by F. E. Walden and Sid Lockyer.

Recent Brides Honored

Two recent brides, Mrs. Laverne Wright (Kathleen Hicks), and Mrs. Clinton Calnan (Helen Macdonald) were honored by the bridge club of which they are members, at the home of Mrs. Jack Le Heup, Monday evening. Mrs. Pat Hodgson was co-hostess. Mrs. Calnan was presented with an automatic electric iron and Mrs. Wright with an electric grill. Bridge was the favorite pastime with prizes going to Mrs. Dayton and Mrs. L. Wright. Miss M. Kavanagh assisted the hostesses at the social hour.

Boy Meets Girl But Forgets Name With Chase Of 600 Miles Result

Kansas City, May 7—(AP)—Earl Archer knows now.

That beautiful, blue-eyed blonde he met at the Kentucky Derby in Miss Helen Linger. She lives here, and if he communicates with her, it's going to be by mail.

Earl, in the excitement of cashing a $5 ticket on Whirlaway, forgot the name of the young lady who gave him palpitations of the heart in the paddock before the race.

Undaunted, he followed her car as far as St. Louis and came to Kansas City on his motorcycle, where he told his story to sympathetic police.

Tracing down an anonymous tip, police located Miss Linger, daughter of John Linger, president of the Real Estate Board.

Sgt. Fred Rolfers acted as an intermediary between Miss Linger, Mr. Linger and Archer, and all agreed a letter mailed at Fayetteville probably would be the best means of communication.

But if you feel sorry for Archer, listen to this account of the affair by Louis H. McClemmons, a fellow student at the University of Arkansas:

Archer gave him a hot tip on the Derby, and he went to the race riding double on Archer's motorcycle.

Archer met a blonde, followed her home and McClemmons had to sit astride the cycle, a patient, disinterested spectator for 600 miles and most of it in the rain.

They arrived in Kansas City broke and had to put up in the police station.

But to top it off:

"He gave up a tip on Whirlaway, and I thought I was cagey. I wouldn't waste my money betting, so I went to a party Friday night and spent all of my money. You remember who won the race, I trust."

U. S. House Passes Bill to Requisition Idle Foreign Ships

Washington May 7 (AP)—Legislation to permit President Roosevelt to requisition idle foreign ships in United SRtates ports for national defence was passed by the House of Representatives today and sent to the Senate.

Approval came on a roll call vote after the members had defeated two attempts to prohibit the President from transferring any ship taken over from one belligerent to another.

The legislation specifically would authorize the president to purchase, requisition or take title to any idle foreign merchant ship deemed necessary for national defence "for such use or disposition as he shall direct."

It would apply to 83 foreign ships, including two German and 28 Italian vessels and would expire June 30, 1942, unless the present emergency ended before that date.

The Maritime Commission would be given authority to purhase or charter foreign-owned ships—a power it does not now have.

At the last minute, the House approved provisions to permit the Government to waive any existing laws relating to masters, officers and crew and crew quarters. Two attempts were made—and were defeated—to make certain that those sections would not lead to changes in wages, hours and working conditions that might be detrimental to labor.

CONTRACTS LET TO BUILD HOUSES IN MANY CENTRES

Kingston One of Ontario Cities Chosen Because of Housing Shortage

WARTIME PROJECT

Ottawa, May 7 (CP).—Munitions Minister Howe announced today that contracts are being let by Wartime Housing Limited for erection of staff houses and single family units in Windsor, Kingston, Oshawa, Peterborough, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Welland and Fort Erie in Ontario to relieve housing shortages.

"Contracts were let some days ago for four staff houses and 225 single family dwellings in Halifax," the prime minister said in a statement.

Wartime Housing Limited is the government-owned company recently set up and headed by Joseph M. Pigott of Hamilton, Ont. Its object is to relieve housing shortages in communities where war work has increased population beyond the point where normal accommodation is sufficient to meet demand.

"Wartime Housing Limited will undertake housing programs only in communities in which surveys show an acute shortage of housing owing to the additional employees required in connection with munitions work or defence projects," Mr. Howe declared. "The accommodation will be temporary in character, built at the lowest possible cost consistent with proper standards in health and sanitation, and will be rented to the occupants."

Kingston Overcrowded

Kingston, overcrowded because of wartime military activity and expansion of war industries, is to have three staff houses, a commissary, and 250 bungalows. It is possible certain existing buildings will be taken over.

Work is to start at once on a "men's centre" to be erected on a site on Burlington St. East, Hamilton, loaned to the government by the International Harvester Co.

The plan calls for six large dormitories to house 520 men, two to a room, and a central pavilion in which will be incorporated a dining hall, a large lounge room with recreational facilities, and writing rooms. The centre will be completed in about two months.

Build 200 in Hamilton

It is possible 100 to 200 houses also will be built in Hamilton, Mr. Howe said.

Four staff houses, accommodating about 300 men, and 100 family dwellings will be built in St. Catharines. Welland is to have four staff houses to take care of 325 men, and 100 single family units. Fort Erie will have 200 houses to accommodate some 200 men and their families. Between 100 and 150 bungalows will be built in Windsor, 50 in Oshawa, and 50 in Peterborough.

Most houses will be of the demountable type, built in convenient sections that may be bolted together and taken apart cheaply when they are no longer needed. Wartime Housing Limited is adopting two or three standard types of houses, and the staff houses will be standardized. Wood construction will be the rule, but the finish will be varied. Mass production methods will be employed to the maximum.

Life Magazine Replies To Criticism Voiced In House Of Commons

New York, May 7 (CP)— Andrew Heiskell, assistant general manager of Life, today issued a statement in regard to criticism of the picture magazine voiced in the Quebec legislature and the Ottawa House of Commons yesterday.

The criticism was directed at an article by Eliot Janeway, associate editor of Time magazine, which is owned by the same company that publishes Life. Mr. Heiskell said:

Eliot Janeway is a writer, and as a writer doesn't necessarily represent Life's editorial opinions. He assigned to write an article and in doing so was given rather wide latitude to express his own views."

Three Privates Of H. And P. E. Regt. Slightly Injured

Peterborough, Ont., May 7 (CP) —Three privates of the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment are in Nicholls Hospital with facial and head injuries from a traffic accident on No. 7 Highway when a tire of their automobile blew out near Indian River today.

The injured men are Private Harry Griffin and Joseph Moon of Madoc and Roy Emory of Marmora. Two other men of the same regiment were in the car when the accident occurred but they escaped unhurt.

They are J. Edwards and J. McCaw of Madoc.

BEATTY RE-ELECTED C.P.R. HEAD

Montreal, May 7 (CP)—Sir Edward Beatty was reelected President of Canadian Pacific Railway Company at the annual meeting here today. Directors and other officers were re-elected and financial statements were approved.

'WE SHALL WIN' SAYS MENZIES WITH CONFIDENCE

Australian Prime Minister Says Every Individual Has to Face Up to the War and Realize It is Long and Hard Task

FIGHT FOR PEACE

Ottawa, May 7 (CP)—Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia told the Canadian Club today his recent travels had taken him to some strange places "but wherever I have gone I have found some additional reason to be proud that I am a British citizen."

He had a profound distrust for the optimist who said we will win because we have always won.

"This war will not be won by defeatists and it will not be won by men who sit comfortably in the garb of easy and idle optimism," he declared.

"We shall win this war and I do not say that in any easy optimism. I say that with supreme confidence."

Must Not Fail In Responsibility

Mr. Menzies spoke to the Canadian Club.

Every individual, he said, had to face up to the war and realize it was a long and hard task and that "if we fail in our duty at this time we are in greater peril of defeat than at any time since our race began."

This peril of defeat was not due to the superiority of the enemy. It was not due to any doubt as to the justice of the cause for which the empire fought. In other wars British people could argue among themselves about the justice of the thing but there was no argument this time.

There was no argument on the justice of the cause in the United States where argument went on ceaselessly about participation.

'Our Cause' That of all Civilized Peoples

"Our cause is also the cause of the United States and of all civilized peoples," said Mr. Menzies.

"It is not the cause of kings or prime ministers, of princes or potentates. It is the cause of the common man."

If he had any doubt of this it would have been removed in Great Britain where he saw the sufferings of the common man and his spirit of resistance.

Mr. Menzies told of seeing people led from the blazing streets of a shattered British city, their whole material life swept into oblivion.

"It was the saddest thing I have ever seen in my life," he said.

Then he told of seeing people of such a shattered city hurrying to their work in munitions factories next day as if nothing had happened.

"That was the happiest thing I have ever seen in my life," he said.

Britain Fights for Peace

If these things were happening to "some people" they would have said—"this is enough—we must ask for peace. But these people are not going to ask for peace. They are going to fight for peace."

"I don't believe, whther you look at the fighting in this war, in Flanders, in Libya or in Greece, you can find one solitary indication that something has happened to our breed; that we have lost any of our courage or intelligence."

No British army had yet met the Germans on equal terms. It it was equal in numbers it was inferior in equipment.

The enemy had the advantage in machinery because while the peoples of the British Empire were looking for peace the enemy was building for war.

Canadians and Australians were not poorer mechanics than Germans but they had not been working for war.

Sentence Raised By Appellate Court

Toronto, May 7 (CP)—Andrew Dand, Toronto broker, will spend three months in the reformatory instead of one, a sentence imposed by Magistrate Gullen, Ontario Appellate Court Judges decided yesterday A fine of $4,000 previously handed down, was not raised.

The new sentence followed a Crown appeal. Crown Counsel J. J. Robinette contended the first sentence was not severe enough in view of the fact Dand had pleaded guilty to two charges of conspiracy to commit indictable offences and 11 charges under Foreign Control Exchange Control Regulations.

A large sum was involved in the illegal security sales which Dand admitted having fostered—$435,000. The Crown asserted his profit amounted to $51,000 in various spurious transactions, Mr. Robinette said.

Italian General Taken In Ethiopia

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, May 7—(CP)—Capture of an Italian general was announced in a British communique today which said imperial forces have taken Quoram, Ethiopia, 30 miles south of Amba Alaji, the Italians' only remaining position on the Addis Ababa-Asmara Road. The general was not named.

In Italian Somaliland, it said, the British forces have taken the northern part of Bendar Cassin (Bender Bela), capturing 100 Italians and war material.

NIGHT FIGHTERS GET RECORD BAG OF 24 RAIDERS

Liverpool Attacked For The Seventh Successive Night—Communique Says Casualties Heavy

KING VISITS AIRDROME

London, May 8 (CP)—It was authoritatively announced tonight that latest reports show 24 German planes were destroyed during last night, 20 by Royal Air Force fighters, three by anti-aircraft gunfire and one by the balloon bar-

London, May 8 (CP)— German planes clashed with Royal Air Force patrols in numerous daylight air battles over the English Channel today as R.A.F. night fighters established a new record in shooting down 22 German planes during moonlight raids on British port areas.

The sky over the channel was filled with the roaring of motors and the chatter of machine guns and was criss-crossed with vapor trails, recalling the vast daylight fighting of last fall.

A Messerschmitt swooped down on a southeast coast town and machine-gunned the streets, but then was chased back across the channel by R.A.F. fighters. Other raiders were operating in pairs four miles in the air over several south coasts districts.

Anti-aircraft defences destroyed an additional Nazi raider last night, bringing to 73 the total shot down thus far in May, but the government said that even the record-breaking achievement of the night fighters failed to prevent the Germans from inflicting heavy damage on vital waterfront areas, including Liverpool which was attacked for the seventh consecutive night.

SECRET POLICE PROBE REPORT

Stated Two Men Planted Dynamite on Roosevelt Estate at Hyde Park

Rhinebeck, N.Y., May 8 (AP) — Capt. John Gaffney of the State Police said his men and United States secret service agents were investigating a report that two men had planted dynamite on President Roosevelt's Hyde Park, N.Y. estate with the intention of "setting it off if the United States went to war." Gaffney said he believed "there was nothing to the story."

Gaffney said the report originated with a workman on the estate.

"But we don't believe it," he added.

Nevertheless James Maloney, head of the secret service in the New York district, accompanied the workman about the estate in a checkup of his statements, Gaffney said.

TRUCK TRANSPORT RATES MAY RISE

Association Statement Says 'Immediate Increase in Rates is Necessary'

Toronto, May 8 (CP)—An "immediate increase" in truck transport freight rates throughout Ontario is necessary, according to a statement issued today by the Automotive Transport Association of Ontario.

Transport operators from all over the province met here this week and agreed such an increase is necessary, the statement said. The new federal gasoline tax of three cents a gallon which, it was estimated, would cost Ontario's transport operators $750,000 annually, was one of several factors that prompted a higher rate schedule, it was said.

Wages are higher and the cost of equipment, maintenance, replacement parts and shop tools also have advanced, the statement said.

The meeting of association members decided not to ask the Provincial Government to reduce its taxation in order to offset the new federal gasoline levy, but approved a resolution requesting the Ontario Government to establish regulations in respect to higher wages in the industry, A committee will wait on Premier Hepburn and Minister of Highways McQuesten to , present these views.

Say Oil Refused To German-Owned Airline At Talara, Peri

Ottawa, May 8 (CP)—A dispatch from Guayquil, Equador, that the oil company at Talara, Peru, had refused to sell gasoline to a German-owned airline on orders from the Canadian government, brought the comment in official sources here that probably since the Talara Oil Company was a subsidiary of a Canadian company (Imperial Oil), it had acted under instruction from the parent company.

The dispatch said as a result of the refusal to supply gasoline, the German-owned airline, Sedta, would be forced to cease operation in Equador within 20 days. Doubtless the Talara Company obtained its gasoline from another of the Canadian company's subsidiary located in South America.

Canada does not export gasoline to South America.

Jan Smuts Quite Confident

Pretoria, South Africa, May 8 — (CP Cable)—"We are fighting to win and we are going to win," Prime Minister J. C. Smuts said in a speech here today.

Gen. Smuts said the United States had been "roused as never before" and predicted that before long "the United States will be 100 per cent in the war."

BRITISH PLANES BOMB BAGHDAD, HIT A MAGAZINE

Iraq Situation At Basra, Habbaniyah, Since Siege Broken, Quiet

RAID BENGASI

Cairo, Egypt, May 8 (AP) —British planes bombed the Baghdad airport yesterday and scored direct hits on a magazine at Washash, near the Iraq capital, a Royal Air Force Middle East communique announced today.

Otherwise, Middle East general headquarters said, the Iraq situation, both at Habbaniyah airport and the port of Basra, has remained quiet since the siege of Habbaniyah, however.

The air communique said 'violent explosions occurred" when bombs scored flush hits on the magazine. Other bombs, it said, hit military buildings and were dropped on grounded planes at Hanaidi.

"Heavy and successful raids" against Bengasi and the axis-held airdromes at Berka, Benina and Derna, repeated targets of the R. A. F. Since German and Italian froces launched their counter-offensive eastward into Egypt, also were reported.

At Bengasi, bombs hit the central breakwater and struck near ships. Direct hits on two merchant ships were scored in an attack on the axis Mediterranean convoy.

Kerensky Believes Russia Ready To Enter War With Axis

New York, May 8 (AP).—Alexander Kerensky, former Russian premier who led the revolution against the Czarist government in 1917, expressed belief in an interview yesterday that Joseph Stalin's assumption of the premiership indicated Soviet preparation to enter the war on the side of the Axis powers.

Kerensky, long a foe of Stalin, said he believed Stalin's action was "due to recent developments in the war which may soon bring Soviet Russia into direct military collaboration with Germany in the Middle East."

Russian troops, he said, are being concentrated in positions from which they could strike into Iran and pass through Trans-Caucasia into Turkey.

Kerensky said he believed Stalin's move was prompted by Stalin's probable satisfaction with collaboration with Hitler so far.

Nazis Make Futile Attack On Balloons

Dover, England, May 8 (CP).—Two German Messerschmitt planes made a dive attack on Dover balloon barrage with chattering machine-guns shortly after dawn today but veered away in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire without downing a single balloon.

RAF Patrols Were Not Long Finding England's Largest Nudist Colony

By EDDIE GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Green Hills, Hertfordshire, England, May 8 (AP)—Britain's biggest nudist camp has faced the fact that modern war is war in the air—and now trades stare for stare with Royal Air Force pilots who conduct low-altitude reconnaissance flights over the camp.

"They seem to be over the camp a great deal," said the proprietor, his black beard streaming in the cold May wind, "but I expect they'll get used to us as we're getting used to them."

At first the nudists, who sprawled on the greensward within the woodland camp, thought of hot-footing it for the bushes whenever inquisitive fliers swooped over.

"But, everything in life being relative," the proprietor philosophized, "we adjusted ourselves. Nowadays, we just look up at them as they look down at us."

It didn't take the R.A.F. patrols long to spot the 10-acre park which is dedicated to the absorption of sunshine and fresh air in the altogether.

"If those pilots are as good as locating their targets across the water as they were in finding us, they will serve their country nobly," the proprietor said.

The proprietor's wife explained that the nudists do not shun their responsibilities during air raids.

Twelve families live in camp throughout the week, but on weekends more than 30 devotees — principally from London—come out for sun.

Here was one place in England where prices have not soared. The rate for a de luxe furnished cabin was $1.50 per day, with meals, and $1.25 without.

If you really want to get back to nature and sleep in a tent and lull on the turf, the rate is 90 cents.

Secret Nazi Documents Show 'Calculated Tyranny' By Germans In Norway

British Gov't. Publishes 'White Paper' of Documents Seized in Raid on Lofoten Islands — Papers Show 'Frank Admission of Extent of Active Norwegian Opposition' to German Rule

London, May 8 —(CP)— The British government published today secret documents seized in the March 4 raid on the Lofoten Islands off Norway and called them a "picture of calculated tyranny" and "evidence of frank recognition of the extent of active Norwegian opposition" to German rule.

The translation of a communication XVB German military commander in Norway to all officers of the rank of local commander or above, said:

"With the exception of the Nasjonal Samling Party (Norwegian Nazi Party led by Vidkun Quisling) all other organizations and parties, and particularly the representatives of big business and industry, remain now as before, pro-English and consequently anti-German."

One order was that the Norwegian press must "publish only such news as is designed to further, or at least not hinder, the policy of the German Reich" and that "German and Italian official communiques must be published daily," with German news given preferential treatment.

The documents, published in a British White Paper, listed these German measures:

If a German National is "insulted or struck because he is German" the offender is to be arrested at once.

If a "Norwegian girl of friendly disposition towards Germans has her hair cut short" those responsible are to be arrested immediately.

Immediate arrest is provided for the firing of shots at Germans, for "statements by fortune tellers" containing "serious insults," for sabotage of industrial works, and for ringleaders of strikes at airdromes.

Examples of offences already prosecuted in Norway by the Gestapo, German secret police, with the backing of the German military, were listed as:

The boycott of Germans looking for lodgings with Norwegians.

The boycott of pro-German Norwegians.

Distribution of anti-German leaflets and sending of anti-German chain letters.

WILLKIE, KNOX URGE PROTECTION FOR AID SHIPS

Statistics Intensify U. S. Controversy Over Convoys to Britain

WILLKIE WANTS ACTION

Washington, May 8 (AP).—Two uncompromising speeches — one by Senator Gerald Nye (Rep.-North Dakota), the other by Wendell L. Willkie—and some unexpected statistics on ship sinkings from the Maritime Commission today intensified the United States controversy over convoys to Britain.

Anti-convoy legislators were patiently intent on forcing a clean-cut decision in Congress, and there were indications of an opportunity next week when the Senate takes up the administration bill for acquisition of 83 foreign ships now idle in United States ports. The bill already has been approved in the House of Representatives.

Nye, who accused the administration of "blitzkrieging for convoys", declared in a broadcast last night that "this week, or these next few days, are to determine whether or not America is going to be in Europe's war."

N. Y. Marine Circles Say British Liner And Norse Freighter Torpedoed In Sub Raid

New York, May 8 (AP).—Maritime circles said today that the 10,263-ton British passenger liner Ixion and the 5658-ton Norwegian freighter Eastern Star were torpedoed in a Nazi submarine attack on a British convoy 750 miles east of the southern tip of Greenland.

The vessels were engaged in ferrying United States supplies to Britain.

The Ixion, owned by the China Mutual Steam Navigation Company, traded between the Pacific coast and China and Japan before the war. Recently she had been operating between Liverpool and the Pacific coast.

The Eastern Star had been trading between Liverpool and New York, Hampton Roads and Philadelphia.

BECAUSE OF LONG WAR

Vichy, France, May 8 (AP) —A semi-official source indicated today that the French-German armistice convention would be modified as a result of negotiations in Paris from which Vichy's Vice-Premier Admiral Jean Darlan returned this morning.

A prediction to this effect, made to newspapermen at a conference, followed disclosure yesterday that Darlan and German authorities in Paris had reached an agreement 'envisaging" a 100,000,000-franc reduction in the 400,000,000 francs charged France daily for support of the German army of occupation.

A statement in the press said only "that in view of the dragging out of the war in certain parts, the armistice convention must be modified in a spirit of mutual understanding."

Million More Men To Be Called In U. S.

Washington, May 8 (AP)—United States army and selective service officials were reported today to have decided on July 1 as the date for registration of approximately 1,000,000 men who have become 21 years old since the first selective service enrollment last October.

Last fall 16,500,000 men, 21 to 35, were signed up for possible military training.

In official quarters here it was expected that a large proportion of the latest registrants would be called for training within a few months after they are registered and classified as to availability for immediate service.

Regt. Moves to New Quarters

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 8 (CP) —The Lincoln and Welland Regiment, a Canadian (active) army unit, left their Niagara Falls headquarters today for a new and distant training centre.

Commanded by Lt.-Col. C. A. Muir, members of the regiment marched through streets crowded with cheering citizens. The troops were led by their own brass band and the pipe band from the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.

TRIUMPHAL ENTRY MADE BY SELASSIE INTO ADDIS ABABA

Captured Italian Munitions In British Guns Fired The Salute

PELTED WITH FLOWERS

Addis Ababa, (via Khartoum), May 5—(AP)—(Delayed)—Twenty-one rounds of captured Italian ammunition, crackling in salute from British field guns outside the palace walls, spread the tidings today that Haile Selassie, the conquering Lion of Judah, had come home.

From the palace balcony, where in 1935 he beat the great King Menelik's drum to mobilize Ethiopia for the then hopeless fight against Italy, the returned emperor pledged his nation to supply Great Britain with warriors.

In a compassionate vein, the ruler urged his people to show moderation in their treatment of the Italians in their time of defeat.

His address from the balcony before hundreds of Ethiopian chiefs climaxed the triumphal entry of the emperor and 10,000 native troops into the capital on the exact anniversary of Marshal Badoglio's arrival with his Italian legions in 1936.

Rides in Open Car

The emperor had ridden in an open car from the summit of Sacred Mount Entoto down a winding road through the eucalyptus groves. He sat almost knee deep in flowers that were pelted upon him from every side. Sometimes he smiled and sometimes he seemed nearer to tears.

Nigerians presented arms with clocklike precision as the royal car entered the Ghebbi Gates, where Gen. Alan Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief of Britain's East Africa forces, waited to welcome Haile Selassie home.

All Ethiopians in the great throng threw themselves to the ground in homage before the emperor began to speak.

"I wish to re-establish in Ethiopia Christian ethics in government, liberty of conscience and democratic institutions," Selassie said.

Entering the Grand Ghebbi, Selassie received officers of the British and Imperial army and others.

When his British allies had withdrawn, Selassie sat on his throne and received the bearded chiefs of his realm. Many were in tears as they knelt.

Tonight, after the swift African sunset, shouts of joy came from the surrounding hills, where Selassie's warriors feasted.

1940 Sales Of Farm Equipment Show Large Increase

Ottawa, May 8—An increase of 40 per cent in dollar sales of farm implements and equipment in Canada in 1940 compared with 1939 is revealed in a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Domestic sales, mainly at wholesale prices to dealers totalled $47,595,154 in 1940 an increase of more than $13,500,000 or 39.7 per cent over the $34,060,447 recorded for 1939. These figures relate to the sale of new equipment and machinery only and are exclusive of parts, binder twine or motor trucks. About 43 per cent of the total gain in dollar volume represents increased sales of tractors, 21,444 tractors selling for $20,632,549 in 1940, up 60 per cent in number and 40 per cent in value from the 13,402 units which sold for $14,769,357 in 1939.

Britain Creates Navy Reserve Pool Of Merchant Officers And Sailors

London, May 8 (CP)—A broad plan of conscription for Britain's merchant seamen and others with sailing experience for the Merchant Fleet was announced today by the Ministry of Shipping.

The order creates a Merchant Navy reserve pool of which all present merchant officers and sailors will become members at the expiation of their present employment on ships, starting May 26.

Officers and men discharged from ships since April 28 also will enter the pool automatically and be ordered to report to Mercantile Marine Offices.

To supplement these, all persons other than fishermen between the ages of 28 and 60 who have served at sea since Jan. 1, 1926, but are not now serving, must register in the week starting May 26. Men in this group who are unemployed or whose work would be more useful to the Merchant Navy than ashore will be potential members of the pool.

Bill Represents 33 More Vessels Than Navy Asked

Rear Admiral Robinson Says Unforeseen Developments Cause Increase

350,000 MORE TONS

Washington, May 8 (AP)—The House of Representatives' Naval Committee recommend legislation today to authorize the United States Navy to acquire 58 additional fleet auxiliary vessels at a cost of approximately $350,000,000.

The bill represented an increase of 33 ships beyond what the Navy requested when the legislation was introduced early in March.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, Chief of the Bureau of Ships, testified he had been instructed by Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, to ask that the measure be amended to authorize acquisition of 550,000 tons of additional auxiliaries instead of the 200,000 tons originally requested. Robinson said rapid developments which could not be foreseen necessitated the increase.

SIR KEITH FRASER MUCH IMPROVED AFTER HEAVY FALL

BELIEVED ALONE

Montreal, May 8—(CP) — Condition of Leading Aircraftman Sir Keith Fraser, 29-year-old Royal Canadian Air Force pilot, was reported "much improved" today at St. Luke Hospital, where he had been in semi-conscious condition after a mystery-shrouded plunge from an east-end hotel window.

Sir Keith, critically hurt in the 4-storey fall Monday was said to be "out of danger unless complications set in." Attendants added he had regained full consciousness, but declined to say whether he had amplified a muttered statement which led police to investigate possibility of foul play.

Hotel attendants expressed belief the young baronet was alone in his hotel room at the time of the fall, but police pressed their investigation because of a muttered statement in hospital that sounded like: "Get Von Izenhart." Friends of Sir Keith knew of nobody by that name.

Joined R.C.A.F. Last Year

Sir Keith, sixth baronet of Ledeclune and Morar and a nephew of the Earl of Coventry, joined the R.C.A.F. last year. He received his wings April 12 at the Jarvis, Ont., Bombing and Gunnery School and was reportedly due for a commission shortly.

According to police, he had registered at the hotel here Monday morning after returning from a visit to his wife, the former Blanca De Undurrage Y Sandiford of Paris, in New York. He remained in the room all day and attendants said he plunged from the window about 9 p.m.

Creditors Listed As "Dependents"

Rockingham, N.C., May 8 (AP).—A Rockingham selective service board was puzzled when a young eligible returned his questionnaire listing several credit establishments as "dependents".

"Well," he replied in answer to a question about the entry, "they're all depending on me to work and pay 'em off. I certainly couldn't do it on $21 a month."

Hepburn Will be Guest Of Governor of Michigan

Toronto, May 8—(CP)—As guest of Governor Van Wagoner of Michigan, Premier Hepburn will be in Detroit tomorrow night to attend a boxing tournament at Olympia Stadium, proceeds to go to the British War Relief. The tournament is sponsored by the Canadian Legion and other Canadian groups in Detroit.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

WINNERS' NAMES ARE TRANSPOSED

The names of the winners announced in Tuesday's issue of this paper in the contests conducted by the Thompson's House Furnishings were inadvertently transposed and the winner of the Marshall mattress should have read Mrs. W. Doxtator R.R. No. 6, Belleville, and the Congoleum rug winner was Mrs. M. A. Phillips, 32 Pine Street.

TWO SELECTED NOT PRESENT

Again those selected for the Foto Nite gift at the Capitol theatre failed to answer to their names when selected. The name of Mr. Harry (Deacon) Smith, 92 South John Street was selected for the $750.00 gift, while that of Mrs. G. Carson, 13 Brown Street, was announced for the $140.00 gift for the weekly Foto-Nite selection. A capacity audience was present to enjoy that hilarious funny picture "Buck Privates" in conjunction with the program.

PAPERS TAKEN WITHOUT PAY

The practice of opening newspaper bundles left in front of local news stands by early morning delivery, is again causing local news dealers much concern. City police hailed persons into court, when apprehended for this practice about a year ago, at which time the practice was minimized.

However, for the past few mornings Mr. Laurie Lewis, proprietor of a local news stand, has found his morning newspaper bundles opened and several copies missing, when employees arrived to open the business. Police were notified of the taking of such papers, without authority or payment, and examples will be made of those apprehended in the future, city police announced following the complaint today.

JACK THOMAS WINS QUEENS SCHOLARSHIP

Jack A. Thomas, son of Mrs. Woodman Thomas, of this city, and a brother of Lieut. Homer A. Thomas, former member of the staff of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, has been awarded the Engineering Institute of Canada Scholarship at Queen's University, according to results released yesterday.

Mr. Thomas is a third-year student at the university.

REFITTING PLANT FOR SEASON'S WORK

Refitting of the Canada Packers' Albion Street canning factory for the approaching canning season is occupying the time of a skeleton maintenance crew with preparations now being made for the opening of the pea canning season a few weeks hence. When the canning of peas commences, this will be the first season for five or six years that like operations have been carried on at the local plant, although corn, tomatoes and pumpkin are canned annually. No asparagus is canned at the local plant.

3,613 Belleville Employees Pledged $15,000 to War Savings

89 Out of 101 Firms Secured 100% of Employees to Contribute to Fund

Three thousand six hundred and thirteen of 4,008 employees of one hundred and one business and industrial firms of Belleville pledged $150,000 through the medium of the employer-employee system in the War Savings Campaign held here recently, according to information received from General Headquarters of the Dominion Campaign.

Of these 101 firms, 89 secured pledges from all their employees, which means that 88.1 per cent of the firms contacted were 100 per cent. 90.1 per cent of the employees of firms and organizations canvassed are continuously pledged. Of the firms not 100 per cent pledged, one was only four pledges short, three were three pledges short, and one was two pledges short, and four were only one pledge short.

Of the firms and organizations in the city employing five or more people, only five have not yet adopted the Payroll Savings Plan.

J. A. Barclay was chairman of this division of the campaign.

Belleville, Hastings County and Trenton Go "Over the Top" by $4,902

Figures which may be regarded as official and released today by Secretary Joe Shortt of the Hastings County War Services Organization Campaign Committee, reveal that this county went "over the top" to the amount of $4,902.26. Further contributions which are expected to find their way to the campaign treasury within the next few days will likely bring this total to $5,000.

The amount collected in the county was $34,402.26. The allotted quota was $29,500. The City of Belleville contributed $18,233.26, $3,233.26 over the quota of $15,000. Trenton exceeded its quota, of $6,000 by $1,472.11, while the county went over the top by $1696.98, or a total of $9,696.68.

Letter of Appreciation

Appreciation of the work of campaign committeemen, canvassers and others who assisted in the work was expressed today in a letter forwarded to these people. The letter, which follows, speaks for itself:

"The above figures will indicate to you that our campaign on behalf of the 'folks-at-home' to provide comforts and auxiliary services for our boys who are serving their King and country in the Army, Navy and Air Force, has been a wonderful success. The campaign, which reached and exceeded its objective, not only in Hastings County, but also throughout the whole Dominion, was successful because of the generosity of the subscribers, and the excellent work done by the committee, canvassers and the various organizations which lent their aid.

"To the general public who received the canvassers so cordially, and who responded so generously, we desire to express our sincere thanks. It is doubtful whether there has ever been a campaign of this nature, where subscribers showed a greater interest or gave so readily. The funds received will be of invaluable assistance to the six organizations joining in the campaign, in their efforts to provide our boys with comforts during their off-duty periods. A special word of appreciation is due the Patriotic Committee of the County Council, and to the County Council itself, for the splendid donation made at the beginning of the campaign, thereby saving our organization the necessity of a personal solicitation throughout the county. The proprietors of our various newspapers in the city, towns and county gave unstintingly and freely of their space, and for that we are indeed grateful.

"The efforts of our workers are beyond praise. Quick to respond to the call for aid, these volunteers, captains, team workers, canvassers and committee men gave devoted service, sacrificed their own personal interest and persevered until the canvass was complete, and success assured. The bank staffs gave cheerfully of their time to the laborious task of completing and tabulating returns. To all these and to all who assisted directly or indirectly, we wish to extend our personal and very sincere thanks.

"While the work is not quite finished, we are confident that individuals and organizations who have not yet subscribed will see to it that their contributions are forwarded to the County Headquarters at the Y.M.C.A. Building at Belleville. Cheques should be drawn in favour of Canadian War Services Fund. Cards for pledges or extended payments may be secured at the Y.M.C.A. Office."

"Sincerely, Charles A. Cameron, General Chairman; H. J. Clarke, Chairman, Belleville; H. W. Ackerman, Chairman, Special Names; J. E. Shortt, Secretary; I. G. Hefkey, Treasurer; W. E. Tummon, Chairman, Outside Points; Ed. Simmons, Chairman, Trenton; M. P. Duff, Chairman, Organization."

Fragment Of Plane Identified By Norwegian Airmen

Toronto, May 8 (CP)—Officers of the Norwegian Air Force here today reported after examination that a small piece of plane wreckage found yesterday near St. Catharines was from the plane in which the Danish student-pilot, Preven Malm Rasmussen, lost his life in Toronto harbor last March.

The fragment of aluminum and fabric that was picked up by children playing near Beamsville was established as part of Rasmussen's plane. Rasmussen crashed near the eastern entrance to Toronto harbor and the piece of wreckage evidently drifted across the western end of the lake to the St. Catharines district.

Previously it had been considered possible the fragments were from the plane of another Norwegian pilot, missing for some weeks, for whom searching planes scoured the Northern Ontario and Lake Muskoka regions recently. No trace has yet been found of this pilot, whose name has never been revealed.

Norwegian officers also said they had as yet received no further word from London regarding the report that a party of four Norwegian airmen, three of whom had previously been reported missing at sea, had actually arrived in England. On receipt of the original cable yesterday the Toronto headquarters had asked for confirmation.

POLICE BLOTTER

Traffic cases constituted Thursday's Police Court proceedings held before His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler today when Joseph Hannafin, Read, was convicted of being found operating a motor vehicle and failing to produce a driver's licence. A fine of $2.00 and costs resulted.

For two weeks Motorcycle Patrolman C. E. Siple, now of Port Hope, has been endeavouring to locate Lloyd R. Haynes, who gave a Welland address after being apprehended driving at a speed greater than 50 miles per hour on April 25th last. Only today was Constable Siple able to reveal to the court, that he had located Haynes, who was now residing in St. Catharines.

Will Be Summoned

"Have him summoned into this court and if he has not notified the Department of Highways of a change of address, we may be forced to prefer additional charges, when he does appear here," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

In city police circles two inebriates were apprehended in the Cannifton Road district in an alleged intoxicated condition on Wednesday and taken into custody following altercations. Today the pair appeared before H. B. Wilson, local Justice of the Peace, and held in custody pending trial on Friday.

BUDGET DEBATE IS NEARING END IN THE HOUSE

Vote Expected to be Taken Some Time Thursday Night After Shortest Debate in History

MENZIES WELCOMED

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 8 (CP)—An unusually short debate on the biggest taxing budget ever presented to the Canadian parliament may end in the House of Commons with today's sittings.

It is anticipated a vote will be called on the budget tonight after only four days of speech-making, interrupted yesterday by the reception accorded Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia, now on the last lap of a world-circling tour which took him into the heart of the fighting areas in Great Britain, Northern Africa and the Middle East.

The unity of the Empire in the struggle for freedom was stressed by Mr. Menzies after he was accorded the honor of a seat on the floor of the Commons and a desk-thumping reception. He said it did not matter if the Empire emerged bankrupt from the war so long as it emerged with freedom.

Building British Brotherhood

"We are building today within what used to be termed the British Empire not only a great British commonwealth but also a great British brotherhood," said Prime Minister Mackenzie King in welcoming the visitor.

"The presence of the Prime Minister of Australia side by side with the members of the parliament of Canada is visible evidence to the world of the unity which today is the outstanding feature of the war for all parts of the British Empire.

"May he carry back with him the assurance that, as far as Canada is concerned, we are joined with the other Dominions of the Commonwealth, particularly with the United Kingdom, in a determination to give the utmost of our ability, capacity and strength to the winning of the war for the greater freedom of mankind and that our effort will be continued until victory itself is achieved."

Welcomed by All Groups

Conservative House Leader Hanson, M. J. Coldwell, acting C. C. F. House Leader and J. H. Blackmore, leader of the New Democracy Group, also welcomed Mr. Menzies to the House and expressed the determination of their parties to assist in winning the war.

Before the budget debate got under way Finance Minister Ilsley announced the 20 per cent tax on moving picture theatre receipts will not operate until May 19. It was to have started April 30 but it had been decided to allow time for the printing of special tickets.

Capt. George White (Con. Hastings-Peterborough) called for a house-cleaning in the staff of the National Defence Department.

Asks For House-cleaning

"With all due respect to the general staff at defence headquarters," he said, "I would ask the Minister if he has ever considered the idea of having a house-cleaning and throwing out all the dead wood."

"I know there are many capable officers at national defence headquarters but there are many others who should be replaced with more capable and efficient men. Such things have been done in England and in other countries. It has made no difference what family name a man had. If he was not capable he was replaced.

"The people of Canada demand that at this time the best military brains in the country should have charge of our Department of National Defence. They are asked to supply huge sums to carry on the war and they are surely entitled to receive value for their money."

Pleads For Soldiers

The Conservative member for Hastings-Peterborough, in his plea on behalf of the soldiers, urged that at least a quarter-rate fare be provided for soldiers. It cost a soldier two weeks' pay to travel from Petawawa, Ont. military camp to Toronto for a week-end, and few soldiers were able to accumulate that much.

There had been strikes and walkouts in Canada by workers seeking higher rates of pay and in some instances they had been successful. Capt. White said he had no objection to this but said there was little wonder soldiers "groused" and wondered about the honesty of the expression "equality of sacrifice."

He said it was reported railway men were getting a five per cent pay increase because of higher living costs, and suggested the increase in living costs weighed just as heavily on soldiers families.

"I wonder if it's true that Canada is making an all-out war effort to aid Britain," Capt. White said. "It must be apparent now that Britain wants more men."

The outcome in Africa might have been different, he said, if there had been more men available for that campaign.

Member Makes Charge

Capt. White said only men willing to enlist for overseas service now were being accepted in reserve army units and men already in the units were being asked to answer a written questionnaire as to whether they were willing to go on active service with any unit or with the first battalion of their own unit.

"If this is another form of compulsion why should not every male citizen of military age be required to answer the same questions?" Capt. White asked. "Why put the men in these reserve units on the spot?"

The housing shortage should be treated as an urgent national problem, said A. M. Nicholson (C. C. F. Assiniboia). He hoped the sales tax would be lifted from building materials and steps would be taken to provide sufficient new houses for workers in congested industrial areas.

Maxime Raymond (Lib. Beauharnois-Laprairie) said he feared the effects of the present scale of war spending on Canada's financial structure, and that ruin would result if it were continued long. He urged the government to keep a close watch on employers to see that they paid adequate wages.

WHY "DOSE" CONSTIPATION?

There's a "Better Way" Than Harsh Purgatives!

LONDON, Canada: "Dosing" constipation brings only temporary relief, at best. If yours is the common type, due to lack of the right kind of "bulk" in the diet, try correcting it instead. Eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day! This crisp, delicious cereal (it's good in muffins, too) supplies the proper "bulk" to help keep you regular . . . naturally. But it must be remembered ALL-BRAN doesn't work like purgatives. It takes time. Eat ALL-BRAN every morning, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't look and feel worlds better! At your grocer's, in two convenient sizes. Or in individual serving packages at restaurants. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

CHILDREN FIND PIECE OF PLANE

Beamsville, Ont., May 7 —(CP)—Children today found what is believed to be a section of an airplane wing on the lake shore. It is painted a slivery blue with a wide yellow stripe about three inches in breadth.

The fragment was turned over to Traffic Officer Elmer Bowen, who put it in his car and drove immediately to the Air Force Training School at St. Catharines.

GREAT TANK HOSPITAL

Somewhere in England (CP)—In a factory which formerly turned out luxury motorcars, thousands of workmen work night and day repairing and overhauling light tanks and Bren gun carriers of Britain's mechanized army.

'WE SHALL COME THROUGH'

> "I cannot conceive anyone who can doubt that victory will crown the great cause we serve.
> "We have no need to fear the tempest. Let it roar. Let it rage.
> "We shall come through."

This utterance in the British Commons on Tuesday by Prime Minister Churchill was one of the most dramatic ever heard in Parliament. Only a great endeavor could call forth these words from a great leader, confident in his nation's cause and in the steadfastness and resolve of the people to carry on through the tempest to victory. These rousing words of Britain's leader express the iron resolve of the British nation and empire to achieve peace by way of victory.

He told the members of the House that he was confident that "we shall be successful in holding the valley of the Nile, the Suez and the Mid-Mediterranean island bastion of Malta" and that "we intend to hold to the death and without thought of retirement Crete and Tobruk."

This great leader was accorded an overwhelming vote of confidence in the government of 447 votes to 3.

This speech was all-embracing as his speeches are. He declared plainly that "we need more help from the United States and I expect we shall get it." On this same question of aid he declared he had received "assurance of the construction of merchant ships by the United States which , added to our own large program of new building and repair, should see us through 1942." That is one of the most cheering things he said. It throws a light on the situation on the sea, especially in the Battle of the Atlantic, which all feel will play a most important part in the victory.

Mr. Churchill went to some length in his defence of British diplomacy.. "Our diplomacy has never ceased for one moment to apprise countries of their danger and of perils which were coming on them and to urge that by common action alone could security and safety be attained."

Mr. Churchill has confidence and resoluton to back up his confidence. He showed it after the battle of France last year and he shows it again and again. Yesterday he said "Looking back upon the course of events I can only feel that if we had again to tread that stony path even with the knowledge we possess today, I for one would do the same thing again. This is the view of all my colleagues in the cabinet and on the defence committee and I believe that view is almost universally sustained by the House."

There was encouragement in his words that Britain is now producing each month as many heavy tanks as there existed in the British army at the time of the retirement of former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha. And he added that doubling of the present production was expected very soon, before the end of the year. To this must be added "the immense production on foot in the United States."

At one time in his address he spoke of "the stabilty of this resolved and obstinate war government." Britain he said had preserved in the face of unprecedented difficulties the whole process and reality of parliamentary institution, one of the things of which he is proud and which, he said, "we are fighting for."

He looked on the psychological side of the war as time goes by. He said "the German army and German race have become and are becoming more universally hated among people of all lands than any enemy or any race of which history bears record."

All in all the speech of Mr. Churchill was on the same high plane in its comprehensiveness, and picture of the situation as his others. It is realistic, for which the people are thankful. His policy has received the mighty endorsation of the great free parliament which in spite of the urgency of war has preserved itself. It is for such the war is being fought.

Courtesy is a science of the highest importance.—It is like grace and beauty in the body, which charm at first sight and lead on to further intimacy and friendship.—Montaigne.

FISHING

When troubles seem to overtake,
And friends who once were true forsake,
When fears and doubts each moment shake,
Go fishing.

Just grab that pole and can of bait,
Go right away — don't hesitate,
Tomorrow may be just too late
For fishing.

There's something in that morning breeze,
There's comfort in the whispering trees,
There's visions rare one often sees
While fishing.

The happy song of swirling stream
Awakens many a long-lost dream;
There's hope in every sunlit gleam
When fishing.

There's lots of time e'er sunset's gold
Paints rocks and stream in colours bold;
There's comforts that can ne'er be told
In fishing.

If you would laugh; real pleasure gain;
Hear music in a sweet refrain;
If you would be a kid again,
Go fishing.

—Horace J. Heaps, in Pennsylvania Angler.

A NEWS DISPATCH states that a Hun Heinkel discovered a patrol of Australians swimming in a river in Greece and promptly dived on the "diggers" and machine-gunned them. This perhaps is the origin of the German report that the British flanks had been exposed.

STREET SCENE:—A newsboy proffering a current magazine to a soldier with the exclamation, "No charge, mister. Take it, me brother's in the army overseas." And the smiling gunner, thrusting a quarter in the grimy hand of the newsie with the ramark, "Take it, kid, my brother is a newsboy in Canada."

The honeymoon is over, says an exchange, when the bride drops cigarette ashes in the bacon. Not to mention when she informs the big palooka that there is a hole in the right hand pocket of his trousers.

(Big fish hops into lap of surprised medico fisherman.'

"Listen doc," the big trout said,
"You'll pardon this intrusion,
I've loved you since you were a boy,
And that ain't no delusion."

"I saw you sitting on the bank
My heart with rapture swelled,
For years I've hoped and prayed that I
Would in your arms be held."

"And now alone at last are we
Forever and a day.
Just scale my love; I'll go for you
In a great big generous weigh."

A friend of ours told us the story the other day of four fishermen who went after the elusive brook trout on opening day in a marshy country a few miles north of Cobourg. They had exceptional luck and by the time the shades of evening were falling they had their quota.

Prior to angling they had parked their car near a roadway bordering the marshy area. As darkness fell, they realized that they had wandered far afield and were hopelessly lost. The undergrowth became so heavy that at times they were forced to climb trees to ascertain the position of the moon, their only guide to safety. For upwards of two hours they plunged through the darkness—then they heard the sound of a motor horn. They yelled in unison, and were rewarded with an answering blast on the faraway klaxon. Again they yelled. A voice answered, and by sense of direction they soon located their friend in need.

But the actual surprise came when they discovered that a few yards down the road stood their own tutomobile. They had travelled in a complete circle.

A British airman, always complaining of his luck, went over Germany on a bombing raid. His machine was badly damaged by anti-aircraft, but he was unhurt.

Flying back over England after he had nursed his plane across the sea, he had to bale out in the dark. He came down safely in a vicarage garden. Then he set out to walk to the house.

And he tripped over a croquet hoop and broke his leg.

NO FUN IN FUN ALONE

There is no fun in fun at all
Unless the time allowed to play
Is so arranged that it can fall
Beyond the duties of the day.

Here is a paradox quite true:
There's little pleasure left in fun
Unless ahead lies work to do
And just behind lies labor done.

Your idlers are a dreary sort,
For them the days and nights drag by;
They've tired of every form of sport,
And all that song and dance supply.

Fun as a respite must be had
From tasks which tedious oft appear.
Man must be useful to be glad,
And busy to be happy here.

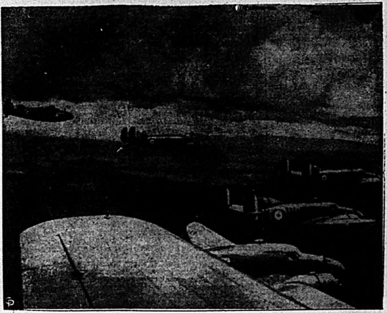
AMERICAN-MADE BOMBERS OVER SINGAPORE



President Roosevelt has called upon American plane manufacturers to step up production until 500 heavy bombers a month are available for England. The President sent written orders to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to take the necessary steps to see that a "substantial increase" in heavy bomber production be achieved even at the expense of other defence efforts. These American-built bombers, ABOVE, are attached to the Royal Australian Air Force and are pictured flying over Singapore.

Stewart Says—

GREENLAND DEAL MEETS APPROVAL IN WASHINGTON

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

Washington.— With the exception of ultra-isolationists (decidedly in a minority) congress' attitude toward Uncle Sam's establishment of a virtual protectorate over Danish-controlled Greenland is very favorable. Even some of the isolationists say it's all right if it really is a purely defensive move, for they, too, support our defence program. For instance, Senator Warren R. Austin, Vermont, a Republican, reasons that, although it "expands" the Monroe Doctrine, it's within its spirit, since the doctrine commits the United States to "protection of the western hemisphere's integrity."

Indeed, the isolationistic irreconcilables themselves remark that they wouldn't object to the expansion if they believed it to be exclusively defensive. But they don't believe it. Senator Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina puts it that it's a scheme to convoy American war supplies half way across the Atlantic—that is, to Greenland, for transhipment in British vessels. And it has, he adds, the advantage to the administration, of "avoiding use of the word 'convoy,' because that's unpopular."

Nevertheless, generally speaking, congress likes the idea of Greenland facilities, fortifications and other conveniences for American armed forces almost within a biscuit-toss of Germany's proclaimed maritime war zone.

Just the same, it was a queer bargain.

It wasn't entered into as a Danish-American treaty. An international treaty, to be validated, requires a two-thirds senatorial indorsement. Illustratively, a few years ago, the executive branch of our government negotiated a treaty with Canada for St. Lauwrence waterway development, submitted it to the senate, and did get a small majority but not the necessary two-thirds; so the treaty fizzled. Now the same thing's being attempted again, but not in the form of a treaty. It's in the form of a bargain, to be ratified by the passage of two bills, respectively by our congress and Canada's parliament.

Well, as previously remarked, this Greenland arrangement isn't a treaty either. It's a plain bargain, Only it's different from the St. Lawrence bargain, in that it doesn't have to be submitted to any legislative body whatever.

It was fixed up between State Secretary Cordell Hull and Henrik de Kauffmann, Danish minister in Washington. Cordell, of course, signed with presidential approval, but congress hasn't a word to say about the dicker, except informally.

Minister de Kauffmann is described as having acted "in behalf of the King of Denmark." Now, is anybody going to believe that the king of Denmark, virtually a Nazi prisoner, subscribed to that compact? He probably felt like it, but could he have had the nerve to do it, and then answer to Herr Hitler? Phooey! If not, Henrik must have signed on his own responsibility, which, unauthorized, isn't officially good for anything.

In short, it was a deal between Secretary Hull and Minister de Kauffmann, personally.

Still, we get our Greenland bases.

Immediately on the heels of the Greenland arrangement followed the presidential proclamation opening the Red Sea and the Gulf of Aden, right up to Suez.

This wasn't treaty-work or legislation or anything except a proclamation.

We have a law barring shipment of American cargoes in American ships to beligerent foreign countries. Ah, but these shipments to Suez aren't for delivery in a beligerent country. They're for delivery in Egypt. Who gets 'em subsequently (Britain's forces in Africa or Greece or Yugoslavia or some other democracy) is none of our funeral. Hence that proclamation's perfectly legal. Isolationists look on it askance, though.

French Are Doing Little About Actual Opposition To Nazi Rule

(Robert Okin, war correspondent who has been stationed in Vichy since the fall of France, brings back a gauge of French opinion and French action regarding the German conquerors and Gen. Charles De Gaulle, Free French leader.)

By ROBERT OKIN

New York, May 8—(AP)—Still in the slough of defeat, the French are doing little about actual opposition to German rule yet—but already there is evidence that secret organizations are beginning to form.

Apparently modelled after the Belgian organizations during the first Great War German occupation, French groups supporting Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French and British agents have organized demonstrations, smuggled information and British prisoners and done what they could to sabotage industry working on German orders.

No one can say how strong they are or even how successful they are. Chalked slogans on the wall, defacement of posted announcements and apparently spontaneous demonstrations too subtle for the police to put their fingers on, are an old French custom. They have little real effect to provide a gauge for French opinion.

With the Gestapo everywhere in France underground work is extremely dangerous. So much so that nothing of any real damage to the Germans is known to have been accomplished. Rumors and anecdotes circulate constantly, but many appear wishful thinking.

Some of the stories you hear are that German orders in occupied zone factories have a way of being delayed. Nothing you can put your hand on, but stories that materials fail to arrive in time, finished products fail to reach the assembly line in time, manufactured machines are ruined by rain, unaccountable defects show up and production just can't seem to be speeded up.

A Frenchman coming from the occupied zone spoke bitterly against certain well - known compatriots whom he accused of being too receptive to the Germans.

"A lot of them were all very friendly to the Americans when the Americans were spending money in France" he said bitterly. "Now they are licking the German boots so disgustingly that even the Germans despise them.

"We know who they are, their names will be remembered and some day—"

A story that crops up again and again is the drowning of thousands of Germans in accidents during invasion practice off the French coast.

You'd Be Surprised!

SABOTAGE AND SABOTEURS

We hear a lot these days about sabotage and saboteurs.

Sabotage is the secret, systematic and premeditated interference with the normal processes of industry by employees to reduce the profits of the employers or to impair their capital.

Normally the purpose is to compel the employers to grant laborers certain demands, such as higher wages, shorter hours, better working conditions or union recognition, although in wartime fifth columnists may resort to sabotage to handicap national defence production or to cripple armaments.

Sabot is the French name of a wooden shoe made of a single piece of wood and shaped and hollowed out to fit the foot.

Such shoes are worn by many French, Flemish and Dutch peasants, because they are cheap and adapted to keeping the feet dry in damp regions.

In France persons who wear sabots are called "sabotiers," a name formerly applied in derision to members of the sect known as the Waldenses.

It is believed that "sabotage" acquired its present meaning from the fact that in the early days of machinery in France workmen who wanted to rest or desired to spite the employer would kick their sabots, or wooden shoes, into the machines and pretend that it was an accident.

But a person who practices sabotage is not called a "sabotier," but a "saboteur."

As now understood, sabotage was first defined and recognized as a weapon of organized labor in 1887 by the General Confederation of Labor of France.

The French syndicalists and revolutionary labor groups in other countries, including the Industrial Workers of the World in the United States, accepted sabotage as an instrument of industrial warfare no less effective than the strike.

Sabotage may consist of disabling machinery, misplacing tools, loafing on the job, wasting materials, betraying trade secrets, telling customers the exact truth, tying up enterprises like railroads by observing orders too literally, and a score of similar practices.

To evade the criminal law and to prevent employers from fixing the blame on particular individuals, saboteurs practice their tricks secretly and try to make each act of sabotage appear accidental.

Sabotage is pronounced "sab-u-tazh," with the chief accent on the last syllable.

REV. E. F. SWAYNE NAMED CHAIRMAN OF PRESBYTERY

Belleville Presbytery of United Church Convenes in Wellington

DELEGATES NAMED

The May meeting of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada was held in Wellington on Tuesday, May 6th, 1941, with an attendance of one hundred and two delegates, besides a number of visitors.

This was the Presbytery, when the officers for the year were elected. The new Chairman is Rev. E. F. Swayne of Newburgh and associated with him are Rev. James E. Beckel of Stirling as Secretary and Mr. H. C. Martin of Stirling as Treasurer. The President of the Lay Association is Mr. Donald Baxter of Bloomfield and with him are Mr. H. J. Morrison of O.S.D., Belleville as Vice President and Mr. H. B. Fetterly of Belleville as Secretary and Treasurer.

Delegates Appointed

Delegates were appointed and committees arranged for the Bay of Quinte Conference which will be held in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, beginning Tuesday, June 3rd at 4.00 p.m. (D.S.T.). The Belleville Presbytery has a quota of one hundred and twenty-six delegates and representatives on every committee that functions in the conference.

Among items of business transacted were the nomination for President of Conference of Rev. W. P. Fletcher, D.D. of Marmora; the nomination to the Settlement Committee of Rev. James Semple, Th.D. of Belleville and Mr. W. S. Gordon of Tweed; the election of the members of the executive of Presbytery namely the Chairman, the Past Chairman, the Secretary, the Treasurer and Rev. W. H. Morrison of Tweed, Mr. Donald Baxter of Bloomfield and Mr. E. L. Fraser of Trenton.

Presbytery Approves Call

The Presbytery approved of the call of Rev. Melville Buttars, M.A., B.D., to Bloomfield and of Rev. R. J. Merriam of Monteagle-Maynooth to Centralia. It passed on to the conference Settlement Committee the requests of Rev. W. H. Boomhour of Rednersville and Rev. W. J. Parsons of Melville for changes of pastoral relations. A new candidate for the ministry was received William Geoffrey Julian of Albert College, Belleville. Very favourable reports reached the Presbytery of students supplying pastoral charges throughout the Presbytery.

The Presbytery was very fortunate in having as its guest speaker, Rev. H. W. Outerbridge, D.D., who for many years has been a missionary in Japan and just returned to Canada a few weeks ago. He told the Presbytery in a very kindly Christian way the problems of the church in Japan today and stated that though all the missionaries have been asked to leave Japan for the present there will be a day when they will go back again.

Resolution Moved

A resolution that came from the Evangelism and Social Service committee of Presbytery was of special interest. It was as follows: The committee endorses the principle that any condition which interferes with the integrity of the home or the welfare of the child is the concern of the church. As a preventative of much mental and physical suffering, and of the broken homes, which result from the marriage of individuals, who on account of physical or mental defect, are unable to produce and raise normal children, we endorse the principle of medical examination before marriage. We would draw to the attention of the government the advisibility of adopting a law which would make, as a minimum, a blood test for the detection of syphilis, and an X-ray of the chest a compulsory condition for marriage.

Committee Chairmen named

During the afternoon those who are to convene the different committees of Presbytery were appointed, namely, Church Property, Rev. J. W. Flatt, Belleville; Colleges and Students, Rev. George Campbell, Trenton; Evangelism and Social Service, Rev. E. M. Cook, Foxboro; Home Missions, Rev. W. J. Davis, Cannifton; Missionary and Maintenance Fund, Mr. H. B. Fetterly, Belleville; Missionary Education and Foreign Missions, Rev. A. S. Doggett, Thomasburg; Pastoral Relations, Rev. James Semple, Belleville; Pensions, Rev. G. T. McKenzie, Plainfield; Publications, Rev. E. F. Swayne, Newburgh and Religious Education, Rev. W. G. Fletcher, Yarker.

The sessions for the day were under the direction of Rev. J. G. McKee of Wellington the retiring Chairman. The Wellington ladies served a real old fashioned country dinner at noon and a vote of thanks was extended to the Minister, officials and ladies for the entertainment during the day. The September meeting of Presbytery will be held in Newburgh.

Weddings

GARRISON—BARTLETT

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Saturday morning, May 3, at 10 o'clock at the United Church Parsonage, Foxboro, when Rev. E. M. Cooke united in marriage Keitha Marie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Bartlett of Stirling and Harold Gordon, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Garrison, of Centenary, Sidney Township.

The bride was lovely in a dress of pale blue with hat to match and the couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Donald Garrison.

After a short honeymoon the happy couple will reside in Peterborough where the groom is employed at the Canadian General Electric plant.

THOMAS—McCAUGHEN

A quiet but pretty wedding took place on Saturday evening at the United Church Parsonage, Foxboro, of Pearl Muriel McCaughen, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett McCaughen, to George Iver Thomas, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thomas, Cannifton. Rev. E. M. Cooke officiated.

The bride looked lovely in a dress of turquoise blue with blue and white hat and with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Watts of Belleville were the attendants.

The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a silver compact and to the groomsman a leather bill-fold.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a short honeymoon in Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford and western points, and on their return they will reside in Cannifton.

SEYMOUR—MARSH

Eglinton United Church, Toronto, was the scene of a pretty and interesting wedding, Friday evening, May 2nd, when Evelyn Florence Marsh, daughter of Mrs. Florence E. Marsh of Toronto, became the bride of Robert Howard Seymour, eldest son of the Rev. H. P. L. and Mrs. Seymour of Kingston. Rev. Mr. Seymour, father of the groom, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. J. W. Johnston, pastor of the church. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Arthur Marsh, was an attractive figure in a frock of cornflower blue sheer with hat to match and a bouquet of roses, lily of the valley, forget-me-nots and lily petals.

The bride was attended by Miss Joyce Hetherington of Toronto, who wore a pretty frock of dusty pink printed sheer with hat to match and carrying a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. The best man was Mr. L. James Seymour of Kingston, brother of the groom.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Arthur Huddlestone sang "For You Alone."

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church parlors, when Mrs. Marsh, mother of the bride, received the guests wearing an attractive blue ensemble, assisted by Mrs. Seymour, mother of the groom, who also wore a smart blue costume.

Later the bride and groom left for Montreal, the bride travelling in a smart black tailored suit with matching hat and accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Kingston.

CAMPBELL—PYNE

Picton United Church was decorated with hydrangeas, lilies and ferns, Saturday, at high noon, when Doris Alberta, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Pyne, Picton, became the bride of Frederick Mason Campbell, B.S.A., Uxbridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Campbell of Shanty Bay, Ont. Rev. J. B. Creeggan officiated and F. E. Walden played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made a lovely picture in a floor length gown of white chiffon, embroidered in silver. Her fingertip veil fell in folds from a halo head-dress and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and freesia.

Miss Betty Browne was bridesmaid, wearing a long gown of blue net over pink taffeta with matching flower hat, and she carried a colonial bouquet of sweet peas and forget-me-nots.

Lloyd J. H. Campbell of Shanty Bay, brother of the groom, was best man. Ushers were William Small, Picton, and George H. Kidd, Toronto.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mrs. Pyne, mother of the bride, wearing blue chiffon with matching blue hat and a corsage of sweet peas, and Mrs. Campbell, mother of the groom, wearing blue chiffon with matching hat and corsage of sweet peas.

The assistants were Miss Betty Anderson, Belleville, Miss Earla McVannell of Wellington, Miss Madeline Pyne of Peterboro, Misses Catherine Clapp and Rebecca Hubbs, Picton.

For a trip to Quebec, the bride donned a printed rose frock with matching rose redingote, beige hat, black accessories and she carried a beige coat. Upon their return they will reside at Uxbridge where Mr. Campbell, formerly of Picton, is agricultural representative.

Among those present at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Alex Campbell, Shanty Bay, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross Campbell, Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Mason, Misses Marjorie and Mary of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tripp, Belleville, R. L. Montrose, Ottawa, Miss Vera Crawford, Toronto, H. B. Rowe, Toronto.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Mothers Can Go Too Far With the Training Routine

A set routine is a very necessary thing in bringing up a child. It is good for the child and good for the parents. However, it must be tempered with common sense for insistence in blind adherence to a schedule can work harm, for the baby isn't an automaton and neither is his mother or his nurse. Let me quote from a letter from a mother that gives point to this remark:

"My husband says I'm just raising our baby by a set of rules," she writes. "I have a routine for the baby and I follow it religiously."

From what she tells me I'm inclined to the opinion the husband is probably right. The mother would appear to have become so obsessed with the routine itself that she has lost sight of the aims and object of the routine—to make a healthy baby.

No one can set up a schedule for a child like you can for a railroad train. You can't say that he will rise at such an hour and such a minute every day, that he will have his breakfast at 8 o'clock sharp, that his bowels must move at nine, that he must empty his bladder at eleven. You can't make a machine and a human, too. If you try you have a problem — a problem child—on your hands.

Students of baby behaviour have been trying for years to evolve a formula that will solve all the problems that crop up in a home where there is a baby, and these students will be the first ones to tell you that they have failed.

What they will tell you, is that there are some new methods for helping the child to develop properly that are better than the old ones. But many of the old ones are still best.

Eating and sleeping routines are very necessary. The baby needs to have the hours of his feedings set and adhered to because that is good for his health. Besides that, it helps to give him a sense of security, a feeling that he is being looked after, that there isn't anything haphazard about his existence. But no one routine plan is suitable for all or most.

A few years ago, child specialists gave mothers routines for everything and insisted that they be adhered to rigidly. We aren't quite so enthusiastic about this complete regimentation of the child now. It is recognized now that the individual child's sleeping habits must be arranged in accordance with his own ideas as to mealtimes. For until he is a year or so old, the child's sleeping habits naturally depend on his hunger. He wakes when it is time to get fed and then he goes to sleep again.

There has also been a reaction with regard to the idea the child must have absolute quiet when sleeping. If the child is healthy he can sleep in the ordinary noises about the home.

There has been a relaxing, too, of beliefs concerning elimination habits. A few years ago it was thought that training of a child in bowel and bladder control should begin as soon as it is born. Today we rather think it is just as well to wait until the baby is a few months old before beginning this discipline.

There isn't any set of rules with which to govern all children to their best interests, any more than there is one set of rules suitable for all adults. Common sense and her own experience must still guide the mother to a great extent.

"DAUGHTER OF DESTINY"

By ELEANOR ATTERBURY COLTON

CHAPTER XV

When the real world came back and Devona could open her eyes again she looked straight into Macia's quiet smile.

"That's better," he said, and one arm under her head, raised her up a little, pressed a brandy glass into her hand. "Now drink this."

Obediently, she swallowed the searing drink, felt the blood surge into her face again, felt strength returning to her trembling legs.

"Thanks," she gasped, "I — must have—fainted."

He smiled, nodded. "You must be very hungry." He drew her to her feet, pulled her arm through his. "Come, you must eat something. Put the color back in those pretty white cheeks.

Food for Faint Lady

The big dining room was still virtually deserted. Macias ordered quickly, sat watching her, sipping a glass of red wine thoughtfully, as she devoured the thick steak, hot vegetables, the soul-warming, savory food a waiter set before her. Careless even of what he might be thinking, she was only grateful for this first decent meal she'd had in days.

"Thanks so much," she said when she'd finished. "I—told you I was—hungry."

He nodded. "You say you speak three languages?"

Some lingering premonition of danger warned her from the outskirts of her mind, but she thrust it aside, determinedly. "Yes. Spanish, French and a little Italian."

"Anything else—play the piano, dance——"

"I sing—a little. Not very well."

"Sing?" He pounced on the word. "Let me hear you. Come this way."

Reluctantly she followed him up on to the orchestra platform where a slim, too-pale young musician was thumbing through sheet music.

"Manuel," Macias called to him. "This is Miss Raebourne. I want to hear her sing. Find something she knows."

A case of singing for her supper, Devona thought wryly as she smiled at the pianist, picked out one of the sweeter popular songs she'd heard often enough to risk trying.

"O.K., sister. You set your own time. I'll follow." Manuel slid onto the piano bench.

She Tries Singing

As she sang, some of her own desperation sifted into the plaintive melody, colored its artificiality with real emotion, gave a passionate depth to her tones. She'd never sung better, she realized dully. And probably never before had her whole life depended on it.

"Different from what we usually want," Macias thought aloud, "but not bad at that. Now try something with more—swing. Hotter—you know."

Manuel began again. A torchy song this time. One she'd never seen before. Stumbling, she did her best to follow.

"Swing it, gister. Like this." Manuel muttered, pounded out the rhythm.

"Try the chorus again, please," she begged. "I think I can do it better this time."

It was better. She hated it, but Macias smiled, nodded. Manuel could teach you that stuff all right." He helped her down off the platform.

"I think I can use you, all right," Macias went on when they were back at the table. Calmly he reached for her slim hand, held it boldly a moment. "Would you like to work for me?"

Devona hesitated. Again the premonitive warning. Again she pushed it aside, drew her hand free. "Here, you mean?"

She glanced around the big dining room into the bar lounge beyond where half a dozen bartenders polished thin-stemmed glassware behind the long bar and the costumed waiters moved about emptying ash trays, setting tables, filling ice buckets.

"I think I could use you with my strolling players. The work—" he smiled slowly—"would not be difficult. I think you would like it."

She Gets a Job

Devona, still conscious of the touch of his hand on hers, was suddenly quitesure she would loathe it. But—it was a job! "I'm sure I would, Mr. Macias. You are very kind to——"

He waved that aside with a shrug. "How soon can you begin?"

"Why—any time you say."

"Good." He consulted his wrist-watch. "I think I have time to help you select your costumes right now. Come."

Rising he slipped a hand under her elbow, steered her toward the foyer.

"Tell Joe to bring the big car around," he told the doorman.

Almost as if by magic, a big black town car appeared just outside, a uniformed chauffeur at the wheel, the doorman, all bows and smiles now, waiting beside the opened car door.

"Where are we going?" she managed, casually, as the big car turned into the main stream of traffic.

"To get you some pretty duds to dress up in when you sing for my patrons," Macias explained, smiling. "You're going to be a very beautiful young lady when I get through."

Dressing Her Up

She was, too. Even Devona had to admit that to herself an hour later as she stood before the dressmaker's long mirror. Pretty as something out of a Goya painting. A fully, many-tiered, ruffled skirt of soft red satin over layers and layers of petticoats, a snug bodice that followed the curves of her pretty bust and shoulders, a red rose tucked behind her ear, tiny red slippers to replace her rain-soaked shoes.

"There——" the dressmaker stepped back to enjoy her own handiwork. "The prettiest costume you ever had, Senor Macias. And I guess——" the wrinkled little costumer smiled archly, "the prettiest girl to wear it."

Devona winced at that. Just how many girls before her had accepted a job as strolling troubadour? And just what was she getting into?

"Very nice," Macias approved, but his eyes were on Devona's face, not the costume.

Flushing, she pretended not to notice. "It is a lovely costume," she murmured, pirouetted again to escape the searching scrutiny of his dark eyes.

A New Personality

"O. K. And Miss Raebourne will need a couple of changes, so let's see what else you have," Macias ordered curtly.

In all, he bought her three complete changes. The soft red satin, a lovely white lace, a daring black net—all Spanish in style, all provoking in line.

The costumes would help her create a new personality of herself, Devona realized as she paraded peacock fashion up and down before the critical Macias. But could her singing match up?

"I'm afraid you're — investing too much in me, Mr. Macias," she protested, conscience - stricken. "After all, I've had no experience. Maybe your patrons will think——"

A "Command" Dinner

"And now—I'll take you back to your hotel. That will give you time to change your dress."

Devona, startled, glanced at him. "Change?"

"You're having dinner with me, of course. We have so much to talk over."

The big car was rolling to a stop in front of the modest Brownstone now. Macias himself helped her out.

"I'll call for you about 8:30," he said. "You'll be ready?"

He made it a question, but Devona realized only too well that it was actually a command.

"Yes, thank you," she said and escaped into the Brownstone's dim lobby.

As she passed the desk the room clerk, wreathed now in smiles, bowed slavishly.

What Will She Face

From now on she realized as the elevator bore her swiftly up to the haven of her tiny, drab room on the tenth floor, things were going to be different. Just how different she could only guess. And somehow the guessing frightened her. Only too well aware of the subtle change in Macias since she'd denied any further connection with Dale Brasher she realized this was a real test of her self-sufficiency. She'd have to watch her step. Macias' every gesture—the touch of his hand, the soft overtones in his voice that didn't half hide the insinuations his eyes made so boldly—everything told her that.

Tried, and suddenly aghast at the prospect looming ahead, Devona closed her door, locked it securely. As if to insure these last moments of freedom.

Devona dressed carefully. She'd learned that much about her future employer from their visit to the costumer's this afternoon. He was influenced by clothes and colors and fabrics. Almost feminine in his attention to detail. Tonight, the wine-red velvet, symbol now of the naive hopes she'd once cherished, would be a disguise for Douglas Raebourne's daughter — a costume for Devona career girl!

A Sophisticated Girl

Macias must never know that she feared, dreaded even, this——

The telephone at her bedside jangled imperiously. Drawing a deep breath, she answered.

"A gentleman waiting in the lobby for you. Miss Raebourne," the room clerk's oily courtesy whine over the wire.

"Thank you"—crisply. "Ask him to wait. I'll be down in a moment."

Just one more moment, she said as she replaced the receiver. Just long enough to pull on her long white gloves, dust the powder puff over her nose, push back the nervousness that worried at her.

She'd see this through, she told herself as she walked to the elevator. She'd have to see it through. And then, as the cage bore her swiftly down to the lobby, her heart sank with a rush. Face what! If she only knew. What terrible endurance test did life have in store for her now!

Good Moos by Elsie THE BORDEN COW

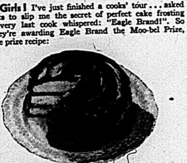
Now, here's the magic way to make The topping for a perfect cake!

Hello, Girls! I've just finished a cooks' tour . . . asked 100 cooks to slip me the secret of perfect cake frosting —and every last cook whispered: "Eagle Brand!". So since they're awarding Eagle Brand the Moo-bel Prize, here's the prize recipe:



MAGIC CHOCOLATE FROSTING

2 squares unsweetened chocolate 1 tablespoon water
1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk

Melt chocolate in double boiler. Add Eagle Brand, stir over boiling water 5 minutes until it thickens. Add water. Cool. Spread on cold cake. Makes enough to cover tops and sides of 2 (9-inch) layers, or top and sides of loaf cake generously or about 24 cup cakes.

YES, BUT LOOK HOW GRAY AND DINGY THEY'VE WASHED. IT'S A WONDER SOMEONE WOULDN'T TELL HER ABOUT NEW HIGH-TEST OXYDOL.
NEXT DAY
TALK ABOUT EMBARRASSMENT—I FELT AS IF THEY HAD DISCOVERED A SKELETON IN THE CLOSET! WHAT DID THEY MEAN BY HIGH-TEST OXYDOL?
WHY, IT'S THAT MARVELOUS NEW LAUNDRY SOAP THAT SO MANY OF MY FRIENDS ARE RECOMMENDING—YOU HEAR IT OVER THE RADIO SO OFTEN NOWADAYS...COME ON IN—I'LL SHOW YOU.
GRACIOUS! JUST LOOK WHAT FLOODS OF SUDS—I NEVER SAW ANYTHING LIKE IT!
BUT BEST OF ALL, HIGH-TEST OXYDOL'S GOT A WONDERFUL NEW INGREDIENT IN IT...GETS CLOTHES AS MUCH AS 9 TO 11 SHADES WHITER...IN RECORD TIME!
BUT ARE YOU SURE IT'S SAFE FOR WASHABLE COLORED THINGS, TOO?
POSITIVELY! I'VE WASHED THIS LITTLE COTTON PRINT OF MARILYN'S IN IT FOR MONTHS AND MONTHS—SEE HOW BRIGHT IT IS!
HONESTLY, IT'S A MIRACLE! I DON'T KNOW WHEN I'VE EVER SEEN CLOTHES COME ANY WHITER—OR SMELL NEARLY AS SWEET!

AND LOOK HOW THESE LINENS FAIRLY SPARKLE! HOW ON EARTH DO YOU DO IT, SALLY?
IT'S BECAUSE I'VE SWITCHED TO A MARVELOUS NEW SOAP, HIGH-TEST OXYDOL! YOU REALLY MUST TRY IT!

Registered Trade Mark

"WANT CLOTHES AS MUCH AS 9 to 11 SHADES WHITER? THEN SWITCH TO NEW HIGH-TEST OXYDOL"

If you want whiter washes, you simply owe it to yourself to try this new "miracle" soap. For the results it gives are so utterly amazing that thousands of women are changing to it . . . discarding their old favorite washday soaps as things of the past!

New High-Test OXYDOL can give such amazing results for it is a new-type soap, containing a remarkable new ingredient. An ingredient that vastly increases its white-washing power, yet keeps it SAFE for washable colors, and fabrics.

Tested against less efficient soaps, new High-Test Oxydol has been found to do these astonishing things:—

(1) Gets clothes as much as 9 to 11 shades whiter than bar and package soaps that lack its new "miracle" ingredient. Actual Tintometer shades—as shown by our laboratory tests. (2) Cup for cup—it gives up to three times the suds—suds that stand up 2 to 3 times longer.

Yet it is so SAFE that even cotton prints, given the equivalent of a full year's washing, showed no perceptible sign of fading—stayed looking bright and sparkling as new, wash after wash.

New High-Test Oxydol is economical, too. Each cup of it goes up to ¼ again as far as less modern soaps we have tested.

So, try new High-Test OXYDOL today.

OXYDOL
Every Package IS ESPECIALLY PROCESSED TO PREVENT "SNEEZY" SOAP DUST

When the first spoonful makes you want to SING...

THIS IS THE FLAVOUR FOR ME TRA-LA!

you know you're getting Kellogg's Corn Flakes, and no other!

If you didn't see the package, you'd still know Kellogg's by the grand taste! No other corn flakes have that mouth-watering flavour that is the secret of Kellogg's enormous popularity.

Impartial investigators found that 4 out of 5 housewives voted Kellogg's first for flavour. Taste experts agree . . . your palate tells you why!

And remember, that grand flavour gives you the kind of appetite that actually helps digestion. Serve Kellogg's Corn Flakes regularly. Order two or three packages from your grocer tomorrow.

Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

4 out of 5 vote for Kellogg's!

During the last three years more than 5,000 women have been asked: "What is your family's favourite cereal?" And each year Kellogg's Corn Flakes have won by a large majority. Last year, when housewives were asked specifically: "Which brand of corn flakes do you think tastes best?" 84%, or 4 out of 5 of those interviewed, said "Kellogg's!"

Your family, too, will enjoy Kellogg's Corn Flakes. When you eat out, ask for the triple-wrapped individual package.

Hint for the thrifty! The "30-second breakfast" comes in two sizes. Only costs a few pennies a serving for all the family's breakfast.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church was held at the home of the President, Mrs. Frank Doxtator on Thursday afternoon, May 1st, with an attendance of 22 members and 6 visitors. Members were delighted to have Mr. and Mrs. Enos Farnsworth of Belleville present, and both took part in the meeting. After the opening hymn, Rev. Mr. Farnsworth led in prayer. Roll was called by the secretary, Mrs. W. D. Robertson, and brought forth a good response of verses containing the word, Mother. Mrs. Arthur Houston, group leader then took charge, and after the next hymn passages of Scripture were read by Mrs. S. MacDonald, Mrs. C. Liddle, Mrs. Arthur Houston and Mrs. F. Doxtator. Mrs. Houston read from the Missionary Monthly. "Following Christ's Way of Service" and also led in responsive reading and prayer. After the next hymn, Mrs. C. Liddle read a poem "The Boy Jesus and His Mother." Mrs. Houston and Mrs. Doxtator both gave interesting and appropriate missionary readings.

Mrs. Houston welcomed Rev. and Mrs. Farnsworth to the meeting and called on Mrs. Farnsworth to speak. She told of the great forward temperance movement in Japan and India. As the missionary and temperance cause are very closely related in foreign countries here remarks were listened to with much interest. After the closing hymn, Mrs. Houston pronounced the Benediction. Collection amounted to ($3.50) and for flower fund ($1.19). Twenty-eight enjoyed the lovely lunch and social time and the thanks of the ladies are due Mrs. Doxtator for her kind hospitality.

COLLEGE HILL GROUP

The College Hill Group held their May meeting in the Sunday School rooms with the President Mrs. Burley in charge.

The meeting opened with hymn 401 followed by the Lord's Prayer. The treasurer's report was given. Plans for the box social were completed.

It was moved and seconded by Mrs. Garrison and Mrs. Thompson that the money raised for the War Victim's Fund viz $25.00, be sent in.

A quilt top and materials were donated and it was also resolved that each member donate an article of children's clothing to be sent to the war victims.

After a dainty lunch the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

GILEAD Y.P.U.

The regular meeting of the Gilead Y.P.U. was held at the home of Mr. Arthur Balcanquel. The meeting opened with quiet music by Annie Clare. The call to worship was given by the president. The Scripture lesson was read by Roy Huffman, meditation by Carman Huffman. A short business discussion was held. The Lord's Prayer closed this part of the meeting.

A hymn opened the next part of the meeting which was taken by Olive Ross. Readings were given by Nellie Striker, Carman Huffman and Willehmine Huffman. A piano solo was played by Ruth Livingston entitled "You Are My Sunshine," following a guitar selection and song by Annie Clare entitled "Carry On." Hymn 352 was sung and the Mizpah benediction closed the meeting. The hostess served candy.

Matrons' Slim Panelled Frock

By ANNE ADAMS

You'll hardly recognize yourself when you pose before the mirror in this attractive frock. For Pattern 4679 is expertly planned by Anne Adams to slim you beyond your fondest dreams. A well-shaped panel goes all down the front to give you height and take away from your width. The rounded shape of the shoulder yokes that so effectively hold-in the gathered softness are matched by curved hip-seaming, with easy skirt fullness below. The entire back of the frock is cut in two pieces, darted-in smoothly at the waistline. Merry scalloping is shown at the neckline, though a straight-edge version is included. Use ric-rac at the yokes and the optional cuffs for a colorful note. And try the front panel in contrast.

Pattern 4679 is available in women's sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 36 takes 3 5-8 yards 35-inch fabric and 1 3-8 yards ric-rac.

Send twenty cents (20c) in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) for this Anne Adams pattern. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Send your order to The Ontario Intelligencer Pattern Department, 166 Front St., Belleville, Ont.

New Costume Jewelry

By ALICE ALDEN

We can remember way back when the costume jewelry counter was a little space tucked away somewhere in a corner of the store. Now every store has a whole section devoted to costume jewelry, and there are shops that deal entirely in these delightful accessories. American costume jewelry was already on the way up before the present war, thanks to such designers as Clifford Furst of Castlecliff. With a bow to our colorful cousins south of the border, Furst has fashioned El Ranchero a cowgirl necklace composed of strands on strands of tiny beads ending in saddle color leather throngs. It is perfect for filling in a neckline or to liven up a dark frock. The hoop earrings are beautifully fashioned of two-tone gold metal.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Only Exceptional Girl Can Delete Love from Life

A girl of 22 has written me that she hasn't yet seen the man she'd marry. Her letter, which follows, speaks for itself:

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 22 years old and have yet to see the man I'd marry. Several have wanted to share their lot with me, but it seemed to me that they were just looking for an unpaid servant.

I have an excellent position and get a better salary than most of the boys I know. So, with me, it's a choice of punching the time clock or staying at home, doing all my own housework and getting nothing for it. My friends and my family think I'm hard, but I've seen enough of the struggles of my schoolmates to make me stop and think before I let myself in for the same thing.

Of course, I don't mean I'll marry only for money. I hope to marry for love; but at the same time I expect to have a little butter on my bread. I hope to have children and want to give them the best advantages and that just isn't possible when a family has to cut corners and try to get by without relief.

Do you think I'm really hard, or do I feel this way because I've never been really in love?

EDITH

The girl who wrote this letter is young enough to be able to speak of love almost as if it were a trifle, something that a hard-headed girl is better without.

She has seen girls suffer through love and the men who occasioned the suffering didn't seem heroic to her. That's what makes her think it isn't worth while. Girls not in love, in many cases, are spared a good deal of misery.

What would life be without love? It sounds like a simple program, doesn't it? Something tempts you to believe that a girl who is planning her emotional budget for the years to come can allow so much for friendship, so much for family affection, so much for devotion to business or profession. But for old-fashioned love, not an item.

However there are two difficulties in the way. One is that not more than one girl in a hundred is sufficiently hard of head and cold of temperament to succeed in keeping love out of her life whatever her youthful plans may be.

A girl who decides to do without cigarettes, candy, or ice-cream should easily be able to keep her word. But what woman can control the sudden, sweet surging of love in her heart? Love is, in fact, a life-giving element. Would you plan a garden without sunshine? Would you dream of a house without fuel? Quite as possible, I should say, as to lead a happy and successful life from which love has been carefully deleted.

Love is the very staff of life. Unhappiness often results when a girl isn't grown-up enough to handle her own love affair or sensible enough to find good advisers. Learn all you possibly can as to how you may wisely welcome love into your life.

But you will only be deceiving yourself if you imagine that love is a thing that can be ignored or completely rejected without heavy loss in the course of any career.

Use Care in Selection of Wedding Announcements

Like wedding invitations, announcements are engraved on folded white or off-white sheets of fine quality paper. If both formal invitations and announcements are sent, the style of engraving for the announcements should be the same as that used for the invitations.

Announcements should be ordered well in advance of the wedding date, so that they will be ready—engraved, addressed, stamped — to be mailed as soon as possible after the ceremony has been performed. Announcements are not sent to those who have been invited to either the ceremony or the reception.

In the announcements the hour of the ceremony is not given. But, unlike the invitation, the year is included and is spelled in full. The place where the ceremony was performed must also be given, and, if desired, the church in which it took place.

This is a typical form of announcement:

Mr. and Mrs. John Strong have the honor of announcing the marriage of their daughter
Joan
to
Mr. Robert Baldwin Clark
Tuesday the tenth of June
Nineteen hundred and forty-one
Fairfield, Quebec

The second line of the announcement may read 'have the honour of announcing" (the best form) or "have the honour to announce." The form "announce the marriage" is considered too abrupt. The word "honour" is spelled with the u, as it is in wedding invitations.

The year may be written either "Nineteen hundred and forty-one," or "One thousand, nine hundred and forty-one." The first form is usually used, since this is the natural way of referring to the year.

At Home cards may be enclosed with the announcements. Since the announcements are mailed after the ceremony has been performed, the married name is used.

A correct and practical form for the At Home card—practical because the plate may later be used for the engraving of a joint visiting card—is:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Baldwin Clark
At Home Ten Park Square
after the first of October Ottawa

(The words "At Home" may be omitted and only "After the first of October" used.)

Souvenirs?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When one leaves a banquet, is it proper to take the place card and the novelty nut or candy cup?

KATE

You may properly take your place card (but not the place-card holder!) and the nut or candy cup, if it is obviously a "favor" of the occasion.

Young Men Sponsor Enjoyable Dance At Springbrook

Bonarlaw — The dance held at Springbrook on Thursday evening of last week under the auspices of the young men of St. Mark's Church was a decided success. There was a splendid attendance. The Melody Makers' Orchestra furnished excellent music for both round and square dancing and Mr. Jas Mitts as floor manager was in excellent form.

The door prize was won by Mr. Fred Donohue and the lucky spot prizes were won by Miss Hilda Brown and Mr. Mel Heath.

One of the committee staged a "lemon dance" which caused a lot of merriment.

Fashion Flashes

PINT SIZE gals just love those heavy, stiff fabrics such as bengaline and faille for they are ideal when it comes to a trim waist and a flaring skirt. A smart little suit is made up of a fitted and flared frock of navy bengaline and a short fitted jacket of white bengaline, its sailor collar edged with blue.

ALL DAY DUTY for suits is made easy with a change of blouses and accessories. To give a dressy look to the plainest of suits wear one of the new lace blouses. A nice model is in coarse white lace with dolman sleeve, finished at the wrist with tiny self ruffles. Rhinestone buttons.

SOMETHING NEW in coats all the time. A new model is in navy sheer woolen with a deep hem flounce of matching blue taffeta. Narrow V collarless neckline, shirring at dropped shoulders and taffeta bow at the waist.

YOU'LL LOOK for the rain to come if you have found one of those grand raincoats of rubberized black satin. Nice with gloves and umbrella in stark white or deep red.

JUST WATCH and you'll find that one of the shoe hits of the season will prove to be a white elasticized suede pump with red kid for the back quarter and heel.

THE energies and faculties may be found under high impetus for accomplishment and notable achievement on this day, according to the lunar and mutual aspects. New projects of a surprising or unusual scope may be greatly accelerated, and should develop by hard labor and sound judgment to a satisfactory climax, but there seems to be a note of the perplexing, strange or erratic to complicate or frustrate the highest objectives. It might be an accident or other untoward event.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of definite action and progress, with affairs moving at lively tempo and under greatly accelerated forces and faculties. Important projects and high ambitions should advance upon high goals, with well organized plans, surprising objectives and much audacity and ingenuity, but a certain element of the strange, irregular and unpredictable may creep in to thwart or frustrate. Perhaps accident or queer visitation may temporarily impede progress in most constructive endeavors.

WILLKIE URGES SAFE DELIVERY OF BRITISH AID

Mayor La Guardia Also Addresses "Freedom Rally" in New York

CALL ON ROOSEVELT

By H. M. PETERS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, May 8 (CP)—Wendell Willkie and Mayor LaGuardia today placed the full weight of their influence behind the growing demand in the United States that the products of American factories be delivered safely to Britain and not allowed to rot beneath the Atlantic.

Willkie, Republican standard bearer in the 1940 elections, declared before 18,500 people in Madison Square Garden last night:

"I care not whether you call safe delivery convoying — patrolling — airplane accompaniment—or what not. We want those cargoes protected and at once and with less talk and more action. That is America's right and also her duty and also her self interest."

Not Intention of Act

La Guardia, Mayor of New York and co-chairman of the Canada-United States joint defence board, addressing the same audience, said that when Congress passed the lend-lease act it was not the intention of the American people that vessels taking goods to Britain should "serve as living targets for Nazi submarines."

By a rising vote the throng approved a telegram to be placed upon President Roosevelt's desk today calling for safe delivery of machines and materials "so sorely needed in the fight for freedom.

"If this means convoys, Mr. President, we call upon you as a free people's leader to supply them. We assure you of our faith in you and our loyal support of whatever measures you deem essential to a complete victory for democracy."

It was noted that the pledge vehemently cheered, carried no qualification such as "short of war."

A Freedom Rally

The occasion of the meeting was a freedom rally, sponsored by the New York chapter of the committee to defend America by aiding the Allies, and addressed briefly by representatives of Belgium, Czecho-Slovakia, Greece, The Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Yugoslavia. Flags of 14 occupied countries were carried to the stage by appropriately-dressed standard bearers.

The meeting was also a reply to the defeatism and despair preached in New York two weeks ago by Charles Lindbergh. Both Willkie and La Guardia took up his challenges although not mentioning him by name.

La Guardia declared that the crowd was thoroughly representative of all New York—not of one section of it. The crowd cheered this oblique criticism of Lindberg's meeting at which the names of Roosevelt and Churchill were booed by a crowd with a Germanic accent.

Speaks With Earnestness

Willkie, who speaks with great earnestness, declared that Hitler cannot win the war without conquering Britain.

"And Hitler can never successfully invade the isle of Britain provided her sea lanes are kept open. But by the same token Britain will probably fail unless America helps her immediately and effectively to keep those life lines unbroken."

Here he departed from his prepared text to exclaim:-

"People of America, Republicans and Democrats, those who voted for me and those who voted against me, I call upon you to keep that lifeline unbroken."

No Reason For Despair

Declaring his scorn for those posing as experts who say Britain cannot win the war, Willkie said:

"There is no reason for despair. The free people control the great resources of this world. Germany and Italy are in Europe and are shut off from their Japanese partner. Russia, a somewhat doubtful friend, cannot supply their economic needs owing to inadequate production and still more inadequate transportation. The British still control the seas and can draw on all the world's resources.."

Willkie said that if Americans work as they have never worked before "to produce and produce and produce....the schemes of boastful dictators cannot stand against us..

"When I think of the depths and of the heights within this American people, I say to Hitler:

"You have never met any people like us.

"And you had best implore whatever pagan god you believe in, that you may be spared the day."

Says 40 Nazi Fliers Shot Down So Far Trying to Fly Over Sweden

Toronto, May 8 (CP). — Forty German fliers had been shot down by Swedish anti-aircraft batteries up to the time he left Sweden, Paul Malles, staff writer of a Stockholm newspaper, said in an interview here today. He said the Nazis were downed when they tried to fly over his country.

Malles said Sweden is determined to preserve her neutrality. She will fight if her borders are violated.

RESCUE ATTEMPT FAILS

Boston, May 8 (AP).—The attempt of a mother to save her five-month-old baby from a lodging house fire by pasing him across a four-foot areaway to persons in a window of another building ended today with the child falling 30 feet to his death and Mrs. Alice Bowker, 27, the mother plunging from a third floor window in a frantic effort to grasp the boy as he fell and being taken, seriously injured, to a hospital.

War Against Subs Reported Gaining Ground

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Washington, May 8—(AP)—Parliamentary re-endorsement of Prime Minister Churchill's war leadership was so clearly foreshadowed that the virtually unanimous vote of confidence extended him is less interesting than certain remarks made during the preceding debate.

Both from the Prime Minister himself and from his Admiralty lieutenant, Capt. Austin Hudson, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, came intimations that Britain is finding means to scale down ship losses at sea. Details were withheld for obvious military reasons; yet in effect notice was given that British shipping loss figures for the last month are apt to prove less heavy than anticipated.

That can be deduced from Mr. Churchill's declaration that a dangerous shipping crisis would not come before 1942, and that United States ship construction would meet it then. Berlin claims that British tonnage losses since early April, when the last accounting was rendered in London, have been staggering. With definite knowledge of the facts, however, Mr. Churchill reiterated his prediction to Parliament that 1942, not 1941, would be the critical year at sea.

Combat U-Boat Scourge

Even more specific was the declaration of Captain Hudson that encouraging progress is being made offensively against the U-Boat scourge. He indicated that a heavy toll of submarines is being taken, although refusing to reveal numbers or methods.

Taken together, however, the two statements cover both phases of the sea battle around the British Isles, Mr. Churchill dealing with replacement tonnage and the naval spokesman, Captain Hudson, with counter offensive measures.

Just what has happened at sea can be deduced in some respects. Immobilization of the Nazi battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau in Brest harbor, France, since early in April, is an important factor. The heaviest shipping losses this year came in March while they were at sea. They have been bombed by the Royal Air Force nearly a score of times since they put into Brest to refuel or for repairs, and probably are out of action indefinitely now.

While those two well-armored and heavily-armed ships were at sea, British naval craft of equal or greater power must have been assigned to hunt them down. To what extent that reduced naval protection for ship convoys or anti-submarine patrols in the danger zone can only be conjectured; but with those menacing sea twins tied up, there has been no word of deep-sea major raids in the Atlantic.

Effect on Morale.

Captain Hudson's veiled reference to destruction of Nazi U-boats hinted at another item on the British score-sheet. Loss of skilled and experienced submarine commanders is probably a greater blow to the Germans than loss of the ships and their crews. Several of the most effective Nazi U-boat skippers have been reported captured or missing.

In submarines the commander is the vital human element, assuming normal efficiency of his ship and crew. He alone sees the target in a submerged attack. His skill and daring both as a navigator and as a torpedo trainer determine the battle efficiency of his craft.

First Great War records prove that. Some 112,000,000 tons of shipping was sunk by German U-boats in that war. Several hundred German submarine commanders were credited with causing more than a third of the total havoc wrought by U-boats.

Nazi submarines lost in this war may be quickly replaced. Competent U-boat commanders are not. Nor is the wear and tear on the nerves of Nazi U-boat crews to be ignored. The break in German morale in the last war started there.

Major League Races Wide Open As Leading Teams Show Slumps After Scoring Long Win Streaks

Cleveland and St. Louis Lose Two in Row and Leads Threatened

DODGERS CLIMB

By JUDSON BAILEY

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

There are no miracle teams in the major leagues this year and the pennant races today are as wide open as the day the season started.

After soaring along on spectacular winning streaks until their followers were fanned into a dangerous state of spring excitement Cleveland Indians and St. Louis Cardinals now have lost two games in a row and both the American and National Leagues are in as much confusion as when their first inter-sectional strife began 10 days ago.

The first five clubs in the American are separated by a total of only 4 1-2 games and the National again is in its hard-to-explain predicament of the Cards in first place by percentage although trailing Brooklyn Dodgers in games won and lost.

Dodgers Destroy Legend

The Dodgers, in fact, destroyed the legend that St. Louis had a collection of supermen by wringing out a 4-3 decision yesterday in a gripping drama that ended like a musical comedy when Manager Billy Southworth switched his pitchers four times for six batters in the last two innings and in spite of this intense strategy let Brooklyn load the bases without a hit and with none out in the ninth.

Southworth, who had used four hurlers to pitch a losing six-hit game at Boston Tuesday, emptied his bull pen yesterday before Pee-Wee Reese singled home the winning run in the ninth.

The Indians, who had received great pitching and timely hitting during their 11-game winning streak, had neither against New York Yankees as they mired down 7-5 on a rain-soaked diamond. The bombers raided Al Milnar and two other Indians for 15 hits.

Yanks Back In Second Place

This victory bounced the Yanks from fourth to second place in one hop and Boston Red Sox leaped from fifth to third with an 11-inning 4-3 decision over Chicago White Sox. The margin between John Rigney was Charley (Broadway) Wagner in their pitching duel was Ted Williams, who hit two home runs, one of them in the 11th to win for Wagner.

Detroit Tigers, after a day in second place and minus Hank Greenberg for the first time, were whipped 4-2 by Washington Senators and slipped to fourth. Sid Hudson smothered the Tigers with six-hit hurling.

St. Louis Browns captured a marathon 14-inning affair from Philadelphia Athletics 6-5 with Roy Cullenbine starring. He hit a three-run homer in the fifth and singled home the winning run in the 14th.

Home Run Only Score

A home run by Ernie Lombardi was the only run of the game as Cincinnati Reds squeezed New York Giants 1-0. Hal Schumacher, one of baseball's unluckiest hurlers, gave five hits to Bucky Walters' seven. But the Reds made four double plays in the first four innings and Eddie Joost set a major record for shortstops by handling 19 fielding chances. Only one fly was hit to the outfield by each team.

Chicago Cubs climbed out of the cellar by lambasting the Phillies 11-2.

Jim Tobin also pitched and batted his way to a 7-6 victory for Boston Braves against Pittsburgh Pirates.

ROYALS SECOND IN INT. LEAGUE BY GOOD HITTING

Power-Packed Team Picked by Experts to Win the Bunting

TWO GAMES PLAYED

(By The Associated Press)

Montreal Royals, breezing along in second place with a record of nine victories in their last 11 starts, have been winning most of their games in one big inning.

Picked as the club to beat at the start of the current International League campaign, the power-packed Royals seem to have the knack of exploding in the face of enemy pitchers without warning.

Yesterday Royals struck savagely again, scoring six runs in the first inning, and went on to beat Jersey City Giants, 9-5, in the only full game played. Baltimore nosed out Buffalo, 2-1, in a game which was halted after five innings because of rain, while rain and wet grounds forced postponement of contests at Rochester and Toronto.

Jersey City, striving for an even break in the four-game series, outhit Montreal, 14-11, but the big first inning settled the issue. Eleven men went to bat for Royals, chasing starting pitcher Frank Pearce and Roy Henshaw, who relieved him with one out. Bill Harris took over the mound duties for the Little Giants in the second and hurled four-hit ball the rest of the way.

The victory moved Montreal to within two games of the pace-setting Newark Bears and extended their margin over third-place Buffalo to two games.

The first inning proved a lucky one for Baltimore also, as the Birds scored both their runs in that stanza off Charlie Fuchs.

WORLD OF 'FOOT' GOING SATURDAY IN PREAKNESS

Indications a Blazing Pace Will be Set in Early Running

$50,000 PURSE

Baltimore, May 8 (AP)—If speed is what the customers want, they ought to see plenty of it in the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Saturday—and from the way things looked today, Whirlaway will have to do a lot of catching-up.

There's a world of "foot" in the probable field of six or seven. Indications were that a blazing pace would be set by front runners aiming to get plenty of daylight between themselves and Whirlaway before Warren Wright's Kentucky comet uncorks his vaunted "kick" in the stretch.

Our Boots, Royce Martin's colt who has licked Whirlaway in four out of six meetings but failed to show anything in the Kentucky Derby, stepped out as a speedster to be reckoned with when he worked a mile in 1:38 flat between races yesterday. That effort placed him right alongside King Ranch's Dispose, Wheatley Stable's King Cole and Crispin Oglebay's Ocean Blue as a speed merchant capable of cutting out a torrid pace. His sparkling trial, only three-fifths of a second over the track record, removed any doubt that Our Boots would be there when the field paraded to the post about 6 p.m. EDT Saturday for 1 3-16 mile and run for a $50,000 added jackpot.

Toronto Earl Greys Favored To Win Basketball Title

New Waterford, N.S., May 8 (CP)—Toronto Earl Greys were heavy favorites today to walk off with the Canadian intermediate basketball title after defeating New Waterford Strands 43-27 in the opener of their two-game final series for the crown. The teams go into the second game of their total-point encounter tonight.

The accurate throwing of tall Junior Fox, who scored 17 of their points, helped give Greys a 20-14 margin at the end of the first half. They increased the edge steadily through the second session.

Freddy Connors provided Strands main threat both defensively and offensively and his eight points kept them in the running during the early stages of the game.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated rPess)

Bill Lee, Cubs: Pitched five-hit ball against Phillies and batted two home runs himself.

Roy Cullenbine, Browns: Hit homer and three singles to drive in four runs, including winning marker in 14th innings against Athletics.

Ted Williams, Red Sox: Hit two home runs including one in 11th inning that beat White Sox.

Jim Tobin, Braves: Pitched and batted way to victory over Pirates, starting winning rally in ninth with single.

DODGERS BUY LLOYD WANER

'Big Poison' Accumulates Batting Average for 15 Years With Pirates of .338

By FRANKLIN BANKER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Pittsburgh, May 8 (AP)—The dynasty of the Waners with the Pittsburgh Pirates is at an end after 15 years in which two small but sure-hitting Oklahoma boys enshrined themselves in baseball as the game's greatest brother act.

Yesterday the Pirates gave up Lloyd Waner in an even swap for pitcher Nick Strincevich

The Pirates dropped Paul, older of the pair of veteran outfield and batting sovereigns, last December. "Big Poison," who batted an average of .338 over a period of 15 years with Pittsburgh to become one of the consistently great hitters of his day, is now with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Lloyd joined the Pirates one year after Paul. While he didn't collect all the hitting titles his brother did, he had his share. For instance, he's the National League's "hardest player to fan"—striking out only once every 45 trips to the plate. In 14 years he fanned but 158 times out of 7,219 at bat.

Lloyd was the "littlest" Pirate, 5 feet 7 and weighing 148. Paul is only 1 1-2 inches taller. Lloyd's lifetime batting is a comfortable .319.

The Waners hold the highest yearly hit average among the league's 1,000-hitters who have played more than a decade. Lloyd's mark is 202 hits per year and Paul's is a few hits higher.

Age was the one thing they couldn't beat. Paul is 38 and Lloyd 35.

GREENBERGMAKES FRIENDS AT CAMP

Detroit Outfielder Inducted in Army at Fort Custer, Michigan

Fort Custer, Mich., May 8 (AP)—Hank Greenberg, starting his first day in the army, had a legion of new friends today.

The former Detroit Tiger outfielder had been in camp less than an hour when word got around the huge government layout that "the big guy is regular."

The "big guy," drafted from a $50,000 baseball job, was subjected to the usual banter when he stepped down from the special train last night with 70 draftees from Detroit. Hank took it all smiling and handed out a bit of smart repartee that won over those who met him.

Officials arranged that Greenberg would receive Fort Custer's 15,000th uniform today. Hank arrived here after a three-hour day coach ride from Detroit. The draftees were hustled first to the reception centre mess hall where the big outfielder feasted on soup, baked spare ribs, mashed potatoes, salad and coffee.

At Battle Creek several hundred fans awaited Greenberg's arrival and called for him to appear on the rear platform.

"Shall I make an acceptance speech?" he laughed.

"We're all for you," the crowd called back.

That seemed to be the concensus of Fort Custer.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

The boxer who knew practically every trick in the game finally met his match. In the third round he found himself on his back, listening to the referee counting over him.

"One," roared the referee, "two three, four, five, six, seven."

The fighter reached up and grabbed the referee's wrist.

"I'm a little hard of hearing," he interrupted. "Would you mind repeating that?"

William Lang, of Toronto and considered one of the best fly casters in the business and outstanding naturalist, will be in Belleville next Monday night. Mr. Lang will show a series of moving pictures on angling hunting and nature, all of which he took himself and all receipts will be given to the Belleville Boys' Camp at Moira Lake. The showing will be held in Bridge Street Church auditorium. Last summer Bill Lang spent a great deal of time on Moira Lake the Trent and Crowe rivers and other places in Hastings County during which time he took many hundred feet of film showing the great fishing possibilities in this county. Mr. Lang has shown these films in many states in the U.S.A. to help more prominently publicize Canada and more especially Hastings County. During the evening Mr. Lang will speak on fly rod and casting which should be of interest to every angler in the district. Some of Mr. Lang's films are in natural color and who knows but some local anglers may recognize themselves in some of Mr. Lang's pictures taken throughout Central Hastings.

Preparations for the opening of the lawn bowling season will be the chief item of business when the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club convenes in their club house on Yeomans Street this evening. Harvey Stewart called to inform this corner that all members are urged to attend as plans for the season's activities will be thoroughly discussed. Incidentally the Lawn Bowling Club is seeking new members for their junior section thus assuring replenishment for another year.

Do you remember when War Admiral won the Kentucky Derby's 63rd renewal four years ago today. Man O'War's son, piloted by Charley Kurtsinger, covered the mile and a quarter in the second fastest time in the history of the event. Owner Samuel D. Riddle received $52,050.

John Kieran and other "Information Please" experts fanned on that favorite trick question of some baseball men: "If Commissioner Landis resigned and the major league clubs divided upon his successor, who would be able to cast the deciding vote?" Mystery Writer Rex Stout laughingly said, "Babe Ruth." Whereupon the visual audience guffawed. Kieran, puzzled, thought Judge Landis himself might cast the deciding vote. Quizmaster Clifton Fadiman told Kieran that Landis could not pass upon the selection of his successor. After repeating the query as to the identity of the one who could cast the deciding ballot, and receiving no further reply, Fadiman said: "The President of the United States." Stout interjected, "He's too busy already." This brought another laugh. Fadiman inquired of Kieran: "You don't mean I can teach you anything about baseball?" Kieran gave an emphatic answer in the affirmative. Fadiman then read the rule which states that if the vacancy exists three months, "either league may require the President of the United States to designate a commissioner." Fadiman, by the way, agreed with Stout that the Chief Executive is already "too busy."

Due to circumstances beyond control the K-Nine entry into the Ladies' Softball League was withdrawn yesterday. It is most unfortunate that the team to advance into the league finals in 1940 found it impossible to continue another season. However, it is possible that Jack McVeigh's lassies will be back into the fold another year. The withdrawal of the Kresge nine means the league schedule will have to be revised and a 30-game schedule will replace the original 42-game schedule as was necessary with the seven club set-up. In the meantime the remaining six clubs are girding their softabll loins for the opening of the league on Victoria Day week end.

Joe Shortt called this a.m. to say that the final day for entries into the local Ki-Y softball leagues would definitely close Saturday evening. There are openings for additional teams in the Bantam, Midget and Juvenile series and players desirous of affiliation should contact Mr. Shortt before Saturday.

"No. 36-114-611"; that is all Pte. Hank Greenberg is known as today, after having reported for duty in the United States army at Fort Custer, Mich., yesterday. The American League's most valuable player of 1940 arose the earliest in his colorful career yesterday when he left his bed at 6.00 a.m. There were hectic scenes in the recruiting office as Greenberg , accompanied by catcher Billie Sullivan of the Tigers, reported at headquarters. In his absence from his position in left field for the Tigers, Ned Harris, 24-year-old outfielder from Beaumont in the Texas League, will try and fill Greenberg's place. He batted .312 last year.

Sport Spice — Looks as though Larry McPhail is bound and bent to win the National League flag this year of 1941....MacPhail's latest move was the purchase of Lloyd Waner, veteran Pittsburgh outfielder, who has a lifetime batting average something like .338 ....The deal saw pitcher Strancevich, rookie moundsman, acquired by the Pirates in a straight trade of players....The Dodgers beat the Cardinals to close the breach in the National League yesterday while the Yankees beat the Indians to move into second place and no doubt cause some discern in the Cleveland camp over today's game.... Corbys A.C. and the Juniors are staging an impromptu softball game at Coleman Flats this evening during which the new playing regulations over the enlarged diamond will be experimented with....There will be no more than seven starters in the Preakness at Baltimore on Saturday, with Whirlaway facing the toughest opposition of his young career....Some of the experts still select Our Boots to win Saturday, despite the fact he was 15 lengths in arrears in the Derby ....Maybe he was running first in the next race.

WALL STREET

New York, May 8 (AP).—While the stock market had little bullish news inspiration today it managed to keep its balance and, here and there, tack modest plus signs on favorite issues.

The list shifted unevenly in slow dealings during the forenoon but declines in many instances were replaced with small advances near the fourth hour.

Bonds maintained their equilibrium while recently buoyant commodities took a rest at lower levels.

Stocks ahead occasionally included N.Y. Central, General Motors, United Aircraft, Sears Roebuck, Anaconda, American Smelting and J. C. Penney.

Canadian issues were quiet and unchanged. In the bond market Canada 4s were ¼-point higher.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 8 (CP). — Gold shares held their ground today in the early hours of the Toronto stock market while index losses were posted by other groups. Industrials, off .42 at noon had the only sizeable decline, mainly on the weakness of the senior oils and the foods. Volume was small at 58,000 shares for the first three hours.

Fanny Farmer sold off ⅝ to 22, a new low for the year and Loblaw A, selling ex-dividend 37½ cents, was ⅝ lower at 24⅝. International Petroleum weakened ⅛ to 15¼.

Kerr-Addison, Pioneer, Pamour, Upper Canada and Preston were soft spots in the golds against gains for Sylvanite and Wright-Hargreaves. Base Metals showed little change and in the Western Oils, prices were down slightly for Calgary and Edmonton and Pacalta.

Easing Tendencies In Produce Prices

Toronto—Easing tendencies were evident in butter and eggs on the Toronto open produce market yesterday, although no material change occurred in prices.

The butter market was barely steady under the prevailing cautious trading. Nearness of the main production season and the minimum price question were the reasons given for the wary buying. While offerings were not heavy, supplies were adequate for the light demand. Ontario No. 1 grade creamery solids were still quoted at 29½ cents a pound.

An easier tone developed on the egg market in late dealings when current arrivals were not clearing too readily. Grade "A" pullets in particular were draggy. Grade "B" eggs, however, attracted considerable attention and the price on this grade was firm.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, May 8 —(CP)— Produce market prices here as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Brockville, Ont., May 8 (CP). — Adrien L'Allien of Montreal suffered face cuts, bruises and a severe shaking up here yesterday when the heavy transport truck he was driving jumped the curb, snapped a telephone pole at its base and continued more than 100 feet before stopping.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $1,000.

FOOT CRUSHED BY PIECE OF STEEL

Thos. McGrath, R.R. No. 1 Read, suffered a severely crushed foot on Wednesday afternoon when a piece of heavy steel fell upon it while he was engaged in his duties as an employee of the Central Bridge Company at Trenton. The injured man was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital where an X-ray examination disclosed that his foot and toes were badly crushed. Dr. R. A. Flynn, attending physician, stated this morning that it will be a matter of three or four weeks before Mr. McGrath will be able to return to his job.

Early Model Of High-Wheel Bicycle Arouses Interest

Reminiscences of the cycling days of sixty-five years ago when bicycling was in its infancy are brought to the mind of older residents of the city with the appearance of a bicycle of 1875 vintage which is daily on exhibition outside the show window of the Uptown Tire and Battery Service on Front Street. The wheel, one of the once popular "ordinary" models which saw service between 1875 and 1890, before the conventional make of equal sized wheels came into being, is the object of much attention by passersby.

According to old-timers, learning to ride the "ordinary" bicycle with its 60-inch front wheel and 16-inch rear wheel was a rather tricky business and this assertion is borne out by several local lads who have attempted to manoeuvre the now strange vehicle on display at the Front Street address. With the seat placed almost directly over the large front wheel, it requires considerable agility on the part of the rider to overcome the tendency of the rear wheel to leave the ground when pressure is applied to the pedals.

The "ordinary" model on display is in remarkably good condition considering its age and the sound rubber tires are still on the wheels although they show considerable wear. Pedals compare quite favorably in appearance with those of today's conventional bicycle and are attached directly to the large front wheel and operate in the same manner as those of a tricycle. The riding qualities of the seat are to be doubted, however, as it is made entirely of steel, quite unlike the soft cushy leather models which grace the wheel of today.

Although formerly owned by a local man it is not known when the old bicycle last saw service on Belleville streets but the "ordinary" lost favour with the introduction of the present styled wheel in 1890. Cycling was expensive fifty years ago it seems, as the price tag on the "ordinary" ranged anywhere from $150 to $225.

Picton and District

Picton, May 8 (Special)—Fire yesterday completely gutted a garage owned by Clare Newman and also burned a car owned by Dr. C. E. Wright. The blaze started on the first floor of the building, which was used as a garage. The car caught fire before it could be saved and was a complete loss. In the upstairs portion of the building was a quantity of household effects which had been stored there by Dr. Wright and these were also lost.

A garage a few feet distant, owned by Ernest Wright, caught fire on the west side and was damaged. Some household effects enabled firemen to get the flames quickly under control. Cause of the blaze is not known.

Local stores observed their first Wednesday half holiday of the season yesterday. These will continue through September, three months longer than previously.

Repair Highway

Workmen are busily engaged in repairing the highway between Picton and Belleville but it is in a very bad shape yet. The stretch between Belleville and Mountain View is the worst, with many large holes. While gravel has been used to fill many of the worst holes, cars scatter it, leaving sharp edges, which are hard on tires and bring out all the squeaks. County road trucks are engaged in repairing county roads which are also in a bad state.

Miss Betty Alexander who was married this week was presented with a rose chenille bedspread by the staff of the Fraser store before her departure. She was also presented with many gifts at a shower by relatives and friends at Yerexville.

Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Allison were called to town from Ottawa this week owing to the death of Mrs. Allison's father, Marshall Branscombe.

Dr. G. W. Morden, Napanee, visited friends in town this week.

Passing Red Lights May Be Bad Sign

Such Lapse May Show One in Borderline Feebleminded Class

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

Richmond, Va., May 8 (AP) — Don't drive through any more red lights, for such a lapse is a sign you may be in the borderline feebleminded class.

This reason why a surprisingly large number of persons go through red lights came out today in a report by Dr. Lowell S. Selling to the American Psychiatric Association. It was based on a study in Recorder's Court, Detroit, of 305 persons up for traffic violations, who proved to be on the mental borderline.

Running through red lights, and passing stop signs of other sorts was the one thing they did most. Some offered cute reasons.

One who did not halt for a stop street, insisted to the Judge that he did stop. Reminded that two arresting officers swore he only slowed down, the offender said:

"Oh, yes, Judge, I came to a rolling stop."

Another common excuse of these drivers was that their brakes did not hold. Frequently, the report said that was truth, but the driver didn't know how to keep the brakes in order.

These borderline people had intelligence test ratings of 43 up to 75. However, more than merely a paper test was necessary to establish that they were on the feebleminded edge.

The Day in Parliament

(By The Canadian Press)

TODAY

The House will continue the budget debate.

The Senate stands adjourned to May 13.

YESTERDAY

The House heard Prime Minister Menzies of Australia deliver from the House floor, a message of confidence and determination in the outcome of the war; A plea by Capt. George White (Con. Hastings-Peterborough) for low railway fare for service men travelling on leave; Criticism of Canada's present scale of war spending from Maxime Raymond (Lib. Beauharnois-Laprairie) and a request by A. M. Nicholson (C.C.F.—Assiniboia) that the housing shortage be regarded as an urgent national problem.

Esposito Brothers Back In Sing Sing To Die In Chair

Ossining, N.Y., May 8 (AP) — The Esposito brothers, tough products of New York's "dead end" streets, came back to Sing Sing yesterday—this time horizontally.

They were dragged and carried into the prison by five deputies who blackjacked them after the prisoners made two last desperate attempts to escape.

The guards had brought them "up the river" from New York where they were sentenced to die in the electric chair for a Fifth Avenue holdup slaying last January.

At the Ossining railroad station, guards and prisoners squeezed into a taxicab. As the car neared the prison, both Anthony, 38, and William, 28, lunged forward in a futile attempt to butt their heads at the cab driver. The driver stopped his car and the guards yanked the brothers out.

As they walked toward the administration building, Anthony broke away from his guard and swung viciously at another. His punch missed—and the deputies swung blackjacks at both brothers, knocking them to the ground. Then the prisoners were hustled inside — half carried and half dragged.

For years, Anthony, ("the toughets gorilla who ever walked the streets of New York," the District Attorney's office said) and William, robbed and killed for a living—always together. Here they were separated—placed in "private" death cells far from those housing other killers, there to stay until they go to the chair the week of June 16.

Jan. 14 last they shot to death Alfred Klausman as he carried a payroll in an elevator of a New York building. They raced on to crowded Fifth Avenue, terrorized throngs of noon-day shoppers, killed a patrolman and shot a taxi driver and a bank employee. A chase ended in their capture.

PLANE PASSED THROUGH STORM

Story is Revealed of Experience of Eden and Dill on Way to Middle East Early This Year

London, May 8 (CP Cable)—It was disclosed today that the plane which took Foreign Secretary Eden and Gen. Sir John Dill, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, to the Middle East early this year was caught in the great storm which sank 15 ships in the River Tagus and reached Gibraltar with only 10 minutes, gasoline supply left.

Philip Noel Baker, member of parliament, said he learned the story from the pilot. The storm was so bad, he said, that the pilot asked if he should return but Mr. Eden said "push on."

The Foreign Secretary, reviewing his trip in the House of Commons speech on Tuesday, said merely that there had been "certain unhelpful eccentricities of the weather."

DIRECT HITS MADE ON NAZI WARSHIPS

Second Attack This Week on Brest — Considerable Damage Done to Naval Base

London, May 8 (CP)— British air raiders made direct hits on the battleships Scharnhorst, and Gneisenau with heavy armor-piercing bombs in an attack on the German naval base at Brest last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Later the ministry's news service said that a "large and brilliant explosion" resulted when a very heavy bomb hit the forepart of the Scharnhorst and another equally heavy bomb was seen to burst immediately forward of the Gneisenau's funnel.

Attacks also were made, a communique said, on the Nazi submarine base at St. Nazaire, docks at Bremen, oil refineries at the mouth of the Loire River and docks and shipping at Bergen, Norway.

Two planes were missing from the night's operations.

The Air Ministry News Service said the first bombs dropped on two large oil refineries and oil storage plants at the mouth of the Loire "found the target and, when the following aircraft came in, observers saw great fires suddenly appear....

"One by one tall chimneys of the refineries were toppled over..very soon a wide area was well alight. The countryside which shortly before had stood out distinctly in the full moonlight became completely obscured by rolling billows of smoke."

The Ministry's News Service said that when another force of coastal command Blenheim bombers raided the harbor and shipping at Bergen, Norway, the pilots found a cloudless sky over their targets, with visibility extremely good.

"The crews were able to make perfect runs over the target and carry out precision bombing," the Service commented.

It was the second time this week that the R.A.F. scored direct hits on the two 26,000-ton war vessels, reported to have been sheltering at Brest for more than five weeks.

Numerous hits on quays at which the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau are berthed have been repeatedly reported as the result of earlier raids.

The attack on Brest last night was described as heavy and it was said that "considerable damage" was done to the naval base itself.

St. Nazaire was heavily bombed and large fires were started, a communique said.

Poor Weather Hampers R.A.F.

Unfavorable weather over Germany hampered R.A.F. bombers, the Air Ministry said, but some broke through to inflict considerable damage on warehouses and other industrial buildings in Bremen. En route across the North Sea the British planes attacked German shipping off the Netherlands coast, the Ministry added.

Two British bombers failed to return from these night operations and another was missing from a daylight mission Wednesday.

The coastal command carried out the attacks on the Loire refineries and docks in Norway without loss of a plane.

The fighter command destroyed six Nazi fighters and two bombers during daylight hours Wednesday, with a loss of two of its own craft.

Churchill's Address Praised Generally By London Papers

London, May 8 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill's war review in the House of Commons and the vote of confidence given his government was praised generally in the morning newspapers with the exception of the Daily Herald which contended that "Mr. Churchill decided that we were more in need of amusement than enlightenment."

"Mr. Churchill's statement was robbed of reality," the newspaper argued. "The country expected assurance that every branch of war production would be the immediate subject of a ruthless overhaul. It anticipated a detailed explanation of the recent changes in the government—particularly the change which translated Lord Beaverbrook from Minister of Aircraft Production into Minister of State."

The Times said, on the other hand, that "the vote of confidence reflects the carefully weighed and considered view of the House of Commons; and once again Commons has expressed the stern unyielding will of the whole nation."

A Long Tough Fight

"What emerges from the debate?" asked the Daily Express. "That this to be a long war, a tough fight, a battle in which all men have to make big sacrifices. And that the man with the greatest confidence in victory is Mr. Churchill himself....he prepares us for more setbacks, more shortcomings, more hardships but he sees the goal through it all."

"The Prime Minister was frank in admitting mistakes and offered no soothing syrup of promises that Ministers and Commanders would never err again....The distinction he made between mistakes of overboldness and enterprise and mistakes of languor and timidity was heartily approved by the House and he no longer had any difficulty in convincing members that the government....is not likely to be guilty of the sin of weakness."

WILLKIE, KNOX

Willkie Wants Action.

Willkie, meanwhile, was telling a "freedom rally" in New York that delivery of lease-lend supplies to Britain must be insured by "conveying—patrolling—airplane accompaniment—or what not . . . we want those cargoes protected and at once, and with less talk and with more action."

Before Nye and Willkie took to the air to campaign opposite views, a new element was injected into the convoy debate by Maritime Commission figures purporting to show that less than four per cent of British aid ships leaving United States ports had been sunk in the first three months of 1941.

Chairman Called To Testify.

Struck by such apparent small losses, the Senate Commerce Committee called the commission's chairman, Emory S. Land, to appear today "with all possible facts and figures about ships sunk carrying aid supplies to England from this country."

He charged that "the interventionists are putting the people of America on the spot" with strategy designed to give "the President a chance to demonstrate that he was being pressured into convoying."

Earlier in the day Navy Secretary Frank Knox said that the navy was ready, if called upon, to assure safe delivery of supplies to Britain. He referred indirectly to the delivery question later in an extemporaneous speech at a banquet meeting of the American Booksellers Association, saying:

"We are living in fearful danger. The only safety for us is to supplement the forces of Britain. . . . You see what it would mean if this bridge of ships was not maintained."

Anti-Convoy Leaders Active.

Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, also mentioned the subject during the day, telling reporters that Hitler "is straining every nerve to cut the lifeline to Britain. It is impossible to exaggerate the urgency and the need of all possible action to hold it intact."

Anti-convoy leaders, however, lost no time in citing the Wartime Commission figures of comparatively few lease-lend shipment losses in the war at sea.

The figures were contained in a letter from Chairman Land to Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Rep.-Michigan) who placed them before the Senate yesterday. The letter, a reply to an inquiry from Vandenberg, said that only eight out of the 205 ships clearing American ports for Britain between Jan. 1 and Mar. 31 had gone to the bottom.

After the letter had been made public a Maritime Commission official emphasized that the figures applied only to outbound ships, and asserted that "sinkings have been much heavier on west-bound trips."

Administration leaders, while manifesting surprise at the low percentage of losses, were unyielding in their opposition to a statutory prohibition against convoys.

The House turned down 220-160 a recommittal motion that embraced a ban against transfer of any of the Axis ships to Britain. Proponents of this prohibition contended such transfers would amount to "acts of war".

The final roll call on passage of the bill found 220 Democrats, 51 Republicans and three Progressives voting in favor, and 19 Democrats, 100 Republicans and one American Labor registered against.

FRENCH-GERMAN

No Indications of What Modifications Are

There was no indication what modifications of the armistice convention might be in the offing.

The Germans, however, have geen rumored to be demanding passage from Nazi troops through the unoccupied zone, naval bases in the Mediterranean and axis leeway in French North Africa.

Besides the cut in the daily French payments to Germany, which was called a possible "first reduction," it had previously been announced that agreement had been reached for relaxation of restrictions of travel, transportation and a communication across the demarcation line between the occupied and unoccupied zones.

Newspapermen were told "negotiations still are going on." A spokesman, suggesting an outline for "possible articles," told them the negotiations represent "the first positive results since the armistice" and show a "large measure of good will for collaboration on the part of the Reich."

David Lloyd George Abstained From Voting

London, May 8 (CP). — David Lloyd George, who was the government's sharpest critic in the House of Commons war debate yesterday, abstained from voting in the confidence test which the government won 447 to 3, it was disclosed today.

Another critic, Leslie Hore-Belisha, former war secretary, supported the government.

The three "no" votes were cast by Communist William Gallacher, Socialist Denis Pritt, and Dr. Alfred Salter, Labor.

BRITISH PLANES

"Following our successful action on May 6 against a portion of the Iraq army which, at the instigation of military adventurers, treacherously attacked Habbaniyah, the situation both at Habbaniyah and Basro has remained quiet," said the communique.

"Our captures include six guns and over 400 prisoners."

Basra is a port of entry to Iraq, at the head of the Persion Gulf, some 300 miles southeast of Baghdad. Habbaniyah is about 60 miles west of Baghdad.

The brief communique reported only activity of British patrols in the Toruk and Salum sectors of the North African front.

In Ethiopia, it said British forces were drawing closer to Amba Alaji, the last Italian stronghold on the Addis Ababa-Asmara road, and had captured additional prisoners.

Cairo, May 8 (CP)— Military experts here expressed belief today the British campaign against dissident Iraqi elements was nearing its end as the axis powers so far failed to provide obviously-needed assistance to their friends in the oil country.

It was disclosed last night that British troops and the Royal Air Force had dealt severe blows to the forces of the pro-axis per Rashid Ali Al Gailani who seized power through a coup d'etat last month.

The R.A.F. systematically destroyed most of the Iraq air force while ground troops regained control of the oil pumping station at Rutba, about midway in the Mosul-Haifa pipeline. Simultaneously the Iraq artillery siege of the Royal Air Force station at Lake Habbaniyah collapsed.

Credit for raising the siege of the airport was given largely to gunners manning howitzers, who, with their equipment, were flown to positions near the base after debarking from ships reaching Basra at the head of the Gulf of Persia.

Closely-co-ordinated ground and air attacks inflicted heavy losses on the Iraqis and more than 300 were captured before the airport.

British Losses Negligible

(In London yesterday Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons that approximately 1,000 Iraqis had been killed or wounded during the first five days of the rebellion instigated by Rashid Ali and that up to that time 434, including 26 officers, had been capture.)

British losses were described as negligible.

Beirut, Lebanon, dispatches said Iraqi were seeking to explain the uprising as due to a "misunderstanding."

Such reports were in line with opinion expressed previously here that the heart of the great majority of the people was not in the fight.

It was also suggested in some circles that Rashid Ali expected help from Germany and that arrangements for German co-operation exploded because Rashid Ali began hostilities prematurely, catching the German unprepared.

BRIGHT MOONLIGHT

Authorities Jubilant

The authorities naturally were jubilant at the success of the night fighters but warned against belief the night bomber menace has been conquered.

It was emphasized that results such as last night's cannot be expected on cloudy nights. Interception was also easier last night because the raiders, striking at western areas, had to fly farther than if London or Plymouth had been the targets.

"There was no witchcraft" informed sources said. "It was a clear night and the boys are getting better at interception."

In addition to the 22 planes downed by fighters and one by anti-aircraft fire, it was estimated 10 or more of the raiders were damaged and possibly brought down.

One source estimated 300 Nazi bombers flew over Britain last night. This is not a record number, so the new toll of planes shot down could not be explained purely as merely the result of a greater number of potential targets.

It was noted that only twelve R.A.F. planes have been shot down over Germany or German-occupied territory at night-time this month, compared with 73 Germans, a ratio six to one in favor of Britain.

Apart from the night raiders, 14 Nazi aircraft were downed in daylight and two others were destroyed by the Royal Navy, making a total of 89 for the first eight days of May.

On a basis of four men put out of action in each German plane shot down, Germany in a week has lost more than 300 flying personnel.

The German attack last night on Liverpool was heavy, but apparently not as violent as some directed against the big west coast port earlier in the week.

Sharp attacks were aimed at the Humber River area on the east coast, the Bristol Channel region in the southwest and several towns in the northeast.

Bombs also were dropped in East Anglia, southwest England and other widely separated points, but the government said small damage and few casualties resulted.

Moonlight Helps Raiders

Bright moonlight guided the Germans to their targets, but made them particularly vulnerable to attack by British fighters.

The raids followed a short but violent bombardment of the Dover coast by German long-range guns installed on the French shore, resulting in the death of five persons and injuries to others.

The successes of British fighter planes last night brought to 48 the number of German aircraft reported shot down during the past 48 hours—including eight destroyed in daylight yesterday.

The King himself visited the airdrome of a famous British fighter squadron last evening, had supper with the pilots and wished them good luck before they took off to battle the German raiders.

His Majesty walked unannounced into the fighters' messroom, spent considerable time in the operations room and later climbed into the cockpits of fighting planes standing ready on the field.

Number of Planes Damaged

The Air Ministry News Service said that in addition to the planes reported downed last night a number of others were damaged.

Three of the German planes destroyed by fighters were hit over air fields in Northern France by R. A. F. pilots who awaited returning raiders, the News Service said.

Pilots just initiated to night fighting scored their first successes last night, the service continued, adding that "one pilot, who has made a habit of getting two a night, repeated again by shooting down two Heinkel 111's within a few minutes."

One fighter squadron reported four German planes "definitely destroyed," another squadron claimed three and two other groups each were credited with two.

An R.A.F. pilot, shot in the hand and forearm by the gunner of the German machine he was attacking, brought down his opponent and then flew safely back to his base.

Another pilot, describing a long chase, said:

"I went after him for all I was worth and got him after about 40 miles, giving him a long burst with my guns. Although he tried firing at me, the erratic behavior of his machine spoiled the gunner's aim. He was well on fire after my second burst and I circled around and watched him crash."

82-Year-Old Man Wrecks Police Cell At Minden

Lindsay Ont., May 8 (CP)—When an 82-year-old Haliburton man started to wreck the police cell at Minden at 3 a.m. today, the guard telephoned Provincial Constable George MacPherson. The Provincial Constable arrived to find he had broken into a second cell, used as a storage room. The constable was met with a rain of old bottles, some full of confiscated liquor. Glass and liquids flew and before he was finally handcuffed, one bottle struck the constable on the side of the neck. Another dislocated a tooth.

Brought to Lindsay he fought the guard and constable practically all the way. He was finally placed in the Lindsay lockup and shortly afterwards "passed out" from exhaustion. A charge of vagrancy has been preferred.

A boarding party from the Canadian auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert leaves the American liner President Garfield, after taking four German fliers (in civilian clothing in small boat) off while the ship was 400 miles from Honolulu.

While sailors from the Canadian auxiliary cruiser Prince Robert stood guard, the four German fliers aboard the American liner President Garfield were marched to the rail and down a Jacob's ladder aboard a small boat preparatory to transfer to the cruiser. Between sailors in centre is Ewald Flesch (wearing hat) and behind him Guenther Katzke. The incident occurred in the Pacific ocean when the Germans were attempting to reach their homeland via the Orient.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any druggist and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

AT THE BELLE

"The Trial of Mary Dugan"

For seventy minutes of exciting screen entertainment chalk up a "must see" for "The Trial of Mary Dugan," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

In the new courtroom melodrama Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer presents the combined talents of two of its most up-and-coming young stars—Robert Young and Laraine Day—and a supporting cast of screen favorites.

In the title role, Miss Day sweeps forward from her smash performance in Foreign Correspondent and The Bad Man. As the bewildered little secretary who must stand trial for her life she plays the most difficult role of her career and comes off with flying colors. It's her first role since being named the outstanding young actress of 1940 by her fellow workers in the film colony.

As the inexperienced young lawyer who wins his sweetheart's acquittal, Young turns in another flawless performance. In this film more than any other, he shows why he is one of the most sought-after actors in Hollywood. He has the knack of acting so smoothly that he appears to be not acting at all.

The picture is based on the Bayard Veiller stage success and deals with a girl who escapes from a reformatory and attempts to start life over in the outside world. She succeeds to the extent of winning the confidence of an employer and the love of a young lawyer. But then fate steps in. She becomes the accused in a sensational murder trial and her past is revealed.

The state has an air-tight case against her. Even her attorney's attempts to defend her are half-hearted. But when her young lawyer sweetheart returns from abroad and finds her on trial, he believes her innocent. He takes over the case himself. Slowly he collects fragments of evidence and then in a sensational denouncement proves that the girl could not have committed the murder and at the same time pins crime on the guilty person.

"Ride, Kelly, Ride," Exciting Film

Previewers have tipped" us off in advance about "Ride, Kelly, Ride." This fast-moving 20th Century-Fox film which is announced as the companion feature attraction, is a "sure-winner" for entertainment seekers!

Here are just some of the reasons why "Ride, Kelly, Ride" promises thrilling entertainment—It's played by a grand cast headed by Eugene Pallette, Marvin Stephens, Rita Quigley and Mary Healy. Based on one of Peter B. Kyne's most popular novels, it tells the thrilling story of a jockey, a girl and a thoroughbred—a combination that won't lose!

Marvin Stephens plays the boy who is coached to be a top-flight jockey by portly Eugene Pallette. Their drama becomes tense and thrilling as crooked operators attempt to fix a race and in a thrilling climax Stephens boots home a winner.

"Battle of Brains" is the latest of the popular Canada Carries On series to be exhibited on the same program.

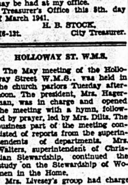
HOLLOWAY ST. W.M.S.

The May meeting of the Holloway Street W.M.S., was held in the church parlors Tuesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Hagerman, was in charge and opened the meeting with a hymn, followed by prayer, led by Mrs. Dilts. The business part of the meeting consisted of reports from the superintendents of departments. Mrs. Walters, superintendent of Christian Stewardship, continued the study on the Stewardship of Women in the Home.

Mrs. Livesey's group had charge of the program for the afternoon. This part of the meeting was opened with a hymn, a Scripture reading followed by four ladies in the group. Mrs. MacDonald sang very effectively a solo "Queen of the Earth." Mrs. Livesey introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. Farnsworth. She told how Temperance and Missions were closely related. One serves the other and they both serve Christ. The work of Temperance is women's work, or as Frances Willard used to say, organized mother love. Women hold the key to the drink evil. How have we measured up? Women in many lands are joining hands to stamp out this terrible curse. The meeting closed with the hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be," and the Benediction.

Swimming Coach Joins Navy

Toronto, May 8 —(CP)— Johnny Devlin, well-known swimming coach, has abandoned his coaching for the duration of the war and joined the navy. Devlin today moved to the Toronto barracks of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve with the rank of sub-lieutenant.



Thrills, spills and exciting to the finish is "Ride, Kelly, Ride," co-starring Marvin Stephens and Rita Quigley, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Leather-Pushers"

Combining thrills, action and comedy, Universal's fast moving hit "The Leather-Pushers" is the current attraction at the McCarthy theatre.

Co-starring Richard Arlen and Andy Devine, with Astrid Allwyn in the leading feminine role, the film traces the exciting career of a boxer, played by Arlen, from his accidental "discovery" to his sensational bout for the championship.

Horace MacMahon Shemp Howard, Douglas Fowley, Eddie Gribbon and Charles D. Brown have chief supporting roles. "The Leather-Pushers" is a knockout comedy and a riot of action do not miss it.

"Edith Fellows"

Delightful is the word for the co-feature attraction also now at the McCarthy theatre "Her First Romance" co-starring Edith Fellows and Wilbur Evans.

Authored by Adele Comandini, whose clever understanding of the problems of adolescent love was first demonstrated in her screen play for the picture "Three Smart Girls" first Deanna Durbin film, this new feature gives Edith Fellows her first grown-up singing role and with it, a chance to embark on a new career.

Imported from the concert stage to play the male lead, Wilbur Evans well-known baritone, blends his voice with Miss Fellows' to make music which will thrill any audience.

Miss Fellows plays the part of Linda Strong in the picture. Linda is the typical student, but when she rolls down the hill into the stream where Wilbur Evans is trout fishing she loses her glasses, gets an invitation to her first dance, and is well on her way toward spoiling the matrimonial plans of her older sister Eileen.

"Her First Romance" guaranteed to make many new friends for Miss Fellows, also features Jacqueline Wells, as the self-centred older sister Eileen and Judith Linden of "Meet the People," fame, in the role of Marian, who gets her fiance back from Eileen with the help of Edith. Alan Ladd, plays the part of fiance John Gilman, who can't make up his mind between the two charmers.

The film is based on the novel "Her Father's Daughter" by Gene Stratton-Porter.

An excellent Walt Disney cartoon in technicolor "The Autograph Hound" also the second chapter of "The Green Archer," Edgar Wallace's mighty serial story entitled "The Face at the Window" is also presented at each performance. The entire program will run continuous on Saturday.

"Penny Serenade"

The McCarthy theatre will present all next week, Irene Dunne and Cary Grant in "Penny Serenade."

Ceremonies Will Precede Opening Of Softball Season At Trenton

Trenton —(Special)— The 1941 softball season will swing into action tomorrow night with Mayor Harry Cory pitching the first ball of the season and with a councillor behind the plate.

The Air Force and the Lion's Club Boys' Band will take part in the opening ceremonies and in the parade that will be held before the game. Citizens, civic officials and softball players will join in the parade which is to be under the supervision of Sgt.-Major E. Almey, D.C.M. The parade will form up on the market square and parade to Front Street and west on Dundas Street to Bayside Park.

The R.C.A.F. Fliers, last year's Intermediate "B" Provincial Champions, will meet the Continental Cans in the opening game of the season, and it is expected that a record crowd will turn out for the game.

Following the opening game of the season for the men, a meeting will be held at the Town Hall in an effort to organize a girls' league, similar to the one in Belleville. The project is still in its formative stages but enthusiasm is increasing.

One team of girls is already organized according to Miss Gertrude Blashke, who is taking the initiative in forming the league and prospects are bright for at least two other teams.

The girls' league in Belleville proved a success last year and efforts are being made to interest a number of merchants and business men in this town to aid the formation of a league. President Jesse Baker of the Trenton Softball League has offered assistance in forming the league and it is hoped that at least five teams will take part.

Customs Receipts Higher

Trenton Customs receipts have increased over two thousand dollars during April 1941, over the same period last year according to figures just released. This year the total receipts were estimated at $34,070.51, while for the same period last year the receipts were $32,875.26.

During the fiscal year ending March 31st., 1940, receipts totalling $166,212.67 were taken at this Port of Entry and in the fiscal year ending March 31st., 1941, the receipts rose to a total of $357,115.26.

Oddfellows Meet

The Bay of Quinte District, No. 47, I.O.O.F., held its annual meeting in the Oddfellows' Hall on Front Street, with delegates from Belleville, Picton, Brighton and Trenton in attendance.

The meeting was called to order by James E. Thow, District Deputy Grand Master, as chairman. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read the committees gave their reports which were passed unanimously.

A keen discussion on business to come before Grand Lodge in Toronto in June was held and the delegates to Grand Lodge were instructed how to vote for the benefit of the district.

The officers were all re-elected for the ensuing year. They are: District Deputy Grand Master, James E. Thow, Trenton Lodge No. 113; District Warden, Larry W. Pollitt, Belleville Lodge No. 81; and District Secretary, George S. Kerr, Belleville Lodge No. 81.

Repairing Streets

Over three miles of dirt roads in this town are being repaired and resurfaced. For over a year the dirt roads have been a sore spot with all Trenton motorists, and many of the streets were practically impassable so numerous were the pot holes.

Mayor Harry Cory stated yesterday that the McFarlane Construction Company was already at work grading and resurfacing the streets. Pavements damaged by the frost will also be repaired.

MORE BRITISH MEN CALLED

London, May 7 (CP)—The Ministry of Labor today instructed men born in 1902 and 1901 to register for military service May 17 and May 31, respectively. Authorities said they probably would not be called up for service for several months.

SOLDIER PSYCHOLOGY

London (CP) — Under a War Office ruling every army recruit must undergo a psychological test to determine his proper place in relation to the various services and his selective medical fitness.

Found Pleasant Way To Relieve Pain Distress

Had Rheumatic Pains in Arms, Hands and Shoulders, Constipation, Gas and Bloat, Rejoices over the Relief Syntona Gave.

MRS. JEAN LACEY

Many men and women say they are astonished with the way Syntona has relieved their suffering, but this is no great surprise when it is considered that this medicine contains many ingredients and is really like taking several medicines in one. Thus it acts on stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, relieving sluggish conditions of these organs. Gassy stomach pains, acid risings, dull headache, dizzy spells, backache, tired, irritable feelings, constipation and rheumatic aches and pains are only a few of the distressing symptoms from which many people have found welcome and gratifying relief.

Mrs. Jean Lacey, 23 Nelson street, Hamilton, Ontario, says:

"Practically all my life I have suffered from constipation and the last few years have really been bad ones for me because my stomach gave me so much trouble with gassy pains, bloated feeling and heartburn that I never enjoyed my meals. There seemed so many things I couldn't eat. I began to get pains everywhere in my arms, hands and shoulders. One hand stiffened up so much I couldn't open it. I worried, became nervous and couldn't sleep nights.

"I knew I must try to find relief, so on the advice of a friend who knew how badly I was, I decided to try Syntona. I had heard of the medicine before, but I never dreamed it would be so good for me. Why, even from the first bottle the gas and indigestion began to trouble me less and less and the constipation was relieved. I kept on taking it and now I can eat most anything again, have no bloated feeling, headaches or dizziness. The aches and pains went away and the stiffness left my hand so that now I can open it completely. My nerves have quieted down, I sleep better nights and I certainly think Syntona is the grandest medicine and advise others to try it, too."

Get yourself a treatment of Syntona today at Dolan The Druggist, Belleville. See how it can help you, too.

BRITISH CRUISER SINKS NAZI COMMERCE RAIDER

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

R. A. F. MAKES HEAVIEST ATTACK ON GERMANY

27 British Seamen Taken From Raider By Cruiser Crew

Fifty-Three Members Of German Crew Taken Prisoner In Sea Battle

MEAGRE DETAILS

London, May 9 (AP)—A German raider in the Indian Ocean has been sunk by H.M.S. Cornwall, the Admiralty announced today.

A communique said the 10,000-ton cruiser rescued 27 British merchant seamen imprisoned in the raider and took 53 of the German crew prisoner.

The raider was believed in London to have been the 21,131-ton transatlantic liner Hansa.

Authoritative London quarters estimated the vessel carried a crew of 300 and said she probably was armed with six 5.9 guns, torpedo tubes and was equipped for minelaying. Her speed was 19 knots.

Apparently there was a fight between the Cornwall and the Hansa, the Admiralty communique declaring the cruiser sustained superficial damage without, however, having her fighting efficiency in anyway impaired.

There have been numerous reports concerning the activities of German sea raiders in the Indian Ocean, hunting ground in the first Great War of the famous Emden and the See Adler but this is the first one reported sunk.

It is believed here that the British occupation of the Italian East African coast has considerably hindered operations of the Nazi raiders by eliminating important sources of supply.

It was recalled that when the British forces captured Magadiscio, capital of Italian Somaliland, they freed 194 British seamen who had been landed there from a German raider which sank their ships.

Norwegian Officer Given Life Sentence For Assisting British

Oslo, Norway (via Berlin), May 9 (AP)—A Norwegian police official was sentenced today to life imprisonment and five other Norwegians were given terms of several years each on German court-martial charges that they "assisted the British" in the naval raid March 4 on Austvangoey, near Svolvaer, in the Lofoten Islands of Northern Norway.

(This raid was an entirely Norwegian venture—carried out by a Norwegian destroyer manned by free Norwegians from a British base.)

NATIONAL HANDICAP GOLF TOURNEY PLANNED FOR BRITISH WAR RELIEF

New York, May 9 (AP)—A one-day national handicap golf tournament on June 14 to aid the British War Relief Society Fund is announced by Bobby Jones, chairman of the tournament committee. An entrance fee of $2 will be charged each golfer playing at every club which signifies its willingness to co-operate.

HITLER EXPECTED TO ATTACK EGYPT

Acting Prime Minister of Australia Gives View on Struggle

Canberra, May 9 (AP)—The defence of Britain and the Suez regions of Egypt is of paramount importance at present, acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden of Australia said today after a war council meeting.

Mr. Fadden said that the present quiet period as far as land fighting is concerned likely would be brief as there is evidence that the Germans are preparing to hurl all their resources into a new venture, following their successes in the Balkans and North Africa.

The acting Prime Minister said that the next critical point probably would involve an attack against the formidable empire expeditionary forces that Britain has concentrated in Egypt.

The enemy, said Mr. Fadden, is making great efforts to transport reinforcements to North Africa across the Mediterranean and also is striving to overcome the difficulty of supplying advanced forces just inside Egypt at the Libyan border.

Mr. Fadden charged that unless a supreme effort is made immediately the Commonwealth would find the odds against her in the struggle for her very existence. The main task at present, he said, is to "hold on" pending the time when the maximum resources of the Empire and its friends can be brought to bear against the enemy.

To Discuss Parachute Fire-Fighting, War Incendiarism In Forests

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—Parachute fire-fighting and other techniques for combatting war incendiarism in froests will be among the topics discussed at a five-day meeting of the National Fire Protection Association (International) opening here Monday, an announcement by the Canadian Underwriters' Association said today.

A feature of the gathering will be an address by Lewis Partington, auxiliary fireman from Coventry, Eng., who will describe Nazi air attacks on that city and the fire-fighting which ensued.

Newly Arrived Canadian Airmen Eager To Get Into Sky Battle

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

R. A. F. depot somewhere in England, May 9 (CP)—Enviously watching Spitfires and Hurricanes looping and turning in the sky above them, hundreds of eager young Canadian airmen recently arrived from the Dominion impatiently awaited posting to stations or to final training courses.

They came direct by train to this R.A.F. depot near London from the debarkation port. First few hours they spent getting accustomed to the blackout, undergoing gas tests and in routine administrative details.

The Canadians—members of the largest contingent to arrive in Britain since the Commonwealth Air Training Plan started—included pilot officers, sergeant-pilots, radio signals officers, radio technicians, ground crews, wireless-air-gunners, navigators and observers. Every one was impatient to get into action after months of training.

Curious Wishes

Most curious wish was expressed by Sgt. H. Hibbard of Lachine, Que., a wireless-air-gunner.

"I'd like a trip over Berlin — and a round of golf in the German capital," he said.

FO. Geoffrey G. Field, Montreal, a radio signals officer, was busy writing home in his billet when newspapermen came to visit the new arrivals.

"I'm glad the long training period is over," he said. "We want some of the real stuff now."

FO. G. A. Playfair of Qualicum Beach, B.C., and FO. D. A. Ward of Fort William spent their first night's leave in London.

"London is grand but I wish they'd heat their houses a bit more" said Playfair with a wry smile.

"English girls are swell," he declared.

"You can put me down as agreeing with that," echoed Ward.

Warmth of the reception given the newcomers by the British people impressed PO. Bill O'Brien of Montreal, tennis and hockey star.

People Crowd Platform

"At every station where the train stopped people crowded the platform and handed us newspapers and candy," he said. "I don't know how they knew we were coming through but there they were."

With the Canadians were a number of Australian and New Zealand airmen, graduates by the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Sgt.-Pilot George Inkster of Sydney, who spent four months training at Camp Borden, Ont., said going to Canada was like "like coming home to grandmother." He said the Aussies in their dark blue uniforms frequently got mistaken for foreign soldiers by civilians. One man thought he was a Greek.

11 NAZI PLANES SHOT DOWN BY NIGHT FIGHTERS

Hitler's Air Armada Given Rough Ride In Sweeping Raids Over England

DAMAGE FEARED HEAVY

London, May 9—(CP) — Hitler's air armada swept across England again last night to hammer vital port and industrial areas, inflicting considerable damage at a cost of 11 planes credited to the blazing guns of British fighters.

The main targets of the Nazi raiders last night were the Humber region on the northeast coast and two districts in the industrial midlands.

Bombs also fell on London for the first time since April 19, on a northwest coast town and on other areas, mostly in eastern and southern England.

Damage in the Humber region—attacked for the second successive night—was considerable, a communique said, and it was feared that casualties there would prove heavy. Substantial damage also was reported in one north midlands district.
